The five profited because they were able to invest before the information was released to subscribers. Colt's mother found out how important such early tips are when she tried to make her first trade.

Joanne Colt, according to the SEC, purchased 14,000 shares of Option Care in the same manner as regular subscribers: she waited for the FastTrades recommendation. The share prices were rising so rapidly that she bought – not at $1.50 as she expected – but at $5 to $5.50 per share.

She then entered an order to sell her stocks at $7. But the price never went that high, instead plummeting quickly below $5. Panicked, she quickly dumped her shares, getting $4.56 and less. Joanne Colt lost $24,000 in about 25 minutes of trading, according to the SEC.

Colt then called her son, who loaned her $5,000. After that, he provided her with the stock tips before he sent them to subscribers. Despite her harrowing experience, she withdrew $15,000 from her individual retirement account, at a penalty, and borrowed $11,000 from her life insurance policy to cover the rest of her losses and conduct more trades, said the SEC.

A weary sounding Joanne Colt said yesterday she was shocked last March to get a phone call from the SEC informing her that practices employed by FastTrades.com might be illegal. "If I had known that, I wouldn't have been out there doing that," she said in a brief telephone interview.

That investigation apparently halted FastTrades' operations, though Colt continued to write about stock picking on Internet message boards. In late April, in a rather bold message on a different Internet message board, Colt – writing under an alias – criticized another stock picking Web site. According to the SEC, Colt laid out in his posting an 11-point blueprint for price manipulation. His points included:

– Target cheap stocks with low volume;

– "Tell your idiot subscribers about how great the stock is, and like sheep, they will run out and buy it;"

– "Dump the shares you bought a few hours ago to all these suckers;" and – "Laugh all the way to the bank."

SEC rules prevent the five from commenting on the case, according to Harry Weiss, a partner at Wilmer, Cutler & Pickering who represented Douglas and Joanne Colt. Attorneys for Terrell and Altman also declined comment.

Hats off to Dr. Seuss!

Cake was handed out in the Campus Center Concourse yesterday in honor of Dr. Seuss' birthday.

Collegian
Accounting Clerk

ALL MAJORS WELCOME TO APPLY

Work 8 hours per week, flexible scheduling

Must possess strong math and communication skills

Deadline for applications is Friday, March 10th

Contact Christine Carroll for more info

pick up applications in Rm. 113 Campus Center Basement

ITEM OF THE WEEK

REGULARLY $24.99-$19.99
Take additional $5 OFF Ticket Price

LONG SLEEVED UMASS SPORT GRAPHIC TEES

Lacrosse, Hockey, Crew, Soccer, Basketball & Football

Collegiate Castrals
UMass Clothing for Everyone
M-Th 8:30-6 Fri. 8:30-5
Sat. 11 to 4
(413) 545 - 2619

The University Ustore
Not like a mall... Better.

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Our Opinion
We stand alone

In the past week, The Daily Collegian has been called incompetent, biased and intentionally attempting to interrupt on-campus events. Our writers have been blasted as liars; our editors attacked for trusting the work of their writers; our management as vindictive.

The last week only highlighted complaints against this newspaper from the last year.

However, The Daily Collegian completely stands behind the work of its writers and editors, of that there is absolutely no question. What there does seem to be some question of is the role of this newspaper on the University of Massachusetts campus.

Groups and individuals are nothing but upset when, as a result of their own action, they are on the receiving end of what they perceive to be negative press. The decry our reporters and our editors, baselessly attacking our work as shoddy and unacceptable to their personal standards for our newspaper.

However, it is not our responsibility to meet the standards of unsatisfied individuals and groups on campus. It is our responsibility to meet our own standards, which most specifically require us to inform the public of what is going on in the region that is newsworthy.

We are not here to provide strictly positive press for students groups.

We are not here to pander to various areas of the campus.

We are not here to position ourselves as a biased anti-administration newspaper.

We are not here as a community bulletin board, a face-saver or as free promotion.

Some people on this campus seem to think that, because our newspaper is student run, our role is to protect students, giving only positive reviews, covering only positive events for other student groups and to, at the same time, attack the administration at every turn, regardless of what they've done. They think we are out of line giving a bad review when something's bad, out of line publishing information might show a student group in a negative light, out of line writing stories putting the administration in a positive light.

Those people are wrong. After this past week, The Daily Collegian is more sure of that fact than ever. And the fact is that this position is not to be considered even slightly flexible.

Our role, something that seems to be completely out of focus for parts of this campus, is to cover the news that happens on this campus and within our community. And that is it.

The Daily Collegian serves the purpose of presenting pertinent information to the campus community and allowing that community to arrive at their own conclusions about the situation in question.

We do not make campus organizations look better, nor do we choose to make them look worse.

We do not make the campus administration look better, nor do we choose to make them look worse.

We do not protect students from themselves, nor do we choose to make them look better.

We cover what happens, be it good or bad, positive or negative.

Considering the lack of respect that this newspaper already gets on campus, misunderstanding our role can only further cause problems. By eliminating confusion about who we are and what we do, we hope that we can better serve the community.

However, by better serving the community, we do not intend to roll over to individual complaints, nor the complaints of organizations unhappy with coverage they deem to be less than positive. Rest assured that any individual or group receiving less-than-positive coverage is responsible for that coverage.

After this I need a nap

Ethan Bergeron

As I prepare to jet off to the beauty of sunny California and experience the wonders of spring break, I have been reviewing some of the more confusing things I've heard recently. Statements that are so confounding I sometimes think my ears are bleeding. Often theses comments are taken as "Common Wisdom." By sharing these "gems of truth" it is my hope that you can shed much needed light on these comments that have been plaguing my consciousness recently.

The first one is Love is Blind. If this is true, we're all screwed. This cuts on two levels. If love is blind, how is it supposed to find us? Love could be bumping around the some place looking for the doorknob and never get out. If this is the case, I suggest that we organize a search party. We could get some of those cool miners caps – you know, the ones with the lights.

Has anyone ever said to you Hang in There? My question is hang in where? Where is this place where we are all supposed to hang in? Do they mean that we should hang on the jungle gyms where we used to play as kids? Is It a literal Hang? Or is there a set place we are supposed to hang in, because there is not very specific. What if there is not a place I like? What if there is Beirut? I certainly don't want to hang in there. You would think that at the end of this advice there might be some kind of directions to actually get there. It could go hang in there, take a left at the second light, take I-91 to exit 45 and so on, but no just simply hang in there. Perhaps this is a warning like hang – in there, as if you enter a certain area you will be hanged. This is a remote possibility, but the consequences are dire; so, it is my belief that it is worth mentioning.

A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush. I have no idea what this could possibly mean because if you had a bird in your hand, you would be hard pressed to keep it there long enough to propose some kind of exchange. Have you ever tried to catch a bird – It's not possible. Maybe the people giving things out of the bush know that it's impossible to trap a bird in your hand, and this is their motive for running a two for one deal. Anyhow, this statement makes my head hurt so lets move on.

Next is the extremely popular you get what you give. I hope that this is true because that means I will be receiving all the tuition money I've spent at UMass. I am, according to this nugget of truth, entitled to many things. I have often paid bills and spent money on various things such as food and shelter. Well now that the secret is out, the checks should start rolling in, right?

How about this one: sometimes you get the beur and sometimes the bear gets you. If I get the bear, I am going to make sure it can't come back and get me. If I got the bear, I would very soon have a wonderful rug. However, if the bear got me, then there will be no column next week because the chances of me going round and round with a bear and coming out the winner are about as good as this university avoiding budget cuts. So anyone out there reading this who really likes my column and wants to get me something, send flowers not a bear.

The sun in your eyes made the lies worth believing. Very poetic, but at the same time this one comes off on the bitter tip. I put this one in not so much to debunk it, but rather because I think it is a beautiful way of telling that special someone just what normal language can fail to accomplish.

After reading this column, I hope that you do not experience the head trauma that I did attempting to decipher the lost language that is cliches. Think of me fondly the next time you hear someone say, "Even a broken watch is right twice a day." Give me but a moment when you're in a movie theater and the person behind says "the more things change, the more they stay the same." Know that I'll be somewhere in Northern California, with a headache, attempting (impossibly) to wrap my mind around phrases like life is what happens when your busy making other plans.

Ethan Bergeron is UMass Student.

Uncle Sam is going too far

Kenneth Vinciguerra

(U-WIRE) COLLEGE PARK, Md. – In the omnipresent American drug war, a new threat is looming which will further increase governmental power and eradicate our freedom. The Methamphetamine Anti-Proliferation Act (S 486, HR 2987) sponsored by Sens. Dianne Feinstein (D-Calif.) and Orrin Hatch (R-Utah) has already unanimously passed in the Senate and awaits its expected approval in the House.

Quoting from Feinstein's press release, the act, along with the usual draconian measures of more cops, jail time and Drug Enforcement Agency power, "Bans the dissemination of drug 'recipes' and other demonstrative information relating to the manufacturing and use of methamphetamine and other controlled substances.

The bill amends the anti-drug paraphernalia statute to clarify that "advertisements for sale include the use of any communication facility, including the Internet, to post or publicize in any way any matter, including a telephone number or electronic or mail address, knowing that such matter is designed to be used to buy, distribute or otherwise facilitate a transaction in drug paraphernalia."

In case the full impact of that hasn't struck you, it effectively takes the First Amendment and stomps repeatedly on it with big, steel-toed Gestapo boots. This includes talking about not only drug production but also reports about safe dosage levels and expected effects. Even writing down a personal experience and sending it to another person could be construed as illegal.

Not only are all illegal drugs covered in the description but even some prescription drugs and the basic chemicals required for production and various drug utensils, despite their other legal uses. Information about using marijuana for medicinal purposes, to the selling of pipes may all be forbidden. Remember Simply Kind's mistreatment?

Furthermore, the bill uses conspiratorial "intent" to expand its powers. If the information is being published with the "intent" of breaking a federal law, then you are guilty. Not only the initial source of the censored information is guilty but you easily could be as well.

From selling books in your store to creating a hyperlink from your site to one with the outlawed material puts you under the gun as well. How much jail time for exercising your freedom of speech? Up to ten years.

If you think the government will not abuse this power you should investigate the "forfeiture law." This law allows the confiscation of drug dealers' assets, but has turned into a nationwide excuse for cops to raid homes, taking everything in them with no proof of any crime, and refusing to return it, until the victims have undertaken expensive legal battles to prove themselves innocent.

Cases of gross police misbehavior have involved stopping motorists, declaring any large sum of cash to be from selling drugs and seizing and keeping it without one charge being filed. Innocent people have even been murdered by the police in these raids.

If this bill seems so against the First Amendment that you think you needn't worry about it becoming law, you should know that the government passed a similar bill in the wake of the Columbine shooting that made it a felony to disseminate instructions on how to make bombs and other destructive devices.

Perhaps you don't use drugs or do not care if others are silenced. Perhaps you think the world is so dangerous we need the government controlling not only our actions but our thoughts and communications. But you should remember that sooner or later it is your views and your freedoms that will be affected. They are planning to put cameras on all the streets in Britain I hear. Maybe sooner or later they will be in your homes.

The government's desire for control of you, your money, your religion, your life and your body, has to stop. Know what is happening out there. This is not about protecting you. It is about expanding the government's futile and highly expensive drug war that has imprisoned a million people for victimless crimes.

It is about keeping the police, prisons and lawyers bankrolled forever with the ever increasing budget.

It is about declaring that you needn't have any rights in order to fight a war.

It is about control.

Kenneth Vinciguerra is a columnist at the University of Maryland's The Diamondback.

Notes from the Campus Center Basement

Dan Viens

I would like to thank the Academy...

***

Phish tour dates are out! My summer plans are finally in the works.

***

Honestly, would it have been that hard for the people who fixed the bridges on the campus ponds to make them big enough for two people to walk across at once.

***

I find it quite ironic that this University is a place where one may earn a degree, yet you don't need one to design a building on campus.

***

The next time that you're flipping through the channels on your television, if you stop to watch Full House you are a dork. Growing Pains is okay though.

***

If I had to make a basketball teams out of television characters my roster would be as follows. Cosmo Kramer would be my center, Tony Soprano and Homer Simpson would be my forwards with Conan O'Brien and Eric Cartman as my guards. Coming off the bench I would have Regis Philbin, Mr. Burns and John Cage from Ally McBeal.

***

If FOX wants to have another Who Wants To Marry a Multimillionaire show I'd be happy to enter it, even if the guy beat his last wife.

***

"Each betrayal begins with trust. Every man returns to dust." - Phish

***

Coke has a new slogan: Just Do It.

***

The University regrets to tell everyone that due to budget cuts the breadkneading club and condom application club will have to merge beginning after Spring Break.

***

If you have any warts you want to get rid of just go to health services and they'll freeze them off. At least that's what I heard from a kid that I don't know very well.

***

Spring Concert should be outside! End of story.

***

My friends and I have invented a great game. It's called Panball. It's best played when one is slightly impaired. The ball is a whiffle ball and the bat is a toaster oven pan. For a list of all the rules you can go to www.panball.com or just call me. If you live in Puffton and you're not playing It, then you're missing out.

***

If you are strapped for money (and I know that a lot of you are) I have a tip for you. Start talking about money in terms of nickels. If you have a dollar in your pocket just say that you have twenty. Sure it's not true, but it will make you feel better.

***

If I had to fight any celebrity I would choose either Britney Spears or The Pope. I think that I would kick both of their asses. Maybe not The Pope though, he's got some pretty powerful allies in his corner.

***

Commercials would be a lot better if big time celebrities always did the voice overs. Then the company could have contests to see who could guess the voice. Whoever won the contest would win whatever was being advertised.

***

"Things are falling down on me. Heavy things I could not see. And when I tried to step aside I moved to where they hoped I'd be." - Phish

***

I've got a solution to the Elian Gonzalez controversy. Put him in a helicopter. Then drop him from about 50 feet above the ocean half way between The United States and Cuba. Then just see where he ends up.

***

One of the worst places to have a parade would be on the surface of the sun.

***

Once this semester is over I am moving to Florida. I would like to tell my roommates, friends and my girlfriend Sue how thankful I am to know you all and that I will miss you.

***

"Set the gearshift to the high gear of your soul. You've got to run like an antelope out of control." – Phish

***

Live your life so that if you meet someone you truly admire you have more to say to them than, "Dude you are f*ckin' awesome."

***

If anyone wants my place in Puffton for next semester, just give me a call. My number is in the book.

***

Dan Viens is an all right guy.

Dan Viens is a Collegian columnist.

Your Opinion
Letters to the Editor

To the editor:

Right now, just across town, Amherst College is preparing to give award winning writer, director, and actor Spike Lee for a panel discussion and series of workshops on Black representation in the media. Last week, the Distinguished Visitors Program brought their own idea of intellectual discourse in the form of writer, director, and actor Kevin Smith who has brought us such lofty works of social commentary as Dallrats and the "holier than thou" Dogma. Smith had no prepared speech, but rather sought the easy way out by using the time for a question and answer period.

One of the first questions was about whether prospective film students should bother getting a degree or begin making films. As a film-school dropout, Smith had plenty to say on the subject. He began by insulting the film certificate offered by the Interdepartmental Program in Film Studies (which is currently hosting their seventh Multicultural Film Festival bringing brilliant, innovative filmmakers from all over the world) with startling arrogance. He then proceeded to argue that getting an education in a waste of time – studying film technique and theory is useless, no doubt because they aren't necessary components to his style of filmmaking, which caters primarily to the lowest common denominator. He seemed determined to infect the audience with his bitterness over a poor film school experience. It just amazes me that the University would pay money to invite someone to our campus to speak, to a packed hall of students about how the acquisition of knowledge was a ridiculous pursuit.

The discourse deteriorated from that point to a discussion of crude juvenile sex terms, many of which involved violence toward women and making a spectacle of lesbians. Students raised their hands with more enthusiasm than I had ever witnessed in any of my large lecture classes. Each outburst "educated" those present on a new sex act that involved punching or hitting their partner. This elicited cheers of delight from a greater part of the audience. I was never so embarrassed to be a UMass Student. I hope that I wasn't the lone voice of dissent in the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall last Tuesday night. Although I recognize that Smith wasn't applauding all of the information volunteered, his visit certainly created an atmosphere where that kind of discourse seemed not only appropriate but more than welcome.

Anna Feder
Amherst

Ed/op is always seeking random submissions by UMass students, faculty and staff. They should be between 800 and 1000 words and address a topic of interest and concern for UMass students. Possible topics include serious campus issues, Amherst town issues, local issues, state issues, national or international issues. Do some research and back up your arguments with facts. In addition the pieces should be well-organized and your point should be clearly stated. Bring them down to the Collegian office on disk with a hard copy attached that includes your name and phone number.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Sam Wilkinson Managing Editor Shawn Ilinitch Business Manager
Ben Alamed Web Developer Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager
Sage Brousseau Co-Advertising Production Manager Jake Lilien Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor Christine Connare Women's Issues Editor
Alexis Pushkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor Marc Menchel Finance Manager
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor Joshua Szymanski Distribution Manager
Jake Lilien Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Katie Beith Promotions Manager
Lanie Gorkovsky Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Catherine Turner International Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Position Vacant Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Mary Grein News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Kara Stokes Photography Editor Chris Brennan Assistant Finance Manager
Adam White Co-Sports Editor Eric Faber Assistant Advertising Manager
Brett Mastier Co-Sports Editor Amy Garganta Assistant Business Manager

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Photo bendees for Ed/op writers were taken yesterday. If you missed this time, speak to Gary or Alexis.

Business

Hearts melt for Ben & Jerry's

"One can only hope that if they sell the company that they can continue their commitment to society."

COURTESY YAHOO.COM

Ben and Jerry's stock has risen sharply with recent rumors of the company's sale.

By Shawn Ilinitch
Collegian Staff

Unfortunately, today's society is full of many profit driven companies. Instead of creating well-being in the society around them, too many of today's corporations see the dollar sign before the person. One company that has conducted business differently is Ben and Jerry's, but even that has been threatened, as profit driven companies have recently been reported as trying to buy the company.

A month and a half ago, an article in the Collegian reported that Ben and Jerry's had received offers from three large corporations: Unilever, Dreyers International and Ronadin. With these offers came an outcry from concerned stockholders, fearing that a takeover by any of these companies would threaten the company's socially responsible practices. On the same that this article was printed, The Wall Street Journal reported a fourth offer from a company calling itself Meadowbrook Lane Capital. The company was reported to be in Northampton.

Meadowbrook Lane Capital turns out to be located throughout the world. Terry Mollner, of Northampton, is organizing the venture group, which is comprised of many socially conscious business people. Dal "Tweezerman" LaMagna is one of the business leaders involved. He runs a personal body grooming business with the same name as his nickname. He was quoted in The Wall Street Journal as stating, "[a corporate takeover is] a threat to the whole socially responsible business movement... another company is not going to care about saving the rainforest."

Another member of the investment group is Robert E. Barton, CEO of Catalyst Financial Group, Inc., an investment company from Brookfield, VT, which specializes in green investing. More importantly, he is a founding member of the Social Venture Network: a group based in San Francisco that is a network of socially responsible business leaders.

The Meadowbrook Lane Capital fund seems to have begun with an email from Judy Wicks, who is the vice chairwoman of the Social Venture Network. The email called for "white knight" to "save Ben and Jerry's." Ms. Wicks has been vocal in her opposition to the sale of the ice cream giant. In addition to the two for mentioned members, John G. Guffey Jr. signed on to the crusade. Guffey is a co-founder of Calvert Social Venture Partners, a company which according to their website invests in "companies which contain the promise of creating a more healthy, peaceful and productive world through the very nature of their products, services, and methods of business." They look for companies that produce a positive social impact.

Ben and Jerry's is a member of the Social Venture Network, and co-founder Ben Cohen member emeritus of the Board of Directors. Nobody involved replied to my request for information.

Stepping back, one can see the effect that a sale could have on the public. One of the recipients of Ben and Jerry's kind charity is Camp Winnarainbow, run by Wavy Gravy. The camp offers children (and adults) an opportunity to learn about the environment, gain confidence in themselves, learn how to express themselves, and appreciate diversity. The camp offers scholarships to disadvantaged youths so that they can enjoy the benefits of the camp. The problem arises because Ben and Jerry's provides 30 percent of the camps scholarship monies. Gravy hopes, "that the status quo remains the status quo."

Ben and Jerry's recently sent Gravy a button. The button reads as follows: "No decisions have been made. No conclusions should be drawn. We remain hopeful." In a time of money hungry corporate giants, Ben and Jerry's has stood out as a star of social responsibility. One can only hope that if they sell, they sell to a company or group that can continue their commitment to society.

COURTESY WAVY GRAVY

Wavy Gravy, founder of camp Winnarainbow and inspiration for a Ben and Jerry's flavor, with Ben and Jerry.

Albano goes Offtech

By Shawn Ilinitch
Collegian Staff

Many of us dream of creating our own destiny. This dream has become a reality for Steve Albano, a member of the University of Massachusetts class of 1967. Albano is the President, CEO, and founder of Offtech, a digital printing distributor based in Wilmington.

Albano, the 1996 School of Management alum of the year, graduated with a degree in Accounting. Afterwards, he joined the National Guard for one year. From there, Albano career began at Xerox. After one year in sales, he moved up to sales manager. He continued to climb the ladder, serving as a regional sales manager, and eventually as a branch manager. After 11 years, he left Xerox to start his own company, Offtech.

COURTESY UMASS.COM

Steve Albano

Albano cites his motivation as a desire to stay local. He also wanted to be control of his own financial future. With his experience at Xerox, he dove into the field of photocopying and office equipment.

Over the years, Offtech has grown to be the largest and most successful independently owned Ricoh dealer in America. It has an 80,000 square foot corporate facility in Wilmington, as well as branch locations in Boston, Worcester, Bedford, NH, Providence RI, and Portland Me.

When he began in 1981, Albano employed 5 people. Now, he has 500 employees and sales in excess of 60 million dollars. Albano attributes his success to the experience of his employees and, more importantly, their commitment to supreme customer service.

With a wave a new technology, the copying industry has been subject to some radical changes. Because everything has become more digital, Albano describes duplicating machines as capturing images, not copying.

Albano lists his UMass experience as very helpful. According to Albano, knowing the fundamentals of business is an asset to any individual. Because SOM breeds a very competitive environment, he feels it makes students even more prepared for the business world. He thinks UMass can teach students to stand up for themselves. As with all colleges, UMass can also gave Albano the all-important lesson of independence.

Today students can still learn these lessons, but many more as well. The ability to learn about technology is a necessity according to Albano. Students need to gain the strongest computer skills that they can. In addition to these computer skills, students should still master the basic skill, including writing, problem solving, and challenging your mind to be creative. Before leaving college, students should try to develop an understanding of the outside world. This knowledge will give them an advantage when beginning a career.

Albano encourages students to keep learning. More knowledge will enhance your long-term future. Learning from your experiences makes you a better businessperson as well. Albano concluded with the fact that UMass graduates are well respected within the business world. Citing that they are some of the most sought after college grads.

Week's winners and losers

5 Winners:

Radiant Systems, (RADS) who makes software and different types of e-commerce systems for retailers, has announced that they will create an online business to business to market place. This "b-to-b" marketplace is a collaboration with Microsoft and has since experienced a soaring stock price by 68 percent. I guess I should mention that this has all happened since Wednesday. So whether you have held on to this stock since the summer or since Monday you are doing pretty well.

CMGI has paired with some financial groups to use CMGI's technology to pursue an online and traditional media company worldwide. The financial groups already hold some traditional media companies in their portfolio. This company has seen a steady increase in the past few months and it's likely with these new deals that it will continue.

Qwest Communications Iinl. has doubled from about 30 dollars to about 60 dollars now. News of a merger with Deutsche Telecom is reason to hold on to the stock.

3Com's (COMS) stock price has gone from the mid-20's (dollars) to a little over 100 dollars recently. Since 3Com split off the Palm Pilot division and Palm had its IPO 3Com has soared 30 percent.

5 Losers:

Royal Caribbean (RCL) has seen an 18 percent decrease in the value of its stock within the last year. With pressure on pricing in booking for the next year some analysts are worried.

Gerber Scientific (GRB) saw a high of mid 20's (dollars) this past summer but now it is in the mid teens mostly due to earnings and cash flow problems. Even though they announced that their EPS has risen by 19 percent for the third quarter the stock price has not reflected this increase. Gerber Scientific shows opportunity with new products available.

Adobe (ADBE) who creates software for managing different types of information has seen both ups and downs recently. With Thursday's lows around 82 dollars, a loss of around 17 for the day was a pretty big hit credited somewhat to Adobe's CFO retiring. Analysts still saying hold or buy.

Gap (GPS) had a bad day yesterday. This is partially due to leanne lackson leaving Banana Republic and heading to Wal-Mart. Shares of Gap were down about 7 percent.

Verio (VRIO), a company that does web hosting for small and medium sized companies, took a dive. The results for its quarterly earnings were reported as a loss and the price of its stock followed the earnings down.

Business for Dummies

Be on time. As my former boss would say, "Better to be ten minutes early than one minute late." Ninety percent of success is showing up.

Use your resources. Ever heard of the six-degrees-of-separation? Network and Kevin Bacon will hear.

Stop blaming others. Take responsibility. The name of the game is ownership. Admit when you're wrong. It takes guts, but will earn you respect.

Inquire, inquire, inquire. I wanted to use "Ask questions, ask questions, ask questions," but there's no "A."

Never give up. Jeff Taylor of Monster.com said that even great ideas need to be shoved down someone's throat.

Elect at least one woman AND one man as your mentor. Studies have shown that "women managers possess traits superior to those of their male counterparts." No kidding.

Seek out opportunities. Keep your options open at all times. Why limit yourself? We live in an individualistic society – the goal is to live your life the way you choose. Don't follow the sheep.

Stay confident. Don't take no for an answer. If you start doubting yourself, others will too. Use deodorant.

Fret no more. Stress remains a state of mind (that could potentially cause ulcers). You can choose to have it or not have it. Choose the latter.

Once you've forgotten competition exists, you've committed suicide. Make yourself obsolete. If you don't, someone else will.

Rush to the conflict. Let it lie and it festers into a bigger problem.

Do unto others as you would have done unto yourself. Isn't that a proverb or something? It holds true. Treat someone like an idiot: the idiot will start acting like one.

Uphold ethical standards. If your goal is to be a millionaire and you leave dead baby kittens in your path, don't come knocking on my door... plan on losing some other friends too.

Mistakes are a blessing. It's the only way to truly learn through experience... except asking questions... hey, if you did that you wouldn't be in this mess.

Make your weakness your strength. Nough said.

Increase personal time. Even if it's five minutes a day of relaxation breathing. Don't think yoga. think laying down and watching your tummy rise and fall (correct breathing starts with the diaphragm – it's not a contraceptive, it's part of your lung).

Exercise! Butting your head against a wall? There's nothing more socially acceptable than taking out your frustrations during one hour of Tae Bo. Once you've hyperventilated and sweat like a pig, organize your thoughts and create a plan of action.

Smile! Laugh at yourself and others will laugh with you. Don't take things too seriously. Realize that it could always be worse.

Colleen DeGrandis a Collegian staff member.

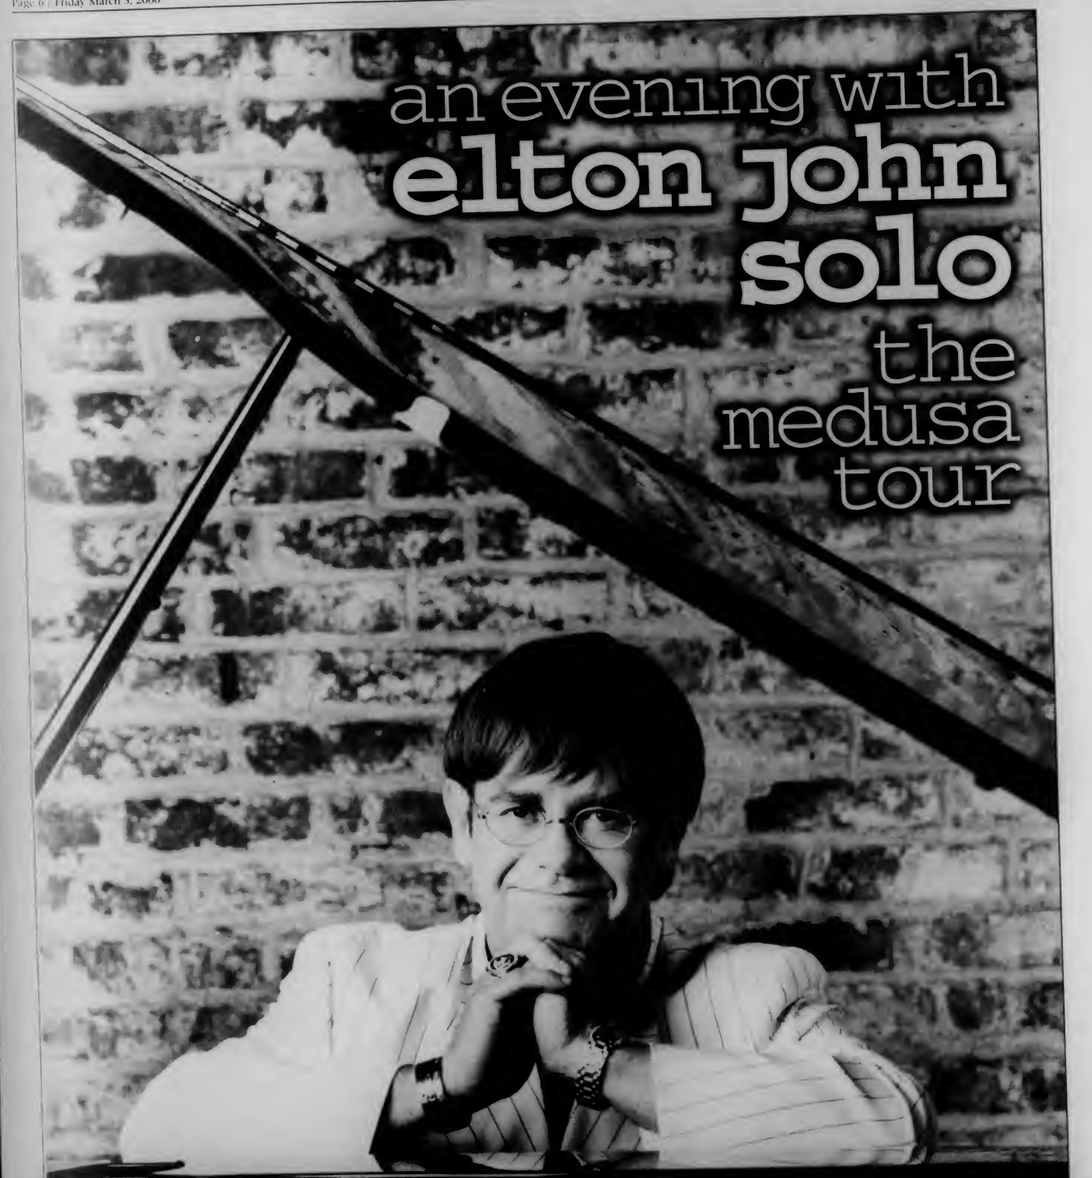
CAITLYN MINNISH/COLLEGIAN

Earthfoods, established over twenty years ago by eleven students, continues to serve health-concious customers on a daily basis

Earthfoods serves up good food



By David Katzoff
Collegian Staff

A lively rush encapsulates the Student Union as the academic common folk flock for social refuge and mid-day nourishment. At the centerpiece of the afternoon flurry lies Earthfoods, a naturalistic commune for lunchtime dining. Although the philosophies behind Earthfoods are simple, the inner-workings of its structural organization are vastly complex. As an entirely student-run and managed collective, Earthfoods specializes in serving inexpensive, lacto/vegetarian meals to the UMass community. Within this unique, cooperatively sustained restaurant, labor is delegated at the beginning of every semester and maintained by the same individuals throughout. From serving food in a buffet-style line, to purchasing, bookkeeping, maintenance and inventory, each of the twenty-eight employees hold equitable responsibility. Through elections, committees and sub-committees are formed to bring coherence and leadership to the functional operation of the business. On a weekly basis, the staff conducts two hour, mandatory meetings intended to evaluate efficiency, voice general dismay and plan nutritious recipes for future meals.

While Earthfoods has grown considerably since its conception in 1976, its principles have remained unwavering. Established by eleven health conscious undergraduates, it began as an alternative option to the dinning commons. In the punitive quarters of the Suffolks room, this small group of students began cooking and serving simplistic, kosher food at a bargain price. Nearly a quarter-century later, the Cafe has manifested into a non-profit organization worth over a quarter of a million dollars each fiscal year. Additionally, Earthfoods has taken an active role in the social well being of our Pioneer Valley civilization and beyond. Provisions leftover from lunch are donated daily to Food Not Bombs, a hunger assistance project located in Northampton; and various supplementary resources generated by the business are contributed to outreach programs both locally and globally.

Earthfoods sustains their communal, holistic ideologies by procuring supplies from a diverse arrangement of organic farms and produce companies such as Northeast Cooperative and The Squash Collective. While rice, beans, steamed vegetables, soup and salad are the everyday staples on the menu, a delectable selection of entrees like Tofu paella and Red Pepper Linguini are also offered to further tantalize the taste buds. With such an impressive array of hearty yet healthy alternatives, Earthfoods has found exterior prosperity in the catering industry, cooking for a multitude of on-campus organizational functions.

On the whole, Earthfoods provides the UMass community with a wealth of victual satisfaction, a co-curricular dining environment and a progressive commitment to the world... all for an affordable price.

SATURDAY • APRIL 8

THE MULLINS CENTER
UMASS/AMHERST

TICKETS AVAILABLE MULLINS CENTER BOX OFFICE AT UMASS/AMHERST
AND ALL ticketmaster OUTLETS
PERFORMANCE 8PM SIX TICKET LIMIT PER CUSTOMER

CHARGE BY PHONE: 413.773.2500
AND WWW.TICKETMASTER.COM

ON SALE SATURDAY • 10AM ride the rocket--www.eltonjohn.com

Arts & Living

Your Guide to all that's going on in the Pioneer Valley

Tree Leaves UMass Audiences Satisfied

By Rob Schulze
Collegian Staff

TREE
Skybox
March 1

Skybox planted roots last Wednesday as Boston "hardwood" legends Tree headlined a hard-rock bill that truly satisfied.

Promoting their new Wonderdrug Records release Our Day Will Come, Tree hit the stage with a vengeance, and then yelled some more as lead singer River was having problems with his mic volume. After clearing that up though, Tree quickly made up for the lost time and volume by cranking out one song after another with constant intensity.

"Old school!" screamed Rivers repeatedly at one point in the show, and that pretty much summed it up. Guitarist Ooze actually played a couple of very well done and somewhat lengthy guitar solos at various points in the set - an almost extinct art among the hardcore bands of today. Bassist Jake kind of looked like your youngish uncle, but still managed to play a loud, clear bass that really made the songs solid. The heart of the band's performance, however, rested firmly on River's shoulders and despite, by his own admission, straining his voice during the initial PA problems, he rose to the occasion memorably.

A non-stop "lifetime" tour schedule had obviously paid off for Tree, as they ripped through new songs "Death Wish" and "Texas" as well as the ancient favorite "Question Abuse" with the whole crowd who made it out on a rainy Wednesday night squarely in their corner. At the end of the final song, Rivers was literally carried out of the Skybox on the shoulders of the "UMass!"-chanting crowd to the TOC for a drink, which was regrettably closed, which is a shame, because he deserved a stiff drink after the superb performance he'd put on.

Diecast took the stage before Tree and also put on a stellar set despite technical difficulties, with the mic/phone simply going out on lead singer Colin at several points during the show; bassist Jeremy at one point left the stage mid-song. Despite this the band overcame and ultimately finished their set full-throttle with no more problems, and came to really shine.

One of the best Boston bands and just signed to Now or Never records with a follow-up to 1998's Undo the Wicked due this summer, Diecast impressed their crowd (and especially two kids directly in front of the stage who knew every word) with their metal-tinged hardcore sound. Closing song "Peacemaker" and an untitled new song were the undisputed highlights of Diecast's short but sweet set.

Local band Chainfall, based out of Shutesbury and with one member from right next door in South Hadley, was decidedly out of place on this hardcore bill and pretty much ignored by the crowd, but in a different setting really could have shined. With no drummer (just a DJ who spun prerecorded, but original and not borrowed, beats and some cool samples), the combination of several lead vocalists (including classical-sounding female vocals and Emperor-like black metal yelling), and an obviously talented bassist who did both pick and slap work, Chainfall had a wildly original sound. Sometimes (usually on the faster songs) it worked, and sometimes it didn't (one song seemed to be just a poetry reading over a techno bass line), but when they hit their peculiar techno/Goth/metal thing on the head the results were amazing, most obviously on upenter "Beautiful." These local Altered Industry artists are to be watched.

Tree planted a memorable performance at UMass Wednesday night. Aren't they...

Madonna and Rupert Everett are just two of the many unfortunate artists featured on The Next Best Thing soundtrack.

Soundtrack Fails to Sing

By Adam Martignetti
Collegian Staff

VARIOUS ARTISTS
The Next Best Thing Soundtrack
Maverick

Perhaps this CD found itself in the wrong hands. I am not a big fan of the techno dance scene, though it can be done well, let alone the "dances" pop which best characterizes this disc. That disc being the soundtrack to Madonna's latest movie, The Next Best Thing, also starring Rupert Everett. And of course, the soundtrack features two "new" Madonna songs along with an eclectic mix of piano-driven dance tunes.

The album starts off with a cross-cultural group, Metisse, and their mellow "Boom Boom Ba." The song is part Sarah McLauchlan, part Dust Brothers mixing piano riffs with an orchestral violin and some subtle dance beats. The vocals are alluring, but unfortunately largely foreign. The song would be really good if not for the vapid "Boom Boom Ba" repetition in the chorus.

Fellow foreign artist, Manu Chao, takes up the cross-Atlantic reigns for the second track, "Bong Bong," as it is entitled, is eerily similar to that most perplexing pop monstrosity and current radio hit, Eiffel 65's "Blue." The vocals even have the same monotone monotony. The first version was awful, this isn't much better.

Fresh off her "Best New Artist" Grammy, Christina Aguilera proves that the awards are a joke. "Don't Make Me Love You," the new track placed here is a recapitulation of every Max Martin-written, dance beat-driven, boy band worthy pop song polluting top forty stations today. Absolute garbage.

The first Madonna track is actually a remake (not really, even a cover) of Don McLean's "American Pie." First things first, "American Pie" is an integral part of American pop culture and Madonna had no business remaking it. Second, her version is crap. Any sense of nostalgia or purpose that the original had is completely lost in this bland, flat, four and a half minute perversion. The track reminds us that the lyric "the day music died" once meant a plane crash not Madonna reducing herself to this.

Mandalay's "This Life" is almost the exact same song as track one. Nix the piano and substitute a horn and you've got it. Likewise I can't say much for the lyrics (in English here either). Atmospheric.

London based Groove Armada provides the album's first truly danceable tune. The ironically titled "If Everybody Looked the Same" starts out as the common enough rap/techno mix with heavy bass and synthesizer. Slowly, the song morphs into a Fatboy Slim-esque tune. Very peppy and bouncy with a signature chorus cut and mixed a thousand different ways. As would be expected, Mobs provides the album's... Does my Heart Lie... found on his... uses a soulful... and overlays it... piano/bass score... tion work, melding... entire song together...

Described a... Olive seems... to us. The soaring... settles into... much here.

Beth Orton is... to this mixture. It... of these bands as Orton... Her yearning vocals... with the moody... tune "Stars Align" is... soulful and emotional...

The ballads... proves that Madonna... dance stuff and... In fact, she's... guitar service as a... byte and is... the song. The... music video. Me... pie and an... song has... This disc... tracks, much... dozen. The... probably... "American Pie"... not worth it. Some... good, but... European... I'll pass. C-

HEY!

You can still write for Arts! On Sunday at 3:30 p.m. come to the Collegian office in the campus center basement and give your life purpose.

Something Every Friday
PRESENTS:

Barbara Kessler, Jess Kline, & Kris Delmhorst

These individual performers each have their own unique sound that is a blend of rock and folk music. This program is in celebration of "March: Women's History Month." The program is FREE and donations will be appreciated to benefit battered women and children. Refreshments will be served.

Student Union Ballroom Friday, March 3, 2000, 8pm

Visit us on the Web: http://www.umass.edu/events/calendar.htm

MassMutual Financial Group's Career Development Program
www.massmutual.com

Mass advantages for your future

VISIT US AT MASSMUTUAL.COM/...

Choosing where to start your career is a big decision. That's why you need to know about MassMutual. A leader in the financial services industry, we offer customers a complete portfolio of life and [illegible] insurance, asset accumulation products and retirement and investment management services. And we offer a world of career advantages that work for you today — and for your future. Like [illegible] training, flex-time, generous compensation/benefits and real opportunities for growth. Some current openings in our Springfield, MA & Hartford, CT offices:

- Claims Examiners
- Customer Service Analysts
- Human Resources Specialists
- Retirement Plan Services Analysts
- Securities Brokerage Specialists
- Underwriters

If you're a Year 2000 graduate with sound judgment, strong communication/negotiation/customer service skills, and the desire to take charge of your future, you should call, or [illegible]

We'll be on campus for an Info Session on March 6 from 7-9pm and on March 9 for interviews.
Please contact your Career/Placement Office to set up an interview or email your resume to: collegerecruiting@massmutual.com An Equal Opportunity Employer.

MassMutual FINANCIAL GROUP
THE BLUE CHIP COMPANIES®

Men leap into New Englands

By Gary Mendese
Collegian Staff

The season is quickly winding down and there are only three meets left in regular season for the Massachusetts men's gymnastics team. As it stands right now, the Minutemen are No. 14 in the nation according to their two-score average, with Temple University hiding their heels in the 15th place spot. The top twelve teams go on to NCAA Nationals on March 31 which is exactly why they need a big push score at the New England Championships this weekend.

Tomorrow at 7 p.m., UMass heads to Vermont with hopes of defending its title as the New England Champions for the twelfth year in a row. Going against teams like the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Vermont, Springfield College and Southern Connecticut, the Minutemen have nothing to fear.

Last year, the Maroon and White blew the rest of the competition away with a final mark of 224.325 – over 20 points ahead of the second place-finishing Springfield Pride, who scored a 201.650. So the battle this weekend is mostly a personal one, as the Minutemen have to push themselves to the high score they have been missing, but are certainly capable of.

"The goal this weekend is to hit above a 225," head coach Roy Johnson said. "If we hit, we can get around a 38 on every event. We've done it on floor, pommels and vault, and we've come pretty close on rings." Sure, they've scored above a 38 on a few events, but the only problem is that they have all been done at different meets. When the Minutemen took on Springfield College two weeks ago, they scored their season-high on floor exercise and pommel horse, but vault was kind of shaky, as were parallel bars and high bar. And last weekend, the Amherst boys broke the all-time school high on vault, while bringing in an uncharacteristically low mark on high bar. So while they have the potential to shake the gym walls with 38s on each of the six events, consistency is the key.

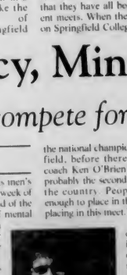
"We hope to increase our hitting percentage on high bar and p-bars," said junior Eric Bacon, who blasted down the runway last weekend, posting his career-high score on vault with a 9.70. "We start out on pommel horse [this weekend], and hope to score well. Our pommel horse lineup can score big, so that shouldn't be a problem. Then hopefully, we can keep the momentum going and continue to bring in high scores for the rest of the meet."

So the Minutemen have some pretty big, yet realistic goals set for the rest of the season. They are shooting for a spot in NCAAs, and with even one score of 225 or above, they could be sitting pretty. But like Bacon said, the team needs to be more consistent on their weaker events, including the still rings. But with junior Bryan Mcnulty, who is 16th in the nation on floor, freshman Justin Hammar, who ranks 16th nationally on pommel horse, and senior Jeff LaVallee, who ranks sixth on floor, eighth on rings, and seventh on vault, almost anything is possible. If everyone steps up and nails their routines, there's no telling how high they can score. But time's ticking away and if they're going to bring in a big score anytime this season, the best time to do it is now.

Morency, Minutemen take on nation

Fleet feet compete for upcoming NCAA Championshps

By Jen Cormier
Collegian Staff

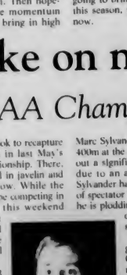


For most of the Massachusetts men's indoor track members, this is a week of not a break from the daily grind of the normal schedule. It's a week of mental and physical recuperation, a week to reflect on the winter campaign by and prepare for the spring season to come.

For 17 Minutemen, there is still unfinished business.

This weekend, the squad's top performers will head to Cambridge, where over 40 schools will descend upon Harvard University for the ICAA Championships. There, the best athletes from the East Coast and the Midwest will converge for the privilege to compete in the godfather of collegiate track tournaments – the NCAA Championships.

The handful of Minutemen who will represent the Maroon and White qualified for the meet based on their regular season performances. Standards are lofty. To prove themselves worthy of the opportunity to compete in the ICAA, athletes must surpass a specific mark in time or distance in their respective events.



Many years ago, the ICAA meet was the national championship of track and field, before there was an NCAA," coach Ken O'Brien noted. "Now, it's probably the second best track meet in the country. People who are good enough to place in the nationals end up placing in this meet."

Kevin Somers
COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Since the level of competition is so intimidating, many of the Minutemen may find themselves relegated to the role of David amongst the nation's track Goliaths. For this reason, O'Brien prefers to emphasize the value of the individual experience as opposed to the overall team result.

"It's more of a barometer of how good our top handful of individuals are," he said. "Anybody beyond the top five guys are simply gaining experience with a meet like this. The guys who've qualified will try to grab some experience, make the finals, and potentially place, but not really have a shot at the top three or four."

Senior Vik Morency, the team's beacon of reliability, will look to recapture the glory he achieved in last May's ICAA Outdoor Championship. There, Morency placed second in javelin and first in the discus throw. While the throwing maestro will be competing in two different events this weekend (weight throw and shot put), he is accustomed to performing in the glare of the national spotlight.

Marc Sylvander
COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

"Victor is the best qualifying chance we have," O'Brien stated. "He's among maybe 15 to 20 kids in the country that could make it out of this weekend."

Predictably, the team's chances will weigh heavily on the shoulder of the Morency-Russ-Zullo trio that has guided the squad all season. Freshman phenom Stelan Russ will compete in the high jump, while sophomore sprinting ace Adrian Zullo will run the 55 meter dash. Other qualifiers include junior Hugh Reid, who will compete in the 5000m and senior Kevin Somers, the squad's top 5000m runner.

One notable void in the Minutemen's lineup will be junior Marc Sylvander, who qualified for the 400m at the start of the season, but sat out a significant chunk of the winter due to an abdominal strain. While Sylvander has been reduced to the role of spectator for the past several weeks, he is plodding away with rehab workouts to be ready for the spring.

"His workouts have progressed pretty well," O'Brien said of his star mid-distance runner. "He's probably at 80 percent right now and I do anticipate the next four to five weeks will give him enough time to get ready for outdoors. I have no doubt that he'll be okay for the first meet."

Meanwhile, the rest of the squad is also eagerly anticipating the start of the spring campaign. Although the unrelenting pressure of a year-long season can chip away at even the best athlete's mental and physical fortitude, there is a bright side.

"You know the old Red Sox saying, 'Wait 'til next year'?" O'Brien asked with a laugh. "We don't have to wait. They're really looking forward to the spring season. They're all excited and ready to go."

Teft headlines dual meet in Cambridge

By Seth Szilagyi
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's gymnastics team hits the road for the weekend to take on M.I.T. On the road, an intra-state clash, sure, but even still, the techsters won't need their calculators to figure out that UMass + Engineers = loss.

History would say so, but maybe it won't be that simple.

After toppling Temple last weekend, the Minutewomen are looking to begin a winning streak for the first time this season. The meet featured an outstanding performance from freshman Katie Teft. The fantastic first-year gymnast placed first in two events, including the balance beam, uneven bars en route to the all-around title. She tallied scores of 9.923, 9.850, and 39.175 respectively. Although the Minutewomen enjoyed a strong outing from Teft, the team posted their highest score of the season, as freshman len Gendron and Megan Donoghue registered career-highs on the balance beam.

UM will be facing a notably weaker squad than normal, in the form of the Engineers of M.I.T. Last season, the women of UMass tore apart the Engineers by a score of 193.825-171.775. MIT posts a miniscule team-high of 175.725, scored on Yale University. After a 3-13 campaign last year, the Engineers mustered up their first victory of the season, beating Rhode Island College 167.950-165.325. As a team, M.I.T. is averaging 167.475 overall, 44.4857 on floor exercise, 41.2571 on the balance beam, 39.1536 on the uneven bars, and 42.5786 on the vault. The talent lies in junior Sonja Ellefson, who averages her team-high in all events except the balance beam – which unveils the team's Achille's heel, depth.

So the Minutewomen have nothing to worry about, correct? Well, in contrast, UMass is a far superior squad. UM as a team is averaging 190.314. That leaves the Minutewomen with nearly a 23-point margin of error. Even still, UMass will in all likelihood get a chance to give some of its newcomers experience on the road.

UMass will look for a solid team effort to keep the margin of error at bay. The double-M connection of junior Mary Moore and senior Mandy Mosby will seek to continue their steady efforts. Moore is third on the team in the all-around averaging 38.258 and the uneven bars averaging 9.563. Mosby ranks second on the team in the all-around, floor exercise, and uneven bars, while leading the team on the balance beam with an average of 9.752. The freshman duo of Teft and Gendron, must continue to shine as well. Gendron averages 9.739 in the floor exercise to lead the team, as Teft leads the team in the vault, uneven bars, and the all-around.

Head coach Dave Kuzara and company meet the Engineers on Saturday, March 4 at 2pm in DuPont Gymnasium located in Cambridge, MA.

KARA STORTI - COLLEGIAN
The women's gymnastics team takes its show on the road when it faces the M.I.T. Engineers on Saturday out east.

Dilfer looking away from home

By Ken Murray
Baltimore Sun

BALTIMORE – The Ravens' search for a backup quarterback has led them to Trent Dilfer, who went from Pro Bowl to gang plank in two years with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

Dilfer, a former No. 1 draft pick who was allowed to become a free agent this year, arrived in Baltimore Wednesday night to discuss the possibility of becoming Tony Banks' backup.

"Trent has some attraction to and we have some attraction to him," said Ozzie Newsome, the team's vice president of player personnel, after meeting with another free agent, nickel back Robert Bailey. "We want to see whether this is a match."

The key issue is how comfortable Dilfer would be playing behind Banks, who went 6-4 down the stretch as the Ravens' starter to earn a four-year, $18.6 million contract extension.

Indications are that Dilfer is more than willing. Of the seven teams that have contacted him, Dilfer's three front-runners appear to be the Ravens, Denver Broncos and Seattle Seahawks.

It's possible Baltimore may even be his top choice, in part because of the offensive influence of Coach Brian Billick.

Distance runners carry load for UMass, scamper to ECACs for East Coast battle

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's indoor track hopes it can make up points as easily as it can time.

This weekend in Roxbury, the Reggie Lewis Track and Athletic Center will serve up some of the East coast's finest track competition when it hosts the 2000 Eastern College Athletic Conference championships.

UMass has cracked the top 10 in the ECAC indoors just once, that coming in 1991-92 when head coach Julie LaFreniere guided her troops to an eighth place finish. The Minutewomen hope that eight years later they can return their mentor to the upper echelon of regional track.

LaFreniere is in good hands in the pentathlon following Melissa Ward's astounding score of 3,438 in last weekend's New England Championships. Having been an all-around star throughout her career, the senior responded with the second-highest event score in school history. Not only that, but she hammered her previous top mark by over 100 points while topping this season's high of 2,941 points by nearly a half century. Ward, however, has some work to do if she wants the bill of top dog. Andrea Comeau raced to 3,658 last season before hanging it up.

The mark led UMass to a fifth place finish after day one, but the Minutewomen's luck slowly diminished, eventually plopping them in ninth place on the weekend. That, though, is of no fault to the distance squad, who continued their prosperity by placing four runners in the top five.

Melissa Henderson led the way, placing third in the finals of the mile, running a career-best 4:59.94 to place ahead of Kristen Cisowski, who came in three seconds later. The corps of distance runners landed 19 of UMass' 34 points in the meet.

Senior Sally Hirsch added to her resume by crossing the line fourth in the 3000 meter, one step ahead of Sharon Tillotson, who placed fifth. Headlining the event is George Mason, who looks to claim its seventh ECAC championship after taking the 1999 crown. The Patriots dashed their way to 101 points but can feel Pittsburgh, West Virginia and Penn State on their heels. The Mountaineers boast Stacian Brown, who returns to defend her most outstanding performer tab after capturing the gold in the 60-meter high hurdles and the 60-meter dash. She left herself with room for improvement, nailing down second place in the 200 last year.

Familiar faces will be taking the oval this weekend. Rhode Island and Maryland, both of which were triumphant over the Minutewomen earlier this season, will look to fend off UMass' postseason charge in round two at the ECACs.

amc
There Is a Difference
Showplace
PG-13 or R rated films after 6PM
Rte. Farms 4 Shs. Farms Mall
584-9153
WHOLE NINE YARDS: R
Today at (4:30 @$3.75) 7:30 10:10
Sat at 1:20 (4:30 @$3.75) 7:30 10:10
Sun at 1:20 (4:30 @$3.75) 7:30
Mon - Thur (5:40 @$3.75) 8:10
SCREAM 3: R
Today at 7:00 9:30
Sat at 7:00 9:30 Sun at 7:00
Mon - Thur at 7:50
THE BEACH: R
Today at (4:20@ $3.75) 9:40
Sat at (4:20@ $3.75) 9:40
Sun at 1:00 7:10
Mon - Thur (5:20@$3.75)
WHAT PLANET ARE YOU FROM: R
Today at (4:40 @$3.75) 7:20 9:50
Sat at 1:10 (4:40 @$3.75) 7:20 9:50
Sun at 1:10 (4:40 @$3.75) 7:20
Mon - Thur (5:30 @$3.75) 8:10
THE TRIGGER MOVIE: G
Today at (4:10 @$3.75) 8:10
Sat & Sun at 12:20 2:20 (4:10@$3.75) 6:10
Mon- Thur (6:00 @$3.75)
THE SIXTH SENSE: PG13
Today at 1:30 7:10
Sat at 1:30 7:10
Sun at (4:20 @$3.75)
Mon - Thurs at 8:00
$3.75 'Twi-lite' Show Daily!
Special Engagement
No Passes or Discounts

The Bacchae of Euripides
by Wole Soyinka
Feb 24, 25 & 26, March 2, 3 & 4 at 8 p.m.
Rand Thester, UMass
$4 for students and seniors, $7 general
545-2511

McMURPHY'S
Uptown Tavern
MCMURPHY'S BLARNEY
BLOW-OUT
SATURDAY, MARCH 4 DOORS OPEN @NOON
Free Cornbeef Sandwiches
T Shirt Giveaway
34 North Pleasant St.

Entertainment, Food, & Giveaways
AMHERSTONLINE.COM
Bookmark it!

Nationals next for winter wonders

By Jesse Greenspon
Collegian Staff

There were only a few people on campus upset about the recent warm weather we have been having, and they are all members of the Massachusetts men's and women's ski teams.

This past week the Maroon and White entered the postseason with a meet on February 26 at the NCAA Regionals in the Middlebury Snow Bowl, VT, and races on the 27th and 28th at the USCSA Regionals in Waterville Valley, NH.

At the NCAA Regionals in Middlebury, the top 10 or 12 skiers qualified for the NCAA Nationals in Park City, Utah. The Minutemen and Minutewomen came into the race with the knowledge that they were going up against an assortment of great athletes, some good enough to even race for the US ski team. Pete Sanford was the only member of the team that came in with a realistic shot of making it to the Nationals, but he narrowly missed the cut by finishing 17th overall in both the slalom and giant slalom.

"I really thought Pete had a good chance of making it to Utah," said head coach Bill MacConnell, "but he came up just short."

At the Snow Bowl, the whole first day of skiing was cancelled due to the rains, warm and foggy conditions that they were experiencing on top of the mountain. Because of this, a meet that usually lasts two days was squeezed into one action-packed day. Luckily two and a half inches of snow fell the night before the race, and this was able to keep the course in relatively good condition the next day.

After Middlebury, the team packed up their skis and boots and headed over to Waterville for the USCSA Regionals. This time UMass would not be denied. The men placed first in the slalom and fourth in the giant slalom, good enough for second place overall, while the women picked up a fifth place finish in the slalom and a third place finish in the giant slalom, good enough for third overall. Both teams were able to qualify for the USCSA Nationals at Loon Mountain on March 7-11.

"We are peaking at the right time at the end of the season," said MacConnell.

Sanford once again showed why he is probably the top skier in the Eastern College Ski Conference by finishing first overall in the slalom with a time of 1:23.89. This was more than two seconds ahead of the closest competitor. Beau Gibson and Ken Thoman continued to lend him fantastic support with respective times of 1:29.65 and 1:30.41. These runs were good enough for fourth and tenth place.

In the giant slalom, Sanford did not place for the first time all season, but Gibson and Thoman were there to pick up the slack. Gibson placed fifth with a time of 2:09.54 and Thoman was seventh at 2:09.65. Rich Granger finished out the scoring with a 21st place finish (2:13.93).

For the women, Carolyn Lewenberg, Tina King, and Lauren Brodey continued to display their impressive skill, and solidified their positions as the top three women on the team. Lewenberg picked up an 11th place finish in the slalom (1:48.25) and was tenth in the giant slalom (2:18.14), while King was first among the UMass women and fifth overall in the giant slalom at 2:15.93 and was 14th in the slalom with a time of 1:51.96.

Brodey finished just behind King in the slalom at 1:52.80, and Ericka Olson rounded out the scoring with a 15th place finish in the giant slalom at 2:22.03.

On March 7-11, the Minutemen and Minutewomen will compete in the USCSA Nationals at Loon Mountain. Sanford, Gibson, Thoman, Granger, and Pete Glawischnig will represent the men while Lewenberg, Brodey, King, Olson and Margaret LaBombard will ski for the women. The top three skiers for each team will score points for the Maroon and White.

MacConnell looks very optimistic about his team's chances.

"This is probably the first time I've ever said this (when it comes to the Nationals), but we have good chance of doing well. We should have a good go at Loon Mountain, and I think a top five finish out of 18 schools is very possible."

UM hopes Georgia's peachy

By Jesse Greenspon
Collegian Staff

Spring is almost in the air, and that means it is time for the Massachusetts softball team to take the field and try and duplicate the success that the team has had over the last few years.

This weekend, the Minutewomen will try to rebound after a lackluster performance out west where they finished a brutal 0-5 in last month's Fiesta Bowl Tournament. The Maroon and White were ranked No. 16 in the USA Today/NFCA Preseason Coaches Poll, they will have its work cut out for them this year, including this weekend's dates with Stanford and Mississippi State in the NFCA Leadoff Classic. Another tough schedule that involves taking three separate road trips to Florida and Arizona in order to take on the nation's elite will make it very hard to improve on last year's 43-10 record.

Nikki Faessler
COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Kiley Scofield
COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

The team opened up the season by dropping a 9-7 decision to No. 21 Stanford, and then lost to Georgia 4-2 later on in the day. The next day UMass once again dropped both ends of a double header, this time to UNLV, 4-3, and Cal State-Fullerton, 8-1. On the last day of the tournament they were crushed by No. 9 Arizona State, 6-0.

While the Minutewomen had hoped to get off to a better start to the season, there were bright spots to be found in Phoenix. Freshman first baseman Brandi Cross went 4-for-7 with a home run in the first two games of her collegiate career. Her job this year will be to help soften the blow of losing last year's leading hitter and Atlantic 10 Player of the Year, Mandy Galas, to graduation.

Another player that should help UMass recover from the loss of Galas is last year's leading power hitter Cherra Wheeler. She will be moving from first to third base this year in order to allow a space for Cross in the starting lineup.

Junior shortstop Kiley Scofield, and sophomore second baseman Ashley Bakken will fill out the middle of the infield, while freshman Emily Rohustelli will back up both positions.

While losing Galas was a tough loss for the Minutewomen, their main problem this year will be finding someone who can come close to replacing Honda Award Winning pitcher Danielle Henderson. This award is given out every year to the country's top softball player. Last year Henderson posted a 30-4 record with a 0.39 ERA. She had 465 strikeouts, 22 shutouts and opponents batted a lowly 0.93 against her.

Henderson is the holder of 25 school records and is the NCAA's second all-time leader in career strikeouts with 1,343. Right now she is an assistant coach for the team and will compete for the United States softball team this summer at the 2000 Olympic games.

Replacing Henderson won't be easy but the Minutewomen will look to junior Carrie Jeffries, sophomore co-captain Jen Hadley and freshman Kaila Holtz to windmill their way to the top this season. The staff is still solid despite the loss of Henderson, as last year Jeffries went 12-5 with a 2.09 ERA, and Hadley has improved her movement and velocity in the off-season in effort to better last season's 1-3 record.

The outfield is where the Maroon and White will have the most depth this upcoming season. Sophomore Teri Rooney returns to her center field position after picking up All Northeast and All-Atlantic 10 honors as a freshman last season. She batted .306 during the 1999 campaign and started all 53 games. Sophomores Debbie Tomoguchi and Jackuie Sarlett both fought some nagging injuries last season, but are ready to patrol the outfield grass this year.

Should either Tomoguchi or Scarlett falter, two speedy freshmen are ready to come in and take their positions. Both Anna Perey and Kerri Landers should get plenty of playing time this year, and both will challenge for the starting jobs in right and left field.

Nobody will be fighting with senior catcher Nikki Faessler for time behind the plate. She provides leadership as well as a strong bat and glove. Sophomore catcher Natalie Didonna backs her up, but judging by last year in which Faessler started all 53 games, Didonna will not be getting too much playing time this season.

Sunshine and diamonds

Baseball squad takes first cuts in swing through Florida

By Matthew Despres
Collegian Staff

The dawn of a new season is a lot like the rising of the sun every morning: light creeps in to wash away the shadows and uncertainty, revealing a more honest picture of what stands before you. Tonight, the light will shine on the Massachusetts baseball team as it travels to the Sunshine State to battle the University of Florida in a three-game weekend series. For head coach Mike Stone, who is entering his 13th year with the Minutemen, the trip to Gainesville will certainly shed some light on where his team currently stands.

"We always like to play the best teams available so that you have a certain standard that you need to know you have to play at in order to be a good team," Stone said. "I really believe that this team can compete against whoever we play if they go about it the right way. It's an opportunity to take advantage of a great situation."

The positive attitude stands on solid ground. UMass has been selected by both the Atlantic 10 coaches and Baseball America to repeat as champions in the East Division. Although the Minutemen (26-25 in 1999) lost some quality players in the off-season, including pitcher Bill Cooke and third baseman Bryan Mazzaferro, an influx of young talent has emerged to help ease the transition. Freshman Patrick Reedy, a New Bedford native, will bring his 6-foot-5 frame to the UMass mound, as well as a strong left arm. Fellow freshman and Orange, Conn. native Paul Washenko is also being looked upon to help the pitching staff secure the spot vacated by Cooke. Stone, however, feels the departure of one individual is not a serious cause for alarm.

"[Craig] Szado, [David] Loonie, [Jesse] Santos and [David] Williamson and those guys are matured one more year than they were last year, and they should help," said Stone. "We thought Travis Veracka might have signed after he got drafted, but he's back so that's a plus."

The return of Veracka may prove to be the glue that holds the staff together in the long haul. Veracka posted a 6-4 record last season, coupled with a team-leading 3.08 ERA, and held opposing batters to a .285 batting average. Veracka was also singled out by Baseball America as one of the top three pro prospects in the A-10. This type of consistency will be expected of the entire staff if UMass wants to play well late into the season and remain competitive against some of the stronger clubs on the schedule. Stone knows the challenges will come early and often.

"We have a pretty good schedule. We play South Florida the week after Florida, they're a good team, and we play LaSalle who was in the tournament last year," Stone said. "We go to Dayton, they're a good ball club on the other side of the conference. We need to get better each time out, so I think it can be a positive experience regardless of some of the outcomes of these games."

Another plus is the balanced attack the Minutemen bring to the table outside the pitching staff. Senior Steve Asadoorian will bring his strong arm back to the outfield, as well as his feisty bat to help spark the UMass offense. Junior Gavin Clark, who batted .287 last year, is a prospect in right field, where he committed only two errors all of last season. Senior Kevin O'Connell will get the nod at first base, where the 6-foot-4 righty hit .290 last season. Stone sees the remainder of the infield coming together smoothly as well.

"I think behind the plate we're better than we were last year, offensively and defensively," Stone said. "At shortstop, I think we've got a chance to be better there too. Even though we're young, we're experienced in some areas, and should look to be a better ball club."

Playing a major role in the march toward bettering last year's record will be senior second baseman and leadoff man Shaun Skeffington. As a junior last season, Skeffington hit for an impressive .318, and appeared at or near the top of virtually every offensive category. The Minutemen recognize his importance, dropping nine straight contests last year in his absence after he shattered his wrist, as does Stone.

"Shaun Skeffington, he's a pacesetter. We missed him a lot last year after he got hurt," Stone said. "He's a scrappy player, he plays hard. He does things the right way on and off the field, and that kind of attitude, that want to do well attitude, is contagious."

Whatever Skeffington has, the rest of the team will be looking to catch it as they face a competitive Florida club tonight. The Gators and Minutemen have faced each other six times since 1990, with Florida taking all six contests. The Gators finished last year with a record of 32-24, and through 15 contests this year have gone 7-8. Like UMass, Florida has only five seniors on the roster, and will depend largely on the performance of the younger players.

Sophomore second baseman Mark Kluger, who over the summer led the Western Semi-Pro Baseball Association with a .406 average, brings a consistently powerful bat to the plate that the Minutemen will have to work around. Junior Matt Siegel, who started 32 games at third base for the Gators last year, showed prowess with a .426 on-base percentage, as well as in the DH slot.

Florida also has a capable pitching staff, and is slated to throw sophomore Jay Bellflower (1-0, 9.25 ERA) tomorrow, and round off the weekend by sending junior Craig Mosher (0-1, 12.00 ERA) to the mound on Sunday. The Gators will be looking to redeem themselves after dropping a 12-4 contest at the hands of UNC-Greensboro on Wednesday night.

As with the outset of any new season, the Minutemen are looking to improve on what they did last year, and Stone is expecting that goal to be very attainable.

"We use the past and what we've done to challenge the team," said Stone, noting the strong success the team has had in his tenure is something he and his staff use to help motivate the players. "Last year, we didn't do as well as we wanted to overall, so I think the team feels we have more to prove than what we did last year. I think there's a great attitude on this team, I think that there's good camaraderie, so it's a good start."

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO
After hitting .310 with four homers as a freshman last season, catcher Chris Morgan faces the difficult task of filling the shoes of the departed Brian Samela.

Collegian Sports:
Givin' Love a Bad Name

Who cares?
Sunday night March 5 @ 6:30pm in Chapin Chapel
WWW.KNOWMERCY.ORG

SAVION GLOVER
Tues., Mar. 21 & Wed., Mar. 22
ONLY AND A APPEARANCE
*College Tickets $10 Day of Show
• Tony Award Winner • Drama Desk Award
• Outer Critics Circle Award • Obie Awards
• Fred Astaire Awards • 1996 Dance Magazine
Choreographer of the Year Award • Starred in "The Tap Dance Kid" • "Black and Blue" • "Jelly's Last Jam"
• "Bring in 'da Noise, Bring in 'da Funk"
FOR TICKETS...413-788-7033
For Orders in 413-781-6207 or E-mail: tickets@citystage.symphonyhall.com
Purchase tickets at CityStage Box Office
FREE PARKING
Court Street, Springfield, MA • 413-788-7033

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
Starts FRI. DAILY 5PM THIS WEEKEND ONLY
...look again at the year's most nominated film
8 ACADEMY AWARD NOMINATIONS
KEVIN SPACEY ANNETTE BENING
AMERICAN BEAUTY
ACADEMY MUSIC NORTHAMPTON 584-8435

What's new for Spring Break?
ZANNA
Check it out on
www.zanna.com

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENT

CANTONES' PIZZA- for fast delivery to UMass see our menu and coupons at www.cantones.com

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Amherst Center 1,2 and 3 bedroom apartments. Gas heat, hardwood floor 6/1. 256-3237.September Lincoln Real Estate. No fees. 253-7879.

3 bedroom condos. Gas heat, hardwood floors, bright heated basement with study and laundry area. 1/2 mile to campus, on bus route. April showings for June and September $1450.00. Lincoln Real Estate. No fees charged. 253-7879.

1 Bedroom Apt. Colonial Village on busline. $465.00 month. Available 6/1 256-3237.

AUTO FOR SALE

'85 Dodge Ram Van. 132k miles, excellent running condition. $1,200 or b.o. 549-9491.

1990 Toyota Corolla. Auto, air, cassette 147,000k. $2000.00 OBO 584-0574.

AUTO FOR SALE

'92 Subaru Loyale wagon 4x4. Clean, runs great, air, power, roofrack. $2500.00 0.b.0. 665-0453.

EMPLOYMENT

Camp Wayne for girls-sister half of brother/sister camp in Pennsylvania (3 hrs from New York City). If you love children and want a caring, fun environment we are looking to hire staff from 6/20-8/18/00 for: tennis, basketball, softball, soccer, volleyball, golf, gymnastics, aerobics, cheerleading, swimming, sailing, waterskiing, self-defense, ropes, fine arts (ceramics, sculptuer, drawing, painting, silk screening, jewlery), photography, piano, guitar, drama, video, group leaders. On campus interviews March 9th. Call 800-279-3019.

Movers: Local moving company is hiring individuals for moving positions. Flexibility and good attitudes are a must. Start at $8.00 per hour. Raise commensurate with performance. Call 584-4746.

EMPLOYMENT

Spend your summer in Montana! Glacier National Park. Imagine hiking over thousands of miles of almost untouched trails, breathing in fresh, crisp Rocky Mountain air. Imagine conquering the challenge of biking the famous Going-to-the-Sun Highway or the thrill of whitewater rafting, or setting up camp next to a turquoise blue glacier lake. Imagine no more! St. Mary Lodge, Glacier Park's finest, is now hiring for the 2000 summer season. Call (800)368-3689 or e-mail name and mailing address to jobs@glpark.com for an application. Check out our website at www.glcpark.com to learn more about the opportunity of a lifetime.

Connect to the future. International company seeks PC users. $25-75k potential. 1-888-827-9733 www.roadforsuccess.com

Exotic dancers Wanted. Earn $500-1000 weekly. Call Exotica 532-8888.

EMPLOYMENT

Full and Part-time summer job opportunities available. Crabapple whitewater raft guides. No experience necessary. We will train. Must be athletic and hard working and have previous costomer service experience. Afternoon trip co-ordinator. Requires previous customer service experience. Job involves greeting guests, managing retail store and co-ordinating afternoon river trips. Call 413-339-0188 for application and/or more information.

Summer Employment; Outdoors. Weight loss/sports camp looking for energetic people to lead campers in a fun filled summer. Located in West Stockbridge, MA. in the heart of the Berkshires. Call for more information. Toll Free 877-FIT-CAMP. email marc@camp-kingsmont.com

Drivers and kitchen help wanted. Apply D.P. Dough, downtown Amherst.

EMPLOYMENT

Get a head start on a hot INTERNET career with a cool, college-focused start up! BOLD-BRAIN.COM is looking for an energetic, entrepreneurial campus leader to market its website to students, campus organizations and local merchants. Must possess superior communication skills and knowledge of on/off campus life. Salary plus bonus. 10 hrs.+/wk. 6 weeks beginning 3/14. Full time opportunities potentially available. All majors welcome. Email resumes to Michele at BOLD-BRAIN.COM or fax (202)332-5195.

Summer to remember in woods of Maine- Camp Androscoggin for Boys seeks specialists to teach tennis, baseball, soccer, lacrosse, street hockey, swim, canoe, ropes, mountain biking, archery, and photography. 6/18 to 8/18. Visit www.campandro.com or contact 601 West Street, Harrison, NY 10528 (914)835-5800.

EMPLOYMENT

UAHC Crane Lake and Eisner Camps, Reform Jewish co-educational Camps located in the Berkshires of Massachusetts, seek qualified, dedicated counselors and specialists, including Waterfront, Athletics, Arts. Good salary, r&b included, travel assistance. Crane Lake Camp: Contact Brad Gerstle, 800-227-2660 ILUVCAMP@aol.com; www.cranelake-camp.com. Eisner Camp: Contact Louis Bordman, 212-650-4130 EISNERGUY@aol.com; www.eisner-camp.org

FOR SALE

Titleist DCI 981d golf clubs used 5 times. New price $650.00 asking $450.00. 665-6645 ask for Tim.

Textbooks 2 u.com. The best way to buy all your textbooks!!! 3 Day Guarantee!!

MISCELLANEOUS

Get paid to lose weight and inches. All natural, doctor reccommended. 1-800-397-7715.

MISCELLANEOUS

Score big, score often with mybytes.com. Register today and get a free CD of cool music and much more.

PERSONAL

Attractive party-loving 20-something already dating energetic movie buff. How'd they meet? Turns out she's his cousin's friend. sixdegrees showed them the connections. www.sixdegrees.com

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

Rental problems? Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Qestions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the conditions of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

TICKETS

Wanted for April 2 Red Hot Chilipeppers at Mullins Center. Call (413)243-0931.

TRAVEL

Study Spanish. Internships in Guatemala. College Credit. www.casaxelaju.com (512)416-6991.

#1 Panama City Vacations! Party Beachfront @ The Boardwalk, Summit Condo's, and Mark II. 1-800-234-7007. www.endlesssummertours.com

#1 Spring break Vacations! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas & Florida! Book it now! All major credit cards accepted! 1-800-234-7007. www.endlesssummertours.com

SPRING BREAK 2000

Call us here at The Collegian Classifieds to get your ad in the paper!

545-3500

Have a great weekend!!

Five College Community Calendar

FRIDAY, MAR. 3

Auditions – Auditions for three one-act plays will be held in room 917 of the Campus Center at 6:30 p.m. Contact Scott at 665-3434 for more information.

Community – Something Every Friday presents vocalists Barbara Kessler, Ann Helmsburst, and Jess Kline in the Student Union ballroom at 8 p.m.

Community – The Malcolm X Cultural Center will present a show entitled "In the Spirit of Malcolm X" at 7 p.m. at the Center. Poets and dancers are needed. Call Abbea at 546-1998 or Vicki at 546-5366 if interested.

Prayer – The Muslim Student Association will present Jummua Prayer from noon to 2 p.m. in the Campus Center. Check the listing in the elevators for the room number.

SATURDAY, MAR. 4

Comedy – MISSION IMPROVable will perform its improvisational comedy show at 8 p.m. in room 163 of the Campus Center.

Talk – His Eminence Hazrati Syed Mumtaz Ali Shah, shaikh (spiritual guide) of the Gudri Shahi Branch of the Chisti Order of Sufis in Toronto, will give a talk entitled "CONVERSATIONS WITH A SUFI SHAYKH," followed by a question and answer session at 1 p.m. in the Red Room, Converse Hall. AMHERST COLLEGE – Converse Hall is next to the PVTA bus stop at Amherst College). A free reception will follow.

SUNDAY, MAR. 5

Performance – A play entitled "Adios Barbie" will be performed at the Curtain Theater at 5 p.m. The event is sponsored by the Everywoman's Center, the Women's Studies Program, and campus activities.

Recital – Smith College presents a senior recital with Jennifer Schultz at 8 p.m. at Sweeney Concert Hall. Sage Hall.

MONDAY, MAR. 6

Performance – A play entitled "Adios Barbie" will be performed at the Curtain Theater at 5 p.m. The performance will be followed by a body image workshop presented by the Everywoman's Center from 7-9 p.m.

NOTICES

Community – Spring 2000 final examination schedules will be available beginning March 8 and will be delivered to students in residence halls, and will be available to off-campus students in the registrar's office. The schedule will be available on the Web beginning March 1.

Community – Mass Appeal, the newest co-ed a cappella group at UMass, is looking for students to arrange music. Email Erica at massappeal@maiclaim.com for more information.

Community – Small Batch Records is looking for pictures of bands, people, venues and anything that captures the essence of the local music scene to display at a non-profit showcase this spring. For submissions, contact Mike at Mikemac11@aol.com or talk at 587-1740 by March 5.

Help – From Feb. 15-April 13 on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays from 5-8 p.m. student volunteers from the School of Management will assist non-resident alcies with the preparation of their Federal and State income tax returns. Call 545-3662 for more information.

Scholarships – The STEMTECNST Teaching scholars program is offering scholarships to students who are interested in exploring a career in K-12 math or science teaching. Students do not need to be enrolled in a certificate program to apply. Applications are due by April 1. Contact Johanna at 545-0626 for more information.

Support – A grief support group is available to all students who have experienced the death of someone they love. The groups are free, small and confidential, and meet on Wednesday and Thursday evenings. Telephone pre-screening is required for enrollment. Call 577-5316 if interested.

Support – AL-ANON and ALATEEN are offering local meetings for those affected by someone else's drinking problem. Call 253-5261 for meeting times and locations.

Voting – A reminder to registered voters: A voter can only vote absentee due to absence from his/her residence community during polling hours, physical disability preventing the voter from going to a polling place, or religious belief. For more information call 256-4035.

EYs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an EYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

BOOKBUCKS From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks, you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

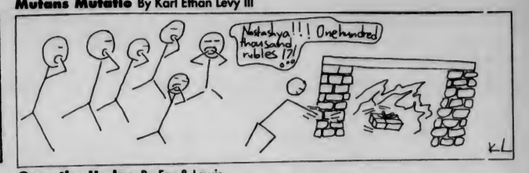
UStore CAMPUS CENTER

Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

FRIDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MARCH 3, 2000

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	Doo Wop 50 (In Stereo)
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Kids-Darndest	Cosby	Now and Again "A Girl's Life"		Nash Bridges (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Kids-Darndest	Cosby	Now and Again "A Girl's Life"		Nash Bridges (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Boy-World	Sabrina-Witch	Sabrina-Witch	Hughleys	20/20		News	Nightline
WLVI	56	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends	Nanny	Jamie Foxx	Jamie Foxx	Steve Harvey	For Your Love	News		Friends	Nanny
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Providence "Runaway Sydney"		Dateline (In Stereo)		News		Real TV (R)	Change-Heart
WTXX	8	Judge Lane	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Real TV	Providence "Runaway Sydney"		Dateline (In Stereo)		Law & Order: Special Victims		News	Tonight Show
WWJF	10	News	NBC News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Providence "Runaway Sydney"		Dateline (In Stereo)		News		Friends	Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Simpsons	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends	World's Wildest Police Videos		Greed: The Series (In Stereo)		Law & Order: Special Victims		News	Tonight Show
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Providence "Runaway Sydney"		Dateline (In Stereo)		Chett	Red Dwarf	Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGBY	57	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	Biography: Angela Lansbury		20/20		News	Nightline
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Boy-World	Sabrina-Witch	Sabrina-Witch	Hughleys	Star Trek: Voyager "Phage"		Mad Abt. You	Judge Mathis
WSBK	38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	"Code Name: Phoenix" (2000, Science Fiction) Jeanne Chinn,						★½ "Dragnet" (1987, Comedy) Dan Aykroyd,
WTBS	72	Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	★★½ "Witness" (1985, Drama) Harrison Ford, Kelly McGillis				Powol		Law & Order "American Dream"
A&E	51	L.A. Law "Hey, Lois Me Over"		Law & Order "Mayhem"	Crossfire	Biography: Angela Lansbury		Investigative Reports		Newsstand		Sports	Moneyline
CNN	23	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour			World Today		Larry King Live				★★★ "Married to the Mob" (1988, Comedy)
COM	28	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show	Stan's Money	★★★ "The Witches of Eastwick" (1987, Comedy) Jack Nicholson, Cher,						On the Inside "Copper Mine"
DISC	52	Your New House (R)		Wild Discovery "Lobster		On the Inside "Copper Mine"		News		Discover Mag.	Storm Warning! (R)	Sportscenter
ESPN	21	Sportscenter		Outside the Lines		NHL Hockey Florida Panthers at New York Rangers. (Live)						Golden Girls	Golden Girls
LIFE	24	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait "Teri Garr"		Chicago Hope		"Deadly Relations" (1993, Drama) Robert Urich, Shelley Fabares,				"Zoether" (2000) (In Stereo)
MTV	53	Road Rules	Road Rules	Diary (R)	News	Say What? Karaoke Finals (R) (In Stereo)				Daria	Fanatic	Live Lucy	Bewitched
NICK	25	All That	Catdog	U Pick Nicktoons (In Stereo)						All in Family	Jeffersons	I Love Lucy	Bewitched
SCIFI	55	Sliders (In Stereo)		Brimstone (In Stereo)						Laxx: The Series (In Stereo)		Farscape (In Stereo)
TLC	29	Home Again	Home Again	48 Hours (R)		Firefight: Stories		Farscape (In Stereo)		JFK Assassination Files		Firefight: Stories
TNT	54	In the Heat of the Night		C.Span		NBA Basketball Utah Jazz at Charlotte Hornets. (In Stereo Live)					NBA Basketball	Pacers at Lakers
USA	59	Baywatch "Windswept"		JAG "The Black Jet" (In Stereo)		Walker, Texas Ranger		★★★ "The Terminator" (1984) Arnold Schwarzenegger,				"From Dusk Till Dawn 2"
HBO	30	(4:45)	★★ "In the Line of Duty: Kidnapped" (1995)			★½ "Vampires" (1998, Horror) James Woods. (In Stereo)						"Texas Chainsaw Massacre: Next Gen."	Dennis Miller
MAX	35	★★★ "The Untouchables" (1987, Drama) Kevin Costner.				★★ "Just a Little Harmless Sex" (1999)				★½ "Gloria" (1999, Drama) Sharon Stone. (In Stereo)			Passion Cove
SHOW	46	★★ "Loverboy" (1989, Comedy) Patrick Dempsey. "PG-13"				★½ "Sweet Evil" (1997, Suspense) Bridgette Wilson.						Stargate SG-1	Dweller Limits (In Stereo)



HSCN Hosting Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	81	Gavel to Gavel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	82	NBC/22 Springfield
4	CBS/4 Boston	83	CNN Headline News
5	ABC/5 Boston	84	CNN
6	FOX/57 Springfield	85	CNN Fn
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	86	CNN Si
8	UPN/20 Hartford	87	TBS
9	Weather Channel	88	BET
10	NBC/30 New Britain	89	College TV Network
11	Fox/61 Hartford	90	Univision
12	PBS/24 Hartford	91	Comedy Central
13	WOCH & HSCN	92	Cartoon Network
14	International	93	TV Land
15	Univision Andalucia TV	94	C.Span
16	WB/New Haven	95	ZDTV (Tentative)
17	Sunbrook	96	Bloomberg Financial Network
18	The Learning Channel	97	History Channel
19	UVC-Fit-9	98	HSCN Programming
20	HSCN Springfield

Balderdash By Tim Dwyer

Mutans Mutatio By Karl Ethan Levy III

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

Over the Hedge By Fry & Lewis

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

Spoot By Mike Banchick

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

Horoscopes

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — Your attempts at problem-solving may fall short today — until you are struck with an inspiration that revives a flagging project.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Your negotiations may go sour today, prompting you to look elsewhere for the commodity you currently require. Who knows? You may strike gold!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — An understanding and sympathetic approach is sure to work better for you today than begin blunt and aggressive. Avoid overt conflict.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — An unexpected turn of events is likely to see you moving in the opposite direction, at least until you get your bearings once again.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — Details make all the difference today, and you must be willing to step back and take a hard, honest look at your own work at this time.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — Don't underestimate your own power of persuasion today. Even when you put things lightly, they are bound to carry a great deal of weight.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Make those necessary overtures in a timely and appropriate fashion today and you will surely win precisely that which you are after.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) — Relax and enjoy what comes and you may actually learn a few things that can serve you well in the near future. Keep an eye on someone's activities.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) — You may be rather uninspired and even lazy today. A friend may have just what you need — but you're going to have to work for it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — Don't be too indulgent today when working with others. You must allow those around you to spread their wings, as well. Selfishness has to go!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Financial matters must be addressed today, and you are likely to be surprised by an unforeseen development that leads to greater profits.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — Take care you do not cross any personal boundaries today without first asking permission. Otherwise, a long-term rift may result.

Quote of the Day

"Do you think every Dawson has a Joey and every Joey has a Dawson?"

–Joey Potter

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Lunch

Chicken Hoagie Sandwich

Grilled Cheese Sandwich

Curried Chick Peas (Berkshire, Hampshire, Worcester only)

Grilled Cheese on Wheat (Berkshire, Hampshire, Worcester only)

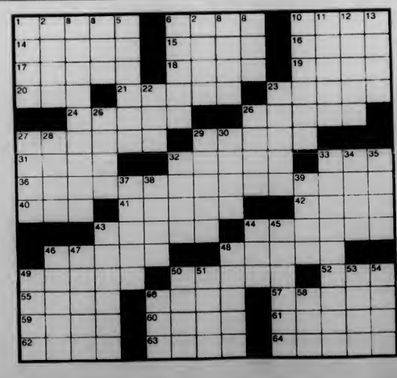
Dinner



Chicken with Pecan Dijon Sauce

Beef and Shrimp Lo Mein

Vegetable Lo Mein (Berkshire, Hampshire, Worcester only)

Black-Eyed Peas Jambalaya (Berkshire, Hampshire, Worcester only)

ACROSS
1 Gullible rustic
6 Use the phone
10 Lucy Lawless role
14 Similar
15 Swirl
16 Preacher's concussion
17 Heaps
18 Secret writing
19 Competed
20 Sun's nickname
21 Zoo barkers
23 Cuckoos and ourlews
24 Comical
26 Frock
27 Songs of victory
29 Not our
31 Sign
32 Eucalyptus eater
33 History chapter
36 March events
40 Double curve
41 Declare invalid
42 "Get outta here!"
43 Path
44 Holy city?
46 Rays
48 Goose eggs
49 Thank you, in Montreal
50 Like children
52 Drink daintily
55 Meadow
56 Nobleman
57 Tolerate
59 Wharf
60 Cordon — cookery
61 "— mind!"
62 Goals
63 Mrs. Truman
64 Sly one

DOWN
1 Canine noses

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

3-21-00 © 2000, United Feature Syndicate

2 Spicy stew
3 Some players
4 — our: make do
5 Period of instruction
6 Decorative sticker
7 Object of devotion
8 Finds the sum
9 Caustic solution
10 Bandleader Cugat
11 Islamic princes
12 Lacks
13 Ampersands
22 Urban trains
23 Boitano of the ice
25 Rajah's wife
26 Sandwich shop
27 Work as a model
28 Concert sights
29 Close-fitting hat
30 Carry
32 Superman's alias
33 Too much
34 Peruse
35 Regarding 37 A Judd
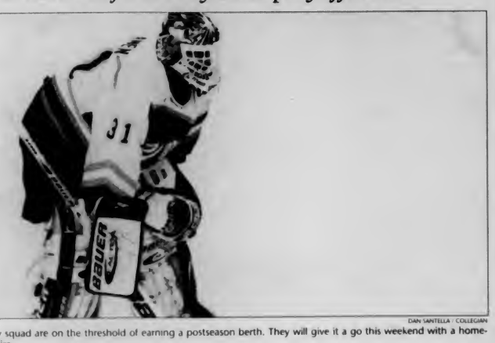
38 Verb grazers
39 Norwegian port
43 Indy 500 participants
44 Half a score
45 Instruments for Bach
46 Start
47 Miscalculated
48 Bantu speakers
49 Sulk
50 New Haven school
51 Mines' output
53 Notion
54 Brew (coffee)
56 Wane
58 "—-Hur"

Night Editor Adam Martignetti

Photo Technician Caitlin Winkworth



Copy Editor Kathleen Rolls

Production Supervisor Alan Basque

Production Assistant Elana Premack, Vlad Zakushnyuky

Clawing their way

Pucksters on brink of Hockey East playoff berth

DAN SANTELLA / COLLEGIAN

Captain Nathan Sell and the hockey squad are on the threshold of earning a postseason berth. They will give it a go this weekend with a home-and-home series against New Hampshire.

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

Crunch time has finally arrived for the Massachusetts hockey team.

After battling with some of the nation's best teams for the past five months, the Minutemen still have two more tests left on their schedule. This weekend, UMass (11-17-4, 5-14-3 Hockey East) will play a pair of games against No. 4 New Hampshire.

The Minutemen need just one point in their final two games to qualify for the Hockey East playoffs. However, if UMass drops both games to the Wildcats and UMass-Lowell defeats Northeastern tomorrow night, then the RiverHawks will earn the final spot.

On the flip side, if the Minutemen sweep UNH this weekend and Merrimack loses to Boston University this weekend, then UMass will jump up to seventh place in the conference.

Needless to say, there is still plenty to play for against the Wildcats this weekend.

"We're not in the playoffs yet. We've still got two [games] with UNH," said UMass captain Nathan Sell following last Saturday's 5-1 win over No. 6 Boston College. "There's a lot for us to play for. We need to get a win this weekend to make sure that we're in."

The two teams will battle tonight at the Whittemore Center in Durham, NH. Tomorrow night the scene will shift to the William D. Mullins Center. Both games are slated for a 7 p.m. start.

Before tomorrow night's game, the Minutemen will honor the four seniors on this year's club – Sell, alternate captain Jeff Blanchard, Kevin Poulin and Dimitri Vasiliev.

UNH (20-7-5, 12-5-5 in Hockey East) defeated the Minutemen 2-1 in the only other meeting between the two schools this season. On Nov. 6 in Durham netminder Ty Conklin outdueled UMass goalie Mike Johnson for the one-goal win.

The Wildcats were idle last weekend, but lost three of their previous four games before the layoff. However, they have posted an 11-1-4 record at the Whittemore Center this season.

Never theless, UMass is playing with a renewed sense of confidence thanks to the win over BC. Ironically, the Eagles had only one home loss on the season before the Minutemen claimed a 5-1 win at Conte Forum on Saturday.

"Beating a Top 10 team like BC is huge. We have a lot of momentum going into this weekend," said UMass freshman forward Tim Turner, who earned Hockey East Rookie of the Month honors for his stellar play in the month of February.

Offensively, forwards Darren Haydar and Mike Souza, each of who has 35 points on the season, lead the Wildcats. Although solid numbers, the duo has seen their production drop off since the graduation of 1999 Hobey Baker Award winner Jason Krog, who is now with the New York Islanders.

To combat for the loss of Krog, however, coach Dick Umile's squad has used a consistent team effort to produce goals. Thirteen players on the roster have at least 10 points, paced by the aforementioned duo.

The key for the Wildcats lies between the pipes, where Conklin has emerged as a Hobey Baker candidate. The junior goalie has a 19-6-5 record to go along with a 2.57 goals against average.

On the UMass side of things, junior forward Jeff Turner leads the Minutemen with 32 points (14-18). Complementing him are Tim Turner and Blanchard, each of whom have 24 points on the year.

The key for the Minutemen will likely revolve around the play of goaltender Markus Helanen. The Vantaa, Finland native has a 10-14-2 mark and a 2.67 GAA. However, the UMass goalie made 68 stops last weekend against BC to earn Hockey East Player of the Week honors and tends to save his best play for big games.

UMass also has some history on their side, having defeated the Wildcats 4-3 on Feb. 22, 1998 at the Mullins Center. In addition, UNH was also ranked No. 4 heading into that game – once again proving that the Minutemen have the capability to defeat the nation's elite teams.

"I think that our guys believe that they can beat anybody on any given night," said UMass hockey coach Joe Mallen following the BC game.

Men's hoop look to bounce St. Bonnies

By Kathleen Ralls
Collegian Staff

It has come down to the wire for the Massachusetts men's basketball team.

The Minutemen hope to regroup from a disheartening 87-86 loss to George Washington on Tuesday night in preparation for their final regular season game against St. Bonaventure tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. at the Reilly Center.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Kitwana Rhymer

It's more than just looking to stop a two-game losing streak that began with a 72-54 loss the Temple on Saturday. It's more than just trying to capture their tenth conference win, a standard they have met 10 of the past 11 years. It's more than just finishing up strong.

UMass stand at 15-13, and 9-6 in the Atlantic 10. The Bonnies hold still at 18-8 and 10-5 in conference play. After being tied for second place in the A-10 East behind Temple (22-5, 13-2 A-10) up until the beginning of this week, the New York squad pulled ahead by one game.

What's the big deal?

The first and second seeds in both the East and the West earn a bye in next week's A-10 Tournament in Philadelphia, Pa. If the Bonnies successfully break down the Minutemen, they will take home the free pass and will not compete until the final quarterfinal game on Mar. 9 against the winner of the Xavier-Rhode Island game. The Minutemen would play in the first round on Mar. 8 against the sixth seed from the West Division, being either Duquesne or LaSalle. If UMass win, the two teams will be tied for second. The tiebreaker comes down to how each squad did against A-10 teams in the East. The Minutemen would automatically claim the bye because they are 7-3 compared to the Bonnies' 6-4 finish.

"It's their senior night and this is a team that has pretty much grown together," said UMass coach James "Bruiser" Flint. "And growing together makes a team successful they're going to be ready for this one."

Earlier on Jan. 6, the Minutemen collapsed 70-60 to St. Bonaventure at the William D. Mullins Center when Caswell Cyrus tallied a double-double with 22 points and 11 rebounds while Monty Mack led the home team with 19 points in the loss. In the first half, UMass netted just one field goal in the final nine and a half minutes in the first half to trail 39-21. The Bonnies were in the midst of winning seven of their last eight games. They have since dropped off their pace, going 7-6 in the latter half of the season.

"They've got a lot of young guys they depend on who I think, as the season goes on, they'll get tired, they'll make the same type of plays," said Flint.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

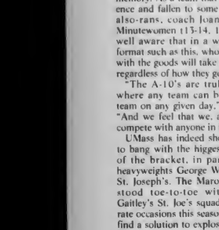
Caswell Cyrus

Mack, who is second in the A-10 in scoring with 19.4 ppg, has been the point on the arrow for the Minutemen, leading the team in scoring the past 15 of 20 games while touching double figures in 25 of his 27 games this season. Throughout the year he has been joined by Chris Kirkland (15.3 ppg) and Shannon Crooks (11.7 ppg) to head up the offensive end of UMass.

Starting center Kitwana Rhymer will need to reach his season averages of 7.5 ppg and rebounds per game to even out the scoring wave from the backcourt.

Freshman Micah Brand could be the deciding factor for UMass coming off the bench. The center hoisted his team past Rhode Island last week when he punched in a career-high 14 points.

Minutewomen start fresh in A-10s



By Adam White
Collegian Staff

Crumple up the regular season stats. Throw out the records. Torch the standings.

It's time to play for keeps.

The Massachusetts women's basketball team will roll into this weekend's Bell Atlantic 10 Tournament in Philadelphia on the heels of back-to-back wins, and look to make its mediocre regular season performance a mere memory. As a team that has beaten the best of the conference and fallen to some of the A-10's also-teams, coach Jeanie O'Brien's Minutewomen (13-14, 10-6 A-10) are well aware that in a winner-take-all format such as this, whoever shows up with the goods will take home the gold regardless of how they got there.

"The A-10's are truly a situation where any team can beat any other team on any given day," said O'Brien. "And we feel that we, as a team, can compete with anyone in it."

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Jaywana Bradley

UMass has indeed shown an ability to bang with the biggest and baddest of the bracket, in particular A-10 heavyweights George Washington and St. Joseph's. The Maroon and White stood toe-to-toe with Stephanie Gartley's St. Joe's squad on two separate occasions this season, but couldn't find a solution to explosive Hawk center Iana Lichnerova and came up short both times. And in a scenario even more indicative of UMass' true potential, the Minutewomen upended heavily favored George Washington, 67-54, before an electrified home crowd on February 17.

But before the Maroon and White can focus on the top dogs in the A-10, it must concentrate on the task at hand. O'Brien's troops earned a first round bye in the tournament courtesy of their second-place A-10 East finish, setting them up in the role of spectators for Friday's matchup between Virginia Tech and Rhode Island. UMass will face the winner at 2 p.m. on Saturday.

"We're expecting to face Va. Tech, although anything can happen," O'Brien said. "It's a case where we aren't going to overlook anybody."

The Hokies (18-9, 11-5 A-10) present a perplexing opponent for the Minutewomen. Virginia Tech bested UMass on February 13 in Blacksburg, 66-45, in the only meeting between the two teams this year. The Hokies got a huge game out of team scoring leader Tere Williams in that melee, as the forward ripped the Maroon and White for 21 points and seven rebounds. The Minutewomen kept it close behind a showcase performance from freshman pivot Jen Butler (11 points, 13 boards), but simply couldn't overcome the Hokies' devastating inside-outside attack.

That more than likely won't be the case this time, however. Williams is questionable at best for Saturday's game, after sustaining a serious knee injury down the regular season stretch. O'Brien and company enter the matchup knowing that even if the Hokie star is able to take the floor, she more than likely won't duplicate her regular season heroics in Philly.

Which isn't to say that the Hokies are a one-player team, however. Virginia Tech has a trio of sharpshooters in Chrystal Starling, Sarah Hicks and Amy Wetzel, all of whom are more than comfortable bombing away from beyond the arch. Starling shot over 50 percent from international waters this season, while Hicks connected on a team-high 36 trifectas over the course of the 99-00 slate.

But UMass might just as easily end up sparring with Rhode Island on Saturday. The Rams (2-24, 2-14 A-10) may seem severely outclassed in the tournament, having limited depth with which to keep the pressure on their opposition (they dressed only six players for their final game of the year against UMass).

The Maroon and White might also be made a little cozier by the fact that it has bested Rhode Island twice already this season, on December 14 at home and February 27 in Kingston. But despite the outcome of those contests, neither victory was all that sweet; UMass only outscored the Rams by three points total in the second halves of the two wins.

"We've allowed them to come back on us a couple of times," O'Brien said. "You have to give their kids a lot of credit. They came out and played hard, even with their limited numbers."

But as the latter game showed, the Maroon and White has the guns to put URI away for good this weekend, if necessary. Butler rocked the Rams for 14 points and 14 rebounds in Kingston, while fellow first-year forward Amber Sneed racked up 10 points and seven boards in 32 minutes.

Regardless of whom they face in this weekend's tourney, the Minutewomen have but one goal: to erase the disappointment of their regular season showing with a conference championship. And in the opinion of at least one player, that goal isn't only realistic; it's simply the way it has to be.

"Success for us means winning the A-10 title," said senior guard Tonia Thomas. "We know we have what it takes to win it. We've proven it to ourselves, and now it's time to prove it to everyone else. For real."

No time to relax for Cannella, UMass

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

It's Socrates against Aristotle with a twist – and a little rough-housing.

Eight years ago, Massachusetts men's lacrosse head coach Greg Cannella, then at Stony Brook, weaseled out from under John Espey's wing, taking flight and landing in Amherst in 1993 to serve under the tutelage of Ted Garber. Espey has stayed put.

Having rounded the buoy and turning back around for the 2000 season, Cannella and Espey reunite for the first time as head coaching tandem. And you'd better believe that there will be no love lost once the sixty minutes have past.

After a 10-7 loss to No. 9 Hofstra, a long-time rival of the Minutemen, the Maroon and White now have a shot in round two, opening up its conference season with a date with Stony Brook tomorrow on Long Island.

Conference season? Peculiar.

For years, the Minutemen were on their own, but over the summer, they joined hands with six other squads to form the Eastern College Athletic Conference (ECAC), which include Maryland-Baltimore County, Georgetown, Rutgers, Navy, Penn State and the Seawolves, who hope to delve into the win column themselves after falling to Bucknell, 9-7, in their season opener.

"We hope to win this first game here and move on," Cannella said. "We just have to take it day by day."

The Minutemen certainly didn't struggle defensively, but rather in the transition from defense to offense. In a game in which time of possession heavily favored the Flying Dutchmen, UMass held them at bay until the wheels fell off and their defenders began getting tired. The Minutemen battled clearing problems all afternoon, allowing Hofstra to collect turnovers and produce goals out of them.

"I thought we [the defense] played very well," Cannella said. "All those guys that played on that side did a fine job, but we played a lot of defense, and when you give a team too many chances, they're going to really stick it to you."

Cannella admits his squad struggled in transition offense, but it seemed as though, in setting up, the Minutemen flourished. Rich Kunkel, after a 22-goal campaign last season, came back where he left off, netting a pair of goals. He and the offensive arsenal will have to deal with Stony Brook goaltender John Dobias who, after winning the starting position in the offseason, corralled 20 saves on 37 shots to keep the Seawolves close.

It is the first ever meeting between the two schools, but surely the first of many to come. Dominic D'Orazio leads the Seawolves onto the field, but hopes the sequel will prove more profitable than the original. Coming into the season just 14 points shy of becoming the 12th player in school history to record 100 points, Bucknell, however, shut the senior attackman down, forcing him to wait for No. 87.

The game will be the first for Stony Brook on its own turf, even after having been scheduled to take on the Bison last week at Seawolves Field. Due to poor field conditions, much like that seen in Amherst last week, the venue moved down the road to Hempstead, ironically, home of the Flying Dutchmen. The Wolves fell down early, but battled back to tie the game at seven before Bucknell closed the game out with a pair of goals to clinch the road win.

KARA STONES / COLLEGIAN

Coach Greg Cannella is hoping that his offense can right the ship against Stony Brook this weekend after a lackluster performance against Hofstra in both teams' 2000 debut.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Volume CVI Issue 28 Monday, March 6, 2000

Super Tuesday right around corner

Candidates and issues for informed UMass voters

By Virginia Avedisian
Collegian Staff

As many students know, this is the year in which the people of America will vote for a new President. Although students do have a rough idea of who is running and what party they belong to, many really don't know where each candidate stands on issues.

The prominent Democratic candidates are Bill Bradley and current Vice President Al Gore, and the prominent Republican candidates are John McCain and George W. Bush. Each candidate has his own views about the pressing issues of our country today. These include education, abortion and gun laws.

George W. Bush announced his candidacy on June 12, 1999 in Des Moines, Iowa and is currently the governor of Texas. When it comes to education, he supports making federal funds to state and local districts more flexible in return for greater accountability and improved student achievement. Another goal that he has regarding education reform is to provide for a zero tolerance policy in every school in the nation, allowing teachers to remove disruptive children from their classrooms. Also, he would like to enact a teacher protection law that would protect teachers, principals and school board members from frivolous lawsuits resulting from efforts to maintain discipline.

Bush is a pro-life supporter except in cases of rape, incest or when the life of the mother is in danger. He believes in parental notification for abortions, supports efforts to increase adoptions, and wants to ban the use of taxpayer funds for abortions. He also wants to ban partial-birth abortions.

"We must stress that abstinence isn't just about saying no to sex; it's about saying yes to a happier, healthier future," he said.

Gun control seemed to be one of the most important issues that Bush has focused on throughout his campaign. This includes his support for background checks at all gun shows, current bans of automatic weapons, child safety locks on handguns, and the constitutional right of law-abiding Americans to own a gun to protect their families and homes. Bush would also like the minimum age for the possession of a handgun to be raised from the current age of 18 to the age of 21.

John McCain announced his candidacy on April 13, 1999 via news release and is currently the U.S. Senator from Arizona. John McCain is the other Republican candidate and is currently running against George W. Bush within their party. McCain has also made many valid points on important issues concerning the American public.

McCain's views on education include his support of the bill called Educating America's Children for Tomorrow, which supports things such as school choice, hiring and retaining quality teachers, and providing more opportunities for disabled children. McCain once stated, "Let's spend money on kids and teachers, not on Washington bureaucrats."

McCain, like Bush, is also pro-life, except in cases of rape, incest and times when the mother's life is in danger. He wants to ban the use of tax funds for abortion and wants to outlaw the practice of partial-birth abortions. He also believes in abstinence and promotes adoption over abortion.

McCain, unlike Bush, feels that we as a society should not enact any gun control laws because they violate the Second Amendment, which gives the people of America the right to bear arms. He does however support "effective common-sense measures that don't interfere with the Second Amendment," he said. Although McCain supports instant background checks for all commercial firearms sales and trigger locks, he opposes waiting periods in order to obtain handguns.

Bill Bradley announced his candidacy on September 8, 1999 in Crystal City, Missouri, and was the U.S. Senator from New Jersey from 1979 to 1997.

Bradley's views on education include wanting to invest $175 billion over 10 years in education. He wants to enroll four hundred thousand more children in Head Start, and place sixty thousand new teachers per year into low-income urban and rural school districts. Bradley would also like to invest in community colleges to improve technology in a partnership with regional businesses and local high schools.

He is pro-choice and supports same-sex marriages. He has stated that his "commitment to protecting a women's right to choose has never, and will never change. This is a private decision between a woman and her doctor, and as President, I will always fight to protect that privacy."

Bradley chooses to support the registration of all sixty-five million handguns in the U.S. and the prohibition of gun dealers selling guns in residential neighborhoods. He supports the idea of trigger locks for handguns and wants to limit gun purchases by any one person to one per month.

Al Gore announced his candidacy on June 16, 1999 in Carthage, Tennessee, and is currently the Vice President of the United States. Al Gore's campaign has very strong support for education. He is currently working for smaller class sizes and having every classroom connected to the Internet. He is also fighting Republican cuts to aid for college students. Gore also wants to increase funding for Pell Grants, which helped nearly four million low- and moderate-income students attend college in 1998.

Al Gore is pro-choice and is "deeply committed to making abortion safe, legal and rare," he said.

When it comes to gun control, Gore would like to ban deadly assault weapons and would also like to keep all juveniles convicted of a crime from ever owning a gun. Gore has stated that he feels that "even a single crime in America is one too many. Even a single family threatened by violence is unacceptable."

Tuesday is the day for the people in Massachusetts and other New England states, with the exception of New Hampshire, to vote on which candidate should be represented by each party to move ahead in the presidential election in November.

TERESA CAVINO RIVERA COLLEGIAN

Sing along

English majors Shannon Doyle, left, and Stacey Burdack sit by the Student Union last week playing guitar.

Race and science meet

By Heather Palmer
Collegian Correspondent

How do race and science overlap? This question and others were raised Thursday night at Mount Holyoke College when a panel of educators and sociologists participated in "Race and Science— A Dialogue of the Issues." Thursday nights' lecture was the first in a series of discussions that will take place at Mount Holyoke throughout the spring semester. Headlining the evening's discussion were Professor Willy Pearson Jr., a Professor of Sociology at Wake Forest University; Anthony Walton, a writer in residence at Bodwin College; and Sean Decatur, Assistant Professor of Chemistry at Mount Holyoke.

"As individuals and scientists we are members of some racial category and also practicing scientists. So it is a question about what issues are involved in wearing both these hats."
– Sean Decatur, Assistant Professor of Chemistry at Mount Holoke

"The main idea of the series is to look at two sets of social categories or ideas about race and ideas about science and really look at the way these two sets intersect or interface," Decatur said.

The reasons behind the discussions at Mt. Holyoke stem from the historical reputation Mt. Holyoke holds for training women in the sciences as well as the diversity shown among the community to strive for racial justice and racial equality on and off campus. Decatur wanted to try to bring these two aspects together on campus.

Decatur's interests include research on conflicts arising among science and policy makers and the impact of science and technology on colored communities. "As individuals and scientists we are members of some racial category and also practicing scientists. So it is a question about what issues are involved in wearing both these hats," Decatur added.

He then asked, "Why are some groups underrepresented among scientists? What are the issues behind this? Why is this important? And how does it effect social and political problems in the U.S.?"

Decatur did not have the answers to these questions but offered this. "It is clear that technological change has an enormous effect on the lives of everyone, but communities of color have a particular concern. Because some groups like African-Americans and Latinos are more likely to be at an economical disadvantage they are therefore more likely to be left behind by technology. These groups also bear the brunt of the negative side of technological change such as environmental damage and [are] less likely to benefit from some of the advances in technology such as medicine."

Anthony Walton, who also spoke is the author of Mississippi; an American journey and "Technology versus African-Americans," an article that appeared in the January 1999 issue of Atlantic Monthly. Walton offered examples of the negative effects of technology on African Americans.

"The industrialization era left millions of workers to suffer to provide for themselves. Blacks both worldwide and in this country have for four hundred years [borne a] disproportional share of the burden," Walton said.

"Slave trade was the first encounter of technology for African Americans that proved disastrous. They had been the technology until the cotton gin and industrialization took away their work."

Walton went on to say that blacks are more still at risk of being a victim rather than a beneficiary of technological prevalence. Bell Atlantic is a more recent example of this. "Bell Atlantic which I think is the largest employer of African Americans on the East Coast created a middle class from Boston to Virginia. These workers were operators, systems managers, and things like that. But right now there's a chip on the way that is designed and constructed to do their work."

Willy Pearson Jr. has written extensively about the social and political changes facing African Americans. He is the author of Black Scientist White Society. In his discussion he focussed on the under-representation of women, African-Americans, American Indians, and Alaskan natives in the scientific fields at higher educational institutions.

"I think the under-representation has a lot to do with the lack of encouragement, low expectations, inconsistent funding for programs, and little commitment from faculty," Pearson said.

Pearson's figures showed that the majority of African Americans and women receive degrees in the social sciences instead of physical sciences, engineering, and math.

Gamble Auditorium at Mount Holyoke College will play host to a second panel discussion on March 22, 2000.

Plan for genetic code unravels

Alliance to map genes approaches collapse

By Justin Gillis
Washington Post

WASHINGTON – Behind-the-scenes negotiations to create a grand alliance of public and private researchers to unravel the human genetic code all but collapsed yesterday as the two sides accused each other of manipulation and bad faith.

Newly available documents show that representatives of the National Human Genome Research Institute, the lead agency in an international campaign to map all human genes, and of Celera Genomics Corp., the Rockville, Md., biotechnology company pursuing the same goal as a for-profit endeavor, have been talking since December.

The negotiators hoped to strike a deal that would merge the international Human Genome Project with Celera's efforts, producing a topnotch, virtually complete map of human genes by late this year, far earlier than the 2003 deadline set by the Human Genome Project.

Such a map, a central goal of modern science, promises to speed medical research and shed light on some profound mysteries of human biology. "Humankind will be better served if we can find a viable way to join forces to produce a better product in a more timely fashion," said one negotiating document.

But the effort appears to have foundered amid sharp disagreements about commercial use of the gene database that would result from the collaboration.

What could be the final blow came yesterday, when the Wellcome Trust, a large British charity heavily involved in financing gene research and long suspicious of Celera's efforts, released a copy of a letter from public negotiators to J. Craig Venter, Celera's president and chief scientific officer.

The letter, dated Feb. 28 and marked "confidential," outlines difficulties in the negotiations and sets a deadline today for Venter to alter his positions. In a telephone interview, Venter said he interpreted release of the letter the day before the deadline as an effort to pressure him.

"I'm sort of disgusted that they would send us this threatening 'confidential' letter with a time deadline on it, then fax it to the press," Venter said. "I don't even know what to make of it. It's such a low-life thing to do."

Francis Collins, director of the National Human Genome Research Institute and principal author of the letter, said he played no role in releasing it and learned the Wellcome Trust was about to do so over the weekend. He added, however, that negotiations with Celera have been disappointing, and barring some unexpected breakthrough, a public-private collaboration to map the genetic code is unlikely.

"This was not set up to fail," Collins said of the months of behind-the-scenes negotiations. "This was set up to succeed. It was disappointing, to be honest, that it didn't turn out that way. I went way out on a limb to try to convince some of the more reluctant parties that this was worth pursuing."

In the letter, Collins said a prime issue was Celera's desire for restrictions on commercial use of the genome database that would result from a collaboration. Celera is spending hundreds of millions of dollars on gene research and has become a Wall Street darling because of its perceived lead among biotechnology companies.

Turn to BEE, page 2

Brain teases: UMass holds local Brain Bee

By Matt Foster
Collegian Staff

UMass held its first ever Brain Bee on Saturday, Mar. 4, inviting area high school students to compete for a spot in the International Brain Bee in Baltimore, Maryland on Tuesday March 14.

Students from Northampton, Amherst Regional, and Belchertown high schools, as well as Hopkins Academy, took part in the competition.

The event, administered by faculty and graduate students from the Neuroscience and Behavior (NSB) Program, was arranged similar to a spelling bee, where students were asked questions relating to neuroscience. The questions were taken from the book "Brain Facts," which is published by the Society for Neuroscience (SFN).

Some of the topics covered by these questions included: memory, intelligence, emotions, sensations, stress, movement, aging, sleep, and brain disorders.

Puerto Ricans rally

Special to The Washington Post

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico – Concerned that Puerto Rico is gaining an anti-American image, leaders of the pro-statehood New Progressive Party and tens of thousands of supporters celebrated their U.S. citizenship Sunday in a rally on the grounds of the island's Capitol.

Waving U.S. flags, participants danced to salsa and merengue music from enormous loudspeakers on an oceanside road that serves as the main entrance to the Old San Juan tourist district.

"The time has come to raise the voice of alarm," New Progressive Party president and gubernatorial candidate Carlos Pesquera told the crowd. "Here is the silent majority of Puerto Rico."

Resident Commissioner Carlos Romero Barcelo, Puerto Rico's non-voting member of Congress, criticized islanders who "wear their citizenship like a piece of clothing which they put on and take off when it is convenient," and said that U.S. citizenship carries with it responsibilities as well as opportunities.

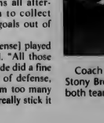
"All of us who are celebrating at this festival are proud to be Puerto Ricans and proud to be Americans too. We feel proud to fly both flags," Romero Barcelo said.

Puerto Rico Police Assistant Superintendent Iosus Garcia estimated attendance at 80,000.

The rally, celebrating the March 2 anniversary of the Jones Act of 1917 that made Puerto Ricans U.S. citizens, was designed to counteract what organizers say is an "anti-American message" that protests over the Navy's use of Vieques for bombing practice has projected in the mainland media.

It follows a "Peace for Vieques" march last month, in which religious leaders and a throng of Puerto Ricans called for no more Navy military training on Vieques. Commonwealth police estimated that 85,000 people participated in that march, while San Juan police put the number as high as 150,000.

"Ultimately, the Vieques issue gives the impression that the people of Puerto Rico are anti-American, and the majority of the people are pro-American," said William Santos, 42, a resident of Vega Baja, a north coast town west of San Juan, who attended yesterday's rally.

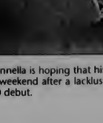


Although the religious leaders who organized last month's demonstration made a call to participants to leave home flags and other partisan symbols, New Progressive Party leaders attacked the event as "separatist."

Arts & Living 6
Comics 11
Crossword 11
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 12
ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

EXTENDED FORECAST

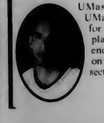
Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 53 LOW: 24	HIGH: 57 LOW: 38	HIGH: 58 LOW: 42



Losing faith...

Hear what Ryan Benharris has to say about the disappointing people around him on today's Ed/Op page.

PAGE 4



Pumpkins' Machines Smash Cupo's

Despite all his rage, Billy Corgan still can't grow any hair. Check out our review of their smashing concert as well as this weekend's disappointing movies.

PAGE 6

The better UMass

UMass-Amherst and UMass-Lowell jockeyed for the final Hockey East playoff spot this weekend. See who came out on top in today's sports section.

PAGE 12

Nice day

Junior Jessica Jasiak enjoys a nice day outside the Campus Center.

Government's crime plan faces dilemma

By Charles Piller
Los Angeles Times

Facing a sharp rise in serious Internet hacking episodes, the federal government two years ago launched its biggest counterattack on cyber criminals, creating the National Infrastructure Protection Center to protect the United States' multibillion-dollar investment in computer networks.

But with funding this year of just $18.5 million – far less than the cost of a single combat jet or the venture capital raised by many dot-com start-ups – Internet security experts doubt that NIPC can provide much of a bulwark against cyber sabotage.

And as the agency struggles to solve the latest wave of attacks that blocked access to major Web sites last month, it faces an even greater long-term challenge: NIPC badly needs the cooperation of the industry, but many technology leaders deeply distrust the agency and its approach to network security.

The center, an agency led by the FBI, was assigned the gargantuan task of providing early warnings to network managers and hunting down malicious hackers. Its efforts so far have left a bitter taste in the fast moving culture of technology.

"The FBI has really alienated most of the people in the Internet world, and now all of sudden they want to be our friends," said Phil Karn, a top Internet security expert at Qualcomm Corp., a thriving telecommunications company in San Diego.

"There's definitely a perception that the government ... has only one tool – criminal law – and that they see that as a solution to everything."

Security experts value law enforcement, although they also see prevention – particularly stronger computer encryption – as the more effective solution to cybercrime. But that solution flies squarely into the FBI's long held position that encryption must not erode its domestic and foreign espionage and criminal surveillance abilities.

Leading outside security experts also consider the NIPC's charge overly broad, a result of the catch-all approach taken when the agency was created by the Clinton administration. The Commerce Department also has a computer security agency, but without law enforcement powers. Industry security experts doubt the NIPC's ability to track down cyber-criminals while coordinating, educating and alerting the industry and government agencies about security threats during a nationwide pandemic of computer hacking and high-tech espionage.

The fears that prompted the creation of NIPC have been confirmed by the rapid increase in computer crime.

The Computer Emergency Response Team at Carnegie Mellon University said that it handled more than 8,000 incidents last year – more than double the 1998 figure. These ranged from attacks that caused the recent spate of Web site failures to destructive computer viruses and small-scale hacking episodes.

As a result of the large computer-crime caseload and overly broad mission, the "NIPC seems pretty unorganized and unprepared," said Amit Yoran, president of RipTech, a security company in Alexandria, Va., and former head of computer vulnerability assessment for the Department of Defense Information Systems Agency.

"The place is just a little bit overwhelmed" as it faces tasks better suited to an industry consortium or nongovernmental group, he said.

■ bee

continued from page 1

The three highest scorers overall won books on the subject of neuroscience as an award. The top competitor won a place at the International event.

"We are very pleased to be sponsoring the first, local Brain Bee contest," Katherine V. Fite, director of the NSB, said.

"This is a valuable opportunity for our faculty and students to work with high school students excited about brain research," she continued.

A sampling of the questions asked is: "Prozac relieves symptoms of depression by affecting what neurotransmitter? (seratonin)" and "Name the surgical procedure that destroys part of the basal ganglia and helps Parkinson's patients. (pallidotmy)"

The Bee is associated with National Brain Awareness Week being held Mar. 13-19 and was organized four years ago by the Dana Alliance for Brain Initiatives and the SFN with the intent of informing the community about developments in neuroscience.

It has developed into both a national and an international affair, with 29 countries, universities, hospitals, government agencies, research centers, and patient support groups across the globe. Both the National Alzheimer's Association and the Parkinson's Disease Foundation are involved.

According to information provided by the SFN, over 50 million Americans have lasting, neurological conditions that limit their behavior. Four million people have Alzheimer's disease in America alone, and 1,200 Americans each day will experience strokes.

Georgetown students cited by Commission

By Sandra Sugawara
Washington Post

WASHINGTON – To Georgetown University Law Center student Douglas W. Colt, it was a way to use the broad reach of the Internet to make money on the stock market. To federal authorities, it was a scam of the times.

Colt, 24, created a stock picking Web site called Fast-Trades.com, and convinced many of its 9,000 visitors to buy certain stocks. In just two months, he made $345,000 for himself, his friends and his mom after his recommendations caused the stock prices to surge.

Federal regulators, however, say Colt made that money by illegally manipulating stock prices. The Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday charged that Colt, his friends and his 55-year-old mother, Joanne Colt, a city council member from Colorado Springs, Colo., violated securities laws. The five settled the civil charges without denying or admitting any wrongdoing.

Stock regulators alleged that Colt targeted cheap, lightly-traded stocks, whose prices are more likely to swing widely during buying and selling sprees. Colt and the others would buy shares of a company they had selected, and then place orders to sell those shares when stock prices hit a target level, the SEC said.

Colt would then send out his recommendation to non-paying subscribers, who would promptly begin buying up shares. That would quickly cause the stock's price to surge, sometimes as much as 700 percent, according to the SEC. Within a few hours, Colt and his associates would dump their shares, and soon the price would plummet back down.

Because it was important to Colt's plan to get lots of people to buy the stocks he designated on his Web site, Colt talked three other law students to help him by using aliases and posting "false and misleading" messages on Internet boards. They visited message boards such as those on the Yahoo and Raging Bull Web sites, where they touted Fast-Trades.com's stock picking prowess, according to the SEC.

Those friends, said the SEC, included two third-year Georgetown University Law Center students who shared an Arlington, Va., apartment with Colt last year – Kenneth Terrell, 25, from Newton, Mass., and Jason Wyckoff, 23, from Lawrenceville, N.J. – as well as Adam Altman, 25, who graduated from the law school last spring.

The five profited because they were able to invest before the information was released to subscribers. Colt's mother found out how important such early tips are when she tried to make her first trade.

Everybody Scores!

REGISTER WITH MYBYTES.COM AND SCORE BIG!

GET A FREE SONIC ABYSS MULTIMEDIA CD AND AUTOMATICALLY BE ENTERED INTO OUR SCORE BIG, SCORE OFTEN SWEEPSTAKES.

YOU COULD WIN AN INSTANT PRIZE!

PLUS, YOU'LL HAVE A CHANCE AT $100,000 TOWARDS YOUR COLLEGE EDUCATION.

$core BIG $core OFTEN Sweepstakes

UpCLOSE travel well SPEND LESS BLOCKBUSTER

CALGON SESSIONS.com

SKECHERS OldGlory.com

mybytes.com™

TripHub.com Your Student Travel Source

UNIVERSAL UNIVERSAL MUSIC & VIDEO DISTRIBUTION

No Purchase Necessary. Void in Florida and where prohibited by law. Must be legal resident of the United States, (except Florida) 18 yrs or older, registered at a college or university during the promotional period. Sweepstakes ends 6:00 PM EST 05/17/00. To Play: visit www.mybytes.com and register for the website using process provided, confirm your contact information on the game page and submit. Instant winners selected at random and notified instantly by site. Grand Prize winner will be selected at random on or about 5/21/00 and notified via email and regular US mail. Odds of winning Prizes depend on the number of entries received. By entering, participants agree to be bound by the complete Official Rules available at www.mybytes.com or send SASE to "SBSO Rules" Common Places, 810 Memorial Dr., Cambridge, MA 02139. BLOCKBUSTER™ name, design and related marks are trademarks of Blockbuster Inc. Blockbuster Inc. is not a sponsor of or in any way liable or responsible for the administration of this game. (Coupon redeemable at participating BLOCKBUSTER™ store locations.)

© 2000 Youthstream

U.S. troops join flood relief effort for Mozambique

By Jon Jeter
Washington Post

JOHANNESBURG— Nearly 600 U.S. troops arrived here Sunday to begin delivering food, medical supplies and tents to neighboring Mozambique, where a month of flooding has left an estimated 1 million people homeless.

After a week in which more than 12,000 people were plucked from roofs, trees and utility poles by South African defense forces, Western countries Sunday joined the final phase of the operation. Teams from Britain, Germany, Spain and France sent helicopters out on rescue missions, but with the floodwaters receding, relief workers said no more than 600 people remain marooned.

Now, concern has shifted to providing food, clean water and medical care to nearly 250,000 people squeezed into 64 refugee camps, some no more than a stretch of dry land manned by a handful of medical workers. Many of the survivors went for days without food and water; some said they ate insects, rats or tree leaves. Fighting reportedly broke out in camps yesterday as the hungry scrambled for bags of food tossed from trucks by aid workers.

A shortage of clean drinking water has already tripled the number of malaria cases, medical workers said, and there is fear that the incidence of other waterborne illnesses such as cholera and dysentery will continue to climb, driving up the death toll.

Officially, the number of dead stands at more than 200 in Mozambique, but relief workers and government officials predict the number will exceed 1,000 once illness sets in and corpses begin to surface as floodwaters recedes.

South Africa's armed forces have shouldered most of the burden of rescuing Mozambicans stranded by the floods, and while aid, troops and supplies from foreign countries began to pour in this weekend, many in Africa have been critical of the West's slow pace in providing assistance.

But Mozambican President Joaquim Chissano told reporters yesterday that the international community was slow to respond because it was not immediately clear just how badly the country of 19 million had been affected. Heavy rains throughout southern Africa had accumulated for weeks, but the situation in Mozambique took a catastrophic turn last weekend when a hurricane swept through the southern and central portions of the country.

Chissano said now that foreign powers are aware of how urgently Mozambique needs help, they are beginning to catch up."

Nearly $40 million in foreign aid has been pledged. Chissano said the nation would likely require $250 million to reconstruct roads and railways, pay for health care and help farmers survive for nearly a year until they can recoup the crops that were lost.

With roads impassable because of flooding, most efforts will have to be carried out by air. But Mozambique's main airport in the capital city of Maputo has never handled such volume of air traffic. Concerned about fuel and safety, U.S. troops are launching their helicopter missions from Hodespruit, South Africa, just across the Mozambican border.

A good book

Nina Korotkova, a comparative literature graduate student, relaxes with some light reading by the campus pond.

Frankenfoods struggle for respect

By Stephanie Simon
Los Angeles Times

CHESTERFIELD, Mo. –The corn in this rooftop greenhouse bites back.

Although it looks and tastes ordinary, it can kill one of its most persistent pests, a fat brown worm called the corn borer. Its secret weapon: Each cell of the corn contains a protein that causes corn borers' guts to explode. One bite and boom, the worm is history.

It's natural pest control.

Except there's nothing natural about corn endowed with that particular protein. Scientists at Monsanto here in suburban St. Louis lifted the pest-zapping protein from a type of soil bacteria, then inserted it into thousands of varieties of corn.

Farmers, for the most part, welcome this technology.

Increasingly, however, they're wary of using it.

Not because they worry that bioengineered food is dangerous. But because they fear the public might jump to that conclusion –and might turn down their crops come harvest time.

Already, executives at Frito-Lay Inc., Seagram Co., Gerber Products Co. and H.J. Heinz Co. have announced they will not use genetically modified crops in their products. Vandals protesting the technology, meanwhile, have trashed research labs from California to Maine. On Friday, it was learned that the Clinton administration plans to seek a ban on genetically engineered grains in a food labeled "organic." Toss in noisy overseas protests against "Frankenstein foods" – rejected not only by the European Union but also by Japanese breweries and a Mexican tortilla maker – and it's clear the market is far from settled.

So as growers across the nation finalize seed orders for their spring planting they face an agonizing conundrum.

Corn, soybeans, cotton and potatoes enhanced with alien genes have yielded excellent harvests in all sorts of climates. They can make it easy to control weeds and pests. They can slash the use of chemical sprays. And by eliminating the need to churn fields to kill weeds, they can even help prevent erosion.

Which makes it all the more frustrating for farmers to pass up biotech seeds on the chance that the public backlash might mount.

"Growers' instincts tell them (the modified crops) are a better product," said Doug Robinson, a seed salesman from Waterloo, Neb. "But they feel very much caught between the devil and the deep blue sea."

Equivocation – often repeated on the corporate level – naturally drives biotech advocates nuts.

"If I hear one more company like Frito-Lay or Gerber say: 'We really like this technology, but we're not going to use it in our products,' I'm going to throw up," said Dean Urmston, vice president of the American Seed Trade Association. "I call them the spineless jellyfish of the food chain."

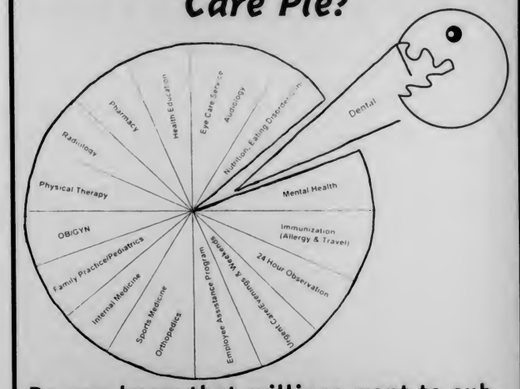
In truth, however, it's unclear how much effect farmers – or even corporations – are having on the biotech market.

True, the number of acres planted in genetically modified crops will not zoom upward this season, as it has every year since the technology was introduced in 1996.

True too, many farmers who are planting biotech do so with trepidation. Even the bankers who finance them are worried. In a recent federal survey of Midwest agricultural lenders, 28 percent acknowledged reservations about backing purchases of gene-altered seeds.)

Nonetheless, the technology remains astoundingly popular.

Bio-engineered crops last year covered nearly 72 million acres in the United States, and Monsanto predicts that figure will hold steady this season. Farmers in regions that export heavily to Europe might be backing away from the technology. But those who suffered through insect infestations last summer are clamoring for seeds engineered to kill pests.



"Growers have to be concerned about the market," concludes Mike Yost, who is mixing conventional and genetically modified crops on his farm in central Minnesota. "But there's no reason to panic."

The way Yost looks at it, so much of the U.S. grain harvest is biotech that processors can't get by without it. So it's bound to sell sooner or later, even if at a discount. Indeed, genetically modified hybrids last year accounted for two-thirds of the nation's soybeans, nearly one-third of the corn and 60 percent of the cotton.

Given those numbers, even if biotech acreage dips slightly this season, as a few small-scale grower surveys suggest, the altered crops still will end up in scores of everyday foods, from soda (made with corn sweetener) to French fries (cooked in cottonseed oil) to ice cream and salad dressing containing soy.

Genetically altered grain also will feed many of the animals that produce our milk, our burgers, our ham.

Who's Eating Your Health Care Pie?

Do you know that millions went to subsidize care of non-UMass students? Who is responsible?

The University administration has for years allowed millions of dollars of your fees to subsidize the care of Hampshire College and Amherst College students, as well as non-student members of Kaiser Permanente health plan. Why have they knowingly allowed this to happen? Why are they now closing the Dental clinic, which last year saw almost 5,000 students?

Call or e-mail Interim Vice Chancellor Javier Cevallos, 5-2333, cevallos@spanport.umass.edu and/or Chancellor David Scott, 5-2211, dkscott@chancellor.umass.edu

Sponsored by UHS staff - members of AFSCME Local 1776, USA/MTA, and SEIU Local 509.

Do you want to be a part of the biggest student-run business on campus?

Are you interested in a career in Human Resources?

Collegian is accepting applications for the position of Human Resource Coordinator.

Applications can be picked up at the Collegian in room 113 in the Campus Center Basement.

Interested applicants should possess excellent communication and computer skills.

Any questions can be directed to christine Carroll at 545-3500 or hrcollegian@yahoo.com.

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Our Opinion
Without Honor

Last week, a scandal erupted at Dartmouth College due to the alleged cheating of almost half the students in a computer science class. The issue at hand is whether the students cheated on a homework assignment or were set up by visiting professor Rex Dwyer who was assigned to teach the course this semester.

Many students felt that Dwyer was an incompetent teacher and they freely admit that they were rude to him, as evidenced by their jeering, rude comments and loud conversations in class. They openly mocked him by correcting his spelling when he wrote on the board, and they read the newspaper and looked at pornography during class, if they came to class at all. Many of the students claim that Dwyer sought revenge by assigning an impossible homework assignment that was designed to entrap them into cheating.

Dwyer denies these claims and has since returned to North Carolina State University. Dartmouth officials believe he is telling the truth, but students claim that because the solution to the homework was not secured on the class's website, they were unaware at the outset that they could not download it. In addition, the problem was beyond the ability of many of the students, and even the teaching assistants had trouble understanding it.

If the outcome is decided in favor of the professor, then 78 students out of a total of 178 may potentially have this on their academic records, only because they were caught. One can only wonder at the numbers of students who cheat but do not get caught on college campuses around the country.

Younger children are taught that cheating will only shortchange them in the long run, and this is probably true when they are learning the multiplication tables or how to spell. The consequences of cheating in elementary school result in direct and obvious shortcomings in a child's ability to do certain things.

However, the issue becomes more difficult on the college level since college students forget a good deal of the information they are supposed to learn in their classes, especially if the class is a requirement and they are not interested in the topic. Additionally, college is a competitive environment and if cheaters are not caught, they most likely won't feel any negative consequences from their actions. Instead, they may only reap the rewards of better grades.

Students may cheat on papers, homework assignments or exams. Plagiarism is easily accomplished by copying a small paragraph from a book or downloading a paper off the Internet. Even astute professors and teaching assistants must miss plagiarism occasionally. Also, it is difficult for professors to assign a take-home assignment and not expect students to work together, especially if it is difficult. The only way around this is to assign students to groups or to give each student a different assignment.

The most obvious way of cheating is sneaking a look at another student's paper during an exam. While professors maintain a watchful eye while a class is taking an exam – even to the point of adding extra eyes like TA's or other professors – they often miss things and there are other ways for students to cheat. Students may stash textbooks in the bathroom, so professors should be wary of letting people go to the bathroom, unless they have someone check the bathrooms. In addition, students may stash something in a room before an exam or they may have some information written on their hands. Professors would do well to monitor their students very carefully, and perhaps they should modify seating arrangements or test formats to be less cheater-friendly.

Students should not get away with this kind of behavior, but as long as they are competitive with each other and are concerned only with their GPAs, many will continue to cheat in order to get ahead. Since honor is not a commonly held value in our society, students act accordingly. Perhaps at UMass, we should consider making this a priority.

Je sais le voyage est tres bon

Okay, so it was a little far away. Still, if you're any sort of loyal reader of my columns, you know that there is no distance too far for me to travel to ensure that you, the loyal reader, have something entertaining to loyally read every week.

That is why I, along with five friends and our luggage, piled into a car that was very big (military fighter planes were trying to land on the hood) and undertook the chore of driving seven hours to the beautiful city of Quebec in our neighboring nation to the north, Canada: a country that falls under the prestigious category of Nations that U.S. Presidential Candidate George W. X. Y. Z. Bush Doesn't Know the Leader Of.

The things I do for you. This is your one opportunity of the week to feel appreciated, so take advantage of it with some sort of content, warm noise, like a sigh. There. Don't you feel good?

Now that all that nonsense is out of the way, in all seriousness, I had to go on a little bit of a vacation. Amherst, as absolutely wonderful as it is, is what I see each and every day of the school year, and, well, I'm bored as all as hell with it. Quebec City, on the other hand, I see extremely rarely, so my limited attention span was thrilled with all the new, fun things I saw there.

For all of you that are like U.S. Presidential Candidate George W. X. Y. Z. Bush and are not familiar with foreign nations like Canada, it is important for me to note that French is the language of choice directly to our north, as opposed to the fragmented, broken English we all use here at UMass.

I know what you're thinking. You're thinking that I'm an ignorant fool because you are confident in the fact that it is not Canada as an entire land that speaks French, but rather the province of Quebec in particular. Well, the egg's on your face, here, because not only do I know that, but I also know that "province" is French for "state." Ha! Stick that in your pipe and smoke it.

Seth Koenig

Anyway, while in Quebec City, the six of us did very cultured, diplomatic things like make fun of the native language and laugh snobbishly at Canadians doing exactly the same things that Americans do... but in French.

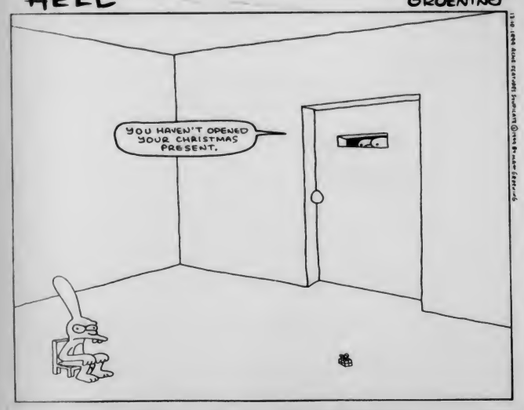
Being an annoying tourist, I entertained myself by spending literally every last cent that I owned on things that I currently cannot locate all of two days after I returned to Massachusetts. One of these things is a beautiful black T-shirt that, in French, suggests that "fashion" (or, for the Quebec-folks out there, "la mode," not to be confused with the "la mode" that comes at the end of the phrase "pie a la mode," which obviously means "with a pathetically small scoop of ice cream on top") go engage in sexual intercourse with itself, although the shirt suggested such a thing with significantly fewer words.

The phrase is perfect for someone of my uncanny ability to clash all the time, as my friend and fellow Collegian columnist, Kathleen Ralls, will attest. Wearing clothing that outright says, in fewer words, that I believe that fashion can go about pleasuring itself in a sexual manner, gives me a perfect excuse for looking like the missing link between plaid and paisley.

After staring up at old buildings with awe and eating exotic food, like "French" toast and "French" fries, we decided that it was time to go back to Western Massachusetts. This is important to remember, because if this critical decision had not been made, there would be a big blank space on this page where this column now sits.

Still, because we weren't satisfied with the amount of culture that we immersed ourselves in over the course of the day that we were in Quebec City, we figured that we would break down several times on the way home to get a better feel for the more rural Canadian culture between the lights of the capital city and the border of Vermont ("Vermonte" in French – it's amazing how bilingual one can become with intense road sign studying).

This was easy to do, because there were six people in an extremely old, overworked car. At one juncture in the whole trip home, we got adventurous and decided to not only run out of gas, but oil, too.



We went off on a back road in what appeared to be Siberia to search for a gas station, but were disappointed to find that, in Canada, everything closes at about four in the afternoon on Saturday. Then being the mid- to late evening, we would have been out of luck and, as a result, still there right now had one of the six of us, Torrey Fuller, not wandered off to find the town's only gas station owner. Torrey convinced the nice man, whom I still have no idea how he found amongst the locked up and dark houses of what seemed to be a ghost town, to lead us to his gas station and open it back up long after it closed for the sole purpose of getting us fixed up, and he did it knowing only slightly more than how to say "hello" in French (that's "la hello", for all of you ignorant Americans, out there). I assume that Torrey was carrying a firearm of some sort when he was conversing with the man – that's the only way I can think of that he could have pulled something like that off.

Overall, the moral of the story is if you can't dress correctly on your own, go to Canada and get a shirt that makes it look like you're doing it on purpose. Also, when in Quebec, walk like an Egyptian.

Seth Koenig is a Collegian columnist.

We at Ed/Op are always looking for random column submissions and letters to the editor. But we can't print everything we receive. Feel free to drop your pieces off at the Collegian office or email them to us at thedailycollegian@yahoo.com

LIFE IN HELL

No faith left in humanity

Over the past seven days I have lost my faith in humanity. I know it's a pretty big claim to make, but after two events that I have experienced in the past week, I can't imagine thinking any other way.

Last Friday, I went home to the boring town of North Attleboro. To my surprise, nothing major was going on, and the only reason I went home was for my annual trip to the eye doctor. After a day filled with driving and having a guy stick his finger in my eye, I went to Chili's in Providence to eat dinner with my mother and sister. It was at around 7:00 p.m. that I became the unwilling victim of a pick pocketing.

I've always known that criminals target the innocent and unsuspecting people who usually aren't assuming that anyone is coming for them, and that defines me to perfection. I always carry my wallet and keys in my two jacket pockets that are fully equipped with zippers on them. Last Friday, I forgot to zip the pocket, leaving full access for one of society's degenerates to reach into my coat and snag something that had pretty much my entire life in it. I didn't notice it was missing until after dinner, so when I arrived back home, I made about a thousand phone calls to cancel my credit cards, ATM accounts, and pretty much anything else that you would normally do after losing your wallet.

At the time I assumed that it had just fallen out of my pocket, and it was in a parking lot somewhere. Around 10:00 p.m., I received the phone call from Chili's that my wallet was found in the men's restroom. "Weird," I thought to myself, "I didn't even use the men's room." Well it turns out that someone had stolen my wallet, jacked all the cash, and left everything else behind. I'm actually glad that everything else was left behind, because it could've been much worse. However, what I was left with was a feeling of uncertainty about my trust in people. An uncertainty that only got stronger over the next few days.

Tuesday morning, in my history class, a professor was talking about the growth in population in Boston, MA. To describe how the population slowed down, he used the phrase, "The population was retarded in the early part of the century." To my surprise, half of the class erupted in laughter. For anyone who might not know, the actually definition of retarded is "slowed down." The term, when used properly can actually sound quite intelligent. However, it's the way that I hear the word used commonly everyday that always makes me sick. It wasn't until the class was laughing at the professor's remarks this week that I really began to despise people who use the word retarded or retard so lightly. If you ever challenge anyone who says "retard," by explaining to them what it actually means, they'll usually give you the same explanation. "I don't mean it like that. Plus everyone says it, re-tah-d (as pronounced with a Boston accent, as I so often hear it around this campus) is just a word." When someone says "re-tah-d" around me, I don't think of "just a word." The word immediately makes me think of my sister, who has spent the last ten years of her life in special needs classes in schools after she was diagnosed with a mild form of mental retardation.

To those of you who wouldn't think twice about using the term, let me ask you, when you call someone a "re-tah-d" do you mean a person who will never know the joys of driving a car? Or are you talking about a fourteen-year-old girl that you have to pick up early from summer camp, because her leg is covered in blood after being beaten up again and after being called names like "sped" and "tool?" Only to spend the car ride home explaining to her what those words mean as you think to yourself, "why didn't the counselors do anything about it?" You find out later from your brother, who is a counselor at another camp in the same program, that the counselors don't do anything about it because they are only young high school students who also call your sister a re-tah-d, and laugh about it when no one she's related to is around. Well, is that what you think of when you're calling someone else a re-tah-d? That's what I think of when I hear it.

Ryan Benharris

I didn't even need to turn around to find out who was laughing in my class. I knew who it was right away. It was the same kids that called everyone "spazoids" in elementary school. They moved on to "faggot" in middle school, and by the time they hit high school there was not a word in their vocabulary that had more than four letters. I'm sure they were the same kids who always seemed to know the most fashionable words to degrade someone with. Apparently in college, it's re-tah-d. To all of those people who were laughing, and everyone who thinks re-tah-d is the greatest word in the dictionary, do you know why James Byrd Jr. is dead? Oh wait, you probably don't even know who it is. I'm not even going to tell you because if you go look it up, maybe you'll learn something. Just know that before he was killed, he was being called a variety of hateful names. One of them being "re-tah-d."

Hate is a very scary thing, and it begins with words. We are all by-products of so many different elements of society that have impacted us in so many ways. People can learn to hate in some of the places they have learned so much in, that they would never expect to assume that the teachings are wrong. It was no surprise to me that the eighth grade teacher who one day gave me a dime and told me to "be a good little Jewish boy and invest that," so one day I could "own him and everyone else in the school," just to get a laugh from another teacher, was the same man who told our math class that "it's no surprise, they're taking everything over now," after a Chinese student won the spelling bee. Hate comes from teachers, it comes from parents, and it comes from people like the bunch of kids that laughed when my professor used the word "retarded" in an educational manner last week. I'm sure that when you're using hateful words, you will always explain that you don't actually mean hateful things by them. However, allow me to quote one of my favorite movies ever: Die Hard. "Why don't you wake up and smell what you're shoveling." The things that you say are wrong. We all have the opportunity to make our own choices, and I hope you make the right ones. But until you do, keep your soiled, grubby hands out of my pocket.

Ryan Benharris is a Collegian columnist.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Sam Wilkinson Managing Editor Shawn Ilinitch Business Manager
Ben Alamed Web Developer Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager
Sage Brousseau Co-Advertising Production Manager Jake Lilien Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pashkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Garis Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jake Lilien Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jennie Gorlevsky Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Multicultural Affairs Editor
Mary Grein News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Adam White Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor

Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Christine Connare Women's Issues Editor
Marc Menchel Finance Manager
Joshua Szymanski Distribution Manager
Katie Beith Promotions Manager
Catherine Turner International Affairs Editor
Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Chris Brennan Assistant Finance Manager
Eric Faber Assistant Advertising Manager
Amy Garganta Assistant Business Manager

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Woman's Affairs

UMass honors women's rights

International Women's Day is celebrated with many performances

By Julie O'Connor
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts has dedicated March, Women's History Month, to reflect on the accomplishments and impact that women have made throughout the world. Amnesty International in association with WMUA, the Everywoman's Center, the Graduate Women's Network, the Women's Studies Department, and the University and College Amnesty International Groups, have designed numerous events to educate and advocate women's human rights.

On December 18, 1979, the Convention to Eliminate All Forms of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW) was adopted by the United Nations General Assembly. The expectation in creating this international treaty was to address women's rights in regards to their cultural, economical, political, and social status. Since 1980, 165 countries have participated in the ratification of CEDAW. Ironically, the U.S. played a significant role in the drafting and signing of the Women's Convention, but has yet to endorse the treaty.

Meaghan Hamilton, an undeclared freshman, has worked with UMass and the town of Amherst to reactivate Amnesty International at the University.

"It is absurd in the United States, where women are active in voice and play a huge role in society, they don't have their rights recognized," said Hamilton.

By not supporting the Convention's main objective, to fight against discrimination of women, the United States is placed in a class with such countries as Afghanistan, Iran, North Korea, and Sudan.

The Convention consists of 30 articles that promote women's effective use of their rights to prevent violence and discrimination. CEDAW has already enabled women to gain access to legal rights such as inheritance and political rights in South America, South Africa, and Central America. This raises the question of why the United States has taken twenty years to support a treaty that has significantly proven to be beneficial towards women.

"It is a conservative fear that ratification of the CEDAW will create the support of abortion, destroy the nuclear family, and open men and women to redefinition," said Christine Ashley, Graduate's Women Network Coordinator.

Despite the obstacles in the past, the Clinton Administration has clearly committed to ratifying the Women's Convention by the year 2000. The sanctioning of the CEDAW is expected to aid in the elimination of discrimination and violence against women and promote equal human rights.

Wednesday, March 8, 2000, celebrates the 92nd anniversary of International Women's Day. The events scheduled for this day and all of March includes exhibits, lectures, musical performances, poetry readings, and theater productions.

"This is a joint effort campus wide," said Nancy Campbell Patteson, Women's Studies Graduate Program/Program Development Coordinator.

The main focus on International Women's Day will be on the United States' anticipated ratification of the Convention to Eliminate All forms of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW). From noon to 6 p.m. in the UMass Student Union Art Gallery, Amnesty International and WMUA will broadcast live, encouraging people to participate by reading, singing, and performing. The Stonewall Center will be presenting "Our Voices Series: Sexism," in the Campus Center rooms 911-15 at 7p.m. The Women's Studies Lecture will be discussing the topic of "Crossing Genders and Genres: An investigation into the writings of the Argentine Poetess and Essayist Alfonsina Storni," presented by Mariela Mendez in Herter Hall.

"This is an opportunity for people in general to become educated in access and equity for women. There is still a lot to be done and this is an opportunity for women to become involved," said Carol Wallace, Director of Everywoman's Center.

Students are encouraged to celebrate International Women's Day and Women's History month at UMass. Show your support of the Women's Movement and the present achievements of females around the world.

For more information on joining Amnesty International at UMass, contact Womyn_turtle@hotmail.com

Bush discusses breast cancer in New York

By Terry M. Neal and Edward Walsh
Washington Post

STONY BROOK, N.Y. – With the state's two most powerful politicians at his side, George W. Bush started his two-day campaign swing through New York with an unusual event: An appearance at a state university campus to talk about breast cancer research. The event was unusual for at least one major reason: Bush has never talked about breast cancer research until now and, in fact, generally only talks about health care issues when asked by reporters or voters. Nonetheless, Friday Gov. George E. Pataki (R) introduced the Texas governor to the audience at New York State University at Stony Brook as a champion of breast cancer research.

"I'm glad to take a little time off the campaign trail to talk policy, the kind of policy that's really going to matter to the future of the country when I become president," said Bush, who sported a pink breast cancer awareness emblem pinned to the lapel of his suit jacket. "And I think I'm going to become the president."

Bush, who is in a virtual dead heat with rival John McCain in polls here, has stepped up his attacks against the Arizona senator as Tuesday's primary approaches. Most recently he began running an ad that criticizes McCain for opposing $1 million in funding for a New York-based breast cancer research center. The ad, which features breast cancer survivor Geri Barrish, who also appeared on the stage with Bush Friday, ends with Barrish saying, "We deserve a candidate with a record on women's issues we can trust."

McCain has complained vehemently that the Barrish ad unfairly distorts a 17-year record by focusing on only one or two issues in the same way Steve Forbes distorted Bob Dole's record in 1996. The McCain campaign produced a list of 10 votes cast by the Arizona senator since 1990 to fund a variety of cancer research programs. And they said he supports doubling the National Institutes of Health's $13 billion budget – a measure advocated by Sen. Connie Mack, R-Fla.

At the event Friday morning, Bush claimed his support for the same proposal. And he said his support for managed health care reforms in Texas – including new laws that require HMOs to pay for reconstructive breast surgery after mastectomies – demonstrate his support for women's health issues.

But when asked at the news conference specifically if he could name anything he had done in Texas to increase breast cancer research, Bush answered: "No. I haven't because most of the money comes from the federal government." He also noted that his wife was active in the cause and that the state funds mammograms for low-income women.

Bush's communications director, Karen Hughes, rushed off after the event and came back to the press room to announce that Bush had supported a measure in Texas to use $100 million of the state's tobacco settlement money for cancer research.

Asked at the news conference if he believed McCain was opposed to breast cancer research, Bush said: "No, I don't believe that. But I do know what his Web site says." Bush then read an item from McCain's Web site vowing to veto a New York cancer project appropriation and lumping it in with other projects described as "garden variety pork."

"I don't think that the senator should be squealing about pork and then squealing when somebody disagrees with one of the cuts he wants to make," Bush said.

When told that McCain's sister suffered from breast cancer, Bush said: "All the more reason to remind him of what he said about the research that goes on here. I'm sorry if that's the case; that obviously is very difficult for her and her family."

Meanwhile, the McCain camp acknowledged it was making telephone calls to Roman Catholic voters in New York. Unlike calls made in other primary states, McCain aides said the calls into New York do not mention Bush's appearance at Bob Jones University. The calls do note, however, that "John McCain spoke out against bigotry at Bob Jones University."

Addressing a noontime rally on Wall Street, McCain continued his assault on leaders of the Christian conservative movement who are strongly backing Bush. He said the outcomes of primaries in New York and 12 other states tomorrow will determine "which direction goes the Republican Party and the United States of America."

"Do we go as the party of inclusion and not of division?" McCain continued. "Do we reach out? Do we want the ideals of Abraham Lincoln, of Theodore Roosevelt, of Ronald Reagan, or do we want the ideals of Jerry Falwell, Pat Robertson or Bob Jones? That's the choice that we have to make. The course of America will be decided next Tuesday."

McCain repeatedly said how proud he was of the type of campaign he has run. "We've run an honorable campaign," he told the Wall Street rally.

A look at female politicians and their role in America's history

Some women are extremely famous for their contributions to women's rights and affairs. Others are not so well known. This month politics are dominating the headlines. However, we must never forget the leading women who changed the political landscape and left a deep impression on our everyday lives.

One of these influential women was Rebecca Felton. She was appointed to a position which was unattainable to many women of her time. She served for one day in the United States Senate. Her experience may have only been a ceremonial gesture, but what it stood for was much more important. It signified that women were finally making their marks in political circles.

Rebecca Felton left other impressions on the political arena. She worked as a strategist, speechwriter, and press secretary. She did these through her husband, a way many women during her time expressed their political opinions. Felton also expressed herself through work on a newspaper, as an activist and adviser. She became one of the first to fight for criminal justice reform, public education and women's rights.

Another less known woman politician is Margaret Chase Smith. Similar to Rebecca Felton, she became a politician in the absence of her husband. She served on the House of Representatives in 1940. In addition, she ran for the Maine seat. She served for eight years in the House and twenty-four years in the Senate. She eventually became the first women to serve and be elected to both houses. While doing this she remained independent of the party line.

Eleanor Roosevelt has called her "the country's top woman politician." She was given such a generous title due to her history making decisions using her heart.

These are just a few women politicians from the past who deserve our recognition. We should also be paying close attention to women today who are making great contributions to the current political arena.

-Compiled by Sarah Holland

Calendar of Events for March

Monday, March 6th

"Adios Barbie," a collection of essays turned into a play and produced by M.FA graduate student Jenni Werner. Shows two nights only at the Curtain Theater, 5pm (FREE). Poignant, often humorous, stories of women all wrtenle with their identities and the standards of beauty they see around them. The performance will be followed by a body image workshop, presented by the Everywoman's Center. (FREE) 7-9 p.m.

Monday through Thursday, March 6th-9th

"This Is All True To Me," a dynamic and string collection of artwork and written word featuring women artists. Open from 9-5 p.m. Opening reception March 6th at 12 p.m.

Monday, March 6th

Taboos around women, sex, and love explored in "Fire" a fiercely debated Indian film. Film and hot discussion from 7-9 p.m. in the Student Union Art Gallery. Satish Kolluri, doctoral candidate, department of communications, facilitates discussion.

Tuesday, March 7th

"This Is All True To Me," poetry reading in the Student Union Art Gallery 7-9 p.m.. Local women writers read their works.

Wednesday, March 8th, International Women's Day

Amnesty International and WMUA broadcast LIVE from the Student Union Art Gallery, 12p.m.- 6p.m.. Come air your perspectives, sing, perform, read on air, and recognize sisters around the world.

Mariela Mendez, comparative literature graduate student, speaks on Crossing Genders and Genres: An Investigation Into the Writings of the Argentine Poetess and Essayist Alfonsina Storni. Herter Hall 301 at 12:30 p.m..

Open House in the Graduate Lounge, Campus Center, 7-10 p.m.. Open mike, acapella groups, guitarists, and performers all welcome. Donations welcomed to help support the Everywomen's Center Resource and Referral Program.

Thursday, March 9th

Graduate Women's Network/ Women Studies department host speaker Betty Reid Mandell and panel, addressing women's economic rights, 3-5 p.m. in Campus Center Room 903.

For more information contact Graduate Women's Network at (413) 545-5316 or go to Campus Center Room 919.

Women

LWV discusses topics at "Day on the Hill" talk

By Shara Rosen
Collegian Correspondent

On February 18, members from the League of Women's Voters met to examine important issues that were discussed with Senator Stan Rosenberg and Representative Ellen Story at the League's annual "Day on the Hill." General issues such as health care, the death penalty, education, voting rights, and campaign finance reform were among the topics of concern.

The League of Women's Voters is an organization that was started seventy-five years ago. The goal of the League was to get women involved in government and issues. In Amherst, there are between one hundred and two hundred members. It is the largest League in the State of Massachusetts.

Members study different topics and take a position on the issue. Health care is one topic that the League is very concerned with.

"Kaiser is leaving elderly people with the price of prescriptions with no supplemental plans," said Marion Gorham, an active member of The League of Women's Voters.

Kaiser is a non-profit organization that insures its customers for health-related issues. Without their coverage, many people find themselves unable to pay for health bills.

"Senator Stan Rosenberg is very concerned with the health care issues as well. He is trying to create organizations that help the elderly," said Gorham.

The league is in favor of universal health care.

In addition, the death penalty was an article of discussion among the women at the meeting three weeks ago. There are many sides to this controversial issue, and many of the members found themselves both in favor and in opposition to one another.

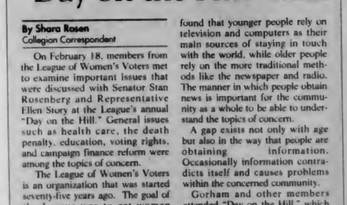
The LWV also did a report on the media and discussed their findings with the other members. They found that younger people rely on television and computers as their main sources of staying in touch with the world, while older people rely on the more traditional methods like the newspaper and radio. The manner in which people obtain news is important for the community as a whole to be able to understand the topics of concern.

A gap exists not only with age but also in the way that people are obtaining information. Occasionally information contradicts itself and causes problems within the concerned community.

Gorham and other members attended "Day on the Hill," which meets annually in Boston. All the leagues from Massachusetts promote their views and listen to the views of their legislators. They then report back to their members. The LWV discovered that the Senator is mostly in agreement with the group, except for his feelings on the campaign finance reform.

"Senator Stan Rosenburg is very concerned with the health care issues as well. He is trying to create organizations that help the elderly," -Gorham

"He questions the present plan of reform, and doesn't like the bill as it stands. He thinks it is flawed and has no position," Gorham reported.



The LWV is comprised of the Democratic, Republican, and Independent parties. The members do not sponsor a legislator— rather they support an issue.

"We are most likely to support the legislator that supports the issue," Gorham stated.

The League of Women's Voters started with the intention to make women active in government. Today, it is a national organization that lobbies issues of concern and directly impacts legislature.

By attending the "Day on the Hill," the members were able to promote their ideas and concerns to the government. This direct interaction between the government and the community is important in a democratic society.

For more information on the LWV, you can contact Marion Gorham at 548-9435.

DAN SANTILLA/COLLEGIAN
Caroline Olson, shown here in her office, is president of the League of Women Voters of Amherst. She is in the third year of her second term.

Vocalists sing for women; event supports community

By Samantha Einhorn
Collegian Correspondent

The month of March is devoted to the exploration of women's history. In this spirit, on Friday, March 3rd, Something Every Friday, in co-sponsorship with the Everywoman's Center, the Women's Studies Department, and RESPOND, invited three vocalists to the UMass campus in celebration of National Women's History Month. The three vocalists were folk singers Barbara Kessler, Joss Kline, and Kris Delmhorst.

Jose Tolson, of Something Every Friday, helped to put the event together. "We were looking for a program to do for International Women's Day. Barbara Kessler brought up that she was working in the area," Tolson said.

Miss Kessler had previously worked with the other vocalists on an album in benefit of the organization RESPOND.

For those unfamiliar with RESPOND, it is a Somerville, Massachusetts, community based non-profit organization that works to help assault victims and their children. RESPOND has been in existence since 1974, and offers such services as a crisis hotline, a counseling program, an emergency shelter, and support groups for women and their children.

A Friday program dedicated to International Women's Day is not something new to the campus. There has been a Friday evening event designated for the celebration of International Women's Day and National Women's History Month through Something Every Friday for the last four years.

"We want to make sure the idea of International Women's Day doesn't get lost," Tolson explained.

If you are interested in participating in other events to honor International Women's Day and National Women's Month check out the list of events scheduled here at UMass during March.

Best proves insulting and boring

By Adam Martignetti
Collegian Staff

The Next Best Thing
Directed by John Schlesinger with Madonna, Rupert Everett
Playing at Showcase Cinemas

If this is The Next Best Thing, then I can't imagine how bad everything after it must be. The movie fails to muster a story from a considerable amount of substantial material, requiring a ludicrous plot twist to keep the action progressing and eventually devolving into one of the more unsatisfying endings in recent memory.

The Next Best Thing could have been about being a single mother or being a gay parent living with the mistakes we make or even about family, but opts for none of these. Rather, it's a listless two-hour melodrama with few redeeming qualities.

When did Madonna join the cast of "Law and Order?"

COURTESY OF BON BATZDORFF

The usually charming Rupert Everett wavers between tacky frivolity, adhering to the most base of gay stereotypes and blatant over-acting towards the end. Madonna, who could have at least been glamorous, instead looks tired and weary – perhaps exhausted from hacking "American Pie" into her pathetic four-minute dance ditty.

Madonna plays Abbie, a yoga instructor who has had a series of bad relationships. As soon as another pretty boy spoils, she runs to her best friend, Robert (Everett), who happens to be a gay housekeeper. In the midst of a drunken stupor, the two sleep together (yes, Madonna is that hot). She's pregnant and, after some emotional turmoil over whether Robert wants to be the father or not, we're subjected to some repugnant montages of the two raising their kid.

The four montages within twenty minutes pretty much glaze over any struggles the two might have had raising the child and we're abruptly thrown ahead seven years. Truthfully, however, The Next Best Thing would have been better without any dialogue at all. Before we know it, the intellectual curiosity of Sam, the pair's son, is peaked and we get a slew of gay references that are in such poor taste, we're not sure whether they're supposed to be taken as jokes or taken sincerely. In addition, as the two verbally labor over their emerging relationships, there is some painfully self-aware dialogue that just drags.

The plot twist, which I won't reveal, is so out of context that it's laughable. It leads to a custody battle that is supposed to draw upon the emotion built up by the previous scenes. Unfortunately, neither the family bonds nor the pair's relationships is developed enough to elicit the least bit of audience involvement.

This movie also has the unfortunate pleasure of ensuring that I'll never see a mainstream movie with a "gay" subplot ever again. The subject is treated so insincerely or relegated to the background so frequently that it comes off as nothing more than a gimmick to attract audiences.

The script here is very sloppy, rushing too quickly through important character scenes and leaving the movie to wallow in a slew of cliches and unfunny one-liners. It's too bad that the writer failed to acknowledge the significance of having a gay parent in the film – instead, he decides to turn the film into a family melodrama with nowhere to develop. From the beginning, the movie feels stifled and entirely forced. D

DAVID TROUPES/ COLLEGIAN

Billy Corgan takes the crowd's breath away during the first part of the three-hour concert that the Smashing Pumpkins put on at Lupo's in Providence last week.

Gods of rock in Rhode Island

By David Troupes
Collegian Staff

The Smashing Pumpkins
Lupo's Heartbreak Hotel
March 2, 2000

Before beginning an "official" tour in support of their new album, MACHINA/The Machines of God, Chicago-born rock band the Smashing Pumpkins have been conducting a series of in-store appearances and surprise club shows. On Tuesday, Feb. 29, they announced that tickets would go on sale on Wednesday for a show at Lupo's Heartbreak Hotel in Providence on Thursday, and that tickets would only be available at particular locations across Providence and Boston – no phone or internet orders. The show sold out immediately, and on Thursday, fans began lining up outside Lupo's hours before the doors would open at 8:00.

There was no opening act scheduled, and a sign on Lupo's door announced that the show would consist of two sets with a brief intermission in between, and might not end until after midnight – no complaints here.

The band took the stage at 9:20, and opened with a raucous cover of an Essex tune, "Rock On," before charging into "The Everlasting Gaze," the first track of MACHINA; they followed that with "Disarm," from their 1995 breakthrough album, Siamese Dream. The Pumpkins were in good spirits and top form, appearing relaxed and comfortable with the intimacy of the venue. Corgan and Iha flooded the club with their signature hard-edged guitar work, while the recently reinstated Chamberlain provided an astounding percussive backbone; as Adore proved, the Pumpkins just aren't the Pumpkins without Jimmy's muscular, relentless drum work.

Newcomer Melissa Auf Der Maur shone, tearing into her role as bassist with an enthusiasm, stage presence, and audience rapport D'Arcy (who recently left the band to pursue acting) seldom achieved.

Corgan and company played a collection of songs from MACHINA for the rest of the first set, including the epic "Glass + the Ghost Children" and the high-energy "Wound." They also managed to find time for "I Am One," the beloved first single off their first album, Gish.

The band left the stage for a twenty minute intermission, and when the lights dimmed, Billy walked out on stage carrying an acoustic guitar, and played a delightful set of solo numbers, including "Speed Kills," the b-side to MACHINA's first single, "Stand Inside Your Love" (which itself was conspicuously absent from the set list). He blended highly reinterpreted versions of "Shame," "To Sheila" (birth from Adore) and "Drown" (from the Singles Soundtrack) into one continuous acoustic number, holding the audience rapt the whole time.

The rest of the band walked on out, and played a beautiful version of "Crush," from Gish. They followed that with a cover of the Who's "Join Together," a wonderful sing-along that sealed the sense of rapport between band and audience.

Old material and lengthy, improvised jams, including "Zero," "Cherub Rock," and "Bullet With Butterfly Wings," as well as MACHINA's "This Time," dominated the rest of the second set.

The band returned for the encore bearing flowers, which they tossed into the audience, and then tore into the angst-ridden "X.Y.U." from Mellon Collie and the Infinite Sadness, ending with the live-only gem "We Love You." Except for the occasional overlong extemporaneous lyrical rant by Corgan, the evening was an absolute treat, and a testament to the Smashing Pumpkins' continued investment in their roles as one of modern rock's greatest bands.

May the Arts be with you.

Spring Break...
let's get packing!

ZANNA
downtown Amherst
www.zanna.com

MassMutual Financial Group's
Career Development Program
www.massmutual.com

Mass advantages for your future
VISIT US AT MASSMUTUAL.COM/COLLEGE

Choosing where to start your career is a big decision. That's why you need to know about MassMutual. A leader in the financial services industry, we offer customers a complete portfolio of life and disability income insurance, asset accumulation products and retirement and investment management services.
And we offer a world of career advantages that work for you today — and for your future in-depth training, flex-time, generous compensation/benefits and real opportunities for growth!
Some current openings in our Springfield, MA & Hartford, CT offices:
• Claims Examiners • Retirement Plan Services Analysts
• Customer Service Analysts • Securities Brokerage Specialists
• Human Resources Specialists • Underwriters
If you're a Year 2000 graduate with sound judgement, strong communication/negotiation/customer service skills, and the desire to take charge of your future, you should talk to us!
We'll be on campus for an Info Session on March 6 from 7-9pm and on March 9 for interviews
Please contact your Career/Placement Office to set up an interview or email your resume to:
collegerecruiting@massmutual.com An Equal Opportunity Employer.
MassMutual Financial Group
THE BLUE CHIP COMPANIES

Pursue a World of OPPORTUNITIES in Natural Health Care

What careers can you pursue at Northwestern Health Sciences University?
Chiropractic • Integrative health and wellness • Acupuncture • Oriental medicine • Therapeutic massage
Northwestern Health Sciences University provides the widest range of choices in natural health care in the United States.
The foundation of the University is Northwestern College of Chiropractic, which has earned an international reputation in 58 years as a pioneer in chiropractic education, patient care and scientific research. The individual attention and access to educational resources our students receive helps them excel in preparing to practice as outstanding health care practitioners. Combined with our pioneering clinical education programs and our assistance in job placement, Northwestern provides a superb educational experience
Now featuring master's-level courses in Integrative health and wellness.

NORTHWESTERN HEALTH SCIENCES UNIVERSITY
Minneapolis, Minnesota
For a personal visit or more information, call 1-800-888-4777.
Or go virtual at www.nwhealth.edu

PRESIDENTIAL PRIMARY ELECTION
Tuesday, March 7th
UMASS STUDENTS:
Registered to vote and unsure where to go?
Call the Amherst Town Clerk's Office
Call between the hours of:
Monday 8:00am - 4:30 pm
Tuesday 7:00am - 8:00pm
Any questions please feel free to contact:
Amherst Town Clerk's Office
256-4035
256-4035
NEW SOUTHWEST VOTERS:
Welcome to your polling place!
Vote in Hampden Dining Commons
Voting Hours: 7:00am - 8:00pm

Hey now! Planet not funny

What Planet Are You From?
Directed by Mike Nichols with Garry Shandling, Annette Bening, John Goodman Playing at Mountain Farms Theatres, Hadley

By David Troupes
Collegian Staff

The plot: Harold (HBO comedy veteran Garry Shandling) is an alien from a space-faring race of cloned men sent on a mission to Earth to impregnate a human female in order to facilitate conquest of the planet. No one from Harold's race has ever encountered a woman before, so his efforts at seducing one prove difficult and more than a little silly. Eventually, he meets recovering alcoholic Susan (Annette Bening), and the two enter into a serious, if lopsided, relationship. Meanwhile, LAA agent Roland Jones (John Goodman) works tirelessly to convince other of Harold's extra-terrestrial nature.

Along the way, we're subjected to all manner of goofiness and sex jokes, the most recurrent of which concerns Harold's alien penis. Because cloning is used for all reproduction on his planet, his race's reproductive organs have shrunk to the point of uselessness. In order to conceive a child, then, he receives a mechanical, prosthetic penis, and it hums. That's the joke; whenever Harold gets aroused, his crotch whirs and hums. The first three times it happens, it's funny; by the twenty-third time, we're ready for something new.

It's hard to say what, precisely, this movie thought it was going to accomplish. Is it a romance? Only in the limpest sense. Is it a plot-centered tale of an alien invasion? At times, and always unsuccessfully. Is it a comedic, tongue-in-cheek exploration of gender stereotypes in our culture? This seems the most plausible option, but if this is, in fact, what the movie aimed to be, it failed rather miserably. Sure, there are lots of jokes about gender stereotypes, and some of them are even funny, but it never actually says anything important; reiteration is not the same as discussion. And what does John Goodman's subplot add to the equation? Absolutely nothing, near as I can tell. Perhaps they thought that the X-Files-esque story alien tracking would add a bit of sci-fi credibility to the film, but it's a pointless effort. The movie's premise is far too ludicrous to make it worth anyone's time developing a convincing plot structure.

What Planet Are You From? does have one major strength: the cast. Shandling, Bening, and Goodman are all excellent comedic actors who do well with their characters. The supporting cast includes such notable names as Greg Kinnear, Linda Fiorentino, and Ben Kingsley. As excellent as the cast is, however, it also creates frustration to see such fine actors and actresses being dragged through such shallow, repetitive material. Shandling would naturally want to be involved in the movie, since he wrote the story, but what are the others' excuses?

Ultimately, What Planet Are You From? is built upon too little material and too few jokes. It would have made a great 20-minute stand-up routine (which was probably how Shandling first conceived it), but for a 90-minute feature film, there's simply too little happening. D+

Gary Shandling decides to take on a crappy role in What Planet Are You From?, after being the king of television comedy in the early '90s on "The Larry Sanders Show."

"Alice" ventures to Smith College

Alice: Adventures in the Wonderland and through the Looking Glass
Smith College
March 1st – March 4th

By Emily Vaconi
Collegian Staff

"Alice's Adventures in Wonderland and Through The Looking Glass" was performed at Smith College on March 2-4 in the Hallie Flanagan Studio Theatre. Erin McCauley, the director, presented one of the best plays that I have ever seen. With an incredibly low budget of $500 (usually $4,000), the play was a complete success and had a powerful impact on the audience.

My three favorites of the performance were Alice, the Caterpillar, and the Door Mouse. Alice was exactly the way that she has been imagined. She ran around in a full-length white dress, little black ankle boots, and her hair in a cute, childish bob with a ribbon in it. Alice, played by Mariza Baker, was very convincing. Baker was able to get into the character completely. A small thing that I noticed was that she even clapped like a child. Everything about her character, how proper she was, how she pouted, how she cried, how she learned, was like a child. Baker did an excellent job.

The Caterpillar, played by Julie Baber, with the additional hands of Caitlin Egleson and Elizabeth Schwan-Rosenwald, was definitely one of the best. The choreography of all three sets of hands doing the same thing at the same time was very impressive. Throughout the whole scene with the Caterpillar, you wanted to laugh. Baber had a very slow and convincing voice, in between puffs of a cigar. It was an excellent job done.

The third of the three best was the Door Mouse, played by Sarah Davis. She did an amazingly funny job. What I got the biggest kick out of was that no matter where she sat she never had any trouble falling asleep. At one point she lay down under the tea table and fell asleep. Throughout the tea scene she would just randomly fall asleep, and would have to be slapped back awake. It was hysterical.

One more character that needs to be individually reviewed is the character of the Card. The Card was also very entertaining. When she first minted herself to Alice she showed the profile on the card around her neck, and then pointed to her own profile. It was a great move. Even though you already knew whom she played, the profile addition gave her character the extra kick. It was perfect.

After the show I had the chance to talk to the director, Erin McCauley. As I mentioned before, she did an amazing job with this show. In the interview she commented that there were many who were not supportive of this show going up. So I inquired as to who was against the show. McCauley replied by stating that it was mainly the faculty. Although she mentioned that there were a few faculty who really helped a lot, and did more than anyone had asked of them. McCauley also included that it was "us doing our thing," meaning it was more of a production for the Theatre Department, who most looked forward to this production of the show.

Next I was curious as to how long the show took to produce. With as little funding as the show had, I thought that it would take much longer to produce, because everything needed to be figured out. The truth was that it took a little less than two months. Practices started on Jan. 4 and took place four to five days per week. The opening weekend was Feb. 24-26 and the second and final weekend was Mar. 1-4. There were no matinees. Honestly, I was surprised that a show as good as this one took only two months to produce. The choreography in itself looked as though it was a huge ordeal.

My third question was why McCauley chose "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland and Through the Looking Glass." Her answer was simply that she has always loved the story. It was the first avant-garde play she performed in as a child. McCauley knew that the story was different from what people thought, and she wanted to show that "Alice in Wonderland" and "Through the Looking Glass" are two completely different stories and people have a tendency to think that they are one in the same. In fact, the two stories were written years apart. McCauley also would like people to know that Alice is a real person. She really does exist.

My fourth question was how she made the play so emotional. People were crying in the audience. I've seen during movies, plays, etc., and I tried to understand the true emotion of the play. She started with the true history of relationship between Alice and Lewis Carroll. In "Through the Looking Glass" she paralleled Alice's relationship with Lewis Carroll to Alice's relationship with the White Knight. The White Knight represented Lewis Carroll. Then McCauley followed through by focusing on Alice's relationships with the other characters and tried to show the loss in the end in both "Wonderland" and "Through the Looking Glass" when Alice left.

My final question was what her goals were. Her main goal was actually to entertain everyone. "Theater should be fun and entertaining." An additional goal was for a deeper understanding of both stories. I'm happy to say that she accomplished both of these goals.

One audience member, Peter Millard, commented, "It was like watching a series of different beautiful pictures. They could not have put it better. "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland and Through the Looking Glass" was a wonderful play to see. McCauley did an excellent job in adapting it. The show was sold out and you could see why. I just hope that everyone got as much as I did from the play.

Collegian
Accounting Clerk
ALL MAJORS WELCOME TO APPLY
Work 8 hours per week, flexible scheduling
Must possess strong math and communication skills
Deadline for applications is Friday, March 10th
Contact Christine Carroll for more info
pick up applications in Rm. 113 in the Campus Center Basement

Sigma [fly] Alpha

Just like any fraternity or sorority, Army ROTC offers teamwork, camaraderie and friendship. Plus, you'll get to do challenging stuff like this that'll help prep you for the real world. Stop by the Army ROTC department. We won't rush you.
JUMP INTO A SUMMER JOB & 2 YEAR SCHOLARSHIP
CALL THE UMASS ARMY ROTC AT 545-2321
ARMY ROTC Unlike any other college course you can take.

A great way to ENTER THE FUTURE of BIOTECHNOLOGY.

BIOTECHNOLOGY IS REDEFINING THE FUTURE and Biogen is at the forefront, leading the development of several important medicines including AVONEX®, the most prescribed therapy in the U.S. for relapsing forms of multiple sclerosis. One of the factors that makes AVONEX® unique is the Biogen customer support organization, a team dedicated to helping those who use and prescribe the drug. By setting new standards for service and support, this remarkable team is helping to shape the future of biotechnology.

CUSTOMER SUPPORT SPECIALISTS
As part of this highly visible, collaborative team in our Cambridge headquarters, you will provide exceptional customer service on all levels as you counsel multiple sclerosis patients and healthcare professionals on therapy and service options. Through a six-week program, specialists are trained to assess callers' needs, provide well-informed answers to inquiries, track customer requests, and provide any necessary follow-up. You will also interface with external organizations and partners and internal departments. Requires a BS/BA in the life sciences or communications fields or a relevant educational background in the humanities or social sciences. A positive attitude, listening/verbal communication skills, and the ability to multi-task are essential. You will be working with other high energy individuals in this growing department where ideas and concepts come to life.

This is your future calling.
This opportunity offers you the chance to learn the biotechnology business from some of the industry's most accomplished talent. Plus you'll gain insight into those we serve: patients and their families, medical professionals, pharmacists, and many others. At the same time, the position offers an attractive compensation and benefits package, including equity participation in one of biotechnology's most financially sound companies. Answer the call. Forward your resume to: Biogen, Inc., Attn: Human Resources, Source Code JR-CSS-CD, 14 Cambridge Center, Cambridge, MA 02142. Fax: (617) 679-2546. Email: resumes@biogen.com (Source Code ONLY must appear in the subject line). Biogen is an Equal Opportunity Employer. No phone calls, please.

www.biogen.com
BIOGEN

Paccione's goals pace UMass lax

By Bryan Smith
Collegian Staff

It was a day of firsts for the Massachusetts men's lacrosse team when they traveled to Stony Brook for a match-up with the Seawolves.

UMass played in its first ever conference game after spending 46 seasons as an independent. The Minutemen welcomed themselves to the newly established Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference with a 17-4 trouncing of the Seawolves.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS
Dan Paccione

Six UMass players had at least two goals in the ECAC opener, a conference that will send its winner to the NCAA tournament with an automatic bid. The Minutemen (1-1, 1-0 ECAC) spotted the home team an early two-goal lead at the 10:30 mark of the first quarter, but then offense exploded for 11 straight first half goals to head into the locker room with an 11-2 lead.

The Maroon and White barrage started when Don Little scored the first of his two tallies to cut the Stony Brook lead in half. Mike Janowicz tied the game at the 5:10 mark and the Minutemen never looked back.

Stony Brook (0-2, 0-1 ECAC) was unable to weather the UMass storm as the Minutemen went on to score nine more goals in the remainder of the half. Little netted his second goal of the game off an assist from Alex Racioppi. UMass continued to apply the pressure ending the first quarter on an unassisted Kevin Dell goal, the first of his two on the afternoon.

Rich Kunkel got the Minutemen going in the second quarter when he notched the first of a pair of goals, the second time in as many weeks that he has found the back of the net twice. Jeremy Guski found the back of the net to give UMass a 6-2 advantage.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS
Jeremy Guski

The relentless Maroon and White attack added another goal to the lead when Kunkel fired a shot past Stony Brook goalie John Dobias, who stopped 16 shots in his three quarters of action. The goal by Kunkel was the second of two on the afternoon. The junior attacker found the back of the net off a feed from Matt McFarland, who held the fort down defensively for the Minutemen.

John Madigan netted the first of his two first half goals when he finished on a pass from Guski. The assist was Guski's second of the day. Tim Socha, a senior defensive midfielder, pushed the Maroon and White lead to 9-2.

With the Minutemen ahead by seven goals, the Dan Paccione show started. The sophomore attacker finished off the half by putting up a pair of goals, the first two of his four on the day. The first of Paccione's goals was unassisted while the second came off a sweet feed from Dell.

Guski continued the scoring outbreak when found the back of the net for his second goal of the afternoon on a man-up goal just 59 seconds into the second half. Kevin Leveille got the assist on the tally for his first collegiate point.

A Jesse Foss goal ended a UMass streak of twelve consecutive goals when he beat UMass netminder Chris Campolettano. The goal broke a 27 minute scoring drought, in which Stony Brook went from up two to down double digits.

UMass responded to the Seawolf goal when Madigan put his second tally of the day on the board at the 10:59 mark of the third quarter.

Chris Fiore scored his first collegiate goal on an unassisted tally nine minutes into the second half. The Freeport, NY native made use of his first college playing time by putting up the tally after not seeing playing time against Hofstra last week.

Paccione secured the final two goals of the game, his second back-to-back job of the day.

Next week, the Minutemen travel to New Brunswick, N.J. to take on the U.S. Naval Academy, who fell to No. 10 North Carolina this weekend, 11-10.

Minutewomen sweep way to N.E. throne

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

Perhaps not the East Coast just yet, but it seems as though the Massachusetts women's water polo team has a stranglehold on its New England counterparts.

But now it's time to play ball.

This weekend in Providence, RI, the 12th-ranked Minutewomen were in top form after falling to Princeton last weekend, outscoring a trio of opponents, 42-15, en route to a perfect record at the New England Invitational. With the offense steaming and the defense shining, UMass now takes its show on the road to face No. 1 Cal-Berkeley before facing off against No. 5 UC-Davis.

The toughest test came against No. 19 Harvard. Taking a 3-2 lead through one quarter and a 4-4 tie into halftime, the Crimson looked healthy enough to avenge an earlier loss (9-3) to the Minutewomen in last week's Princeton Invitational. However, the Maroon and White (5-1 overall) came out at a blistering pace, outscoring the cross-state rivals 8-1 in the second half to roll to a 12-5 win.

Senior Katie Grogan led the charge, netting four goals, but the real story came in the form of freshman Kelly Chassy, who pocketed three goals of her own, this after a breakout performance against Brown. Grogan, who leads the team with 14 goals on the season, now had competition in Chassy, the Morgan Hill, CA native who tallied 10 goals on the weekend.

Chassy got started last week with two goals in three games, but she quintupled that total in three matches this weekend. She stole the spotlight in the opening game against Brown, posting five goals and helping build an insurmountable lead before halftime.

Against the Bears, Chassy got started early, boosting the Minutewomen to a 6-2 lead after one, an advantage that grew to 12-3 through a half. UMass coasted to victory thanks to balanced scoring, led by Chassy's five and senior Marci Hupp's hat trick. They were half of UMass' quartet of players who registered multiple-goal games in the win.

Queens built themselves a deficit It simply couldn't make up for. Before the first quarter gun sounded, UMass scored five unanswered goals before Queens finally graced the scorecard in the second quarter.

Sophomore Megan Perry, who had been rather quiet through the first two games, netting just one goal, exploded for a trio of goals in the finale to lead the Minutewomen. Anne Dettloff, who just finished her swimming campaign, scored her first two goals of the season.

Not to go unnoticed is the UMass defense, which held its opponents at bay, led by Dana Sinkwich's 17 saves on the weekend. She was replaced by Megan Thompson in the late match and Missouri native responded with five saves.

On Thursday, UMass takes on the Cal Bears, who defeated the Minutewomen 13-6 in the first game of last year's national championship. A real battle should come against UC-Davis, who the Minutewomen hold an 8-3 record against, but inched closer to victory last season with a 6-5 sudden death overtime loss in the second game of the championship. The Bears have beaten UC-Davis 7-2 and 10-5 already this season.

In addition to the California duo, coach Dan McOsker and company will compete in the Davis Shootout, taking on Santa Clara and No. 17 Indiana. The Minutewomen have already conquered the Hoosiers this season, beating them 8-3 last weekend.

UNH

continued from page 12

play for the HE Tournament title when they begin their quest Friday night at the home of top seed Boston University.

UNH rained on the Minuteman parade early as it notched the game's first goal at the 4:20 mark of the first period when Ryan Cordeiro, who was filling in for the injured C.J. Fleck, fired a wrist shot from the slot past UMass goalie Mike Johnson.

"I think our guys were a little too relaxed before the game," UMass head coach Joe Mallen said. "We didn't want to be too uptight and we didn't want to be too relaxed.

"It was probably a little letdown with all the pressure and the emphasis that we put on making the playoffs between the two BC games and the UNH game," Mallen said. "If we're going to have a bad night lets have it now."

Although the Wildcats had just five shots on Johnson in the first period, they headed into the locker room with the 1-0 lead.

UNH came out storming in the second period scoring on its first two shots. Matt Swain started the barrage when he netted a goal just 58 seconds into the frame. Swain was parked all alone in front of the net and Mike Souza found him and the junior center finished.

The Wildcats (21-7-0, 12-5-6 HE) added to their lead seven minutes later when Colin Hennigway fired a blistering wrist shot from the left face off circle that beat Johnson glove side. The tally came off a three-on-two break that was started after UNH goalie Ty Conklin stopped a UMass (11-18-5, 5-15-4 HE) flurry and started the break.

After the goal Johnson was pulled in favor of Markus Helanen, who would only fare slightly better.

Before the intermission the Wildcats would add another goal to take a 4-0 lead into the third period. UNH's fourth goal, and third of the second period, came when Souza dumped the puck in the zone and it took a bad bounce right to the front of the Minuteman net. Darren Haydar wasted no time as he put the puck to the back of the net for his third goal of the weekend.

"They finished off tonight better than any team we played all year long," Mallen said.

UMass would gets its first goal of the game at the 7:31 mark of the third period when Tim Turner found brother Jeff streaking in front of Conklin and slipped a pass to him from the right wing boards. Jeff then redirected the pass past Conklin to cut the UNH lead to 4-1.

But the celebration of the elder Turner's goal would be short-lived, as Souza scored the game's final goal on the power play 48 seconds later. UNH was put on the power play when Kelly Sickavish was called for an interference.

"A week ago Saturday is almost a mirror image of this game where BC played well, but we finished our chances," UMass head coach Joe Mallen said. "I thought that all night long we were just off by a hair."

UMass played the Terriers well all season dropping three one-goal games at the hands of the HE regular season champions. The quarterfinal round of the HE playoffs is a best two-of-three series with all the games being played on the higher seeded team's home ice. The semifinal and final games will be played at the Fleet Center in Boston.

DAN SANTELLA-COLLEGIAN
UMass netminder Markus Helanen watches the disc trickle in front of him in the Minutemen's 5-1 loss to UNH Saturday at the Mullins Center.

hockey

continued from page 12

there for us."

Following Sell's seventh goal of the season, the Wildcats bounced back by netting two goals in 52 seconds to level the score at 2-2. First,

Mike Souza beat Helanen with a slap shot from the left circle at the 15:50 mark to cut the UMass lead in half.

Less than a minute later, a UMass defenseman turned the puck over in his own zone, and the puck ended up right on Souza's stick. The UNH senior captain walked in on Helanen before sliding the disc to Haydar, who buried his chance into a wide open net.

"At the second intermission [assistant coach] Dale Dunbar came into the locker room and said that if you knew before the game that the game would be tied at 2-2 after the second period, you would take it," Geever said. "After he said that, the guys were pretty upbeat."

Haydar's second goal of the night briefly pushed the Wildcats ahead for their only lead of the night. Helanen stopped the original shot, but the rebound popped up into the breadbasket of the UNH winger. Although it seemed like Haydar more or less batted the puck in with his arm, the goal counted – much to the dismay of a disgruntled UMass coaching staff.

BU, who will be UMass' opponent in the quarterfinal round of the HE playoffs, clinched the league title last weekend and the automatic bid to the NCAA tournament that goes along with it. However, before the Minutemen could pack their bags for Boston, they had to close out the regular season on Saturday night in Amherst.

Collegian Sports... so busy swallowin'

WE'RE PACKING UP THE BOOKS!

Voter Education
An "inactive" voter is a voter who has not answered the local census or had any voter activity in the past year. An inactive voter who casts a ballot at any election must be prepared to show I.D. and sign an affidavit of current and continuous residence.
To find out what your status is, call the Town Clerk's office @ 256-4015.

安城中國飯店
AMHERST
CHINESE FOOD
we do not use "MSG"
• HOME STYLE COOKING
• FRESH ORGANIC CHICKEN WE DETAILED FROM OUR OWN FARM
• NATURAL GROWN GINSENGBERRY JUICE
• EAT IN OR TAKE OUT
• FULL LIQUOR LICENSE
• OPEN 7 DAYS
253-7835 ~ 253-2813
62 Main Street, Amherst
VISA

EAST HEAVEN HOT TUBS
Best Place For A Hot Tub
$10 OFF WITH THIS AD
413-586-6643 • 33 West St Northampton

GW

continued from page 12

point guard Amy Wetzel over the game's first 5:06, as another Butler bucket and jumpers from UMass' Amber Sneed and MacFarland staked the Minutewomen to an early 8-1 lead.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS
Alison MacFarland

Maroon and White senior Tonia Thomas was a picture of pure intensity over the game's opening frame, highlighting the early goings with a dynamic halfcourt steal at the 15:55 mark. The Texas native leapt nearly three feet into the air to snatch an errant Wetzel outlet, then pirouetted sensationally on her pivot foot to stick the landing and avoid the traveling violation.

The Hokies would climb back into the contest with five minutes to play before halftime, as Wetzel capitalized on lazy UMass entry passes to score three consecutive fast break layups. O'Brien had seen enough, and called timeout at the 4:24 mark with her team trailing, 19-14.

"That was a three minute stretch in which we really lost our composure," O'Brien said. "Everybody got a little bit mad instead of hanging together. At that timeout, I told them we had to get back our composure."

That composure came in the form of more Thomas magic, as the diminutive guard connected on a pair of long-range three-pointers to lock the game at 24-all with 31 seconds to go in the half. A free throw from Hokie Mollie Owings would give Virginia Tech a 25-24 edge at the break.

Both teams appeared to gather some rust during halftime, as MacFarland's frame-opening turnaround jumpshot was following by two-plus minutes of scoreless, turnover-plagued basketball. MacFarland got the Minutewomen back on the track at the 17:01 mark, using a nifty jump-stop to shake free of Hokie Emily Lipton and can a 12-foot jumper. Virginia Tech answered immediately however, behind a right wing three from forward Chrystal Starling that just beat the 24-second clock.

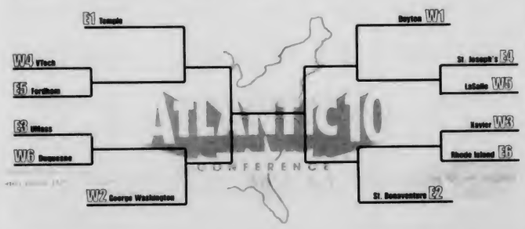
Minutewomen

continued from page 12

courageously, but couldn't fend off both Cyrus and Peter Van Paassen. The latter scored 25 points and grabbed a career-high 15 rebounds (7 offensive), dominating the inside play. The duo chased Rhymer from the game when he picked up his fifth foul in the final moments of the second half.

Essentially, Rhymer was on his own in the paint, grabbing 13 boards before bowing out. Micah Brand, who contracted pneumonia earlier this week, wound up missing the trip. Van Paassen and Cyrus cleaned up both squads' mess, leading the Bonnies to outrebound UMass 50-34. And despite grabbing 13 offensive boards, the Minutemen converted on only a pair of basket as a result.

At that point, though, the game was already over. After intermission, the lead grew to as big as 29 before the Minutemen began chipping away.



Monty Mack led all scorers with 28 points, but did so on 9-for-25 shooting. He tried to rescue the Minutemen from their poor shooting woes, but not even he could manage a good night shooting against the Bonnies' stingy defense. He and Crooks paired up to shoot an abysmal 11 for 37 from the field.

Meanwhile, the Bonnies plugged away inside, outscoring the Minutemen 38-16 in the key. They shot an astonishing 53 percent from the field and, when not clicking inside, they went out to Tim Winn and J.R. Bremer, who were the ringleaders of a 58 percent night from behind the arc.

The theme of the night was established early on, when St. Bonaventure buckled down on Mack, taking a 38-24 lead into the locker rooms. It very well could have been more, as SBU outshot the Minutemen 55 percent to 27 percent through the game's first 20 minutes. David Messiah Capers scored 12 of his 15 points before the break.

The Minutemen were forced to bring in Jonathan DePina for 21 minutes of action, replacing Mike Babul after falling down by 20-plus in the early stages of the second half. DePina provided quite the outside threat for UMass, scoring 11 points, including three three-pointers.

UMass knocked off Duquesne, 84-75, in the first meeting this season. What was bad at the time has turned worse down the stretch. The Dukes have lost 12 of their last 13 games, including yesterday's loss.

WASSUP Sports lovers???

DO YOU NEED YOUR WISDOM TEETH REMOVED?
If so, patients are being enrolled for a wisdom tooth research study. Your wisdom teeth can be extracted by a Board Certified Oral Surgeon. Financial compensation will be provided for your opinion on a research pain medication.
For more information call:
SCIREX Corporation at (860) 285-0569
Outside Windsor call toll free 1-888-285-0569
SCIREX

Munchie Madness 3-6PM MONDAY-FRIDAY
Double Grilled Pitas 7.99 4.00
Black Bean Dip w/chips 5.99 3.00
Nachos 6.99 3.50
1/2 PRICE!
Judie's
51 N. Pleasant Street
253-3491
http://virtual-valley.com/judies

BUCCI
HAIRCUTS always $10.
25 n. pleasant st. amherst 256-0733
145 main st. northampton 586-6155

What's new for Spring Break?
ZANNA
Check it out on
www.zanna.com

ASH WEDNESDAY SERVICES
Wednesday, March 8, 2000
8:00 A.M.
Mass and distribution of Ashes
12:15 P.M.
Mass and Distribution of Ashes
5:15 P.M.
Mass and Distribution of Ashes
7:00 P.M.
Liturgy of the Word and Distribution of Ashes
9:00 P.M.
Liturgy of the Word and Distribution of Ashes
The Catholic Community at the Newman Center invites you to join them to begin the 40 days of the Lenten journey.
Newman Center 472 N.Pleasant St. (413) 549-0300

UMass swallowed up by UF

By Eric Soderstrom
Collegian Staff

There's really no other way to put it. It was a rough start.

The Massachusetts baseball team headed into its three-game weekend series against the University of Florida with an utterly positive attitude towards the new season. On Sunday night, the Minutemen were just shaking their heads in the Sunshine State.

On Friday night in Gainesville, UM fell to the Gators, 11-9, in front of 5,522 fans at McKethan Stadium. It was the first of three losses to Florida on its home turf. Besides a valiant hitting effort put forth by junior Nick Gorneault, the Minutemen let up a total of eight runs in the middle innings, securing the victory for Florida.

In the top of the sixth, UMass (0-3 overall) came within one run at 7-6 with sophomore John Seed's RBI double that scored senior Steve Asadoorian. Asadoorian was hit by a pitch on the previous at bat. Florida brought four runs to the plate in the bottom of the sixth inning to take an 11-6 lead. Despite another solo blast by Gorneault in the bottom of the eight, UM could only bring in three more runs. Gorneault finished the game 4 for 5 with three homers and six RBI's. UM pitcher Todd Samolewicz (0-1) took the loss.

After a one-run first for the Gators, Gorneault tied the game at 1-1 with a solo home run. Florida (9-8 overall) bounced back with another run off UM starting pitcher Nick Skirkanich in the second but the Minutemen answered with a four-run third inning thanks to the grand slam by Gorneault that brought Shaun Skeffington, Scott Anderson and Gavin Clark plateward. Skeffington singled to reach base while Anderson and Clark both walked. UM took the field in the bottom of the third with a 5-3 lead.

With one run in the fourth and three runs in the fifth, the Gators regained momentum and the lead at 7-5. They would not look back.

On Saturday, the Minutemen were held to five hits as Florida pitchers Alex Hart and Jeff Cardozo united to take the second game of the series 7-1. A run-scoring single by junior Gavin Clark gave the Minutemen a 1-0 lead in the third, but they would find themselves stuck on that same total by the game's end. The Gators tied the game in the bottom of third inning off an error by shortstop Aaron Senez. With one run in the fifth inning, Florida closed out the Minutemen, scoring five runs in the sixth to cut off any source of circulation for the Maroon and White. Sophomore Jesse Santos (0-1) took the loss for UM giving up just two runs on four hits over five innings. With the weekend's completion in plain view, Mark Kiger doubled in the seventh inning to conclude Florida's come-from-behind effort with a 7-5 victory over the Minutemen on Sunday evening.

UMass starter Travis Veracka held UF to one run over six innings. The Massachusetts bullpen did not have the same success. The Gators scored their four runs of the seventh inning off of UM reliever Craig Szado. After a leadoff walk to Ryan Shealy, Tim Olson put one out of the ballpark to pull Florida within a single run. Pat Osborn then reached on a walk and Aaron Davidson followed with a double to put the go-ahead run in scoring position. UM sophomore reliever Brian Hourigan got Kurt Keene to strikeout prior to Kiger's lined double down the left field line to drive in two Gator runs.

Florida's insurance came in the eighth inning as they scored two unearned runs when Senez threw a ball away with the bases loaded on a probable inning-ending force out at second base.

UMass scored one run in the ninth off of Birch as Asadoorian dug up a pinch hit single that drove in Senez who led off with a double to center field. Florida right fielder Pete Nystrom robbed a home run that barred the tying run from scoring. Birch got a force out to end the game and completing the sweep.

Birch (1-0) earned the win, coming out of the bullpen for the Gators, allowing only one run on three hits with four strikeouts over 3.2 innings.

UMass began the game with a solid three-run first inning. Sophomore Mike Kulak led off with a single to center field as Anderson followed with the same, advancing Kulak to second, later scoring on a ground out by senior Kevin O'Connell. Clark then singled to score Anderson as Senez followed with an RBI double to left center, scoring Clark.

The Minutemen, with a 4-1 lead after the conclusion of six innings, gave up four runs in the bottom half of the seventh and would never regain their composure.

The Minutemen make their way to Tampa next weekend as they get ready for another three-game series, this time against South Florida.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO
Shaun Skeffington and the Minuteman baseball squad were swept by the Gators this weekend, but will try their luck against the Sunshine State once again in a three-game series with South Florida.

University of Massachusetts Boston
Special Summer Programs in Cuernavaca, Mexico
June 5 – July 10, 2000
Spanish Language and Mexican Culture
June 5 – July 11, 2000
Popular Markets in Mexico
These expenential programs emphasize hands-on learning in the beautiful City of Eternal Spring Cuernavaca, Mexico
To learn more, contact
University of Massachusetts Boston
Division of Continuing Education
100 Morrissey Blvd.
Boston MA 02125-3393
UMASS BOSTON
617.287.7913
www.conted.umb.edu

Sponsored by University Health Services
Spring 2000 Eating Disorder Programs
• Eating Disorder Assessment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner -- Confidentiality Assured
Call 577-5314, General Medicine 2
• Eating Disorder Informational Sessions
Facilitated by a UHS Nutritionist, these drop in sessions will include a video and discussion about eating disorders, where to go for help and learn how to help a friend. Registration is not required for these sessions that will meet 4:00 - 5:30 P.M. on Feb. 14, March 7, April 24, and May 9 in room 302 at University Health Services.
• Residence Hall Workshops
Body Image and Understanding Eating Disorders Workshops are available upon request. Contact your Resident Assistant to schedule a workshop.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENT

CANTONES' PIZZA- for fast delivery to UMass see our menu and coupons at www.cantones.com

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Amherst Center 1,2 and 3 bedroom apartments. Gas heat, hardwood floor 6/1. 256-3237.September Lincoln Real Estate. No fees. 253-7879.

3 bedroom condos. Gas heat, hardwood floors, bright heated basement with study and laundry area. 1/2 mile to campus, on bus route. April showings for June and September $1450.00. Lincoln Real Estate. No fees charged. 253-7879.

AUTO FOR SALE

1 Bedroom Apt. Colonial Village on busline. $465.00 month. Available 6/1 256-3237.

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center. 545-1995.

AUTO FOR SALE

1980 Jetta rebuilt engine, new clutch, new brakes. Always starts. Runs like a demon. $600 586-0534.

'87 Volvo Wagon. 180,000 miles auto, $1300.00 o/b/o 256-0776.

'85 Dodge Ram Van. 132k miles, excellent running condition. $1,200 or b.o. 549-9491.

'92 Subaru Loyale wagon 4x4. Clean, runs great, air, power, roofrack. $2500.00 0.b.0. 665-0453.

COMPUTERS

Laptop blowout! Brand new IBM = Toshiba laptops! Now only $890. Don't miss out on this amazing deal. Supply is limited. infinity101@looksmart.com 546-7665

EMPLOYMENT

COPYWRITER Part-time, student preferred. (413)536-5086 12-7pm.

Connect to the future. International company seeks PC users. $25-75k potential. 1-888-827-9733 www.roadforsuccess.com

EMPLOYMENT

Summer Employment; Outdoors. Weight loss/sports camp looking for energetic people to lead campers in a fun filled summer. Located in West Stockbridge, MA. in the heart of the Berkshires. Call for more information. Toll Free 877-FIT-CAMP. email marc@camp-kingsmont.com

Camp Canadensis, Pocono Mountains, PA. Premier residential coed summer camp. We are looking for energetic, qualified and caring staff to teach all general athletics, gymnastics, hockey, tennis, mountain bikes, golf, motorcycles, outdoor adventure, ropes, archery, drama, video, photography, fishing, WSI, waterfront activities, arts and crafts, cooking and much more! Excellent facilities and great salary! 6/21/00-8/18/00. Call (800)832-8228 or apply on-line: www.canadensis.com

Exotic dancers Wanted. Earn $500-1000 weekly. Call Exotica 532-8888.

EMPLOYMENT

Full and Part-time summer job opportunities available. Crabapple whitewater raft guides. No experience necessary. We will train. Must be athletic and hard working and have previous costomer service experience. Afternoon trip co-ordinator. Requires previous customer service experience. Job involves greeting guests, managing retail store and co-ordinating afternoon river trips. Call 413-339-0188 for application and/or more information.

Drivers and kitchen help wanted. Apply D.P. Dough, downtown Amherst.

Movers: Local moving company is hiring individuals for moving positions. Flexibility and good attitudes are a must. Start at $8.00 per hour. Raise commensurate with performance. Call 584-4746.

Textbooks 2 u.com. The best way to buy all your textbooks!!! 3 Day Guarantee!!

Get paid $$ to surf the web cu2freedom.com

EMPLOYMENT

Get a head start on a hot INTERNET career with a cool, college-focused start up! BOLD-BRAIN.COM is looking for an energetic, entrepreneurial campus leader to market its website to students, campus organizations and local merchants. Must possess superior communication skills and knowledge of on/off campus life. Salary plus bonus. 10 hrs.+/wk. 6 weeks beginning 3/14. Full time opportunities potentially available. All majors welcome. Email resumes to Michele at BOLD-BRAIN.COM or fax (202)332-5195.

UAHC Crane Lake and Eisner Camps, Reform Jewish coeducational Camps located in the Berkshires of Massachusetts, seek qualified, dedicated counselors and specialists, including Waterfront, Athletics, Arts. Good salary, r&b included, travel assistance. Crane Lake Camp: Contact Brad Gerstle, 800-227-2660 ILUVCAMP@aol.com; www.cranelake-camp.com. Eisner Camp: Contact

EMPLOYMENT

Louis Bordman, 212-650-4130 EISNERGUY@aol.com; www.eisner-camp.org

Are you looking foremployment during spring break? CSS is a professional service that works with some of the most prestigious companies in the valley. We offer FT, PT and T-H opportunities in the following areas: administrative support, data entry operator, entry level management, front office support, customer service representative CSS proudly offers holiday/vacation pay, medical insurance, direct deposit, and 401k. Call today for immediate consideration, or email us at ehtemps@cssit.com Register NOW for Springtime opportunities!!! Corporate Staffing Solutions 126 Northampton St, Suite G Easthampton MA 01027 Phone: (413) 529-7100 Fax: (413) 529-2209.

LOST & FOUND

Lost a black cd case with 23 cds. If found please call 546-4596. Thanks.

MISCELLANEOUS

Get paid to lose weight and inches. All natural, doctor reccommended. 1-800-397-7715.

Score big, score often with mybytes.com. Register today and get a free CD of cool music and much more.

ROOM WANTED

21/m looking for a place to stay. Now til 6/1. Call Nik @ 549-3826.

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

STEREO EQUIPMENT

Boston Acoustic sub/sat series. Six 8" speakers with two 16" subwoofers. Also central channel speaker. $800 value for $300. Like brand new. Need money 586-0534.

TRAVEL

Be flexible...Save $$$. Europe $159(o/w + taxes). CHEAP FARES WORLDWIDE!! Mexico/Caribbean $199 (r/t + taxes) Call; 800-326-2009 www.4cheapair.com

TRAVEL

Study Spanish. Internships in Guatemala. College Credit. www.casaxelaju.com (512)416-6991.

#1 Panama City Vacations! Party Beachfront @ The Boardwalk, Summit Condo's, and Mark II. 1-800-234-7007. www.endlesssummertours.com

#1 Spring break Vacations! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas & Florida! Book it now! All major credit cards accepted! 1-800-234-7007. www.endlesssummertours.com

SPRING BREAK 2000
Get Paid Lots of $$$ ... Trips & Tax Deductible
1-800-426-7710

Advertise in The Collegian Classifieds Today!!
Call us at 545-3500

Five College Community Calendar

MONDAY, MAR. 6

Artwork – This Is All True to Me," a collection of artwork and written word featuring women artists, will open from 9 a.m.-5 p.m. The opening reception will be at noon in the Student Union Art Gallery.

Film – A debated Indian film entitled "Fire" will be shown and discussed from 7-9 p.m. in the Student Union Art Gallery.

Performance – A play entitled "Adios Barbie" will be performed at the Curtain Theater at 5 p.m. The performance will be followed by a body image workshop presented by the Eversonian Center from 7-9 p.m.

TUESDAY, MAR. 7

Meeting – The UMass Ballroom Dance Club will meet at 8:30 p.m. in Totman 101.

Poetry – A poetry reading entitled "This Is All True to Me" will be held in the Student Union Art Gallery from 7-9 p.m. Local women writers will read their works.

Workshop – A workshop on contraception and safer sex will be held in room 302 of University Health Services at 7 p.m. All are welcome.

NOTICES

Community – Spring 2000 final examination schedules will be available beginning Mar. 9. Copies will be delivered to students in residence halls, and will be available to off-campus students in the registrar's office. The schedule will be available on the web beginning Mar. 1.

Community – Mass Appeal, the newest coed a cappella group at UMass, is looking for students to arrange music. Email Erica at massappeal@umail.umass.edu for more information.

Community – Small Batch Records is looking for pictures of bands, people, venues and anything that captures the essence of the local music scene to display at a non-profit showcase this spring. For submissions, contact Mike at Mikemac119@aol.com or Caleb at 587-3740 by Mar 5.

Help – From Feb. 15-Apr. 13 on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays from 5-8 p.m. student volunteers from the School of Management will assist non-resident aliens with the preparation of their Federal and State income tax returns. Call 545-5660 for more information.

Nominations – Nominations are now open for the offices of President, Trustee, and all Area Governments Officers. Nomination forms may be signed out at the Student Government Association office in 420 Student Union, and are due by Mar. 8.

Scholarships – The STEMTEC/NSF-Teaching Scholars program is offering scholarships to students who are interested in exploring a career in K-12 math or science teaching. Students do not need to be enrolled in a certificate program to apply. Applications are due by April 1. Contact Johanna at 545-0626 for more information.

Support – A grief support group is available to all students who have experienced the death of someone they love. The groups are free, small and confidential, and meet on Wednesday and Thursday evenings. Telephone pre-screening is required for enrollment. Call 577-5310 if interested.

Support – AL-ANON and ALATEEN are offering local meetings for those affected by someone else's drinking problem. Call 253-5261 for meeting times and locations.

Voting – A reminder to registered voters: A voter can only vote absentee due to absence from his/her residence community during polling hours, physical disability preventing the voter from going to a polling place, or religious belief. For more information call 256-4033.

PSAs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an PSI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of a contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

BOOKBUCKS From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks, you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

Ustore CAMPUS CENTER

Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

MONDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MARCH 6, 2000

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	3	12 Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Suze Orman: The Courage to Be Rich (In Stereo)				Suze Orman: The Courage to Be Rich (R) (In Stereo)
WFSB	3	3 News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	King		Grapevine	Raymond	Becker (R)	Family Law "Necessity"	News	Late Show
WBZ	4	4 News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	King		Grapevine	Raymond	Becker (R)	Family Law "Necessity"	News	Late Show
WCVB	5	5 News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	e s "Broken Arrow" (1996, Adventure) John Travolta. (In Stereo)				Once and Again (In Stereo)	News	News	Nightline
WLVI	6	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends	Nanny	7th Heaven "Sin." (R)				Popular (R) (In Stereo)	News	Friends	Nanny
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	10th Kingdom (In Stereo) (Part 5 of 5)				Third Watch (R) (In Stereo)	News	News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Blind Date	Real TV	Moesha (R)	Parkers (R)	Grown Ups	Malcolm-Eddie	News	Real TV (R)	Blind Date	Caroline
WVIT	9	News	NBC News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	10th Kingdom (In Stereo) (Part 5 of 5)				Third Watch (R) (In Stereo)	News	News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Fraser	Seinfeld	Friends	70s Show	Greed: Series	Ally McBeal "Changes" (R)		News	News	Friends	Frasier
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	10th Kingdom (In Stereo) (Part 5 of 5)				Third Watch (R) (In Stereo)	News	News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Antiques Roadshow (R) (In Stereo)				Antiques Roadshow (R) (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Fraser	e s "Broken Arrow" (1996, Adventure) John Travolta. (In Stereo)				Once and Again (In Stereo)	News	News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Fraser	Moesha (R)	Parkers (R)	Grown Ups	Malcolm-Eddie	Star Trek: Voyager "The Cloud"	Med Ast. You	Judge Mathis
WIBS	62	Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	NBA Basketball: Miami Heat at Phoenix Suns. (Live)				NBA Basketball: Raptors at Trail Blazers
AAE	29	L.A. Law "The Son Also Rises"	Law & Order "Deadbeat"			Biography: Dudley Moore		Investigative Reports (R)		City Confidential (R)		Law & Order "Big Bang"
CNN	43	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		Newsstand		Sports	Moneyline (R)
COM	39	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	e s "5 Heads in a Duffel Bag" (1997, Comedy) Joe Pesci.				Strangers	Upright	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	63	Your New House (R)		Wild Discovery	Everglades	Tunnels: Digging In		Dinosaur Attack! (R)		Dinosaurs – Inside and Out		Tunnels: Digging In (R)
ESPN	27	Sportscenter		College Basketball: MAAC Championship – Teams TBA				College Basketball: MVC Championship – Teams TBA				Sportscenter
LIFE	45	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Beyond Chance		"Another Woman's Husband" (2000, Drama) Lisa Rinna.				Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	53	MTV Jams	Best Selle	Making-Video	MTV Com (R)	TRL (R) (In Stereo)			Henson-MTV	Road Rules	Making-Video	Undressed	Loveline
NICK	46	All That	Catdog	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Thornberrys	Thornberrys	Jeffersons	All in Family	Jeffersons	All in Family	Jeffersons	All in Family
SCIFI	65	Sliders (In Stereo)		Outer Limits (In Stereo)		Outer Limits (In Stereo)		Outer Limits (In Stereo)		Outer Limits (In Stereo)		Poltergeist: The Legacy
TLC	28	Home Again	Home Again	Chasing the Killer Storms (R)		Paramedics				Test Pilots. Spin Doctors (R)		Paramedics (R)
TNT	44	In the Heat of the Night		ER "Hazard and Confusion"		WCW Monday Nitro (In Stereo Live)				e s "Born in East L.A." (1987, Comedy) Cheech Marin.
USA	59	Beyrwatch "Then or Die"		JAG (In Stereo)		Walker, Texas Ranger		WWF Raw		WWF War Zone		Ferm Club.com (In Stereo)
HBO	8	(4:30) "X Files"	e s "The Evening Star" (1996, Comedy-Drama)			Shirley MacLaine. PG-13		Sopranos "Full Leather Jacket"		e s "Analyze That" (1999) Robert De Niro.		"Cover"
MAX	51	e s "Wing Commander" (1999) Freddie Prinze Jr.				e s "Sphere" (1998, Science Fiction) Dustin Hoffman. PG-13				"Gamma" (1997) C. Thomas Howell. NR		"Bandits"
SHOW	9	(4:45) "Sticky"	e s "The Rugrats Movie" (1998, Adventure)			e s "Pluto" (1998, Suspense) Robert De Niro. (In Stereo)				e s "The Hitman" (1991) Chuck Norris.		Hoop Life

HSCN 4 Hosting Services Cable Network

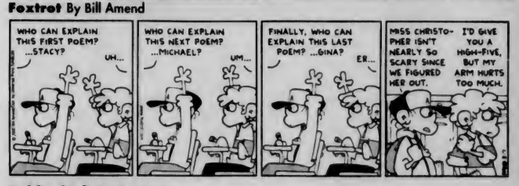
2	HSCN Bulletin Board	61	Gavel to Gavel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	62	NBC/22 Springfield
4	CBS/4 Boston	63	CNN Headline News
5	ABC/5 Boston	64	CNN
6	PBS/57 Springfield	65	CNN Fn
7	HSCN Movie Ch	66	CNN Si
8	UPN/20 Hartford	67	TBS
9	Weather Channel	68	BET
10	NBC/30 New Britain	69	College TV Network
11	Fox/61 Hartford	70	Univision
12	PBS/24 Hartford	71	Comedy Central
13	WOCH & HSCN	72	Cartoon Network
14	International	73	TV Land
15	UMass Academic TV	74	C-Span
16	WB/New Haven	75	ZDTV (Tentative)
17	Sundance	76	Bloomberg Financial Network
18	The Learning Channel	77	History Channel
19	UVC-TV19	78	HSCN Programming
20	ABC/40 Springfield

Spunk By Mike LaRiccia

Baldersdash By Tim Dwyer

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau



Robotman By Jim Meddick

Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Baldersdash By Tim Dwyer

Over the Hedge By Fry Lewis

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Horoscopes

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – The competition may seem outmatched today, but you shouldn't be surprised if your opponent gives you a run for your money.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – Though looks aren't everything, today you'll want to make sure that you've done all you can to ensure that things are aesthetically pleasing.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – You may hear "no" more often than not today, but this should only serve to inspire you and fill you with greater resolve than ever. Keep going!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – Now is the time for you to raise the stakes and to put more effort into those things, which, in the past, have become more and more routine.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – Keep your mouth in check today, and mind your manners – particularly with people you do not know well. A good first impression is essential.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Romance is in the picture today, and you mustn't let a golden opportunity pass you by simply because you weren't paying attention.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – You may want to be in charge, but you may have to play second fiddle to someone who, whether you know it or not, is better prepared than you.

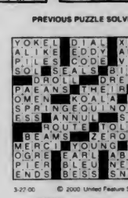
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – This is a good day to entertain others in your home – provided you've kept things in order. You're not yet ready for a full production!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – You may be coming down to the wire today, and as the pace quickens and the competition heats up, you'll be able to bring all your talents to bear.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – You may have to hide your feelings again and again today. Take care you don't lose sight of your true intentions, however.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – You won't be rushed today. Make it clear to those around you that you will take your own sweet time and still get to everything on schedule.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – It's time to ask for what you want, regardless of what others feel you deserve. Honest discussion and some compromise can turn out well for you.



Quote of the Day

"I bought a house on a one-way dead-end road. I don't know how I got there."

–Stephen Wright

ACROSS
1 Be in a bee
6 Rod
10 Croquet, e.g.
14 Souvenir
15 Vivacity
16 Blissful abode
17 Type of acid
18 Society gal's
19 Impolite
20 In the wings
22 Muslim's religion
23 Witnessed
24 Gently
26 Disguise item
29 Takes home
31 Tend the lawn
32 Geisha's sash
33 Cut
34 Checked the cost of 38 Foul
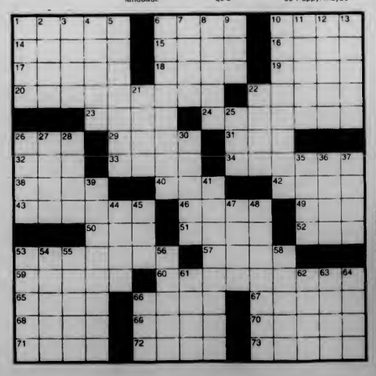
40 Gear part
42 Egypt's river
43 It could be real!
46 Diplomacy
49 Spasm
50 Caviar
51 Wild plum
52 Gab and gab
53 Goulash need
57 Algerian port
59 Bring to — recipe direction
60 Confined to one's office
65 Foot part
66 Winnie the- —
67 More skilful
68 Chinese secret society
69 Seabird
70 Columbus' port
71 Talents
72 Dick Tracy's wife
73 Informal language



PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

3-27-00 © 2000 United Feature Syndicate

DOWN
1 Wound cover
2 Mountain lion
3 Author Ambler
4 Cuff —
5 Urnies
6 Like scholarly writing
7 Designer Cassini
8 Brand name
9 Navy rank
10 George or Ira
11 Full-grown
12 Award
13 Foe
21 Prom attender
22 Frankenstein's golfer
25 Urchin
26 Used a loom
27 Storklike bird
28 Covered with gold
30 Locations
35 Kind of slicker
36 Charles Lamb's pen name
37 Ship's floor
39 Lobe jewelry
41 Rainwear
44 Work hard
45 "A mouse"
47 Bottle stopper
48 Earl Grey holders
53 Zip, e.g.
54 Detest
55 Am.
56 Cherish
58 Dynamite inventor
61 Enemies
62 Radius companion
63 Gas used in signs
64 Type of race
66 Puppy, maybe

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Lunch

Italian Sausage Grinder

Inson Stir Fry (vegan)

Vegetarian Moussaka (vegetarian, Berkshire, Hampshire and Worcester only)

Dinner

Sesame Chicken

Southern Fried Steak

Mixed Bean Creole (vegan, Berkshire, Hampshire and Worcester only)

Pasta Bean Casserole

Night Editor: Vanessa Walker
Photo Technician: Dan Santiello
Copy Editor: Melissa Hammel
Production Supervisor: Jeanette Santoro
Production Staff: Kara Stokes, Katie Ross

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

Jaywania Bradley was one of three seniors to walk off the court for the final time after the Minutewomen's semifinal loss to George Washington.

Chopped down

Tough defeat ends gritty UMass season

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

PHILADELPHIA – After a hot and cold season, many wondered which team would hit the hardwood when the entire year hung in the balance. But once the smoke cleared, no one could question the competitive fire of this squad.

The Massachusetts women's basketball team put forth a truly inspiring effort at the 2000 Bell Atlantic Atlantic 10 Tournament at the Liacouras Center in Philadelphia. The Minutewomen (14-15, 10-7 A-10) shut down Virginia Tech on Saturday, 58-54, before succumbing to No. 1 seed George Washington last night in a 66-55 semifinal battle. The thriller against the Hokies came down to a controversial foul call with less than four seconds left, while the GW loss hinged on a decisive second half run by the Colonials.

GW	66
UMass	55

"We leave the floor with our heads held high, knowing we gave everything we had to give," said UMass coach Joanie O'Brien. "As a basketball coach, that's all you can ask of your team."

Last night's melee with regular season A-10 West champion George Washington (25-4, 16-2 A-10) had all the makings of an upset for the underdog Minutewomen, who had shocked the Colonials, 67-54, midway through last month at the Mullins Center.

A-10 Sixth Player of the Year Kristeena Alexander dropped the hammer on UMass, burying back-to-back trifectas on the stunned Minutewomen. Alexander had appeared done for the night when she limped off the court five minutes earlier with a knee injury; now she had seemingly closed the door on UMass by pushing the GW gap to 11, 52-41 with 3:49 to go.

UMass	58
Virginia Tech	54

"Kristeena drilled two big threes that I thought were backbreakers for UMass," GW coach Joe McKeown said.

The Maroon and White put forth a stellar effort over the game's final stretch, but could get no closer than five. Eight straight GW foul shots from Elisa Aguilar and Starr Jefferson sewed up the 66-55 victory.

GW came out in the tourney semifinal looking hell-bent on revenge, as 6-foot-3 junior forward Petra Dubovcova connected on a rainbow three from the left wing to opening scoring.

The Maroon and White would claw back to take the lead, 13-9, on a Thomas jumper at the 11:18 mark. But that lead would soon evaporate into a deficit, as Dubovcova and Alexander caught fire and staked the Colonials to a 24-23 halftime lead.

"I thought we played an excellent first half of basketball defensively," O'Brien said.

But as good as UMass had to feel about its first half of hoops, Dubovcova made the initial stretch of the second set excruciating for the Maroon and White. The Slovakia native split Caroline Nehls and Amber Sneed for a layup to open the hall, followed up a MacFarland hoop by outhustling the UMass frontcourt for a three-point play that ran the GW edge to 29-25.

Alison MacFarland and Caroline Nehls would trim the deficit back down to two, 31-29, before Dubovcova and GW guard Marlo Egleston keyed a vicious 8-0 run with help from two quick Smith fouls. The Minutewomen roared back once again, this time thanks to a pair of free throws from senior Jaywana Bradley that cut the score to 45-41 in favor of the Colonials, setting up Alexander's long-distance assault.

GW faces Xavier in tonight's tournament final. The Musketeers used an extra session to knock off St. Joseph's, 84-78, in the other semifinal.

In Saturday's war with Virginia Tech, both squads hung around until the end. Then came the controversy. The two teams played to a 54-54 deadlock with 19 seconds remaining, setting up a dramatic final drive from MacFarland. Three Virginia Tech defenders converged on the slashing senior, and a whistle with only 3.5 seconds on the game clock sent her to the line for two ultimate game-winning points.

"That's just not a call you make with 3.5 seconds left in a game like this," Hokie coach Bonnie Hendrickson said. "You let the kids decide the outcome of the game."

In the late stages of a seesaw battle, MacFarland and teammate Nekole Smith took control of the game. Co-captain MacFarland stuck a trifecta of her own on the Maroon and White's ensuing possession, while Smith went to work breaking down Hokie pivot Christina Strother, whom she would torch for 14 points on 6-of-10 shooting over the course of the second set. MacFarland scrapped incessantly for every loose ball, and was rewarded with eight trips to the charity stripe in the second half, all of which dropped for the New Jersey native.

"If the seniors can't get up for a game like this, I don't know who can," MacFarland said.

Virginia Tech (19-10, 11-6 A-10) began, fitting enough, in the same place it would end – the trenches. UMass freshman Jen Butler controlled the opening tip and went to work immediately on the Hokie frontcourt, snatching a bounce pass from teammate Caroline Nehls and converting a short bank to open the scoring. Virginia Tech could manage only a lone free throw from

Turn to GW, page 9

Bonnies bounce UM

By Matt Brady & Brett Mouser
Collegian Staff

At all costs, the ideal for the Massachusetts men's basketball team was to see Temple on the other side of the bracket in the upcoming Bell Atlantic 10 Tournament. After Saturday, perhaps their ideals changed.

A win at the Reilly Center, home of St. Bonaventure, would guarantee the Minutemen a first round bye. It would also put them in prime position, hoping that another at-large hopeful could upend the rolling Owls of TU. However, the Bonnies had other ideas, earning themselves the free pass by throttling UMass at both ends en route to an 86-69 drubbing in Olean.

St. Bonaventure	86
UMass	69

The loss matches the Minutemen (15-14, 9-7 Atlantic 10) up with Duquesne, who took home the West division's sixth spot by falling to La Salle in its regular season finale, 67-58. St. Bonaventure will play the winner of the Xavier/Rhode Island game Thursday night.

The Minutemen were never in it, much like early January's contest in the Mullins Center where the Bonnies (19-8, 11-5 A-10) took a 23-point second half lead and coasted to a 10-point win. This time around, SBU jumped out to a quick 7-0 lead, holding UMass scoreless for the game's first two minutes. On the night, the Maroon and White shot a dismal 32 percent, building a 14-point halftime deficit behind 27 percent shooting from the floor.

The fire was fueled when a scuffle ensued between Bonnies forward Caswell Cyrus and Shannon Crooks just five minutes into the game. Cyrus allegedly elbowed Crooks in the mouth while fighting for a rebound, and after cringing in pain momentarily, Crooks confronted Cyrus. The shouting match between the players resulted in Crooks receiving a chorus of boos each time he touched the ball for the remainder of the game, one of the probable causes of his 2-for-12 shooting performance.

St. Bonaventure's inside presence resembled that of Temple, a dominant force that put tremendous weight on Kitwana Rhymer's shoulders in the paint. Rhymer battled

Turn to MINUTEWOMEN, page 9

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

With Micah Brand sidelined with pneumonia, Kitwana Rhymer played 38 minutes, scoring seven points to go along with 13 rebounds.

Tie puts Minutemen in tourney

Culgin salvages lost lead, UMass eyes BU in first round

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

DURHAM, NH – Three weeks ago, the Massachusetts hockey team found itself in a very tough position. The Minutemen were ahead of UMass-Lowell by one point in the race for the final playoff spot in the Hockey East tournament. However, all of the six games left on the slate for UMass were against clubs who were nationally ranked in the Top 10.

Most of the critics figured that it would be the Minutemen who would be left out of the postseason when all was said and done. In fact, some national publications went so far as to print their predictions of a UMass-Lowell entrance into the post-season.

"I think that everybody counted us out except for ourselves. I was reading some things on the Internet that said that it was going to be Lowell against Boston University [in the playoffs] because of the way our schedule was," UMass senior captain Nathan Sell said. "That was motivation for us, and it was a little silly on their part to print something like that at that early point in the season."

Last weekend the Minutemen upended No. 6 Boston College to surge ahead of the last place River Hawks. On Friday night at the Whittemore Center, UMass went out and clinched a berth in the playoffs by earning a 3-3 tie with No. 4 New Hampshire. Now, instead of Lowell, it will be the Minutemen who head to Beantown on Friday with the hopes of taking the first steps towards the FleetCenter for the HE semifinals.

UMass	3
UNH	3

UMass (11-17-5, 5-14-4 in Hockey East) jumped out to a 2-0 lead on a goal by Sell midway through the second period. The Wildcats roared back, however, with three consecutive goals to take a 3-2 lead with 12:49 to play in regulation.

After Darren Haydar's power play tally propelled UNH to its first lead of the game, the Minutemen responded only 32 seconds later. Junior defenseman Joey Culgin, who had taken the penalty that resulted in the go-ahead goal, blistered a slap shot past UNH netminder Ty Conklin to even the game at 3-3. Both teams would have their chances in the game's final minutes, but neither could push across the game-winning score.

"When I intercepted the pass, I saw that the defenseman was backing off. I knew that I could get a shot on goal, but the biggest thing was whether or not I could get a screen from the defenseman," Culgin said. "I got it, and the puck got past [Conklin]."

Knowing that momentum was on its side from the previous weekend's win over BC, UMass set the tone of the game on the first shot by either team. Junior winger Ray Geever fired a slap shot from the right faceoff circle by Conklin to hand the Minutemen an early 1-0 lead.

While the Wildcats were running into a stingy Markus Helanen at the offensive end, the Maroon and White added another goal at the 13:25 mark of the middle frame. Defenseman Toni Soderholm pinched in from his spot at the left point to keep the puck in the UNH zone, then poked a pass to Jay Shaw. The UMass winger spotted Sell all alone in the slot and slid a pass that the team captain slid home for a two-goal advantage.

"Sellzy hasn't scored a lot of goals this season, but he's scored two in the past two games that were extremely important," UMass coach Joe Mallen said. "He really deserves a lot of credit. He shows great leadership out

Turn to HOCKEY, page89

UNH 'finishes' with 5-1 victory

By Bryan Smith
Collegian Staff

With a spot in the playoffs secured the previous night in a 3-3 tie at the Whittemore Center at the University of New Hampshire the Massachusetts' hockey team had little to play for, while UNH had a chance to solidify a hold on the second spot in the Hockey East Tournament.

UNH	5
UMass	1

Solidify the second position they did. The Wildcats trounced the Minutemen 5-1 at the William D. Mullins Center. The loss came on a night which UMass seniors Nathan Sell, Jeff Blanchard, Kevin Poulin and Dmitri Vasiliev played in the final home contest of their careers.

Despite the loss the Minutemen will get their shot to Turn to UNH, page 8

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

A night after booking their tickets to the postseason with the game-tying goal, defenseman Joey Culgin takes some time off.

The Massachusetts

Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Volume CVI Issue 29 Tuesday, March 7, 2000

SGA's beer run goes flat

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

The Student Government Association's motion to increase the number of beers allowed for students 21 and over in the residence halls from 24 to 30 may have been approved by the Faculty Senate last Thursday, but in an announcement yesterday, Interim Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs Javier Cevallos rescinded the decision.

Cevallos said in a statement that the announcement came after he consulted with Chancellor David K. Scott, who had been out of town traveling for the last 10 days.

"After appraising the Chancellor, I decided to go back to the more limited amount," Cevallos said.

Scott said in a statement that the campus will begin an immediate review of the amount of alcoholic beverages students are permitted to take into the residence halls, with a view of possibly eliminating cases of beer altogether.

"We have a clear, consistent alcohol policy with a strong educational component supported by strict sanctions," Scott said. "Increasing the amount of beer allowed in our residence halls would detract from our serious efforts to improve our policies, our sanctions and our educational efforts."

UMass Student Government Association President Jeff Howe was upset over the administration's reversal of decision, likewise on a policy that they had earlier approved. He said that six more beers will be more convenient in terms of practicality because most beers are sold in large bulks of 30-packs.

"Six beers is not going to change the attitude on campus in terms of drinking," Howe said. "We've made tremendous strides in terms of what we've done on campus relative to drinking problems and the numbers speak for themselves."

Over the past two years, Howe stated that the administration and the SGA have worked in forming new alcohol policies in attempts to change the system from being "extraordinarily punitive to being educational" and Howe said they have seen a drop in the number of alcohol cases brought before the Student Judiciary. According to Howe, the cases were around 600 two years ago and as of last year, it was half that size.

"We've got to keep doing what we've been doing which is educating students on the dangers of binge drinking and of alcohol abuse and when we find instances of this occurring we have to deal with it in a sensible way," Howe said. "But it makes no sense to have any rule in the book that was written at a time that was appropriate, but no longer suits the circumstances."

In the past, more consistent sanctions against violations of the alcohol policy were enacted including parental notification for students facing removal from housing, suspension or expulsion from the University and on-going meetings with town officials about extending the University's Code of Conduct to apply off-campus.

Scott said the decision to increase the amount allowed by the six-pack was out of line with the campus's general approach in the past few years to curb alcohol abuse.

However, Howe stated that the effect of increasing the amount of alcohol would not necessarily cause more stu-

Turn to BEER, page 2

BRUCE BENNETT/COLLEGIAN

It's almost a reality for UMass

The Sit-Down Diner is nearing completion as the final pieces of the structure are lowered into place. Each section, weighing 50,000 pounds, is arranged by crane. The diner is scheduled to open in mid-April.

Focus on issues at political peak

By Melissa Hammel and Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

With elections looming in the near horizon, today will be a big day of decisions for residents in the state. Both the Student Government Association (SGA) and professors from the Political Science department at the University of Massachusetts are taking an active interest in both the candidates and the issues being addressed.

Professor Jeffery Sedgwick from the Political Science department commented that this years' political race seems to be much more about appearance and character than about any specific issues.

Character is big among people; the general consensus is that more people in this year's election we care more about character and less about issues," he said.

He continued, adding that there was a chance that McCain could potentially win the state of Massachusetts but that he may have a problem with other states due to some negative character issues.

"Although the race is closer than it was a week ago, McCain's support has been slipping because he was caught in the scandal of making negative phone calls against Bush in Michigan," he said. "Once one gets caught in a scandal and then makes it worse by lying, it doesn't exactly help one's campaign."

He also made statements regarding the issue of Bush as a Republican candidate in the election. According to him, although Bush has a strong party following he has the potential to lose in the primary to McCain.

"George W. Bush's strengths are in people that are party faithful. He is also strong with the self-identified Republicans," he said. "Although Massachusetts is very similar to New Hampshire in the aspect of doing the unexpected."

Turn to ELECTION, page 3

Financial issues on the UMass forefront

Schools face snags with PeopleSoft

By Mary Grein and Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

This is the first in a series addressing the budget allocations.

In the past several months PeopleSoft, a software program aimed at improving communications and technology, has received many complaints, followed by lawsuits from seven of the eight "Big Ten" universities that currently use their system. Now, as the University of Massachusetts-Amherst battles budget allocations, it continues to invest millions of dollars into the program.

Presently, UMass has spent nearly $28 million on PeopleSoft technology according to research on previous budgets done by Thomas Taaffe, a graduate student. There is no ceiling on the contract allowing the University to continue to allocate additional funds at their discretion toward the operation of the program.

Despite allegations that the "performance of the systems, in terms of responsiveness, is simply unacceptable," Javier Cevallos, Vice Chancellor of Student Affairs said at a recent faculty senate meeting that PeopleSoft was in place and running smoothly at the University.

In the past, PeopleSoft has experienced problems in the implementation of its software, causing universities to spend millions of dollars over budget, and creating projects that have run months over schedule.

One institution plagued by problems with PeopleSoft is Cleveland State University. After implementing the software, the University experienced delays in its financial aid and incorrect billing. At the University of Wisconsin at Madison similar problems occurred, including the inability to print reports of grades for the spring semester.

At the same time, the Ohio State University underestimated the size and difficulty of installing PeopleSoft's human resources and payroll systems. The university has spent $30 million over what it had originally intended.

Many of the problems that the institutions are experiencing stem from the size of the universities involved, and as a consequence the problems have continued to escalate quickly.

UMass has held its position that the program is a success and according to John Dubach, the chief information officer hoped to avoid difficulties other institutions have experienced.

"We basically wanted to hold off," Duhach was quoted as saving. "To see what functionality was actually delivered in Version 7.5 and Version 7.6. Version 7.0 certainly had a lot of missing pieces."

In response David Duffield, PeopleSoft's chief executive has made a public apology to over 400 public universities and colleges who have bought the company's products, saying measures were being taken to restore the public's confidence in its product.

Many individuals, including student and faculty members have raised concern that a significant amount of additional money is being allocated to PeopleSoft and question why budget cuts cannot be taken from the program to assist in the proposed one to three percent overall budget cuts.

Chancellor David K. Scott has said in recent weeks that the University will continue to invest in PeopleSoft.

UMass Chancellor David K. Scott

Class advises students to take census seriously

By Daniel Ruetenik
Collegian Staff

The 2000 census is about to come to your door, and Professor Ellen Pader's Environmental Design class is working hard to make sure you fill it out.

Every 10 years, the United States conducts a census of every person living on United States soil. Information gathered by the census determines such things as the distribution of funds for programs ranging from road repair to elderly assistance programs, public improvement strategies, schools and 911 emergency systems.

Health care specialists use the information to predict the spread of diseases. The government uses town population information to determine the reapportionment of seats in the U.S. House of Representatives. Family income levels help economists spot trends in the economic well being of the nation and to locate potential markets for businesses.

The census will be distributed to 275 million homes across the country. 83 percent of the homes will receive a short form with questions about family income, family size and the ages of family members. One in six households will receive a longer form with questions pertaining to education, income, employment, ancestry, and home heating fuel.

Briana Kane, a senior majoring in resource economies is a student in Pader's Environmental Design class. The class is working in conjunction with the U.S. Department of Commerce Bureau of the Census to ensure that every student on campus fills out the census.

According to Kane, the class is working on three separate projects with the Census Bureau. A campus program, working to "make students aware that they should be counted here and not at home," a Franklin County program, where students work in the community, making sure that families send in their census forms, and a Russian program in which students are helping the large Russian population in Franklin County fill out their census forms.

Kane said, "a [student] who speaks Russian will be going out into the large community of Russian speakers in

Turn to CENSUS, page 3

Scott holds forum

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

Escalating concerns about the proposed one to three percent budget cuts have caused an outcry by faculty, staff and students. In response, Chancellor David K. Scott is hosting an open forum tonight in Mahar Auditorium from 6-8 p.m. to discuss issues that are currently taking place on campus.

In the recent weeks there have been two rallies that have been held to protest the current proposed cuts to academics.

The first rally, which was hosted by the campus chapter of Young Americans For Freedom and the UMass Republican club, specifically focused on faculty salaries and the merit of cuts on academic programs. The student group staged their rally on the steps of the Student Union last week. At the rally Ken Campbell, a member of the Republican Club commented on high salaries, explaining to the crowd at the event that the cuts were unnecessary when so much money was going toward wages.

"There is no reason for budget cuts when we have people making over $70,000 a year," he said.

The second rally, held during the month of February was organized by the Graduate Student Employee Organization (GEO) and attracted a crowd of about 200 protestors. The demonstrators marched to the Chancellor's Office and specifically questioned him about the protest. At this protest, both students and faculty members spoke out against the cuts.

One Comparative Literature professor Dan Lenson and member of the Massachusetts Society of Professors commented, "I've been here for 30 years, but this time is different. What's funny this time is they [the administration] have enough money to run this place," he said. "They know they have enough money, but their not doing it. Instead they cut consumer studies, they kill off the Spanish TA's, and they have starved the language department."

He went on to explain that he believed it was an issue of policy. "This isn't just bad management, this is policy. It is infrastructure not people," Lenson said.

Other issues that have also been protested are the elimination of the Apparel Marketing major and the severe reduction of funds to programs such as language studies.

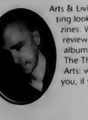
In the past, Scott has commented on the issues and remained optimistic that the cuts would remain minimal. He continues to explain to faculty and students alike why projected budget cuts are occurring. He commented at a faculty senate meeting last month, "It would be unconscious and irresponsible of me to allow the University to float into next year without any thought to the budget."

He will address questions regarding the budget as well as any other on campus issues of concern at the forum.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 59 LOW: 34	HIGH: 58 LOW: 39	HIGH: 64 LOW: 42

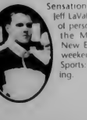
SOURCE: CNN.COM



Senseless Violence

Boomer Pinches turns a serious eye on a police tragedy in New York. Read about his interpretation of the facts on the Ed/Op page.

ED/OP PAGE 4



Maximize your masculinity

Arts & Living takes a hard-hitting look at men's magazines. We also have reviews of the newest albums from AC/DC and The The.
Arts: we'll get naked for you, if you ask nicely.

ARTS PAGE 6

Lord of the Rings

Sensational UMass gymnast Jeff LaVallee racked up a pair of personal bests to launch the Minutemen to the New England Crown this weekend.
Sports: we stick every landing.

SPORTS PAGE 10

Arts & Living 6
Comics 9
Crossword 9
Editorial 4
News 1
Sports 10

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

Police Log

Accidents
Mar. 1
A two-vehicle collision was reported on the corner of University Drive and Southwest Circle. No injuries were reported.
Mar. 3
A vehicle reportedly struck a van in lot #71.
A vehicle was reportedly struck by an unknown vehicle in lot #22.
A vehicle reportedly rolled out of its space and struck another vehicle in lot #65.

Arrests
Mar. 2
Joel M. Roy, 20, of Newbury was arrested in Patterson Dorm and charged with wanton destruction of property valued at over $150 and possessing or using a false liquor ID card.
Mar. 3
Alexander J. Breitmaier, 21, of Franklin was arrested in lot #42 and charged with drunk driving, failure to stop or yield and number plate violation.
Mar. 5
Matthew R. Stone, 18, of Greenfield was arrested on North Pleasant St. for an outstanding warrant.
Chimaeze R. Ugwuegbu, 21, of Detroit Mi. was arrested in the Student Union and charged with disorderly conduct, resisting arrest and possession of pepper spray without a valid F.I.D. card.
Samuel K. Jones, 22, of Amherst was arrested in lot #40 and charged with unlicensed operation of a vehicle, attaching the wrong plate to a vehicle, driving an uninsured vehicle and not having a valid inspection sticker.

Assaults
Mar. 1
Police received a report of an acquaintance rape from the Amherst Police Department. The report is still under investigation and no further information is available.
Mar. 2
A student receptionist was reportedly assaulted by another individual while working in John Quincy Adams Dorm. The receptionist was able to provide a description. Further information will be available.

Larceny
Mar. 1
A bubcap was reported stolen from a vehicle in lot #11
Mar. 3
Clothes were reportedly stolen from a laundry area in Cance Dorm.
A jacket worth over $300 was reported stolen from an office in Conte Polymer Research Center.
The door to a room on the fifth floor of Grayson Dorm was reportedly kicked in.
A textbook, valued at over $100 was reported stolen from John Quincy Adams Dorm.

Misc.
Mar. 3
Police received a report of a possible rabid skunk in lot #29. Pest control was notified.
Offensive signs were reportedly placed in an elevator in Menamara Dorm.
Emergency Health and Safety was dispatched for a report of a trashcan on fire outside of Crabtree Dorm.
Police assisted staff with the dispersal of a party on the 14th floor of John Adams Dorm.
Mar. 5
Individuals were reportedly discharging a fire extinguisher in Kennedy Dorm.
Mar. 6
A dog was reportedly stuck in the UMass maze. The animal was removed and taken to the pound.

Vandalism
Mar. 1
Damage to a vending machine was reported in Chadbourne Dorm.
Mar. 2
Derogatory graffiti was reported in Gorman Dorm.
Mar. 3
Papers were reportedly set on fire on a table in a Dwight Dorm lounge area.
Detogatory graffiti was reportedly written on a resident's dorm in Patterson Dorm.
Homophobic graffiti was reported on the third floor of Patterson Dorm.
Racial graffiti was reported on the second floor stairwell of James Dorm.

Texas lawsuit takes school prayer to court

By David Savage
Los Angeles Times

SANTA FE, Texas – Public prayer may return to America's schools this year, thanks to the determined efforts of this small and strongly Baptist town near the Texas Gulf Coast.

No one doubts that students may pray privately at their desks, or join with friends to pray together at lunch time. And for at least a decade, students have had the right to meet before class or after school to study the Bible or pray.

But the school board here wants something more: a student leading a prayer at school events, ranging from assemblies and graduation ceremonies to Friday night football games.

Later this month, the school board's case will go before the U.S. Supreme Court, and it could transform the school-prayer issue nationwide. If the justices uphold student-led prayers, the decision could clear the way for all schools to put the question of public prayers to a vote of their students.

The Santa Fe school board's crusade has been joined by Texas governor and Republican presidential hopeful George W. Bush, who has filed court papers arguing that student-led prayer at school events should be legal nationwide. In recent days, the role of religion in public life has emerged as a key point of controversy in the GOP presidential primaries. The case cites the provisions of the First Amendment, which states that the government "shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, or abridging the freedom of speech."

Christian student leaders and school officials in Santa Fe speak of a national moral crisis and say they want to give a public voice to their personal faith.

In its filing to the Supreme Court, however, the board denies that it encourages prayer. It says that it follows a "neutral policy" that "neither favors nor disfavors religion."

The prospect of having students vote on prayer troubles a University of Texas expert on religion and the law. "The core of the First Amendment is that we don't vote on religion in this country and allow the majority to use the instruments of government to spread the faith," said law professor Douglas Laycock.

But lawyers for Christian Coalition founder Pat Robertson, whose American Center for Law and Justice will represent the Santa Fe school board before the court, say a student's prayer at a school event is free speech, not an official promotion of religion.

Bush's brief goes even further, urging the court to permit student-led prayers nationwide. He also maintains that, once a young person is given a public platform, he or she should be free to ask fellow students to follow Jesus Christ.

Over the past decade, the Supreme Court has shifted away from strict separation of church and state and instead has espoused a doctrine of neutrality or equal treatment for religion. If a public school district allows private groups to use its auditorium, for instance, church groups must be allowed to use it, too. If a state university subsidizes student publications, it must give an equal subsidy to a magazine published for Christian students.

In its legal brief, the Sante Fe school board echoes these recent decisions, stressing free speech for Christian students and the neutral stance of public officials.

While strict separation has never been popular in this part of Texas, not everyone in this town of 8,000 is comfortable with the intense focus on Christianity.

The case now before the Supreme Court began with complaints of too much religion, not too little, in the Sante Fe schools.

Parents took their complaints to Debora Perkey, an American Civil Liberties Union lawyer in Houston.

After Perkey failed to win new guidelines from the school board, the ACLU sued the district in 1995 on behalf of two parents who insisted on anonymity to protect their children.

U.S. District Judge Samuel Kent ultimately ordered the district to adopt new policies prohibiting prayer and religious instruction in class. He said that a student may give a "brief invocation" at graduation and football games, so long as it was "nonsectarian" and "non-proselytizing."

The school board appealed to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

In a 2-1 decision, the appeals court last year ruled that school officials may not allow students "to read overtly Christian prayers from the stage at graduation ceremonies." Moreover, the court said, there is no need for prayer and invocation at football games, adding that the national anthem and the Pledge of Allegiance suffice.

■ beer

continued from page 1

dents to go out and drink.

"Students aren't going to look at this and suddenly think they have had some physical change that will allow them to consume more alcohol," Howe said. "I think the more sensibly we approach the issues of alcohol and drinking, the easier it is going to be for students to grasp the concepts the administration is trying to pursue."

Cevallos said he would be appointing a committee to review the policy and make recommendations as to the future policy of alcohol regulation in residence halls.

Stay informed about current events.

~

Read the Daily Collegian.

Barbie: I am not a role model

By Virginia Avedisian
Collegian Staff

Last night Adios Barbie, a play depicting the image of women in today's society, was performed at the Curtain Theater in the Fine Arts Center.

The play was inspired by the collection of essays, Adios Barbie: Young Women Write About Body Image and Identity. The play was adapted and directed by Jenni Werner and consisted of an ensemble of six women.

The core basis of the performance was to depict how women in our society are looked upon beginning at the earliest ages, through the popular doll named Barbie. Barbie dolls are known worldwide, yet in America, she is looked upon as a "cultural icon."

The plays portrayed how countless little girls every year are subject to the idea that Barbie is not just a doll, but instead a way of life. How one should act, dress, and look are all depicted into this one doll.

Barbie was invented in 1959, and has just done it all.

This play aims to depict the harsh reality that women in our society, ever since the time that they are small children, are confronted by the idea that they must look, dress and act a certain way in order to be considered beautiful in our society.

The play consisted of short skits depicting the different roles of women in our society. One skit, that kept reoccurring throughout the plays consisted of two women trying to come up with new ideas for new versions of the Barbie doll. One suggestion that came up was, "Dinner Roll Barbie, complete a pint of Ben and Jerry's Ice Cream, dinner rolls, a 5 course meal, and a tee-shirt that reads, 'only the weak don't eat,' having this doll send out the message that "voluptuous is sexy too." Some other ideas were, "Birkenstock Barbie," complete with flat feet, comfortable sandals, and made from recycled materials, and "Bi-Sexual Barbie," coming with not only Ken, but Skipper too.

The basic idea of this play was to try to "open up our eyes" to the fact that women should not be "taken over," by who society tells them they should be. It mentioned the fact that in today's society, the media often tells women what "sexy" is considered to be. Magazines such as Glamour, Cosmopolitan and Mademoiselle were mentioned, and ads such as L'oreal's "I'm Worth It" campaign were poked fun at, as the girls tried to imitate the models in the magazines.

The word "sexy" was brought up many times in this play, and was portrayed by ideas that porn models and strippers are considered to be just that, "sexy."

Another skit told of a girl who was always dieting, and used Post-It notes all over her kitchen that included phrases such as, "eat a carrot pig and forget about ice cream you big fat cow."

Some people may look at this as just a hypothetical situation depicted in a play, but the harsh reality is that many women do not feel entirely comfortable with every aspect of their bodies and are constantly trying to change themselves through diets and exercise, one of the actresses expressed.

The final point that the play makes is that we as a society should stop looking at a doll that is anatomically incorrect and does not depict the "normal" woman, but instead start looking at ourselves in a way that is beautiful. One actress at the end of the play states, "Who are we, who do we think we are, who are we to say? Let us close our mouths, cleanse our minds and let us realize that I Am Me."

One woman stated that she thought that the ideas in the play "really hit home, I couldn't believe how much of me I saw within this play."

Laura Lowry, an actress in the play, and a senior theater exchange student from California said, "The more you talk about it and know that you will still be effected understand that you will still be subjected to the role that society gives you, but at least if you are aware of it, then maybe slowly you can change."

Everybody Scores!

REGISTER WITH MYBYTES.COM AND SCORE BIG!

GET A FREE SONIC ABYSS MULTIMEDIA CD AND AUTOMATICALLY BE ENTERED INTO OUR SCORE BIG, SCORE OFTEN SWEEPSTAKES.

YOU COULD WIN AN INSTANT PRIZE!

PLUS, YOU'LL HAVE A CHANCE AT $100,000 TOWARDS YOUR COLLEGE EDUCATION.

$score BIG $score OFTEN Sweepstakes

UpCLOSE travel well SPEND LESS BLOCKBUSTER
CALGON SESSIONS.com
SKECHERS
OldGlory.com
TripHub.com Your Student Travel Source
UNIVERSAL UNIVERSAL MUSIC & VIDEO DISTRIBUTION

mybytes.com™

No Purchase Necessary. Void in Florida and where prohibited by law. Must be legal resident of the United States, (except Florida) 18 yrs or older, registered at a college or university during the promotional period. Sweepstakes ends 6:00 PM EST 03/17/00. To Play: visit www.mybytes.com and register for the website using process provided, confirm your contact information on the game page and submit. Instant winners selected at random and notified instantly by site. Grand Prize winner will be selected at random on or about 3/21/00 and notified via email and regular US mail. Odds of winning Prizes depend on the number of entries received. By entering, participants agree to be bound by the complete Official Rules available at www.mybytes.com or send SASE to "SBSO Rules" Common Plaza, 810 Memorial Dr., Cambridge, MA 02139. BLOCKBUSTER® name, design and related marks are trademarks of Blockbuster Inc. Blockbuster Inc. is not a sponsor of or in any way liable or responsible for the administration of this game. [Coupon redeemable at participating BLOCKBUSTER® store locations.]
© 2000 Youthstream

BECKY REDLICK/ COLLEGIAN

Not your average commuter
Our four mascot swans took a stroll yesterday evening. No word as yet on why exactly.

■ election

continued from page 1

According to Professor Laura Jensen of the Political Science Department, there is a potential for the less dominant candidate to win in Massachusetts.

"My guess is that McCain is going to win in the Republican primary and Gore is going to win in the Democratic primary," she said.

Among the SGA, many members are divided on who they would like to see coming out on top in the primary.

Associate Chief Justice Mike Marin, a sophomore political science major, said he is voting in favor of John McCain because he said he believes he is the only candidate whose background inspires him. Serving as a P.O.W., Marin said McCain continued to fight "the good fight" and he has accomplished much as a Senator of Arizona. Marin stated that McCain would be the best candidate in restoring the dignity to the White House after the damage it's suffered by the Clinton administration.

"I'm voting for John McCain because I believe he is the only person that can restore the dignity and faith to the White House after the problems we've had the last eight years with the Clinton administration, and I think he would be an excellent choice."

Jared Brooslin, secretary of Public Policy and Relations, said he is voting for Vice President Al Gore because he said the economy is doing great as a result of the Clinton's administration's last eight years in office.

"I feel strongly towards his views on the abortion issue and I believe the economy is doing great and I think that has to do with him and President Clinton's last eight years in office and I hope falls as a marketing major that the business will keep going up," Brooslin said. "[Gore's] for pro-life and pro-choice: I think women should have the right to choose because it's their bodies so I think that's a really important aspect of it."

Brooslin also commented in favor of Gore's platform on gun control.

"At this moment, I think that the one that really sticks out is his ideas on gun control and trying to restrict it," Brooslin said. "I think that's a really good idea. There's no reason why people should be out there shooting each other and there should be locks on guns. There's no reason for there not to be."

Speaker of the Undergraduate Senate Mikale Billard said he is a democrat and will probably vote for Bradley even though he said he doesn't agree with what any of the candidates stand for, especially in regards to education policy.

"They are all basically for school vouchers and I am very adamantly against school vouchers because they take the best students away from the poorer school districts and I don't believe in public funding going for private use."

■ census

continued from page 1

Franklin County and helping them fill out their forms."

Kane said the campus program will be setting up a table in the campus center, and working to remind students to fill out their census forms. They will be broadcasting ads on WMUA and putting notices in the various student publications.

Students will be receiving a letter in their dormitories and private homes this week, reminding them to fill out their census forms. On March 15 the actual census will arrive.

Kane said "the more students counted, the more funding for the community."

According to the U. S. Census Bureau's website www.census.gov, the United States has put more effort than ever before into conducting the census this year. 830,000 people have been hired around the country to collect and sort the enormous amounts of information coming in.

The Census Bureau has been placing ads on the sides of buses and on billboards reminding people to fill out their census forms. Numerous programs have been working in conjunction with elementary schools, high schools and colleges to raise awareness about the importance of filling out the census forms.

Baseball players Barry Bonds, Derek Jeter and Ivan Rodriguez were hired by the Census Bureau to make 30 second public service announcements asking baseball fans and others to "hit a home run" for their communities by filling out their census forms.

BECKY REDLICK/ COLLEGIAN

Layin' low
Marisa Aldouplulis, Elizabeth Sulewski, and Erin Walsh, sophomores majoring in Communication Disorders, HRTA, and English respectively, took advantage of the sun yesterday next to Van Meter.

SIEMENS Westinghouse

You've never had this much power.

This is your time, your chance to pull ahead. You've never had this much power before. Here's how you can make the most of it...

Upcoming Information Session
• Mechanical Engineering
• Electrical Engineering

It's a great time to be in power with us, as our global strength energizes the world!

Wednesday, March 8, 2000
6pm - 8pm
Southwick Hall (N. Campus) Room 200

Interviews are being scheduled on campus on Thursday, March 9. Contact your college Career Center for an appointment.

Siemens Westinghouse Power Corporation is an equal opportunity employer, headquartered in Orlando, Florida.

More information is available @ www.swpc.siemens.com/jobs_n_career

More Power To You

Siemens Westinghouse Power Corporation
A Siemens Company

UMass Student Legal Services Office

CALL TODAY

FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!

545-1995

Do you want to be a part of the biggest student-run business on campus?

Are you interested in a career in Human Resources?

Collegian is accepting applications for the position of Human Resource Coordinator.

Applications can be picked up at the Collegian in room 113 in the Campus Center Basement.

Interested applicants should possess excellent communication and computer skills.

Any questions can be directed to Christine Carroll at 545-3500 or hrcollegian@yahoo.com.

RETIREMENT | INSURANCE | MUTUAL FUNDS | TRUST SERVICES | TUITION FINANCING

While TIAA-CREF invests for the long term, it's nice to see performance like this today.

Check out other account performance on the Web

TIAA-CREF delivers impressive results like these by combining two disciplined investment strategies.

In our equity accounts, for example, we combine active management with enhanced indexing. With two strategies, we have two ways to seek out performance opportunities—helping to make your investments work twice as hard.

EXPENSE RATIO
CREF GLOBAL EQUITIES	INDUSTRY AVERAGE
0.37%[2]	1.92%[3]

Combine this with our low expenses and you'll see how TIAA-CREF stands apart from the competition.

CREF GLOBAL EQUITIES ACCT.[1]
36.05%	22.02%	18.75%
1 YEAR AS OF 12/31/99	5 YEARS AS OF 12/31/99	SINCE INCEPTION 5/1/92

With over $250 billion in assets, we're the world's largest retirement company and the leading choice on America's campuses. If that sounds good to you, consider this number: 1 800 842-2776. Call and find out how TIAA-CREF can work for you today and tomorrow.

TIAA CREF Ensuring the future for those who shape it.

1 800 842-2776
www.tiaa-cref.org

1. The investment results shown for the CREF variable annuity reflect past performance and are not indicative of future rates of return. These returns and the value of the principal you have invested will fluctuate, so the shares you own may be more or less than their original price upon redemption. Foreign stock markets are subject to additional risks from changing currency values, interest rates, government regulations, and political and economic conditions. Expenses are subject to change and are not guaranteed for the future. 2. Source: Morningstar, Inc. 12/31/99, tracking 279 world stock mutual funds. TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services, Inc. distributes CREF certificates and interests in the TIAA Real Estate Account. Teachers Personal Investors Services, Inc. distributes the variable component of the personal annuities, mutual funds and tuition savings agreements. TIAA and TIAA-CREF Life Insurance Co. issue insurance and annuities. TIAA-CREF Trust Company, FSB provides certain trust services. Investment products are not FDIC insured, may lose value and are not bank guaranteed. For more complete information on CREF, including charges and expenses, call 1 800 842-2776, ext. 5509, for the prospectus. Read it carefully before you invest or send money. © 2000 TIAA-CREF 1-00

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Our Opinion

Making democracy work

Today is Super Tuesday, perhaps the nation's most important election day other than Election Day itself. Primaries will be held in eight of the nation's most important political states today, deciding who will we vote for this November.

John McCain or George W. Bush?

Bill Bradley or Al Gore?

The people of Ohio, California, New York, Maryland, Connecticut, Georgia, Missouri and our own Massachusetts will all be able to decide as they vote during the day, and The Daily Collegian can only hope that members of the student community will vote as well.

Today is your chance to make yourself and your views heard, be they conservative or liberal in nature. Beyond that, you can choose to vote for candidates that have gone against party policy and continued to campaign hard, making this one of the most interesting elections in recent years.

McCain, after stunning Bush in New Hampshire, has continued to campaign throughout the nation, and stands to, if nothing else, make a decent showing later today. Possibly by winning in both Connecticut and here in Massachusetts, no small feat for a man who entered the election late and with significantly less funding than frontrunner Bush.

Bradley's campaign, which initially challenged Gore quite seriously, has fallen off somewhat, and it is no longer expected that he has a realistic chance at winning a state, much less the majority tomorrow that would make his campaign again legitimate. But Bradley has already contributed greatly to the Democratic campaign, bringing issues and positions to the table not seriously examined before, as well as bringing new ideas to debates that had been completely unheard.

Today's election will probably result in the Republican Bush campaigning against the Democrat Gore, an election that should be, for all intents and purposes, closely fought and with no clear winner in sight, should keep the public interested. To show that interest, the public, and this very much includes the UMass community, needs to get out to voting booths and make their voices heard.

McCain is in the election because his campaign was supported by voters impressed with his message and his platform. Bradley lingers because he too brought something to voters that in turn brought them to the polls. For this American democracy of ours to work, voters need to vote in elections for candidates that they feel will do the job.

Today is a huge step in that process, and while The Daily Collegian will not endorse any particular candidate, we do feel that by participating in today's vote, the community will do its part to send its message to politicians who have spent the last few months attempting to send us theirs.

And after receiving their message for the last few months, it's time for all of us to send our message to them.

Regardless of who wins the primary tomorrow, it is participation that will send messages to candidates, the kind of messages that will hopefully be listened to and acted upon.

Students, professors and staff all must head to the voting booths to make their positions known to the candidates who will eventually lead this nation into the dawning century.

Murder and no answers

On February 4, 1999, Amadou Diallo was shot and killed by four members of the NYPD Street Crimes Unit in the vestibule of his Bronx apartment. 41 bullets were fired at Diallo, 19 of which struck him.

These are the facts of the case. There is, of course, more to the story, but it is what we call speculation.

Another fact: on Feb. 25 of this year, Officers Sean Carroll, Edward McMellon, Kenneth Bass and Richard Murphy were acquitted of all charges against them by a jury of eight whites and four blacks in a trial which took place in Albany, N.Y. The trial took place in Albany, we are told, because authorities wished to avoid the "public clamor" which would have resulted if the officers were tried in the Bronx, or for that matter, anywhere in New York City.

Oh yes, I forgot to mention: Amadou Diallo was black. The officers who killed him were white.

The four police officers testified in court. All expressed remorse and acknowledged that a mistake was made. The mistake was that they thought Diallo's wallet was a gun, and so they shot at him 41 times before he had a chance to shoot them.

Diallo did not testify at the trial because he was dead.

Diallo, back in his breathing days, worked 12 hours a day, six or sometimes seven days a week, selling videos, socks, and gloves from a regular spot on 14th Street in Lower Manhattan. Every night he would take the subway back to the Bronx and go home to his Wheeler Ave. apartment, which he shared with two cousins and a friend. His father, once a street peddler himself, was a successful African businessman. Diallo had accompanied his father on a number of business trips around the world. Diallo wanted to go to America and make a life for himself there. He entered the country under the false pretense that he was fleeing ethnic cleansing in the West African nation of Mauritania, and that soldiers had killed his parents and beaten his uncle, none of which was true. Friends described him as genial and shy, possibly due to a childhood stutter. He was 22 when he died.

There are five people who know what happened on Wheeler Ave. just before 1 AM on Feb. 4. But perhaps that's not quite true either. Perhaps this is one of those situations in which things just happened and even the people involved aren't sure of the whats, hows, and whys of the matter. Perhaps it is all imperfect reconstruction after the fact. At any rate, one of the five men is dead, so we must look to the other four to fill us in.

Here's their take: Four members of the Street Crimes Unit, dressed in street clothes, were on patrol in the Bronx. They drove an unmarked car. At about 12:40 a.m., Officer Carroll noticed Diallo peering out from the stoop of a building and then "slinking" back in. Carroll thought he fit the description of a serial rapist who had last struck a year earlier. This is what Carroll told the court, although in the same testimony he also said that he could not even see Diallo well enough to determine his race, and that the reason that he decided to approach Diallo was because he thought he might be a look-out for a push-in robber.

Boomer Pinches

So already the matter of why exactly the four officers approached Diallo has become confused. Not even the officers themselves seem to know. The one thing they all agree on is that he was acting "suspiciously." Officer Carroll acknowledged on the stand that it never occurred to him that perhaps Diallo had a legitimate reason for being there, that it was even possible that he lived there, which, as it turned out, he did. Carroll also admits that he never stopped to consider how the situation might have looked from Diallo's perspective.

Of course, none of us can know how the situation looked from Diallo's perspective as he was shot 19 times and is now very dead. But we can try and imagine what it was like, because imagination is apparently the only courtroom in which Diallo will ever be able to testify.

Diallo spent 12 hours peddling his wares on Feb. 3 before packing up and going home. He got back to his apartment around midnight. He spent a few minutes discussing the details of the latest utility bill with one of his roommates, but it was too much of a headache after spending his entire day out in the cold trying to persuade passers-by to purchase a new pair of gloves, or a pirated VHS tape.

So he goes outside. Maybe he needs some air. Maybe he has a headache and his apartment feels cramped. Maybe he smokes a cigarette. Every now and then, he sticks his head out to look up and down the deserted street, just to see if anything's going on. Maybe his neighborhood has always made him a little nervous.

He sees a car coming slowly down the street. Maybe it makes him a little nervous. Why would a car be going that slow? Then the car stops right in front of his apartment and four big white guys with guns get out. So he panics. He turns to run back inside. The men yell for him to stop, to get his hands out where they can see them. Diallo reaches into his pocket to dig out his wallet. Maybe he thinks the men are robbing him and hopes that by handing his wallet over he can avoid getting hurt. Maybe it occurs to him that the men are police and he is getting his wallet out so that he can identify himself. He turns around to face them there in the vestibule of his apartment and they open fire on him. A short barrage of gunshots, then a pause, then another longer barrage until two of the officers' guns are empty and a total of 41 shots have been fired.

Diallo has no idea why they're shooting him. Maybe he tries to make sense of the whole thing as he slumps back against the door, which is now splintered and bullet-riddled. Maybe he is thinking about the utility bill as he falls to the ground, or of his parents, or of a song he heard that morning which has been stuck in his head all day. Maybe everything is numb and cold and he doesn't think of anything at all. A man is holding his head, squeezing his hand, saying, "Oh God, don't die." There is no way of knowing whether or not Diallo hears him, or whether or not he realizes that this is the same man who fired the first shot at him. If any of these things pass through his mind, they do so quickly because it does not take a man long to die when he has 19 bullets in him.

The four police officers have all expressed remorse over their "mistake." I suspect that their remorse is genuine, and that while all of them were members of an urban police force, which has a long and established history of racial profiling, they are probably not evil men. But they killed a man. Whether you think it was murder or manslaughter, their mistake cost an innocent man his life. They killed an unarmed man who was doing nothing more than standing on his doorstep, and they faced absolutely no consequences. They fired 41 shots, far too many for any reasonable act of self-defense. Most likely they fired because he was black, and had his hand in his pocket, and lived in a less-than-peaceful neighborhood, and because they were trained to see such a person as dangerous by the Street Crimes Unit, whose motto is "We Rule The Night." They fired because, in the words of Al Sharpton (who, very surprisingly, has been pretty much dead-on in his criticism of how the Diallo case was handled), "...many white cops come into the city thinking that they're going into the jungle to tame animals rather than to serve the people."

Rudy Giuliani, the man who is almost single-handedly responsible for New York City's gradual, not-yet-complete transformation into a police state, had this to say: "It fills me with profound respect for being an American and for living in a country that has a trial by jury."

Amadou Diallo wanted to be an American too. But the America he found was one in which there are no trials by jury. There are only white men with guns who can fire 41 shots at man, leave him dead on his doorstep, and face no consequences for it.

Boomer Pinches is a Collegian Columnist

Sweet revenge on evil phones

Smash your cell phone, or I will.

The amazing technology in our culture today may be getting the better of the human race. Case in point: cell phones. I really hate cell phones. I don't dislike them because they've become some kind of status symbol. I don't dislike them because their rings are so damned irritating. And I don't even dislike them for encouraging people to discontinue direct interaction with other humans, instead opting for communication solely through modems and fiber optics. In actuality I don't hate cell phones, what I really despise is the people who use them.

Carla Costa

There are the women in supermarket checkout lines chatting away, or the men who nearly run me off the road when they realize they are not only talking on their mobile phone but driving their cars as well. Then there are the people who are a special kind of stupid - the ones who bring their cell phones to class. I can't even begin to imagine who these students think they are: Power brokers? Divas? Movie executives? What they really are is moronic, not to mention rude. The funny part is that they smile as their phone jingles out a grating little tune that usually sounds like it was composed on a children's Casio keyboard. Suddenly, the professor stops speaking, sleeping students shift in their chairs, and I, well, I shake my fist at them in disgust. They behave as though nothing is wrong, laughing coyly as they turn the ringer off. Well, guess what? You just wasted approximately 20 of the 50 dollars we pay for each class period. That's throwing away more of my money than "that kid." You know, the one who always feels the need to speak but can never seem to construct an intelligent or relevant statement.

I admit there are exceptions to the rule. Cell phones can come in handy if you're stranded roadside or in some other sort of emergency. Sometimes I even break down and use a cell phone. It's perfectly acceptable to take advantage of our technological resources but vital that we don't abuse them. Technology should be treated like thunderstorms- admired but feared. It is key that we don't waste our advances as a means of creating a society where rudeness and the inability to interact with other human beings are acceptable.

Recently I came across a few other people who share my sentiments on cell phones and are willing to take it to the next level. They are called Phone Bashers and I found them while taking advantage of my technological resources by "surfing the web," as the kids call it. Their web site is www.phonebashing.com and here is what Phone Bashers do: they watch people who are being rude or irritating when using their cell phones.

Then two of them, dressed in man-size mobile phone costumes, attack the cell phone user, grabbing their phone and smashing it as they slam it against the pavement or stomp on it full force. The web site includes six short video clips of the Phone Bashers in action and proclaims that, "all the people concerned are real members of the public and no one was refunded for the loss of their mobile telephone. Shame!"

"Then there are the people who are a special kind of stupid - the ones who bring their cell phones to class. I can't even begin to imagine who these students think they are: Power brokers? Divas?"

The six Phone Grabs are quite the comedic experience and each one is worth watching. Once you've seen them it will be easy to understand what it takes to be a Phone Basher. First is patience; for their first grab the Bashers clocked a guy for half an hour before totaling his phone on a train. "He was being really loud and obnoxious," states the blurb above the video clip, "check out the phone stamp! It bounces right up and hits him on the leg. Try slowing that part down." I guess it's safe to say that this web page is not exactly for the bleeding hearts out there.

Phone Bashers also place themselves in potentially dangerous situations in order to achieve their mission. As was the case with their third victim who chased the two giant phones for about half a mile before he caught one. "But then for some reason," reads the blurb, "he just let him go. A lucky escape!" Other times the situation is not so volatile. Their fifth Grab was an attack on a woman who was "nattering on her phone" while getting a haircut.

The Phone Bashers are shameless about the fact that they always have an advantage with the element of surprise. "There is nothing worse than a hippy chick with a mobile phone," reads the blurb for Grab number four. "This one was enjoying a nice pint of cider when retribution struck. Lucky for us that she was wearing platform shoes or we might not have made it."

Seeing Phone Bashers made me smile. It was retribution for my near-accidents and wasted twenty dollars. The whole concept borders on brilliance. It is, after all, what most of us want to do to someone abusing their cell phone- take the thing and smash it on the ground until it is crushed to smithereens. Okay, so not most of us, but I'm sure there are some of us. So I'm sending out a warning to all you obnoxious cell phone users: If I were you I'd leave my cell phone at home, in my bag, or turned off. Those of you who do choose to clamor away on your mobile phone, be afraid, be very afraid. You never know when some crazy dressed up in a man-size mobile phone costume will come along and crush it to bits. Or worse yet, it could be me.

Carla Costa is a UMass student.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Sam Wilkinson Managing Editor Shawn Ilnitch Business Manager
Ben Alamed Web Developer Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager
Sage Brousseau Co-Advertising Production Manager Jake Lilien Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor Joslyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor Christine Connare Women's Issues Editor
Alexis Pashkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor Marc Mencher Finance Manager
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor Joshua Szymanski Distribution Manager
Jake Lilien Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Katie Beith Promotions Manager
Jeanie Gorlovsky Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Catherine Turner International Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Position Vacant Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Mary Grein News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Kara Stokes Photography Editor Chris Brennan Assistant Finance Manager
Adam White Co-Sports Editor Eric Faber Assistant Advertising Manager
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor Amy Gargarita Assistant Business Manager

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Sigma Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

International Affairs

No help for Mozambique flood victims

Let's talk about rain. No, let's talk about flooding. Lots of flooding. How much would it suck if all of a sudden the Connecticut river flooded and filled the Pioneer Valley with enough water to soak the books on the second floor of the library? The people living in the five-college area would be greatly inconvenienced, to say the least.

And what if the UMass campus was flooded with hundreds of millions of gallons of muddy water, drowning fellow classmates and virtually cutting us off from the rest of the state, if not the country. Then what would we do? We'd starve, we'd freeze, and we'd be in desperate need of assistance.

Catherine Turner

"More people are going to die from drowning, starvation and disease in this one crisis than will die in the U.S. in 10 years."

This is what is happening in Mozambique right now, right as you read this column. In the past three weeks, the country has been ravaged by floods, which have killed at least 150 people and left thousands homeless. All of the power lines are down, roads are mud, bridges are out and buildings have washed away.

Remember the devastation caused by the severe flooding in the Midwest about five years ago? Farms in Iowa are just getting back on their feet. Mozambique has been paralyzed, but will not recover swiftly like the states of this country.

The president of the small African country stated that he thought that the country would need at least $250 million a year until its residents are able to harvest another crop. And that's just the beginning. Aid from several countries is already 'flooding' into the country, but as devoted as relief efforts are, they are not enough. Children are starving. The rain is preventing helicopters from getting medical supplies, food and temporary shelters to the people.

The situation is getting worse by the hour too. People are breaking out with cholera, typhoid and malaria.

The saddest part of this entire situation is that we as students can't really do anything to help. If Western Massachusetts was drowned by tropical storms, it wouldn't be too long before massive efforts by the U.S. National Guard, the Red Cross and other organizations within the country came to our beckon call, providing us with all the food and warm dry clothes that we needed. They'd probably find a way to conduct classes in the water. But Mozambique doesn't have the resources that we do.

Mozambique was already a poor country, and now it is even poorer. But we'll never really know what that's like, because we all attend a public university on the East Coast of the richest, most protected, sheltered country in the world. And though we'd all love to roll up our khakis and put on some Gorotex hip boots and go and tromp in the mud to help (and get a week off of school), that's never going to happen. More people are going to die from drowning, starvation and disease in this one crisis than will die in the U.S. in 10 years.

As hegemon of the world, we're obligated to intervene in the affairs of other countries. However, though our intentions may be grand, let's be honest: we can't help these people-the rain is just going to keep falling.

Catherine Turner is a Collegian columnist.

Studying abroad getting popular with UMass students

By Emily Oka
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts ranks seventh among the top public research universities in the rate of students studying abroad, and the number of such students is still rising, according to the survey conducted by the International Program Office (IPO).

Maryelise S. Lamet, director of education abroad, who has been working at the IPO since 1978, compared the participation rate of UMass students in the study abroad program with those of other top public research universities. The result showed that UMass, with 14.7 percent of a typical class or 684 students studying abroad in 1997-1998, ranked number seven.

"What's exciting is that the number of students going abroad is not going down," Lamet said. In fact, the rate rose to 18.5 percent or 798 students in 1998-1999.

UMass has exchange programs with about 65 exchange universities abroad, up from about 35 in 1980 and about 50 in 1990, according to Lamet. One of the new exchange agreements this year was the one with Fudan University in Shanghai, China. "We are now working on establishing an exchange program with South East Asia or the Philippines," study abroad coordinator for Asia, Laurel E. Foster-Moore said.

But the growing number of students studying abroad is not only due to the increase of full-year-exchange programs.

"We are growing on different types of programs," Lamet said, pointing out the variety of summer programs and short-term programs, which are offered as a part of departments' courses. Such programs include the Journalism 397 course, which takes students to Sicily, Italy, during the spring break; School of Management course in Northern Ireland during the spring break; Hotel, Restaurant and Travel Administration course, which takes place in the British Virgin Islands in January, as well as some others.

UMass students also go abroad on non-UMass programs. In 1998-1999, 230 students participated in non-UMass programs to study abroad for a semester or a year, according to the IPO.

Daniel Young, a senior English major, went to Spain last spring semester through a program offered by Council which is one of the largest international education organizations. He is now working at IPO's Study Abroad Advising Center, where he found his exchange program at that time, counseling students who are interested in going abroad.

He lived with a family, and that enabled him to improve his conversation skills as well as experience the local culture, including the food.

"It was probably the best thing I've done at UMass," Young said referring to his semester in Spain. "I learned so much outside the class, which you can only experience if you live in the country," he said.

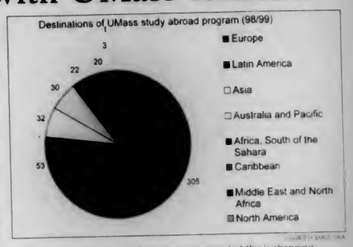
As an advisor for students interested in going abroad, Young said that the major concerns of the students who stop by at the Advising Center are whether they can graduate on time, whether they can fulfill the requirements, and whether they can afford the cost of studying abroad. "It depends on the person and the program," he said.

The cost of studying abroad, however, could be an issue for some students, especially for the in-state students, Young said. For example, those who wish to study in Japan need a $10,000 bank statement.

"The financial barrier is quite high," Foster-Moore said.

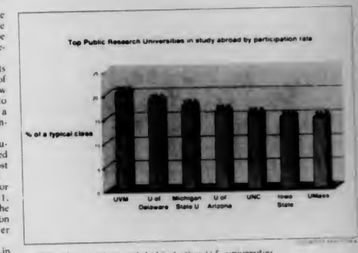
However, UMass exchange programs keep the costs roughly equivalent to those of UMass itself, except for transportation. Also, most of the financial aid that students receive in the United States can be used for the study abroad period. In addition, there are some scholarships specifically for study abroad.

The most popular study abroad destinations for UMass students are United Kingdom, Ireland, Australia and Spain.



"I want to push students to go to foreign language speaking countries because if the language is different, the culture will be even more different," Young said. "Don't be afraid. Almost everybody comes back with incredible experiences," he said.

To apply for a UMass study abroad program, students have to fulfill the basic requirements, such as a GPA of approximately 3.0, and they also must have an interview with the coordinators. "The purpose of the interview is to make sure that the first choice of the student would be a good match, and to check if the student is a good representative," Foster-Moore said.



There are more exchange offers than the number of students applying, Lamet said. "We can send any qualified student that wants to go. Each student can go to the most appropriate place for his or her major and goal," she said.

The deadline for the study abroad program varies. For most of the UMass exchanges, the deadline was March 1, but if there are openings, students might still apply. The deadline for China and Taiwan is March 15, the London Internship Program March 24, the Oxford Summer Seminar March 31, and Spain is April 1.

"Although the number is limited, if you are interested in going abroad next fall semester, now is the time to come to our office," Lamet said.

Students tend to travel to European countries, but this is changing

UMass is ranked seventh behind other U.S. universities.

China catches the wave and rides the web

By Carrie Sheffield
Collegian Correspondent

China's communist leaders in Beijing may have their hands full dealing with the upcoming elections in Taiwan, but they have not relinquished any control over business affairs in their own state. China has recently been hit with what TIME Magazine calls "Web Mania" and the bureaucrats in Beijing are trying their hardest to regulate the Internet explosion that is ensuing.

In 1998, China's Internet was in its infancy, with fewer than 1 million users. Now, only two years later 10 million people have signed on, making the Net the fastest growth in Asia with the number of users doubling every six months. There are 50,000 Chinese domain names and some estimate that by 2005 China will have the second largest population of web users in the world, right behind the U.S.

Such a capital explosion would delight most governments, but it terrifies the Beijing officials. They fear the Net will choke their power over the masses. "It is a dilemma for bureaucrats," says Duncan Clark, a partner in BDA. "If they don't open up to the Net, they lose the economy. If they do open up, they lose control over society."

The Chinese bureaucrats have attempted different ways to restrain the subversive ideas of the Net-surfers while hanging on to the principal and until now their attempts had failed. Beijing has been figured out when the Net is most vulnerable: its appetite for capital. Insiders fear that the government agencies involvement with the Internet will create the potential for fraud. For the time being, the biggest hurdle for the Chinese Internet market is the government's "policy issue." Victor Koo, senior vice president of Sohu stated, "We saw this coming. I think people are overreacting to the announcements. The government's drawing up of regulations, he believes, "is an ongoing process that people in the business know is evolving. We have to find a way to work around it."

Despite

being reprimanded by their government the dotcoms keep pushing forward. Netease.com and Sohu.com want to list on the NASDAQ this spring. The government in Beijing is dragging its feet, it doesn't want to give public approval to the two firms and has blocked the IPO of a third contender, and Sina.com. Chinas largest Internet Company.

Chinas top graduates have been flocking to U.S. universities to further study in fields such as computer software and break into the million-dollar market, but recently that has changed. The best of the best are moving to the Haidian district in northwest Beijing. Haidian is home to a long strip of computer hardware and software stores where these young grads can cheaply rent out a room in an abandoned factory or building site and with a few borrowed computers become a dotcom overnight. The average salary in Haidian for a university grad with elementary computer knowledge is about $1,000 a month. Students returning from U.S. high-tech and consulting firms are commanding $100,000 annual salaries.

The Internet is also spurring a sense of nationalism among the young Net entrepreneurs who think that the Internet can help them draw the level of the West. "This is the first time we Chinese see a way we can catch up. It's a new industry defining the new century. Just like the auto industry defined the Japanese economy-if you catch the wave, you can move the whole country forward." said Jack Ma head of Alibaba a business to business electronic commerce site.

The optimism remains high that the government will not dump the web servers from riding on the escalating Internet wave. "The Internet will bring major political change to China," says Charles Zhang of Sohu. "But it will be gradual, as people have more information at their fingertips." The entrepreneurs are hopeful, and ready to battle for the benefits their Internet.

Refugees suffering all over the world

By Shawna Magarik
Collegian Correspondent

The world tends to focus on a few refugee tragedies at a time, such as East Timorese escaping rampant violence and ethnic Albanians driven from Kosovo. But the refugee crisis is larger and more persistent than what is shown to, or known by, the public eye.

Worldwide, the United Nations counts more than 11 million people as refugees. Another 17 million or more are displaced within their own countries. The United Nations, individual countries and non-governmental organizations attempt to settle disputes, help the displaced and repatriate people.

Refugees, as defined by the United Nations, are those who must flee their country "because of a well-founded fear of persecution for reasons of race, religion, nationality, political opinion, or membership in a particular social group, and who cannot or do not want to return." Asylum seekers are those whose "application for refugee status are pending a host nation."

Although Kosovar Albanians captured headlines last year, relatively few of the world's refugees are in Europe. Most are Asian, primarily victims of conflict in Afghanistan or fighting in the Middle East.

Thrown into turmoil since the Soviet invasion of 1979, Afghanistan has spawned 2.6 million refugees. Hundreds of thousands more are displaced within Afghanistan. Most have been forced from their homes by the fighting between Taliban forces and other political factions. Recently, women have left to escape harsh policies that deny them education, work, and healthcare.

In the Middle East, Palestinians are the largest group of refugees in the world, reaching 3.6 million this year. A third of these refugees still live in camps constructed after the 1948 Arab-Israeli War, set up in the West Bank, the Gaza Strip, and in Jordan, Lebanon, and Syria.

Struggling from war and ethnic clashes, the people of Yugoslavia and Bosnia have faced one national displacement after another since the disintegration of the former Yugoslavia. Regional leaders, most recently Slobadan Milosevic, have used ethnic distrust as a means of achieving power. This has led to repeated violence, military occupation and ultimately ethnic cleansing as people were forced to leave their homes or risk being killed.

In Columbia, fighting between government forces and armed rebels has displaced nearly 1.5 million civilians in recent years. One in 40 has to leave their home. Thousands more have fled to other countries. The Horn of Africa since the 1960s has been engaged in wars, famine and clan feuds that have killed about 3 million people in the region.

Today, there are about 1.1 million refugees. The camps these refugees live in are usually in a harsh place to live. Disease runs rampant and there is often a scarcity of food. When the camps are first set up, thousands usually die.

There is a lot of international generosity for these refugees and asylum seekers. On a strictly cash basis, no nation comes close to matching the United States' contributions to international refugee-aid agencies (although, per person, several countries outdo the United States). Many countries focus sums of money on specific refugee problems, such as refugees' impact on the environment and the issues facing refugee children.

Pinochet returns home

By Steven Barg
Collegian Correspondent

Former Chilean dictator General Augusto Pinochet returned to Chile on Friday, after a 503-day house arrest in Britain. Pinochet was detained there after the Spanish government petitioned for his extradition to Spain, where he would face charges of human rights abuses against Spaniards in Chile. Eventually, British officials deemed the General unfit to stand trial due to poor health.

His return to Chile was marked by celebrations and protests demonstrating the polarizing effect he still has on Chile. The majority of Chileans want to see him stand trial in their own country. But a significant minority reveres the aging General as the country's savior from communism.

General Pinochet seized power through a military coup in 1973, at a time when the country was suffering greatly under the socialist rule of Salvador Allende. Allende was elected in 1970, promising much needed social and economic changes in Chile. The vast majority of Chileans were lower-class citizens, while the wealthy few and international corporations reaped large profits with its export industry tailored for quick earnings with little regard for real economic development. Allende fought to change that situation by nationalizing several industries and increasing social programs.

This brought severe repercussions from the oligarchy in Chile and the large corporations, mainly U.S. companies. Both these groups who benefited from his policies. The Chilean military is still strongly behind General Pinochet, it was the military that organized the celebration for his homecoming.

Britain's judgement to release Pinochet for poor health was questioned after his relatively lively homecoming. Also, the silence of the US concerning the case has fueled mans accusations. Both countries may be hesitant to incriminate the leader who once had their full support.

Pinochet represents the exploitation that was widespread in Latin America. Now the world trend seems to be pushing for economic development of the masses. For that to happen, the old orders must be dismantled, and Pinochet's prominence may yet be erased with them.

Interested in writing for International Affairs?

Come down to the Collegian and ask for Catherine

Arts & Living

Your Guide to all that's going on in the Pioneer Valley

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Tuesday, March 7, 2000

AC/DC still rocking hard

By Rob Schulze
Collegian Staff

AC/DC
Stiff Upper Lip
Eastwest

It is amazing how a sound which is well over 25 years old can be so, so... revolutionary.

I mean it. Stiff Upper Lip, AC/DC's 17th album, comes across like a breath of fresh air, like something totally and shockingly original. It isn't, of course – it's the same sound that's been featured on each and every AC/DC album over the years, which is probably why it sounds so completely new. AC/DC has changed by staying the same – probably the only band to ever do so. And it works like a magic, guitar-fueled revolution.

Allow me to state why Stiff Upper Lip is such a gunshot in the rock market of the year 2000.

1. AC/DC sings about sex and women. So what? Lots of bands sing about that. I heard Korn, Staind, Godsmack, Limp Bizkit, Jimmie's Chicken Shack and about a million other bands on the radio sing about sex and women the other day. And this is true. The big, monstrous and possibly (in this day and age) criminal difference is this: AC/DC thinks that sex and women are good. Their songs aren't about being molested or raped or abused or angry or exploited or dumped or making someone Fing go away. Their songs, and I want you to follow me closely here, equate sex with fun. Not just fun for men, either – the women in these songs seem to have a pretty good time too, and nobody ever gets hurt. Now tell me that isn't something brand new.

2. AC/DC plays rock 'n roll. The band does not rap. It does not play keyboards. It does not employ a DJ, drum machine, sampler or Puff Daddy. AC/DC's producer is the guitarist's relative. Each song features at least one guitar solo and a chorus, which usually is repeated over the guitar solo. This is the first time I have heard anything like this since, well, the last AC/DC album when I was a sophomore in high school.

3. This music is not intended to alienate anybody. If everybody in the world was an AC/DC fan (as should certainly be the case) I get the feeling that the band would be just fine with that. Certainly this album isn't going to be a splash with feminists or anything, but that isn't the point – if feminists decided to like this album, the band wouldn't consider themselves a failure because they weren't scaring anybody (boogedy boogedy boo).

4. There is not a single song about space aliens or vampires.

So there you have it about the sound in general. But what about this album in particular? Well, the instrumental performances are superb-o. Throughout the album the drums, courtesy of Phil Rudd (who rejoined the band in 1994 after a decade off raising sheep in New Zealand) are constantly amazing for their simplicity and total effectiveness. 'Boom boom boom,' go the drums, just like that, and if you think I am exaggerating, you really haven't been paying attention to this review. These drums supply beats you can equally well bang your head and dance to, and all without a second bass drum, if you can believe it. Malcom Young's rhythm guitar is the driving force behind the album, as usual, and the riffs are still amazing: heavy, bluesy, and infectious – you will be humming these songs later. Angus' solos are still faster than light and fitting perfectly in with the songs, as is Cliff Williams' bass attack (for a reference as to how the bass sounds on this album, see the description of the drums). Brian Johnson's vocals really shine on this effort, as he regains some of the oomph he had lost prior to vocal chord surgery he had after the band's last tour. His totally unique, high-pitched shriek practically explodes from the speakers, and keeps that great contrast with the low, guttural background vocals.

As for individual songs, the first single Stiff Upper Lip is a great way to start the album off, with a heavy sound and lyrics like "I warn you ladies, I shoot from the hip. I keep a stiff... (longish pause) stiff upper." (Ah, sweet innuendoes.) "Can't Stop Rock n' Roll," a prophecy which may or may not be fulfilled, sounds much how you would expect a song called "Can't Stop Rock 'n Roll" to sound – that is, really really good. "If You Want It" is just the kind of classic AC/DC song that we all love and expect, the kind that will make junior-high boys (and every other boy, actually) high-five each other and giggle, because I think we all know what the "it" in the song title is, plus the song features the line "If you're gonna blow me, do it right!"

The best song on the album, by far, is "All Screwed Up." With the best guitar action of any AC/DC song in a long damn time, possibly forever, infectious and literally perfect drums, and screaming vocals about everything being screwed up, this song is blistering. It is worth paying the money just for the absolute privilege of listening to "All Screwed Up," and that is simply the truth. A++

A look at men's mags: part one

By Michael Delano
Collegian Staff

This is the first of a two-part series on the atrocity that is men's magazines.

I try, and try to show my friends, who firmly believe that Maxim is the greatest magazine ever printed, the error of their ways. But since they refuse to listen, and I can no longer watch them throw away their hard-earned money and brain cells, I have enlisted The Collegian to help my cause. My mission is not only to cure my friends from the disease that is reading Maxim, but to stop anyone who reads this glossy toilet paper from wasting another moment of their way-too-short-for-Maxim lives. And to prove my words worthy of a spot in this fine periodical, I myself traveled deep into the belly of the beast. I had to swallow my pride, walk into a bookstore, and buy Maxim magazine, an experience that is, unfortunately, all too familiar to me.

Yes, I once bought Maxim on a regular basis and, god help me, subscribed to the magazine at one time. I thought the mag had it all: tips on how to meet women, pictures of half-naked chicks and, well ...pictures of half-naked chicks. That was the extent of Maxim's substance a few years ago, and today nothing has changed. About halfway through my subscription I realized that Maxim is really nothing more than the weakest magazine on the planet.

My realization eventually came, and hopefully by reading this, if you are among the afflicted, yours will come too. Like every man on his way to adulthood must realize that professional wrestling is fake and there are other forms of music besides heavy metal, so too must he realize that Maxim sucks hard. But whereas wrestling is fun to watch and the world needs heavy metal, the world sure as hell doesn't need Maxim.

Since I already knew, but couldn't convince anyone, that Maxim was the biggest floater in the constantly expanding toilet bowl of men's magazines, I set out to prove that fact. The fact that among all of the other crappy men's mags, which are very crappy, Maxim manages to be the crappiest. So I walked up to the counter with my pride standing next to me with his face in his hands and plunked down next to the cash register the March issue of Maxim as well as two of its peers, Gear and Details. Over ten dollars worth of paper, over 500 pages of useless crap plus the priceless look on the female clerk's face that said, "Man, you're hopeless." She quickly scanned them and put them into a white paper bag, like they were porn and didn't want any of the other customers to have to see them. Which brings me to a point: porn is better, and more respectable, than Maxim.

Playboy, Penthouse and Hustler all promise, at the least, one thing: naked women. And they deliver on that promise, something that Maxim can't claim. You see, men have the basic need to see naked women whenever possible, but they also have the need to not look like an idiot asking for a Playboy, which they shouldn't feel embarrassed about, but that is how society works. From my standpoint, guys read Maxim for only two reasons: tips on how to meet girls and pictures of girls in various states of undress. If you read Maxim for any other reason, like for film or music reviews, you can just stop reading this article because you are too far gone for me to offer any kind of help. Maxim features girls that are almost naked, but aren't, so needless to say Maxim is a big fan of the "arm over the breasts" shot. And the pictures in Maxim have no other purpose than to make you wish the girls were naked (believe me, you won't admire the silly cloth ing or bland photography), so it's all a pointless game. Maxim is basically for the gentleman who is just too classy to buy a filthy Playboy and would much rather ogle women in the more refined pages of a "respectable" men's magazine. But if ogling's your game, and it is, just go all the way, grab the Playboy, and don't waste time on Maxim's half-assed substitute.

I know what you're saying: you know what you are getting into when you buy Maxim, so if you don't like it don't buy it. That's fine with me, I just wish I saw more people taking this all or nothing approach. In my opinion, Maxim is the one that should be wrapped in plastic and hidden behind the counter. And whereas the March 2000 Gear magazine features an actress, Jessica Biel, whom you most likely won't see posing in other magazines, Maxim has on their March cover, drum roll please... Jenny McCarthy! Wow, what an exclusive. Let's feature clothed shots of someone who has posed nude so often that you could probably find one of her nude shots in an encyclopedia under her name.

As painful as it is to defend Gear magazine, when pitted against Maxim it comes off looking like War and Peace to Maxim's The Pledge. The photography is infinitely better, compare the beige/blue contrast of Gear's cover to the sight of a ghostly pale McCarthy (accentuated by the classy black plastic,) against a generic grey background. In fairness, however, the horrendous March Details cover is the worst of the bunch. Gear's Q&A with Oasis is well done, although then feature story writing is a little uneven. Of course, it shines compared to Maxim's McCarthy interview, which features such thought-provoking questions as "Would you eat a bowl of crickets for $100,000?" and "What's your favorite lunch meat." For the answers to these mindbenders, be sure to check out the second installment of my Maxim lovefest.

Coming next installment:
Mike met Maxim's can't miss dating strategies and gets slapped repeatedly

COURTESY MAXIM MAGAZINE

Super-Sexy Jenny McCarthy graces the cover of Maxim.

COURTESY JOHNNOLET MCPHEE

Matt Johnson, the creative backbone of the inconveniently named but nonetheless talented The The.

The The's newest a gem

By Lisa Metcalf
Collegian Staff

After a five year hiatus, The The is back, lead by Matt Johnson, the only member of the group who hasn't changed. Their latest album, and first away from the Sony label is entitled Naked Self. Recently The The signed to the Nothing label, amidst a group that includes Nine Inch Nails, Marilyn Manson, and Pop Will Eat Itself.

Unlike most of The The's contemporaries' newer albums, The The's Naked Self steers away from the new electronic trend and takes a less computerized approach. Without the use of keyboards, samplers, and sequencers The The is able to deliver a hard-edged and melodic piece of Matt Johnson's soul.

Since forming The The in 1979 Matt Johnson has been the driving force behind the band. He has seen seven albums circulate since his debut Burning Blue Soul hit the shelves in 1981. In this time The The has also worked with singers like Nench Cherry and Sinead O'Connor.

The The's sound has experimented in pop, folk, country, and of course rock, all the while keeping a cynical eye on various issues like war, relationships and a range of social issues. Naked Self takes a stab at the spread of the capitalist ideology in both "Global Lives" and "Swine Fever." Lacking the personal nature of the majority of the album, he makes up the loss in his passion against the subject producing clever hooks, riffs and catchy lyrics like "Swine Fever's," "Don't even like it/ But you've just got to try it", and posing the question, "What is the point of selling your soul/ When there's nothing to buy/ And nowhere to go."

Most of the album takes an introspective look at his life in stories based in both the first and third person. He spins dismal tales of everyday life and relationships in "Soul Catcher," "Shrunken Man" and "The Wisperers," letting us see into Johnson's psyche with lyrics like "So what will I regret the most/ The things I do or the things I don't?" as well as "And wondering if it's fear of loneliness or love/ That keeps people like that together/ Forever..." There are lighter tales of spiritual and emotional catharsis in "December Sunlight" a story about a woman who's turning from her sullen situation to one of more hope and freedom. "But now she's changing the way she feels/ About wasting her time and tears."

The The's latest still carries the same mood as Dusk from 1992. Naked Self is a stirring composition, combining many of the elements from his past albums while updating some of his sound to stay novel, creating an auspicious package. The mood he creates is one of a quiet pensive solitude, perfect for a lonely evening.

COURTESY MISS TEEN ALL AMERICAN

Jenna Edwards, Miss Teen All American 1999

Teenage girls interested in objectifying themselves and perpetuating archaic and despicably chauvinistic ritual can request additional pageant information at teenallam@aol.com

Third World Cop proves to be disjointed sountrack

Third World Cop
Motion Picture Soundtrack
Palm Pictures

The beauty of dancehall music in America is that it is primarily delegated as an "underground" sound. With a few exceptions ("Who Am I?," "Everyone Falls in Love...," "Heads High") reggae remains music of its own culture, pulsating with the fervor and hostility of urban angst. It is sonic politics and often the voice of detestation and pornography. Still unlike hip-hop, techno, house, trance etc., dancehall has admirably sustained anonymity from popular society...perhaps until now.

Aligning itself with Jimmy Cliff's Harder They Come (1971), Third World Cop seeks to reposition Jamaica at the musical and cinematic center of the pop cult cosmos. The remarkable aspect of Cliff's grainy film and opulent soundtrack was how each corrected the culture and plight of ghetto poverty, balanced by unyielding hope of the times. Nearly three decades later, a collaboration of actors and musicians assembled to update the realities of Harder They Come.

International producers Sly Dunbar (drums) and Robbie Shakespeare (bass) handle the instrumental work, crafting potent dub-styled melodies and theme music for the movie. However, unlike Cliff's superlative efforts, Third World Cop is considerably Americanized with the intention of attracting accessibility.

"Dungle Boogie," which explicitly replicates Kool and the Gang's similarly titled banger, is a prime example. The song, featuring Jamaica's most prominent lyricist Beenie Man, moves efficiently but hardly captures any Caribbean flavor.

Many of the songs suffer from the same plague. The embarrassingly poor "Fake Names" by Tanto Metro and Mega Banton sounds more like a Bad Boy wannabe demo recorded on a boom box in downtown Kingston. Red Dragon's "We Run Tings" is plainly farcical and barely qualifies as reggae. Albeit the efforts of Sly and Robbie, there is only a sparse selection of genuine dancehall and none of it is new. Andrew Bradford a.k.a. Buccaneer, the incredibly talented and operatic producer/toaster, lends the sizzling yet wornout anthem "Suca Numa" off his Warlord riddim; and, from the seemingly ancient Love Dem Bad riddim, Lady G comes with "Man a Bad Man." Strangely, the BUD'da remixes (which the liner notes claim are done by Dr. Dre, Onyx and Ice Cube) sound like hip-hop beats accompanied by rigorous patois. The always-energetic Innocent Crew gives us "Papers" which is backed by premium Dre production, and flosses with full-posse flagrance.

Nonetheless, Third World Cop proves it is "harder to come" with authenticity and update a classic soundtrack than it is to compile a disjointed collection of songs with a multitude of Babylonian influence. See the flick.

D+ (David Katzoff)

■ gym

continued from page 10

Over on the parallel bars, sophomore John Szymoyk had only a few breaks in his routine, giving him the second place score of 9.15 on the event. Freshman Ben Jacobs upgraded his rings routine and managed to score a career-high 9.25, tying him for fifth overall. And on high bar, despite a little trouble, junior Mike Alexander managed to swing his way to the second place spot with a 9.00.

Indeed there were many great scores posted throughout the meet, but that's nothing new. In fact, it is expected. But what UMass needs is just one great meet to move the team up in the national rankings. And Johnson looks to get that big score soon.

"We did O.K. this weekend, but we still haven't had a great meet," Johnson said. "Hopefully we can pull it together and score big this weekend."

COURTESY OF SID MILLER

UMass gymnast Jeff LaVallee (center) set two career highs to vault the Minutemen to victory.

■ tennis

continued from page 10

Meanwhile, the co-captains were able to capture their first wins of the weekend. Navarro, in the No. 2 slot, dominated Peter Harjes in the first set, 6-2, before Harjes was forced to retire. Samii was a straight set winner in the No. 5 slot, defeating Chris Chiu, 6-2, 6-2.

In No. 4 singles action, Shaw's weekend woes continued with his loss to Luan Nguyen. Champeau was a 6-4, 7-6 victor over Maryland's Dan Kenshalo, while Greenier was granted a default victory in the No. 6 slot, since victory for the Minutemen had already been clinched.

In doubles action, the Prisco/Navarro powerhouse proved too strong for Harjes and Nguyen, who lost a down-to-the-wire battle, 9-8. In the No. 2 slot, Samii and Shaw defeated Chou and Chiu, 8-5, while Champeau and Casesa were default victors.

While the Minutemen were able to end the road trip on a positive note, a 1-2 weekend was hardly what they had in mind. With memories of autumn glory no doubt still dancing in their heads, the freshly dethroned kings know all too well that the spring path to tennis royalty is littered with much more ominous foes. Whether they can reclaim their crowns remains to be seen.

■ track

continued from page 10

rest and prepare for the spring campaign.

One notable performance came from Hugh Reid, who placed third in his qualifying heat and twelfth overall in the 500-meter with a time of 1:04.53.

This time was not good enough to make the finals, which featured the top ten performers. Senior Kevin Somers also fared well, placing fourteenth in the 5000-meter with a time of 14:44.59.

Senior Matt Ely also had a good outing, placing fourth in his qualifying heat and eleventh overall in the 1000-meter, which left him two places shy of making the finals, which consisted of the top nine runners. His time of 2:28.49 was a season best.

The 4 x 400, 4 x 800, and distance medley relay teams had a lackluster weekend. O'Brien attributes this to the relentless pressure of the season having a draining effect on the younger players that make up most of the relay teams. Of the twelve relay runners, eight are freshmen or sophomores.

"We asked them to do a lot in the A-10 meet and the New England meet, and they were successful, but I think it took its toll on the younger kids and they showed signs of fatigue this weekend," he observed.

Next up for the Minutemen is a much anticipated breather, a week of rest and relaxation.

Then, the toil begins anew as training for the spring season commences—a fresh start, a new challenge, and perhaps less of an uphill battle for a team that has proved itself worthy of an upgrade from underdog to tried-and-true conference threat.

DO YOU WANT A JOB THAT MATTERS?

Fill out a Campus Career Center Daily Assignment Sheet

Pick up your assignments at the Campus Career Center by 2 p.m.

Complete your assignments by 4 p.m.

Get paid by 5 p.m.

Work when you want!

Apply in person at the Campus Career Center, Room 113, Student Union Building

MassMutual Financial Group's
Career Development Program
www.massmutual.com

Mass advantages for your future

VISIT US AT MASSMUTUAL.COM/COLLEGE

Choosing where to start your career is a big decision. Here's why you need to know about MassMutual. A leader in the fields of services industry, we offer customers a complete portfolio of life and disability income insurance, asset accumulation products and retirement and investment management services.

And we offer a world of career advantages right now, for you today — and for your future in-depth training, flex time, generous compensation packages and real opportunities for growth.

Some current openings at our regional MA & Hartford, CT offices:

- Claims Examiners
- Customer Service Analysts
- Human Resources Specialists
- Retirement Plan Services Analysts
- Securities Brokerage Specialists
- Underwriters

If you're a Year 2000 grad (or have equivalent experience), we're continuation/registration and we'll send you details. Interested? Then send your resume to us – you should talk to us!

We'll be on campus for an Info Session on March 6 from 7-9pm and on March 9 for interviews
Please contact your Career/Placement Office to set up an interview or email your resume to:
collegerecruiting@massmutual.com An Equal Opportunity Employer.

MassMutual FINANCIAL GROUP
THE BLUE CHIP COMPANIES®

PRESIDENTIAL PRIMARY ELECTION
Tuesday, March 7th

UMASS STUDENTS:
Registered to vote and unsure where to go?
Call the Amherst Town Clerk's Office

Call between the hours of:
Monday 8:00am - 4:30 pm
Tuesday 7:00am - 8:00pm

Any questions please feel free to contact:
Amherst Town Clerk's Office
256-4035

256-4035

NEW SOUTHWEST VOTERS:
Welcome to your polling place!
Vote in Hampden Dining Commons
Voting Hours: 7:00am - 8:00pm

Taipei & Tokyo
Chinese and Japanese RESTAURANT
Winner Best Japanese Restaran!
ADVOCATE ★ BEST ★ OF THE VALLEY READERS POLL 1997 1998 1999
Sushi Bar • Luncheon Specials
Dine In or Take Out • Gift Certificates
OPEN 7 DAYS
18 Main Street
Northampton, MA
(413) 582-1888

EXECUTIVE VALET PARKING
SERVING BRADLEY INT'L AIRPORT
1353 SOUTH ST (RT 75)
SUFFIELD CT
1800 - 218 - 1297
www.executivevalet.com/springbreak.htm

SPRING BREAK SPECIAL

$5.95 per day - $29.95 per week
(PLUS TAX)

- OPEN 24 HOURS
- SECURE & INSURED
- FREE SHUTTLE BUS
- SNOW & ICE REMOVED FROM CAR
- GUARANTEED PARKING SPACES WITH THIS AD.

ACCT #6916

DIRECTIONS:
I-91 EXIT 40 (BRADLEY INT'L). 2nd EXIT (Route 75) TURN RIGHT AND GO 2.5 MILES. EXECUTIVE ON LEFT JUST PAST TY'S SUBARU.

What's new for Spring Break?

ZANNA

Check it out on
www.zanna.com

How do I look for an off-campus apartment?

How do I sublet my apartment/ house for the summer?

Who is going to take over my lease?

Have questions?
The Apartment Guide has ANSWERS!
Issue date March 27th
Special classified section 20 cents/word taken at Collegian Newspaper Stand next to UStore

Collegian
Accounting Clerk
ALL MAJORS WELCOME TO APPLY

Work 8 hours per week, flexible scheduling

Must possess strong math and communication skills

Deadline for applications is today, March 10th

Contact Christine Carroll for more info
pick up applications in Rm. 113 in the Campus Center Basement

Alternative Spring Break
5 days in the Ozarks, MO
Meditation, Yoga, Music & Dance, Self discovery, Lots of Fun, Vegetarian Food.
$195 pre registration, rideshares
www.ru-students.cx
1-800-870 5348

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENT

CANTONES' PIZZA- for fast delivery to UMass see our menu and coupons at www.cantones.com

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Apply now for best locations. Amherst Center 1,2 and 3 bedroom apartments. Gas heat, hardwood floor. April showings for June and September. Lincoln Real Estate. No fees charged. 253-7879.

Apply now for best locations. 3 bedroom condos. Gas heat, hardwood floors, bright heated basement with study and laundry area. 1/2 mile to campus, on bus route. April showings for June and September. Lincoln Real Estate. No fees charged. 253-7879.

AUTO FOR SALE

'85 Dodge Ram Van. 132k miles, excellent running condition. $1,200 or b.o. 549-9491.

1980 Jetta rebuilt engine, new clutch, new brakes. Always starts. Runs like a demon. $600 586-0534.

AUTO FOR SALE

'87 Volvo Wagon. 180,000 miles auto, $1300.00 o/b/o 256-0776.

'92 Subaru Loyale wagon 4x4. Clean, runs great, air, power, roofrack. $2500.00 o.b.o. 665-0453.

COMPUTERS

Laptop blowout! Brand new IBM = Toshiba laptops! Now only $890. Don't miss out on this amazing deal. Supply is limited. infinity101@looksmart.com 546-7665.

EMPLOYMENT

COPYWRITER Part-time, student preferred. (413)536-5086 12-7pm.

Summer Employment; Outdoors. Weight loss/sports camp looking for energetic people to lead campers in a fun filled summer. Located in West Stockbridge, MA. in the heart of the Berkshires. Call for more information. Toll Free 877-FIT-CAMP. email marc@camp-kingsmont.com

Get paid $$ to surf the web cu2free-dom.com

EMPLOYMENT

Summer Camp Staff. Coed overnight camp in southern Maine seeks staff: Girls/Boys Unit Heads (21+); Camping Director (21+); swim, waterski and boating/sailing instructors; arts & crafts, photography, low ropes, athletics, theater, camping, newspaper, general counselors and office personnel. For information contact: Ava Goldman, Director, JCC Camp Kingswood, 333 Nahanton St, Newton, MA 02459, (617)244-5124 or email: info@kingswood.org

Movers: Local moving company is hiring individuals for moving positions. Flexibility and good attitudes are a must. Start at $8.00 per hour. Raise commensurate with performance. Call 584-4746.

Connect to the future. International company seeks PC users. $25-75k potential. 1-888-827-9733 www.roadforsuccess.com

EMPLOYMENT

Full and Part-time summer job opportunities available. Crabapple whitewater raft guides. No experience necessary. We will train. Must be athletic and hard working and have previous customer service experience. Afternoon trip co-ordinator. Requires previous customer service experience. Job involves greeting guests, managing retail store and co-ordinating afternoon river trips. Call 413-339-0188 for application and/or more information.

Get a head start on a hot INTERNET career with a cool, college-focused start up! BOLD-BRAIN.COM is looking for an energetic, entrepreneurial campus leader to market its website to students, campus organizations and local merchants. Must possess superior communication skills and knowledge of on/off campus life. Salary plus bonus. 10 hrs.+/wk. 6 weeks beginning 3/14. Full time opportunities potentially available. All majors welcome. Email resumes to Michele at BOLD-BRAIN.COM or fax (202)332-5195.

EMPLOYMENT

UAHC Crane Lake and Eisner Camps, Reform Jewish co-educational Camps located in the Berkshires of Massachusetts, seek qualified, dedicated counselors and specialists, including Waterfront, Athletics, Arts. Good salary, r&b included, travel assistance. Crane Lake Camp: Contact Brad Gerstle, 800-227-2660 ILUVCAMP@aol.com; www.cranelake-camp.com. Eisner Camp: Contact Louis Bordman, 212-650-4130 EISNERGUY@aol.com; www.eisner-camp.org

Exotic dancers Wanted. Earn $500-1000 weekly. Call Exotica 532-8888.

LOST & FOUND

Lost a black cd case with 23 cds. If found please call 546-4596. Thanks.

MISCELLANEOUS

Get paid to lose weight and inches. All natural, doctor reccommended. 1-800-397-7715.

Score big, score often with mybytes.com. Register today and get a free CD of cool music and much more.

WANTED

Beautiful 5 Bedroom House. 10 minutes from campus and on bus route. Call immediately! 256-2384.

ROOM WANTED

21/m looking for a place to stay. Now til 6/1. Call Nik @ 549-3826.

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

STEREO EQUIPMENT

Boston Acoustic sub/sat series. Six 8" speakers with two 16" subwoofers. Also central channel speaker. $800 value for $300. Like brand new. Need money 586-0534.

TRAVEL

Study Spanish. Internships in Guatemala. College Credit. www.casaxelaju.com (512)416-6991.

#1 Panama City Vacations! Party Beachfront @ The Boardwalk, Summit Condo's, and Mark II. 1-800-234-7007. www.endlesssummertours.com

#1 Spring break Vacations! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas & Florida! Book it now! All major credit cards accepted! 1-800-234-7007. www.endlesssummertours.com

SPRING BREAK 2000

Call The Collegian Classifieds Now at 545-3500 to get your ad put in the paper!!

Don't Fret!

Space is available for your ad in the Collegian

Just call 545-3500 for more info!

Call today!

Five College Community Calendar

TUESDAY, MARCH 7

Meeting – The UMass Ballroom Dance Club will meet at 8:30 p.m. in Totman 101.

Poetry – A poetry reading entitled "This is What It Has to Be" will take place in the Student Union Art Gallery from 7-9 p.m. Local women writers will read their works.

Workshop – A workshop on contraception and safer sex will be held in room 302 of University Health Services at 7 p.m. Anyone is welcome.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 8

Meeting – There will be a Mass Bike/Pioneer Valley special meeting on volunteer recruitment and training for Bike Week 2000 from 8-9 p.m. in the Cape Cod Lounge in the Student Union. There will be free pizza provided. Contact Nathan at 256-6465 or James at 586-4088 for more information.

Meeting – The Stuttering Support Group will meet at 7 p.m. in Arnold House room 11. Call Lisa at 577-4023 for more information.

Open House – There will be an open house and open mic night in the Graduate Lounge of the Campus Center from 7-10 p.m.

Speech – A speech entitled "Crossing Genders and Genres" will be given at 12:30 p.m. in Herter 301.

NOTICES

Community – Spring 2000 final examination schedules will be available beginning March 4. Copies will be delivered to students in residence halls, and will be available to off-campus students in the registrar's office. The schedule will be available on the Web beginning March 1.

Community – Mass Appeal, the newest co-ed a cappella group at UMass, is looking for students to arrange music. Email Erica at massappeal@mailcity.com for more information.

Community – Small Batch Records is looking for pictures of bands, people, venues and anything that captures the essence of the local music scene to display at a non-profit showcase this spring. For submissions contact Mike at Mikemac11@aol.com or Caleb at 587-3740 by March 5.

Help – From Feb. 15-April 13 on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays from 5-8 p.m. student volunteers from the School of Management will assist non-resident aliens with the preparation of their Federal and State income tax returns. Call 545-5660 for more information.

Nominations – Nominations are now open for the offices of President, Trustee, and all Area Governments Officers. Nomination forms may be signed out at the Student Government Association office in 420 Student Union, and are due by March 8.

Scholarships – The STARTING POINT Teaching scholars program is offering scholarships to students who are interested in exploring a career in K-12 math or science teaching. Students do not need to be enrolled in a certificate program to apply. Applications are due by April 1. Contact Johanna at 545-0626 for more information.

Support – A grief support group is available to all students who have experienced the death of someone they love. The groups are free, small and confidential, and meet on Wednesdays and Thursday evenings. Telephone pre-screening is required for enrollment. Call 577-5316 if interested.

Support – AL-ANON and ALATEEN are offering local meetings for those affected by someone else's drinking problem. Call 253-5201 for meeting times and locations.

Voting – A reminder to registered voters: A voter can only vote absentee due to absence from his/her residence community during polling hours, physical disability preventing the voter from going to a polling place, or religious belief. For more information call 256-4035.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day

BOOKBUCKS From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks, you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

Ustore CAMPUS CENTER

Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MARCH 7, 2000

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	½ Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ⓒ		Andre Rieu: 100 Years of Streuss (In Stereo) ⓒ				Audre McDonald In Concert ⓒ		Nova "Coma" (In Stereo) ⓒ
WFSB	3	3 News ⓒ	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	JAG "Rogue" (R) (In Stereo) ⓒ		60 Minutes II (In Stereo) ⓒ		Judging Amy "Witch Hunt" ⓒ		News ⓒ	Late Show ⓒ
WBZ	4	4 News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	JAG "Rogue" (R) (In Stereo) ⓒ		60 Minutes II (In Stereo) ⓒ		Judging Amy "Witch Hunt" ⓒ		News	Late Show ⓒ
WCVB	5	5 News ⓒ	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle ⓒ	Who Wants to Be a Millionaire		Dharma-Greg	Sports Night	NYPD Blue (In Stereo) (PA) ⓒ		News ⓒ	Nightline ⓒ
WLVI	6	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends ⓒ	Nanny ⓒ	Buffy the Vampire Slayer ⓒ		Angel "City Of" (In Stereo) ⓒ		News ⓒ		Friends ⓒ	Nanny ⓒ
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ⓒ	3rd Rock-Sun	3rd Rock-Sun	Will & Grace	Just Shoot Me	Dateline (In Stereo) ⓒ		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Blind Date	Real TV ⓒ	Secret Agent Men ⓒ		Dare You! Ultimate Challeng		News	Real TV (R) ⓒ	Blind Date	Caroline
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Extra ⓒ	Ent. Tonight	3rd Rock-Sun	3rd Rock-Sun	Will & Grace	Just Shoot Me	Dateline (In Stereo) ⓒ		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Simpsons ⓒ	Frasier ⓒ	Seinfeld ⓒ	Friends ⓒ	70s Show	Family Guy ⓒ	Greed: The Series (In Stereo)		News		Friends ⓒ	Frasier ⓒ
WWLP	22	News ⓒ	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ⓒ	3rd Rock-Sun	3rd Rock-Sun	Will & Grace	Just Shoot Me	Dateline (In Stereo) ⓒ		News ⓒ	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	6 World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ⓒ		Eating Well for Optimum Health (In Stereo) ⓒ			Eating Well for Optimum Health (In Stereo) ⓒ			Campaign	Charlie Rose
WGGB	40	28 News ⓒ	ABC News	Seinfeld ⓒ	Frasier ⓒ	Who Wants to Be a Millionaire		Dharma-Greg	Sports Night	NYPD Blue (In Stereo) (PA) ⓒ		News ⓒ	Nightline ⓒ
WSBK	38	Judge Judy ⓒ	Judge Judy ⓒ	Seinfeld ⓒ	Frasier ⓒ	Secret Agent Men ⓒ		Dare You! Ultimate Challeng		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		Mad Abt. You	Judge Mathis
WTBS	29	Roseanne ⓒ	Roseanne ⓒ	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	★★★ "Steel Magnolias" (1989, Comedy-Drama) Sally Field, Dolly Parton						★★½ "My Girl 2" (1993) Dan Aykroyd,
A&E	51	L.A. Law		Law & Order "Profile" ⓒ		Biography: Jeffrey Dahmer		Investigative Reports ⓒ		Lova Chronicles ⓒ		Law & Order "Censure" ⓒ
CNN	33	33 Inside Politics	Moneyline	Election Returns		Election Returns		Larry King Live ⓒ		Election Returns		Sports	Moneyline ⓒ
COM	36	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	Whose Line?	Whose Line?	Whose Line?	Whose Line?	Denis Leary-Cure		Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	32	Your New House (R)		Wild Discovery: Killer Cats		On the Inside "Skyscrapers" (R)		New Detectives (R)		FBI Files "Death in Alaska" (R)		On the Inside "Skyscrapers" (R)
ESPN	31	Sportscenter ⓒ		College Basketball: MOC Championship				College Basketball: Sun Belt Conf. Championship				Sportscenter ⓒ
LIFE	50	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Chicago Hope (In Stereo) ⓒ		"The Other Woman" (1995, Drama) Jill Eikenberry ⓒ				Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	53	MTV Jams	Beat Suite	Making-Video	MTV.Com (R)	TRL Wanna	TRL (R) (In Stereo)		Ruff Ryders	Tom Green	Lyricist	Undressed	Loveline
NICK	55	All That	Cardoo	Hey Arnold! ⓒ	Rugrats ⓒ	Rocket Power	Rocket Power	All in Family	Jeffersons ⓒ	All in Family	Jeffersons ⓒ	All in Family	Jeffersons ⓒ
SCIFI	54	★★★ "Amazing Stories: The Mover" (1992) Andrew McCarthy.				★★★★ "Raiders of the Lost Ark" (1981, Adventure) Harrison Ford. (In Stereo) ⓒ						★★★★ "Raiders of the Lost Ark" (1981) ⓒ
TLC	56	26 Home Again	Home Again	Greatest Party – Mardi Gras		Treume: Life in the ER (R)		UFOs Uncovered		UFOs Uncovered: Dark		Treume: Life in the ER (R)
TNT	35	In the Heat of the Night ⓒ		ER "The Good Fight" (In Stereo)		NBA Basketball: Phoenix Suns at Houston Rockets. (In Stereo Live) ⓒ				Inard NBA		★★ "Father Hood" (1993)
USA	34	Baywatch "The Trophy" ⓒ		JAG "People v. Mac" (In Stereo)		Weaker, Texas Ranger ⓒ		"The Hotmen" (2000, Suspense) Arcelia O'Cole ⓒ				"The Hotmen" (2000) ⓒ
HBO	43	(4:30)	★½ "Blue Chips" (1994, Drama) Nick Nolte. PG-13 ⓒ				★★★ "True Crime" (1999, Suspense) Clint Eastwood. (In Stereo) "R" ⓒ					Sopranos "Full Leather Jacket"
MAX	45	(5:00) "A Fish Called Wanda" "R"	Through a Blue Lens ⓒ			★★ "The Golden Child" (1986) Eddie Murphy ⓒ		★½ "Sacred Cargo" (1996) Chris Penn. "NR"				★★ "The Dentist II" (1998) "R" ⓒ
SHOW	46	(5:00)	★★ "Overnight Delivery" (1998) Paul Rodd. ⓒ			★★ "In the Army Now" (1994) Pauly Shore. "PG"		★★½ "Cry Speons" (1998, Comedy) Vince Vaughn. "R" ⓒ					"Downfall"

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	281	Good to Goval
3	CBS/3 Hartford	303	NBC/22 Springfield
4	CBS/4 Boston	304	CNN Headline News
5	ABC/5 Boston	305	CNN
6	PBS/57 Springfield	306	CNN Fn
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	307	CNN Sp
8	UPN/20 Hartford	308	TBS
9	Weather Channel	309	BET
10	NBC/30 New Britain	310	College TV Network
11	Fox/61 Hartford	311	Univision
12	PBS/24 Hartford	312	Comedy Central
13	WOOH & HSCN	313	Cartoon Network
14	Intermediate	314	TV Land
15	UMass Residence TV	315	CSpan
16	WB/Newsday	316	CSTV (Tentative)
17	Sundance	317	Bloomberg Financial Network
18	The Learning Channel	318	History Channel
19	UMCTV-18	319	HSCN Programming
20	ABC/40 Springfield

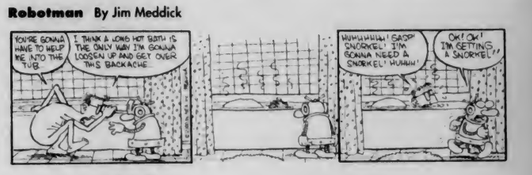
HSCN 4 Housing Services Cable Network

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Robotman By Jim Meddick



Get Fuzzy By Wiley

Baldersdash By Tim Dwyer

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Over the Hedge By Fry Lewis

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Horoscopes

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – Return a favor today and you'll receive a new favor tomorrow. You mustn't neglect your connection with those around you at this time.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – This is a good day to experiment with your own tried-and-true methods. You may discover that you have some room to grow, after all.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – What seems at first to be a benefit to you may, in little time, become something of a liability. You must work to free yourself by day's end.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – This is a good day to tailor your behavior to suit the various situations in which you will find yourself particularly after dark.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – You may find yourself in a new place, trying out a new plan for a new audience today. In the end, the lessons learned will benefit you even at home.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – You must be willing to face facts today, and deal in the hard and fast realities that surround you. Now is not time to fool yourself in any way.

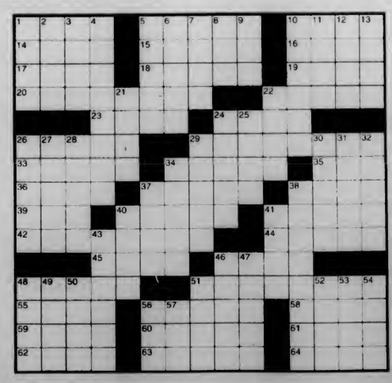
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – An idea is only as good as the action it spawns. Today, you can put a major idea to the test – and make a decision that will shape your future.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – If you must give orders today, do so in a manner that will inspire confidence and loyalty. Don't put yourself at odds with those under you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – Love in many forms is yours to explore throughout the day – and night. It will be up to you to determine just what your own limits really are.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Something important is likely to happen to you or someone close to you. You can be sure its effect will be widespread.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – You'll find yourself quite suddenly in charge today, and you must be prepared to give the proper instructions to others at the right times.

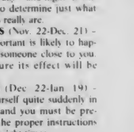


AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – You'll have a chance to get ahead today – provided you take advantage of a stroke of luck that will be yours in the early morning.

Quote of the Day

"A book is a version of the world. If you do not like it, ignore it; or offer your own version in return."

–Salman Rushdie, novelist, 1990



ACROSS
1 Happy
5 Yells insults
10 Identical sibling
14 Icicle site
15 Actor Flynn
16 Florence's river
17 — out: show off
18 Damp
19 Pullets
20 Carpenter's need
22 Wash off
23 Comic Martha
24 Lath
26 Knight's attire
29 Sightseers
33 Waiters down
34 Unfettered
35 Sock part
36 Ceramic piece
37 Value
38 Abominable Snowman
39 Bairn or Claire
40 Pier
41 Tornado warning
42 Go on 44 Eddy
45 Hit builders
46 Mademoiselle's eye
48 — City, Iowa
51 Protector
55 Tango
56 Some horses
58 Capri: e.g.
59 "The African Queen" scriptwriter
60 Rock musician Cooper
61 PBS series
62 Oat
63 Autry and Kelly
64 Tiny insect

DOWN
1 Fetches
2 Woman with a theme song
3 State
4 Depose (royalty)
5 Comedian Lewis
6 Wipe out
7 Buffalo's lake
8 Actor Silver
9 Foxy
10 South Pacific island
11 Brownish-gray bird
12 Lodging places
13 Win by a —
21 Rowers' needs
22 Few and far between
24 Like Saints at times
25 Sumptuous
26 Top story
27 Thick-skinned animal
28 Cry in Italy
29 Rich cake
30 Harsh
31 Large bags
32 Fishing device
34 Westerly
37 Deserted
38 Docile
40 Hex
41 Mix
43 Tighter
46 Part of a pound
47 Soothes
48 Take a — at
49 Shaker-spearean villain
50 Popular cookie
51 Pull on weight
52 "Time — My Side"
53 Edison's middle name
54 Like a pin?
56 Cleansing cloth
57 Burning cheer

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

Lunch

Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Taco Bar
Vegetarian Bean Taco (vegan)
(at Berkshire, Hampshire and Worcester)
Eggplant Parmesan
(at Berkshire, Hampshire and Worcester)

Dinner

Fried Chicken
Cheese Lasagna (vegetarian)
Meat Lasagna
Greek Style Tofu (Vegan)

Today's Staff

Night Editor: Adam White
Photo Technician: Becky Reddick
Copy Editor: Melissa Hammel
Production Supervisor: Seth Koenig
Production Staff: Kara Stokes, Janine Tangney

Anything but routine

Men's gym cruises to New England win

The UMass men's gymnastics team, including JJ. Hershey, captured its twelfth consecutive New England Championship this weekend by a margin of over 20 points

By Gary Mendese
Collegian Staff

They struggled on a few events, and overall it was a meet with very mixed results, but the Massachusetts men's gymnastics team came through this weekend and took home first place spot at the 2000 New England Championships.

UMass took its 12th consecutive title at the event with a score of 221.70, pulverizing its closest competitor by over 20 points. The Minutemen had two all-arounders this meet, both of them hitting pretty solid sets, which helped lead the team to victory.

Senior Jeff LaVallee won the all-around with a 57.80, followed by junior Andy Leis, who took second with a 53.80. LaVallee, who is now ranked No. 2 nationally in the all-around, snagged first on rings (9.65), vault (9.60) and set a new UMass all-time high on parallel bars (9.95). And both LaVallee and Leis came through for their team when they were needed the most.

The squad started out the competition on the pommel horse, normally a very strong event for the Minutemen, which could have given them the momentum needed to score big throughout the meet. But the first few guys up struggled and the Maroon and White were plagued with falls. Desperate to post a decent team score on their best event, head coach Roy Johnson and the rest of the squad put all of their faith into LaVallee and Leis. And boy did they come through.

Leis stepped up and tied his all-time career high of 9.85 for the second time this season, giving his team a much-needed high score. And not to be outdone by anyone, LaVallee jumped up on horse and muscled his way to tie his all-time career high of 9.95, bringing the team total to a respectable 57.75.

"We got off to a terrible start [on pommels] and the last two guys didn't let that bother them," Johnson said. "They nailed their sets and helped out [our score]. I was really proud of the guys."

While there were certainly some great scores posted over on horse, there were some other events worth noting as well. Over on the floor exercise, it was no surprise to see junior Bryan McNulty take the first place spot (9.30), with junior Clayton Kent slightly trailing behind in second (9.20). Kent, who was the first man up on the still rings, did the best routine of his life, giving him a career-high mark of 9.40, ranking him third overall. And showing that he can do more than just twist on the floor, McNulty grabbed the silver on vault with an impressive 9.40.

Turn to GYM page 7

Three-match road swing takes toll on UM tennis

By Jen Cormier
Collegian Staff

Remember the good old days? It was just last autumn that the members of the Massachusetts men's tennis team were seemingly invincible, the proud owners of an undefeated dual match record. They were kings of the collegiate racket world.

Now only months after their memorable '99 campaign, one that earned the Minutemen their first national ranking in history (No. 177, Daily Tennis Top 200), the fall season seems more like the days of yore. After kicking off the spring season with four taxing losses and a torrent of injuries, the squad has been showed off its pedestal with the most unceremonies of thuds.

This past weekend, the Minutemen inched closer to the mediocrity of a .500 record surrendering on the road dual matches to George Washington and Bloomsburg, while ending the weekend with a victory in Maryland. This brings their record to 2-4 for the spring, 7-4 for the year.

The three match weekend began on Friday in Washington D.C. where the George Washington Colonials handed a 4-3 defeat to the Minutemen.

After weeks of struggling with injury and phenomenal opponents, sophomore Steve Prisco regained his signature on-court domination in the nation's capital. At No. 1 singles, Prisco secured his first dual match singles win of the spring season, defeating Kent Wright in straight sets, 6-4, 6-1.

Senior co-captains Bo Navarro and Parsa Samii were unable to contribute to their team at the No. 2 and No. 3 slots, respectively. Navarro succumbed to GW's Mike Lastine, 7-5, 7-6, while Samii was a 6-2, 6-3 loser to Kevin Wright.

The residual effects of a rotator cuff injury made freshman phenom Will Shaw's return to the singles line-up a lackluster one. Heading into the match, head coach Judy Dixon knew that Shaw was not in peak condition. The rookie whiz-kid's serve has been rendered much weaker than usual, a fact that was all too evident in Shaw's 6-2, 6-0 defeat at the hands of GW's Kinzie Wright in No. 4 singles.

Junior Fabian Rabanal snatched the first set from GW's Ion Davidson in No. 5 singles before dropping the next two, 3-6, 6-2, 6-3. Meanwhile, sophomore Todd Champeau provided the Minutemen with their second singles victory of the day, defeating Nick Vikstrom, 7-5, 7-6.

In No. 1 doubles action, Prisco and Navarro paired to defeat Kent Wright and Vikstrom, 8-2. Samii and Shaw were victors in No. 2 doubles, while Champeau and senior Marco Casesa won in the No. 3 slot.

Two days later, the Minutemen headed to Pennsylvania where they suffered a 5-2 loss to Bloomsburg.

Prisco emerged as the squad's only singles victor, defeating David Wolfe in straight sets, 6-3, 6-3, in the No. 1 slot. Meanwhile, No. 2 player Navarro was overwhelmed by Tyler Hunsberger, 6-1, 7-5. Samii fared slightly better in the No. 3 slot, nabbing a set from Andrew Naylor, but the co-captain came up short, 4-6, 7-6, 7-6.

Shaw continued his come-back struggles in the No. 4 slot, losing to Bloomsburg's Kristopher Shuniway. Being somewhat stripped of the power to hold his serve, Shaw was incapable of clawing his way into the match, becoming a 6-2, 6-1 loser.

Champeau and junior Bill Greener were each straight set losers in the No. 5 and No. 6 slots, respectively. Champeau was no match for Jay Nistad, losing 6-3, 6-2, while Greener was dominated by Jean Pierre Mourre, 6-1, 6-4.

In doubles action, Prisco and Navarro, who have proved to be quite the foreboding tandem this spring, dealt an 8-4 loss to Hunsberger and Naylor. Samii and Shaw defeated Shumway and Wolfe, 9-7, in the No. 2 slot. Meanwhile, Champeau and Casesa were unable to clinch a doubles sweep, losing to Nistand and Mourre, 8-2.

Only hours after suffering their second loss in three days, the road-weary Minutemen trudged to the University of Maryland to face the Terrapins. It was there that the warn Maroon and White were able to avoid a complete weekend massacre. Instead, the squad rebounded and dealt Maryland a 6-1 loss, clinching their second dual match win of the spring campaign.

Prisco completed his weekend trifecta with a 6-3, 6-0 win over Terrapin Larry Chou in the No. 1 slot.

Turn to TENNIS, page 7

UMass finishes year on right foot

Senior Kevin Somers turned in a blistering 14:44.59 finish in the 5000-meter event at this weekend's IC4A Championships at Harvard.

By Jen Cormier
Collegian Staff

Everybody roots for the underdog. This is one of the most well-known and time-honored adages of athletic competition. We will forever cheer for the tortoise to beat the hare. We will eternally embrace the gritty, blue-collar ragtag teams over the Las Vegas favorites. The Impossible Dream teams are always the ones that hold special niches in people's hearts.

As the dust settles on the Massachusetts men's indoor track season, the Minutemen can reflect back on the season-gone-by with an enormous sense of contentment and pride, for they have attained the most beloved and cherished role in sports—the overachieving underdog.

For a team that was expected to be in a rebuilding process for much of the season, the Maroon and White's 1999-2000 list of superlatives is a long and impressive one. For much of the regular season, the squad's individual performances turned heads all throughout the conference and garnered the Minutemen numerous Atlantic-10 accolades.

But regular season theatrics weren't enough for a team that was destined to exceed expectations. A second place finish at the A-10 meet and a fourth place finish at the New England Championship solidified the squad's legacy as one of UMass's greatest and overachieving teams in history.

Of course, overachieving can be hard and exhaustive work, and that is why the team took somewhat of a more laid back approach for its last meet of the season. This weekend, the season culminated with the IC4A Championship at Harvard University, where 17 Minutemen represented the Maroon and White in a competition that featured over 80 schools and nearly 1800 athletes.

While the Championship featured a dog-fight between Georgetown and A-10 champ Virginia Tech, who finished first and second, respectively, the Minutemen placed in the middle of the pack, nabbing a tie for 44th.

"In a meet like this, when you have so many schools involved, it's just such a massive athletic performance that it's very tough to predict exactly where you'll stand," head coach Ken O'Brien said. "All I expected was for the veterans to do well and the younger kids to gain some experience, and that's what happened."

The squad's only points of the day came from senior Vic Morency, who placed fifth in the shot put with a toss of 54'1.25". Freshman phenom Stefan Russ and sophomore Adrian Zullo, who were the team's other best chances to put points on the board, did not compete due to the normal wear and tear that accompanies a long season. The duo stayed home to

Turn to TRACK, page 7

George Washington the talk of the town

Aaron Saykin on Atlantic 10 Women's basketball

PHILADELPHIA – This one didn't come out of the blue, but it was nonetheless dramatic.

Petra Dubovcova sat at the post-game press conference after her team was victorious over the Massachusetts women's basketball team in the semi-finals of the Atlantic 10 Tournament.

She was happy. Her team had defeated a courageous group of Minutewomen. She was looking forward to the championship the next night.

Then a question came from a George Washington beat reporter that seemed rather benign. It was some cliché about motivation. Suddenly, Dubovcova's expression changed from one of content to obvious anger.

"I heard that UMass had said some things. Bad things. Some things that really upset me, so the only way I can beat them is on the court," she said.

But the problem with her anger was that it was derived from hearsay. She didn't actually hear any UMass player say anything. Only later, after the storm of related questions came, did the truth become known to those toiling in the cramped press workroom. The same GW reporter who asked Dubovcova the initial question approached the school's Associate Sports Information Director (ASID), Chris Stockton.

"Dubovcova said she didn't even hear anyone from UMass say it. Who told her?" the reporter asked Stockton.

"Well, me and two team managers heard the UMass players talking trash last night in the lobby," he said.

There's the goddamn problem. Hearsay. And look whose mouth it came from. Then, of course, the reporter asked him, "So you're the one who was spreading the rumor? What did you tell the players?"

"Nothing. I didn't say anything to them." I wish you could have seen Stockton shaking in his boots at this point. And the reporter, rightfully so, would not let him off the hook so easily. "You said you heard them. What did they say?"

Stockton, no older than his late twenties, then snapped. "What's the big deal? I suppose you want to know what I ate for breakfast, too."

The "big deal" is that Stockton did a deplorable thing. He crossed the line from relaying sports information to interfering with relations between the teams. He tried to use some type of primitive and negative psychological tactic to motivate the Colonials.

Shouldn't this guy be somewhat objective, instead of badmouthing another school in front of the media and the players he represents?

Don't even get me started about the nasty double standard at work that UMass is "bad" for allegedly talking trash, yet Stockton wants GW to talk back. Hypocrite.

To set the record straight, I'm not so certain the Minutewomen said anything at all... not to mention the fact that if such things were said, they weren't said publicly until Stockton went to work.

He's a moron for creating this mess. Once Dubovcova informed the media about Stockton's alleged observation, a nasty line of questioning spilled over into the second half of the press conference, when UMass was up at the table. It was truly nonsense and completely avoidable.

To their credit, both coaches were classy about the line of questioning. GW skipper Joe McKeown just said that he doesn't pay attention to those things and knew nothing about it... and didn't really care.

A member of the press approached UMass coach Joanie O'Brien after the conference, because she would not comment on the trash talking during it.

"Coach, do you want to say anything about..."

She cut the reporter off mid-sentence. "No. I've got nothing to say."

I'm sure she wouldn't dignify such a dumb topic with a response in the first place, but she was already angry – angry that her team didn't win – and even angrier that such a ridiculous rumor ever became an issue.

And it's all because some idiot of an associate SID butted in, and because he probably needs to compete vicariously through his creation of conflict. Maybe he's trying to have an athletic stake in something he could never take part in. But who even cares that much? He's a jerk for doing it.

What really bothers me – and what probably bothered O'Brien – is that it tainted an otherwise enjoyable game. And there was no need for any motivation on either side. What compelled Stockton to think GW needed any extra motivation? UMass was one of only four teams to beat them this year. And he thought the Colonials weren't ready enough to exact a little revenge? And the semi-final of the conference tournament wasn't a big enough game?

The Minutewomen were in the same boat. They needed to rebound from an up-and-down regular season that really raised more questions than answers. They were fighting to stay at .500 after reaching it for the first time all season with a nail-biting win over Virginia Tech on Saturday. They didn't need to talk any trash... and I don't think they did to begin with. As UMass captain Alison MacFarland said, if the seniors couldn't get the team ready for a game like Sunday's, then there was something wrong.

You're right, Alison. There was something quite wrong. It came from the mouth of a young, ignorant and unprofessional associate SID that created a stink over nothing. He ruined what should have been a proud moment for both teams.

Oh, the power that hearsay has over the media.

Aaron Saykin is a Collegian columnist.

George Washington coach Joe McKeown and forward Petra Dubovcova were at the center of a trash-talking controversy after Sunday's A-10 semifinal.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Volume CVI Issue 50 | Wednesday, March 8, 2000

Scott responds to community

Chancellor discusses budget

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

A wide variety of campus issues were addressed last night at a forum held by Chancellor David K. Scott on the current state of the projected budget cuts on campus.

The forum gave both faculty members and students in attendance the opportunity to voice both their concerns and grievances about the issue of cuts on campus, while receiving answers to their questions from the appropriate administrators in attendance.

Scott opened up the forum by explaining to students that, "We hope to get a better understanding for all of you as to why we would have a two percent budget cut."

He explained to the crowd of roughly three hundred that the administrators on campus would make every attempt to keep cuts in the area of academics at a minimum.

"The academic area of the University I am going to hold at a level of not more than one percent cuts," he said.

One of the first issues that was brought up at the forum was the elimination of both professors and teaching assistants across the campus and the increased need for technology as a replacement for classes.

One irate student commented that students were paying for an education which they were not receiving.

"If I pay $5,000, $10,000, whatever it is, I don't want to hear another excuse," he said. "I don't want to hear we can't give you a quality education with teachers."

Graduate student Eric Olsen also made similar statements about the increased investment in technology across the University.

"You are proposing to spend an addition al $1.5 million on information technology while you are cutting the budget," he said.

Addressing the issue of both technology and of the necessity for distance learning programs on campus, Scott commented that investments in both would allow the University, as well as potential students opportunities that were not previously offered.

"Distance learning, for me, makes possible for those that who can never set foot on campus the opportunity to take classes here," he said.

Deputy Provost John Cunningham also showed his support for the expenditure towards technology explaining to those in attendance that new software could revolutionize the way that the University was run. He explained that one way that distance learning could help students was through registration of classes.

"I am a longtime proponent of what we will get with the new technology, confirmed registration," he said.

He explained that this type of registration would allow students to see what classes they were in immediately upon registering, eliminating the problem that some students were having with a lack of classes. He also addressed the effect that the cuts would have on the availability of classes to students for the upcoming semester. He explained that the University had added a total of an extra 2,000 spots in some classes in order to allow for more students. He went on to say that the cuts potentially could affect classes in terms of availability.

"What may come into play is the variety of classes, and the flexibility of schedules," he said.

Other students primarily spoke out against the issue of cuts in the area of academics and academic programs, and expressed concern for their future at UMass.

Jon Zibble, an officer for the Graduate Student Senate, explained that the University was cutting affirmative action, need based grants, funding for academics and a number of other important things on campus.

"We are celebrating the end of the strategic plan with budget cuts that will cut academics," he said. "I would just like to see academics funded."

Another issue that was discussed at the forum was the fact that the Dental Clinic, which will be shut down in the summer due to losses and budget related issues, seemed to be cut unnecessarily. One student commented that the cuts seemed to not only be affecting the academic life of the campus but also the quality of health care and that other campuses in the five college area relied on and paid for UMass health care.

Javier Cevallos, Interim Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs, commented, "There was a deficit in relation to Amherst College and Hampshire College of about $100,000 and we are going to collect it."

Finally, Scott explained to students that although the cuts were not favorable decisions had to be made regarding them.

"In the end someone has to decide," he said.

Chancellor David K. Scott presents budget figures during a forum held yesterday in Mahar Auditorium.

Departments budgets have been cut and yet others have seen effective increases leaving students and faculty members wondering what happened.

Local response assorted

By Virginia Avedisian
Collegian Staff

Last night's open forum with Chancellor David C. Scott explaining why the budget cuts were enacted produced many colorful responses from students and concerned citizens of the Commonwealth. Chancellor Scott began with explaining that "whatever adjustments are made, they are not uniform over the entire University."

One woman asked the Chancellor directly, "what makes your salary more important than our education?" The Chancellor responded by saying "no one has raised my salary."

The response that many students got to the question of what will happen to the 1,600 students currently not able to get into any Spanish classes was that they will be placed in different classes such as alternative general education courses. This does nothing for the students that are looking to get into the major of Spanish or any other foreign language, since an alternative general education course will not teach them the language.

Other points brought up included the question of what was done with the 600 complaint forms given to the Chancellor early last week. Chancellor Scott stated "he had been away and that he had not had a chance to review them yet."

He also mentioned that much of the monies that was part of the budget allocations had to do with The Commonwealth College.

Pat Decourcy, a freshman pre-med student stated, "I think that it's extremely unfair that all the budget problems are being, in part blamed on the Commonwealth College. I think it's a good program and that the true roots of the problems are repeated over a substantial amount of time and a total misallocation of funds across the board. This should be exploited more than Commonwealth College, which is a good program overall."

Many students such as Daiss Perkins, a freshman political science major, and Jenny Stulck, a freshman STPEC major, felt "what we are asking isn't being addressed and that we must go to the legislature and higher powers in order to get our point across. We are disgusted at the fact that the 600 responses that were brought to Chancellor Scott were never read, and none of the other administrators know about them. The Chancellor is pretty much laughing at us."

Phil Zetse, a junior majoring in psychology and Student Government Association Senator said, "academics are key to the University, and that's just what is being cut. I think the students feel that they are not a priority at this University and they are not happy about it. It does no good for anyone whether it is the University as a whole, or the individual student. Basically, I think that there have been many irresponsible decisions made within the administration."

Gina Palumbo, a sophomore Spanish and Art History major said, "the technology is definitely important to UMass and it is a really good thing, if and only if, the students are still here to use it. I transferred here, and I'm at the point where I'm ready to leave because I just don't feel that my needs are being met, as well as other student's needs."

All the technology in the world is not going to make a difference if the students are not here to use it, because they all transfer to places that will indeed meet their needs."

Comfort Halsey, a sophomore Spanish and STPEC major said, "I don't know what to say right now. I just want to cry. We shouldn't have to choose between core academics and technology. This is a crisis and one cannot downplay it in any way, shape or form."

APD investigates assault

By Daniel Ruetenik
Collegian Staff

The Amherst Police department is investigating a report of an assault on a University of Massachusetts student while the UMass Police Department, among other incidents during the past week, arrested two people for disorderly conduct and is investigating a report of an assault on a student receptionist.

According to an Amherst PD press release issued yesterday, a female UMass student was assaulted on Monday, March 6 at approximately 3:00 p.m.

The victim was allegedly jogging along East Pleasant St. near the water towers when she was assaulted by a white male with a dark complexion, stocky, about 5'10", 19-23 years old, dark brown hair, wearing a white baseball cap embla-zoned with an unknown logo, bright red zipper type jacket with a white stripe across the mid-section, and navy blue running pants with a white stripe along the seam.

Police Roundup

The assailant shoved the woman to the ground, however she was able to spray him in the face with hair spray in order to secure her escape.

The assailant fled the area, and the woman reported the incident to the University of Massachusetts Police Department.

The woman sustained abrasions as a result of the incident, and she will seek medical attention on her own.

UMass does not reveal the names of individuals that have been assaulted.

UMPD Spokesman Jim Lyons said the matter was still under investigation. Lyons said that the police department is unaware of any connection between this event and last semester's assaults near the campus pond.

According to Lyons, the incident happened outside of the boundary of the campus so the incident is being investigated by the Amherst Police in conjunction with UMass police.

If anyone has any information they are asked to contact the Amherst Police Department at (413) 256-4011.

In addition to the alleged assault, several other incidents occurred over the past several days.

On Thursday, March 2 at 2:33 a.m., while police were responding to a report of a medical emergency at Patterson Dorm, Joel M. Ros, age 20, from Newbury, jumped on the hood of a police cruiser.

Lyons said, "a person jumped on the hood of a police car causing more than $250 in damage while police were dealing with a medical emergency."

Police arrested Ros and charged him with wanton destruction of property valued at over $250, disorderly conduct, resisting arrest and possession of a false or stolen liquor ID card.

Also on Thursday, a student receptionist working in John Quincy Adams Dorm was assaulted while attempting to stop someone from entering the building without permission.

According to Lyons, the assailant who is described as a black male, 5'8" wearing a black bandana and black baggy jeans "pushed by [the] receptionist" when she tried to stop him.

On Sunday at 1:44 a.m. in the Campus Center police arrested Chimaeze R. Ugwuegbu, age 21, from Detroit. He allegedly became disorderly at a party in the Campus Center. Police responded and found a can of pepper spray while searching him. They arrested Ugwuegbu and charged him with disorderly conduct, resisting arrest and possession of ammunition without a Firearms Identification Card.

Bush, Gore win primaries; McCain, Bradley crushed

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

Presidential hopefuls in both parties claimed victories in yesterday's Super Tuesday elections, almost guaranteeing that Republican George W. Bush and Vice-President Al Gore would indeed meet head to head in this year's election.

Gore all but wrapped up his nomination for as the Democratic candidate for president, winning New York, Georgia, Vermont, Ohio, Connecticut, Maryland, Massachusetts, Maine, Rhode Island and Missouri the same state where challenger Bill Bradley was born and raised.

The loss was expected to end Bradley's campaign to unseat Gore as the Democratic candidate for the president. Although the former basketball player came close to beating Gore in New Hampshire, his campaign sputtered and Tuesday's loss is expected to end it.

As for Republican candidates, while John McCain, a Republican senator from Arizona won every election but one in the northeast, taking Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut and Vermont, Bush had won primaries in Missouri, Georgia, Ohio, Maryland and Maine.

But the son of former President George Bush secured his biggest win over McCain by taking New York, perhaps one of the two most important states in yesterday's sixteen state vote. Results from California were unavailable at press time.

McCain, who upset Bush in New Hampshire and later in Michigan, has absorbed losses in the two biggest voting days of the last two weeks, losing Virginia, North Dakota and Washington after attacking leaders on the Christian right. The candidate has considered a run as a third party candidate, something that he has publicly denied, but his

Turn to ELECTION page 2

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 58 LOW: 33	HIGH: 60 LOW: 43	HIGH: 60 LOW: 45

SOURCE: CNN.COM

ED/OP PAGE 4

And the nominees are...

Think award shows have gone too far? See what columnist Brian Lohnes has to say about some "award winners" on today's Ed/Op page.

ARTS PAGE 6

Riding a Fast Car

Today's Arts takes a look at Tracy Chapman's latest release as well as the Hollywood whodunit Drowning Mona.

Fearless Tonia Thomas

An outspoken senior guard for the women's hoop team, Tonia Thomas shares some memories and gives some advice to The Collegian.

SPORTS PAGE 12

Arts & Living 6
Comics 11
Crossword 11
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 12

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

■ election

(continued from page 1)

campaign has admitted that a third party run has been considered because of McCain's crossover appeal.

After celebrating his victory last night, Gore challenged Bush almost immediately, daring him not to use television advertising but to instead debate across the nation on various topics, thus rendering campaign contributions and spending less important than it has been.

And Gore won a second victory yesterday after a Wall Street Journal poll showed Gore tied with Bush, the first time that any poll had shown the equality amongst the candidates.

The only major state where final numbers had not come in as of presstime was California, a state where a record turnout was expected with three separate votes being held. Beside state Republicans and Democrats deciding on candidates for their parties, a non-binding "beauty contest" vote was held, one in which all candidates were placed against on another. Although nothing more than an attempt to gauge candidate popularity, the results of the vote were highly anticipated by all campaigns.

State polls predicted that almost 75 percent of the state would vote yesterday, a record turnout for the ballot, although some critics warned against reading into the results, noting that 65 percent of the eligible voters didn't vote yesterday.

HRTA to host career fair today

By Brian Lohnes
Collegian Staff

The Hotel Restaurant Travel Administration (HRTA) department will be holding it's 25th career fair today in the campus center auditorium. The theme of this year's event is "Career Day 2000: The Next Generation of Leaders."

The event is open to the entire campus and will run from 9-3 p.m. There will be 85 different vendors to speak with. All are welcome to attend the fair.

Event chairperson Tara Narmita, along with her team of seven other HRTA students has been planning the fair since last May. This is the biggest career fair in the 25-year history of the event.

Narmita said she believes the event will be successful. "We expect between five and six hundred people to come," said Narmita. The fair is marketed to other schools and to people in the surrounding area who may be looking for jobs. She said that most companies jump at the chance to come to these types of career fairs because they meet young and prospective workers.

Narmita became the chairperson for the event last year when an HRTA advisor asked her to head up the project. When asked how her seven co-planners were chosen she said, "After I was asked to do it we held interviews to choose the seven positions." Those individuals are chair-people for specific areas, food and retail.

Some of the major vendors who will be attending the event tomorrow are, Marriot, Four Seasons, Sheridan and The Mohegan Sun Casino. Narmita added that a large number of students are able to find opportunities at the fair in the form of internships and even jobs.

Aramark, one of the largest vendors attending the fair, proclaims on it's website, "Serving more than fifteen million people at over five hundred thousand locations worldwide. Everyday." They also list a multitude of job opportunities in the New England region, ranging from chef to catering director at hotels and other locations.

Another company that advertises a large selection of jobs is The Olive Garden restaurant. An international chain of restaurants, The Olive Garden has eateries in Canada and in Italy.

Finally, Enterprise Rent-a-Car will also be at the fair. This company employs 37,000 people and is the largest rental car company in the United States. Enterprise offers an "EQ" test on it's website to test your capabilities in emotional intelligence or in other words "people skills" and stressing there are things more important than a GPA when job hunting.

The best advice that Tara Narmita could give about attending the career fair was, "Don't be intimidated and dress professionally." She added, "These are some of the best opportunities students have here, so people should take advantage of them."

New scholarships offered

By Mary Grein
Collegian Staff

In an effort to support economically disadvantaged undergraduates in mathematics, computer science and engineering, the University of Massachusetts-Amherst is launching a two-year, $220,000 program.

The effort is geared toward addressing the national shortage of engineers, mathematicians and computer scientists, and in addition the under-representation of women, minorities, and people with disabilities within these fields.

Entitled the National Science Foundation (NSF) Computer Science, Engineering and Mathematics Scholarship Program (CEMSM), the program is funded with a grant from the NSF. The effort will offer financial support, specialized courses and seminars, and academic and personal support according to Kathleen M. Rubin, assistant dean for the College Engineering, and the program's director.

Among one of the four faculty members cooperating on the project, Donald F. St. Mary, mathematics and statistics and the principal investigator said in a statement, "there is a huge demand on the part of the U.S. employers for technologically skilled workers to fill high-paying positions in this country."

She continued, "Our fundamental goal in this program is to try and get more low-income persons, in particular, women, traditional American racial and ethnic minority persons, and persons with disabilities, into the mainstream of this most important and lucrative sector of the American economy."

Each year that the program takes place, 40 students in their junior and senior year in college will each receive $2,500 scholarships. The theory of CEMS is that this scholarship will enable students to reduce the time they would otherwise have to spend on part-time jobs, just when academic expectations are highest.

In addition, 10 first-year students will receive similar scholarships from the University, "opening the possibility of receiving a college education to those first-year students least able to afford it," Rubin explained.

Students in the program will take two specialized courses. A one-credit seminar will be given for freshman, familiarizing them with the University and their particular discipline; in addition to giving them the opportunity to experiment with problem solving and hear various guest speakers. Other students will take a three-credit technical writing course with emphasize on public speaking and presentation skills.

"Our intention is to get more math, science and engineering students into the workforce, CEMS upperclassmen will be drawn not just from UMass classrooms, but, we will recruit from the community colleges in the area," Rubin said in a statement. "Some of these students may have considered getting just a two-year degree, for financial reasons."

Rubin said she felt the program would be a positive addition to the University and the skills gained would be essential for students in the future. "Industry highly values all of these skills when recruiting new employees," she said.

TERESA CANINO-RIVERA/ COLLEGIAN

Are you hungry?

Freshman Computer Science major Emmanuel Ortega enjoys lunch at the Worcester Dinning Hall yesterday.

FEATURED ITEM THIS WEEK

This week Champion Reverse Weave Sweatshirts $29.99

Regularly $44.99

Now Only $29.99

Available in grey or maroon

COLLEGIATE Casuals UMass Clothing for Everyone
M-Th 8:30-6 Fri. 8:30-5
Sat. 11 to 4
(413) 545-2619

THE University Store™ Not like a mall... Better.

Do you want to be a part of the biggest student-run business on campus?

Are you interested in a career in Human Resources?

Collegian is accepting applications for the position of Human Resource Coordinator.

Applications can be picked up at the Collegian in room 113 in the Campus Center Basement.

Interested applicants should possess excellent communication and computer skills.

Any questions can be directed to Christine Carroll at 545-3500 or hrcollegian@yahoo.com.

Did you know that the Daily Collegian is funded solely by advertising revenue?

DO YOU WANT A JOB THAT MATTERS?

Become an "advertising account [illegible]" at the Collegian is looking for [illegible] interested in earning money [illegible]

Fill out an application [illegible] Center Basement, [illegible]

TERESA CANINO-RIVERA/ COLLEGIAN

Art imitating life

This sculpture is one of many exhibitions that are presented this week inside the Student Union.

Lawyers target WWII abuses

By Michael Dobbs
Washington Post

New York lawyer Edward D. Fagan is best known for his billion-dollar lawsuits on behalf of Jewish Holocaust survivors. But he recently expanded his World War II litigation practice to a new category of client: victims of Japanese war crimes.

The Bamboyani attorney fired his opening shot on Pearl Harbor Day, Dec. 7, by filing a class-action lawsuit against the Japanese industrial giants Mitsui, Mitsubishi Corp. and Nippon Steel Corp. on behalf of former prisoners of war who were used as slave laborers. The follow-up has included a Web site that solicits clients and a spate of press releases describing "the Holocaust in the Pacific."

Fagan's activity comes on the heels of a $5.2 billion settlement with German companies that cooperated with the Nazis and a $1.25 billion settlement with Swiss banks for hiding the assets of Holocaust victims. It's one of several signs suggesting that the focus of the World War II-era redress movement is shifting from Europe to Asia.

A small army of legislators, archivists, war veterans, professional Nazi hunters and Chinese-American activists sense the time has come for a serious examination of Japan's wartime record. They have sought to draw attention to such issues as Tokyo's refusal to cooperate with U.S. attempts to compile a black list of Japanese war criminals, the forcible recruitment of Korean "comfort women" as sex slaves for Japanese soldiers, and gruesome medical experiments on foreign nationals.

"Five years ago, we had no clout at all," said Ignatius Ding, a Taiwan-born political activist in Silicon Valley who has used the Internet to draw attention to Japanese war atrocities. "Today we have real influence." Chinese Americans are using lobbying techniques similar to those used by American Jews in securing compensation for Holocaust victims, he said.

The renewed focus on Japan's wartime record is particularly evident in California, home to a million Chinese Americans who are increasingly aware of their political power and vocal about expressing historical grievances. Last year, the California Assembly passed two measures that have helped fuel the redress movement: a resolution calling on Japan to offer individual reparations to victims of wartime atrocities, and a law extending the statute of limitations on Japanese war crimes.

Redress advocates say the number of potential claimants against Japanese companies in the United States alone could run into the tens of thousands - hundreds of thousands if relatives are included. Last September, some 500 survivors of the 1942 Bataan Death March of 70,000 American and Philippine prisoners of war filed a joint suit in Albuquerque, N.M., against five Japanese companies for slave labor. A Miami-based organization, the Center for Internees Rights, represents 40,000 former prisoners of war. A total of 18 class-action lawsuits have already been filed in the United States, with dozens more planned.

Sen. Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif. is leading an effort to declassify U.S. government records on Japanese war criminals, using the 1998 Nazi War Crimes Disclosure Act as a model. And the Justice Department is trying to persuade the Japanese government to release details about suspected Japanese war criminals so they can be placed on a watch list barring entry to the United States.

The attention has renewed hope for people like Lester I. Tenney, a survivor of the Bataan Death March who was forced to work for the Mitsui mining company for two years in World War II and endured frequent beatings. The retired university professor, who is suing the company for "involuntary servitude" and unpaid wages, describes the lawsuit as his "last hurrah."

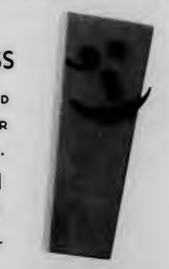
"When we came home, we were made to feel that we were losers. How can you be a hero if you surrender?" asked Tenney, 79. "Now we are so damn old that we don't care about that anymore." He attempted to find a lawyer to sue Mitsui back in 1945, he said, but nobody would take the case until last summer, when he hooked up with a lawyer in San Diego.

It's unclear whether Tenney and others like him can prevail in the courts. Mitsui and other Japanese companies, taking their cue from the Japanese government, have argued that the United States waived all reparations claims against Japan under the terms of the 1951 San Francisco Peace Treaty. Attorneys for the POWs argue that the treaty covered only state-to-state claims and doesn't affect claims by individuals against Japanese corporations. The Clinton administration has endorsed the Japanese position.

TERESA CANINO-RIVERA/ COLLEGIAN

Seems like spring is here...

Yesterday, students gathered outside the Student Union building to enjoy the warm weather.



Everybody Scores!

REGISTER WITH MYBYTES.COM AND SCORE BIG!

GET A FREE SONIC ABYSS MULTIMEDIA CD AND AUTOMATICALLY BE ENTERED INTO OUR SCORE BIG, SCORE OFTEN SWEEPSTAKES.

YOU COULD WIN AN INSTANT PRIZE!

PLUS, YOU'LL HAVE A CHANCE AT $100,000 TOWARDS YOUR COLLEGE EDUCATION.

$core BIG $core OFTEN Sweepstakes

mybytes.com™

UpCLOSE travel well BLOCKBUSTER CALGON SESSIONS.com SKECHERS OldGlory.com TripHub.com Your Student Travel Source UNIVERSAL UNIVERSAL MUSIC & VIDEO DISTRIBUTION

No Purchase Necessary. Void in Florida and where prohibited by law. Must be legal resident of the United States, (except Florida) 18 yrs or older, registered at a college or university during the promotional period. Sweepstakes ends 5:00 PM EST 03/17/00. To Play: visit www.mybytes.com and register for the website using process provided, confirm your contact information on the game page and submit. Instant winners selected at random and notified instantly by site. Grand Prize winner will be selected at random on or about 3/21/00 and notified via email and regular US mail. Odds of winning Prizes depend on the number of entries received. By entering, participants agree to be bound by the complete Official Rules available at www.mybytes.com or send SASE to "SBSO Rules" Common Places, 810 Memorial Dr., Cambridge, MA 02139. BLOCKBUSTER™ name, design and related marks are trademarks of Blockbuster Inc. Blockbuster Inc. is not a sponsor of or in any way liable or responsible for the administration of this game. [Coupon redeemable at participating BLOCKBUSTER™ store locations.]
© 2000 YouthStream

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Our Opinion

Olympic Terrorism

Once again, terrorism has become the center of attention in Olympic circles.

Mehmet Akin Kayiricl, a 33-year-old from Sydney, Australia, the site of September's Games, was arrested yesterday and charged with extortion after an investigation of over two months. According to Australian police, Kayirici tried to convince five different countries to give him 60 million dollars by threatening to place bombs on planes and public places during the upcoming Olympics.

Kayirici neglected to enter a plea in court yesterday in the face of nine counts of demanding money with menace and three additional counts of threatening to destroy aircraft, according to the Associated Press.

Police documents given to the court claimed that Kayirici called consulates from the United States, Great Britain, Russia, Israel and Turkey and demanded that they give him large sums of money to keep him from destroying their respective planes. Through letters and telephone calls, the man threatened not only to place destructive bombs in public places during the 2000 Olympics, but also during last week's Gay and Lesbian Mardi Gras parade, which was attended by more than 250,000 people.

Peter Ryan, police commissioner for New South Wales state, said that Kayirici had no apparent way of actualizing his threats, but that such behavior was serious and would not be tolerated, adding that the arrest showed that security measures set for September's Olympics are "robust."

Despite the potential danger, consulates from the United States and Great Britain seem confident that The Games will go on safely under the watch of Ryan and his group.

Ties to the relatively recent Atlanta Olympics aside, the Collegian is worried that terrorism will become commonplace at the once globally uplifting event. The Games serve as a perfect place for a terrorist from any group to get his or her point across; there are large numbers of people there, and many of them represent powerful first world countries outside of their element. Add to that the fact that the whole planet is watching intently and you end up with a dangerously spectacular phenomenon.

It goes without saying that terrorism is unsupportable, and that violence solves very little. That the Collegian would take such a stand on the issue should be taken for granted, and we cannot fathom any rational reasoning behind the decision to put the lives of so many people in jeopardy in the name of selfish religious or political beliefs. It is perhaps beating a dead horse saying that there are always other ways to accomplish things.

However, this belief, held in wide regard, is no more revolutionary than it is useful. Terrorism's lack of mainstream support is exactly what makes it effective – if the common way of getting one's point across was to threaten the lives of thousands, society as we know it wouldn't last much longer. The unique factor of the control of fear puts the terrorist, who is often willing to sacrifice him or herself for the cause in hand, in an advantageous position. In a nutshell, the Collegian's stance on terrorism itself is a moot point and, in a sense, exactly what terrorism depends on.

Instead, the Collegian wishes to offer a small suggestion to the other media institutions of the region, if not the nation or world, in an effort to make terrorism at events like the Olympics slightly less effective. Why not refuse to name the group that the terrorist, in this case, Kayirici, is representing with their actions? While the Collegian knows as well as anyone that a bombing on a worldwide stage cannot be completely ignored by the media, keeping the terrorist's background information and affiliation out of the spotlight makes the destruction of a plane or building – very likely a deadly publicity stunt for that group affiliation – a useless practice.

Realizing that such a small suggestion would likely do very little in the battle to combat terrorism, the intention is that once radical religious or political groups see that they can't get their message across by causing a big bang on global television, maybe they'll think of another way to go about things.

Amadou Diallo's lost life

Nearly two weeks have passed since four white New York City police officers were acquitted in the shooting death of Amadou Diallo, an African American street vendor in New York. Several days ago I decided that my next column would discuss the Diallo verdict. I searched and searched for the words to express my outrage at the trial's outcome. What do you say about an unarmed man shot 41 times outside his own home?

Richard Anderson

Then last Friday I watched Wings of Desire, a beautiful film about an angel who comes down to Earth to experience what it's like to be a person. The film is a reminder of how wonderful it is to be alive. It celebrates the little things in life; drawing a picture, getting newspaper ink on your fingers, the taste of coffee and cigarettes. While contemplating the film's message it struck me that I had been thinking about Diallo's death too abstractly. The simple reality was that he had forever lost the chance to appreciate the little pleasures that we often take for granted. How do we reconcile the wonders of life with the gross injustice of this incident?

Consider the fact that a man who did absolutely nothing wrong had his life taken away. A family had a loved one taken away. How did this happen? Last February Diallo was standing in the vestibule outside his apartment at 1 a.m. when he was approached by four plainclothes policemen who were members of the NYPD's Street Crimes Unit. One officer believed Diallo fit the general description of a rape suspect in the area. They also claimed he was acting "suspiciously." There are questions about whether the officers identified themselves although they claim they did. However, when they asked to speak with Diallo he turned away and reached into his pocket. He removed what the officers thought was a gun. They began shooting. Forty-one bullets were fired. Nineteen bullets hit Diallo. The object in his hand was later found to be his wallet.

The jury found that the incident was precipitated by Diallo's actions. They declared that that the officers' response was legally justified. The officers have received no disciplinary action except being placed on something conveniently vague called "modified assignment." Apparently in America it is now permissible for policeman to shoot unarmed, law-abiding citizens on their front porches. Especially if that citizen happens to be African American.

Crimes like this are an affront to life itself. No one has the right to rob another person of the gift of life. Moreover, those left behind must live in fear. How can people, specifically minorities, enjoy the fruits of life when their society fails to protect them from violence and racism. Life becomes pretty ugly when the people charged with insuring your safety are themselves the perpetrators of terror. The Diallo tragedy is not an anomaly. Myriad incidents highlight prevalent racism and excessive force among the police. The abuses by police form a continuum from "racial profiling" in traffic stops to the sodomizing of a prisoner in New York to the shooting death of an unconscious African American women in Los Angeles.

The Diallo case highlights the racism inherent in all of these cases. How did the officers determine that Diallo "fit" the profile of a suspect? Because he was a man and he was black. The four officers clearly had no intention of killing Diallo when they stopped their cars. I believe them when they claim to agonize over the shooting. Nevertheless, their use of force was both unwarranted and stimulated by racism. They should be punished accordingly.

Life will never be truly beautiful and good unless we ameliorate injustices such as the unpunished murder of innocent people. America must therefore take concrete steps to radically reform its law enforcement institutions. We must examine police procedure. Divisions like NYPD's Street Crimes Unit, which acted like a clandestine vigilante group with broad discretion to detain citizens, should be abolished. All police institutions should be independently monitored for racist practices. We must also institute extra-departmental oversight so that the police cannot protect each other from prosecution.

Not all police officers are racist. Many are honorable individuals who perform a necessary, laudable duty. We need police. However, we must reform law enforcement so that those protecting us make America more safe, not less. Unfortunately, it is too late for Amadou Diallo. He will never draw a picture, get newspaper ink on his fingers, or savor the taste of coffee and cigarettes. His death was a travesty. We should not merely acknowledge that fact and forget about it. We must all lobby for reform so that incidents like this are prevented in the future. The system must change so that everyone, regardless of race, has the chance to enjoy the little things in life.

Richard Anderson is a Collegian columnist.

The truth about Commonwealth College

There have been several articles and letters to the editor, printed in the Collegian that argued two opposing opinions: how great it is to be a Commonwealth College student and how the whole college should be eliminated. I will not presume to know the truth or argue on either side. The following is, simply, an account of one day in my life, a Commonwealth College student.

On Wednesday, my alarm clock rang at 7 a.m. My head was heavy as I rolled over to turn it off. My mind was drawing a blank. There was a sort of mist of hopeful forgetfulness when it seemed that the day would not come, if only I could procrastinate and delay getting up for five more minutes. At last I gathered my strength, got up, cleaned, and took a vitamin (or perhaps it was two. I don't remember).

Anyhow, one way or another, I got to my class, only ten minutes late, and listened to my professor talk to a class of over 200 students, occasionally picking up my hand to answer one of the professor's questions. Meanwhile, I was constantly taking notes in my notebook and eating the breakfast I didn't have time to eat earlier.

At the end of my first class – amen – I had a thirty-minute break. I took this opportunity to review the two hundred pages from Tolstoy's War and Peace that were assigned for my next class. Trying to keep the names straight and the war separate from the peace, I waited for my professor to come in, chatting occasionally to some of the other students in the class. The professor arrived and started the lecture. I tried to keep my head from nodding into sleep. The professor sounded excited about the topic, so I also became interested. I raised my hand and tried to show that I did the reading.

"Anyhow, one way or another, I got to my class, only ten minutes late, and listened to my professor talk to a class of over 200 students, occasionally picking up my hand to answer one of the professor's questions."

Anna Faktorovich

After Tolstoy, I realized that the vitamins aren't enough to keep me awake. I went to Blue Wall to get a hazelnut coffee, the joy of my day. There I waited at a specified table for my study partner. I looked across the wall and stared at a happy couple drinking coffee together; he was stroking her hair. A tearing ache clinched my heart. My partner came fifteen minutes late, throwing my schedule of balance. Regardless, I kept a light grin on my face and dove into the review, showing him the answers and notes that I came up with. He listened, gave some light criticism and said that he thinks all my answers are fine. I nodded. We went our separate ways.

I ran to Boyden for my aerobics lesson. By the time I arrived the warm up was already over, and I was forced to get into the swing of things in the midst of the routine. I remember that I forgot to buy a bottle of water that I now so desperately need. Sparks and stars flew around the steaming room full of people who were exhausted. "When will it end?" I thought.

Right after gym I had ten minutes to change and walk to my Economics class. I arrived on time but soaking wet from the robust exercise.

After the class I had an appointment with a T.A. I asked her the questions that I came up with while reviewing for the exam. She answered my questions. I nodded and took notes.

Then it's show time; the exam that I was studying for is next. I walked to class reading my notes, trying to compress the information into my skull. I was anxious and nervous at the same time, but it was a good type of nerves, the kind that allows me to score well on tests, so I dwelled happily in this feeling. The test was over before I knew it.

From the test I rushed to the Campus Center and bought a Peter Pan bus ticket to go home, got a haircut, and bought water for my next aerobics class.

Then I walked up the hill to my dorm. On the way there I stopped by my Dean's office and made a schedule so that I can finish my undergraduate education in three years and go to Harvard Eastern European department afterwards. Once home I called several people about an internship, The Boston Globe about an article, and home to tell my mom when I will be coming.

Then I enjoyed a quiet hour of reading essays and writing papers.

As soon as the hour was over I was back on the move walking down the hill, grabbing dinner on the way.

My next stop was the SGA meeting. The meeting begins at 7 p.m. At least twenty senators spoke during announcements and talked about problems they were having. I remained in my seat and resisted the temptation to speak. Then motions were presented and I voted according to my beliefs and knowledge of the issues. The meeting was not over until after midnight. After the meeting several extra-dedicated senators and I gathered and discussed the motions that were on the floor that night. We stayed up until 4 a.m.

I don't remember how I went to sleep that night; all I remember is that I woke up the next morning as usual at 7 a.m. and went to class.

Anna Faktorovich is a Collegian staff member.

Got something to say?
Come on down to the Collegian and write for
Ed/Op!

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 •
http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Sam Wilkinson Managing Editor Shawn Ilinitch Business Manager
Ben Alamed Web Developer Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager
Sage Brousseau Co-Advertising Production Manager Jake Lilien Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pashkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendoza Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jake Lilien Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jeanie Gorlovsky Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Multicultural Affairs Editor
Mary Grein News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Adam White Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor
Iosyfn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Christine Connare Women's Issues Editor
Marc Menschel Finance Manager
Joshua Szymanski Distribution Manager
Katie Beith Promotions Manager
Catherine Turner International Affairs Editor
Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Chris Brennan Assistant Finance Manager
Eric Faber Assistant Advertising Manager
Amy Gargamta Assistant Business Manager

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

And the award goes to...

Since everyone else seems to be having an award show this time of year, I will jump on the bandwagon myself. It has been said by people wiser than I that fact is stranger than fiction. I agree and after reading my award winners, you will too.

The Better Late than Never Award: This award goes out to the Japanese Army. While excavating on a construction site, Japanese workers unearthed an unexploded bomb... from World War II. The bomb was diffused after a two and a half hour operation and no one was harmed. My question is this, if the bomb was dropped hundreds of feet in the sky and then proceeded to crash head first into the ground and not explode, why would it blow up if someone hit it with a shovel? Also, disarming the bomb must have been easy for the Japanese officers, after all, any time you need to read the directions to fix anything, they are always in Japanese anyway.

The Bound to Cause Doom and Destruction Award: This award is presented to the fine folks in Louisiana. A company has developed some computer products that allow people to check their email from their car. It also allows the driver to get stock quotes, the weather and probably order food. Now, if you are driving I would assume that your eyes are open, therefore taking away the need to check the friggin' weather. Secondly, if you cannot stay away from a computer for as long as it takes you to drive somewhere, you need to see a therapist.

The "Not my Child" Award: This award goes to the fine folks at Michigan State University. It seems that they had a bit of a riot last year when their basketball team lost in the NCAA tourney. The cops showed up and broke the riot up and then (God forbid) arrested some people. There was a police car flipped upside down and burning, illegal bonfires all over the place and a huge mass of drunken wacky college kids.

The real fun began after the kids were arrested. Listen to this guy: "I am not a bad person. The costs of my five seconds of stupidity are far overboard." What were those five seconds of stupidity? He along with some other people flipped over a car and he was standing on top of it. And he paid for it, two weeks in jail, and a $5,000 fine. Thankfully someone in this country stuck to their guns and proved a point. We are used to hearing of people getting off with a warning for drunk driving and other kinds of crimes, so this is good to hear. Parents were in an uproar about their kids being put away and the kids were angry about the fact that they were actually accountable for their actions.

The Most Inventive use of Poop Award: Jonathan Yegge wins this one hands down. A student at the San Francisco Art Institute, Jonathan developed a stage show called "Art Piece No. 1" which he performed outside, in front of a crowd. It had a performance run of one show. The show consisted of Mr. Yegge having unprotected oral sex and then (and I quote) "exchanging excrement with a bound and gagged classmate." Wow. First off, how does someone "exchange" excrement? Is there a receipt involved with that? Also, isn't an exchange something that is consented by both parties? The sucker that was bound and gagged didn't have too much say in that one. Listen to what he had to say about this whole thing: "I'm just shocked and appalled that you can't do certain things in art school." He is shocked and appalled? Jeez man, get a hold of yourself; you smeared poop on someone in public and then you got in trouble. What was supposed to happen?

Brian Lohnes

The Worst Thing Ever Award: Is given to Katie Couric, the co-host of the Today Show. Couric lost her husband to colon cancer two years ago, so in an effort to raise awareness she is undergoing a procedure on television. The procedure is a colonoscopy screening for cancer and as you can image... it ain't pretty. A show spokesperson said, "We try to do it with tremendous sensitivity. We are not going to show a lot of her colon. We're not going to gross anyone out." Well that's a lie already, for me anyway. Showing one nanosecond of anyone's colon, including my own would turn my stomach like one of the dryers downstairs. Colons do not belong on TV. Who ever designed us put certain things like colons, gall bladders and generally all of our guts inside us, so we would have to see them. I mean listen to the word: colon – it just sounds gross.

Well that is the inaugural presentation of the Lohnes Awards. You didn't even have to suffer through any of those boring acceptance speeches. If you have any more suggestions for these awards send them to the Collegian office care of the Ed/Op department.

Brian Lohnes is a Collegian columnist.

In a Barbie world

"God has given you one face, and you make yourselves another."

Hamlet, Act III, Scene 1

I had a deprived childhood. At least, I thought so at the time. After all I wasn't allowed to have Barbie dolls, and I couldn't drink Coke except on special occasions. Oh, the angst of being five.

Even at the time, I understood the Coke thing. Sugar caused me to zip around my house like a little electron on crystal meth, and I have a distinct memory of Uncle Ted desperately offering me quarters if I would sit still in the big blue chair for one minute. (I only lasted 45 seconds).

But the Barbie thing was a toughie. They were dolls, and I was allowed to play with dolls – at least all dolls except Barbies. I'm not entirely convinced – as my parents were – that Barbies cause little girls to grow up and have self-esteem problems. But Barbie is just one representative of our culture's obsession with the female body and beauty, which has only risen in the years since I was five.

Alexis Pashkar

We tackled the issue of cosmetic surgery in my ethics class, and there are essentially two opinions on the matter from the physicians' perspective. Opinion one states that ugly people suffer in our society, and since physicians relieve suffering, physicians should do whatever they can to relieve suffering, even if it includes drastic surgery. Opinion two states that because many cosmetic surgeries are not "real" medical problems, physicians should not perform these surgeries which are dangerous, often ineffective, and don't address the real issue anyway.

The real issue, of course, is our country's obsession with beauty, and our standard of beauty is often measured against white, tall, thin blond women. Of course the popularity of Katie Holmes, Winona Ryder, and other brunettes does allow for some variation, but beauty is still narrowly defined as flawless, poreless skin, high cheek bones, a small nose, big eyes, and extreme thinness with paradoxically big breasts. The focus is also quite undeniably on youth.

It's no surprise that not every woman in America fits the mold, but what is shocking to me are the lengths to which a large number of women are willing to go to look like our culturally defined sense of beauty. According to February's edition of Boston Magazine, nearly 2.8 million cosmetic procedures were performed in the U.S. in 1998. The article goes on to state that according to the American Society of Plastic Surgeons (ASPS), the number of teens 18-years-old and younger having liposuction or breast augmentation has doubled since 1992. Unfortunately, there are so age limits on when people are allowed to have these procedures performed.

Perhaps it is no surprise that I'm horrified by these observations because I am from New England, and New England ranks eighth out of nine regions in the country for the number of procedures performed according to the ASPS. The ninth region includes Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska and the Dakotas. I guess there's no money in giving corn and potato plants a nose job.

And the money is what I think cosmetic surgery is all about. I'm sure plastic surgeons think that they are relieving suffering, but they are relieving suffering to the tune of $3000 or more per procedure. If you multiply 3000 times 2.8 million procedures, some doctors are making a lot of money, and they are neglecting a social responsibility.

The problem is not the big nose or the wide thighs; the problem is society, which labels these people as less than beautiful and then proceeds to ridicule them and look down on them. By looking down on people because of their appearance, we make them hate themselves for no good reason, which leads many people down a road of destructive behaviors that only leads to trouble later. But in a sense cosmetic surgery is a destructive behavior, perhaps even a mutilation of the self. In my opinion, these women want to be someone or something that they are not.

However, the women who have had procedures performed on them make a different claim. Some women believe that cosmetic surgery is one way to take control over the uncontrollable forces of genetics and aging. Others claim that they had procedures done because it raised their status, gave them strength, provided economic or professional benefits, and gave them a sense of personal fulfillment. For some women, it simply made them happy.

Thus they do it to gain something, even in the face of disapproval by their friends, family, and significant others. The fact that the spouses, lovers, and boyfriends of many women like them just the way they are seems not to affect some women's decisions. While I think that women are more than sexual objects and future mothers, one of the reasons we want to look good is to attract members of the opposite sex for the same sex, depending on your persuasion). These women probably feel that even if family and friends disapprove, having these procedures performed now makes sense in the long run. Certain types of cosmetic surgery are best performed at a young age, and thus women may choose to fight the aging process at thirty rather than wait until forty when it is more noticeable. In addition, because people are living longer and many people marry more than once in a lifetime, looking young and attractive benefits many women in the dating game both now and in the future.

However, I think that all the arguments that women make are fundamentally flawed in the sense that cosmetic surgery is re-enforcing an ideal of beauty and making it the norm so that women who get it done aren't really "choosing," and women who don't are made to feel as though something is wrong with them. I don't agree with radical feminists that women should have cosmetic surgery to make themselves uglier to prove the point that cosmetic surgery is a form of mutilation. I just think we should leave well enough alone.

If physicians take a stance that cosmetic surgery is unethical in some cases, societal change may be enacted by the very least, we need to legislate for age limits on certain procedures to prevent children from damaging themselves before they have fully developed. After all, Skipper didn't have buxom breasts and she always smiled.

Alexis Pashkar is a Collegian columnist

Yes, I had a dream

I had a dream, a vision of a future when this campus is bettered by the presence of a second publication of conservative views, independently published to remain objective. This dream almost came true.

I was walking around campus on Monday and discovered, much to my pleasure, that beyond The Daily Collegian, there actually is a second publication on campus dedicated to bringing students the most accurate and unbiased information available: The Minuteman.

Sam Wilkinson

The Silent Majority, subject of recent coverage in SGA articles that the Collegian published, is hard at work doing various things on campus, including campaigning for Republican presidential candidates and holding various important events. Now, they've begun republishing their newspaper, a publication sure to be a second campus voice, a conservative voice, for all UMass students. I picked up an issue of The Minuteman and found the kind of rock solid journalism that, according to them, isn't available anywhere else on campus, and certainly not within the pages of this newspaper.

In fact, I learned a great deal about my newspaper while reading their newspaper, although newspaper is a fairly liberal definition for a publication that comes out, at best, occasionally, and I really wonder if The Silent Majority wants to be known as liberally defining anything. This problem passed from my mind as I read with wonder and amazement The Minuteman. I had been previously unaware that stories were supposed to be completely one sided. While Ann Pellegrino, The Chairwoman of the SGA's Ways and Means Committee is quoted liberally throughout the publication, describing The Collegian as "manipulative." Fortunately for the article, the stars isn't bogged down by the "opposite side," as no one from our newspaper was interviewed in their pursuit of, as Zachary Daniel Spilman, the Publisher/Editor-in-Chief of The Minuteman, said, "the highest journalistic standards."

Kudos to The Silent Majority newspaper, who offered "fair" coverage of the SGA and who truly believe that "coverage of the Student Government Association is not a privilege; it is a NECESSITY!" And right they are. The SGA should be covered, and covered thoroughly.

As I was reading the well-written and well-researched articles of The Minuteman, I started to wonder how such a high-class publication could afford the printing costs of producing a tri-semesterly newspaper. Surely, I thought, it must be advertising funds from all of the ads that were sold within the pages of their newspaper. Unfortunately, I discovered that, much to my chagrin, no ads filled their pages. Instead, there were just empty boxes asking for people to advertise with the newspaper. I was horrified. Without ad sales, how could this fine and upstanding publication continue? Fearful that they might resort to bake sales, I immediately began to make inquiries.

After calling far and wide, I eventually walked over to their offices in the Student Union where I was told that some of the printing cost had come from advertisements that had been previously sold. I got old copies of The Minuteman and found only two ads, which, according to them, sell for $95 dollars apiece. I continued to be horrified. We pay $100 bucks a page to print The Collegian. Now, as their publication is somewhat smaller, they probably only pay $50 a page, maybe less. But after printing, over the past year, 44 total pages of newspaper, The Minuteman must have paid close to $2,200 in publishing costs. Well, the Silent Majority must have As they'd only sold close to $200 worth of advertising. I wondered where the other $2,000 must have come from.

Well, the Silent Majority has a budget of $5,500 per year. That money probably helped to defray the costs of printing. I was soothed and relieved what I learned this. And the group would still have $1,500 left over for other projects. $1,500! I was elated.

But then I wondered where they got their budget. Bake sales? Raffles? Some of it came from fund raising, I was told, and the rest came from their budget stipend from the, like an angel from heaven, like a miracle, kind and benevolent Student Government Association.

Unfortunately, upon realizing that Student Government Association fees were paying for at least part of the publication of The Minuteman, I got really sad. I had honestly believed that, finally, there was a second newspaper on this campus that would be able to provide the fair and accurate coverage that we provide. Sure, it would have had a conservative edge, but this campus could use a conservative edge every once in a while. Alas, it wasn't to be.

As a fully independent newspaper, we proudly tell everybody that we receive no funding from anybody. None. Not cent number one. As a result, nobody has pull over who we are or what we publish; we make those decisions ourselves. We don't risk losing funding if we don't kiss ass. We don't risk losing our funding if we don't blindly praise.

We don't. As for others...

But we always welcome campus, or at least, I do, and I was excited about the possibility of having another publication on campus joining us in total independence. Such a publication could only make our newspaper better, their own newspaper better, and the campus, as a whole, better.

Unfortunately, The Minuteman accepts monies from the SGA, thus rendering all of their articles, especially those pertaining to the SGA, as somewhat suspect and questionable. Then I realized that the articles that I read about our own newspaper were hardly fair or unbiased, and I got sad again. I had put so much faith in the fledgling Minuteman, only to have that faith crushed by The Silent Majority's acceptance of SGA funds for their newspaper.

Someday, in the far-off future, I envision a day when there is a conservative publication on this campus that independently publishes, free of the shackles of any group or institution. Those dreams, currently, have dissipated into the ether, perhaps to reform at a later date.

Sam Wilkinson is a Collegian columnist

Your Opinion

Accurate sports coverage needed

To the editor

I have never seen a newspaper get so much information wrong as the Daily Collegian sports section. The most disgusting display of writing came in a February 16th article entitled "Freshman Russ turning A-10 heads" by Ien Cormier. There were several major mistakes made about the exchange student Stefan Russ from Neuhausen, Germany. Although eligibility-wise he is technically a freshman, the article gave the impression that he is going to be here again next year, and that is wrong. He did not come here straight out of high school as the article implied; rather he is a senior academically — speaking, who will be going back to Germany after he is done with school at UMass at the end of this year.

After quoting Coach O'Brien as saying "His work ethic is outstanding," I read the most disturbing reporting I have seen. Near the end of the article, Cormier stated: "Russ has become notorious for his lackluster performances in practice." Wow. Where did this information come from? It must have been made up. I see Russ practice several times a week and I am still amazed every time I see him practice. His performances in practice are anything but lackluster. Certainly none of the coaches or athletes on the team would have said his practices were lackluster. No one else is qualified to give information to the contrary. I have never seen anything so blatantly made up as that piece of "information."

Erik Peterson
Southwest

Send questions to Dear Robby

Dear Rob:

I think people don't like me. I mean, I'm a nice enough guy, I smell all right, I only have acne in places where it isn't visible unless you use a miner's helmet to probe, and I am fluent in all the Romance languages. However, every time I try to talk to someone they laugh and can't seem to stop staring at my crotch or they just turn red and run away screaming. Can you help me? - Lonely Guy

Rob Schulze

Well, Lonely Guy, I think I can help you. You see, having read your letter and assessed all the possibilities, I have determined your problem: you are a grown man who still wears sweatpants. You aren't alone; I see way too many like you on this campus, and like them, you seemed to have forgotten the one thing that all guys must consider when buying pants: the erection. That's right, everyone's favorite bodily transition. When you get a woody and you are wearing sweatpants people notice – it's kind of hard not to. For a guy like me it's kind of uncomfortable to have Old Glory waving in my face like that while having a conversation and I, like many of your friends, seek to end those conversations as quickly as possible. For girls, well, I would assume the reaction would depend on your (ahem) build, but it can't be good. So, my advice to you: buy some fairly rigid jeans, wear long shirts, and for God's sake take a cold shower every so often.

Dear Rob:

Is it normal to have a crush on you? Because I think you're kinda cute and stuff. - Confused Single Girl

You need therapy. You need lots of therapy and then possibly a full frontal lobotomy. Even assuming this is not a prank letter, I still question your motives – for the record, I am not rich and, contrary to public opinion, the "fifteen inch five pound" rumor is absolutely not true. If that still does not change your mind, my official advice is to look in the mirror, get some self-respect, and get over it, because no, it is definitely not normal to have a crush on me, you sick freak.

Dear Rob:

What is the proper procedure for getting in the shower in Orchard Hill men's rooms? - Dirty in Dickinson

I'm glad you asked me that, DiD, because this is something that people need to know. If you can hear no water running or motion behind the curtain, you may go right in. If you hear water running and no motion, you may quickly peek around the curtain to make sure that there are no naked men in there and then enter. If you hear no water and some motion, you stay the hell where you are until either water starts or someone comes out. I don't care how much of a hurry you're in – no one wants their shower experiences ruined by your greedy eyes scoping out 'the goods' before they've been properly dried and covered. And if you get in or out of the shower while someone else is still in there, you must close the curtain all the way, or else the person left over will have to walk to his towel/bathrobe/whatever in full view of the people brushing their teeth and filling their Britas, and no one really wants that to happen.

Dear Rob:

Last night I got drunk with my friends, threw up everywhere, got in a fight, fooled around with some girl I don't know, and woke up naked and covered in what appears to be either motor oil or really, really old maple syrup. Now what? – Hungover Freshman

Now what? That's a good question, my freshman friend, and I have an answer for you. You can either decide that you really liked it and do it again and again and again on every weekend of your entire college career and possibly for the rest of your life. Or you can decide that what you have just done is degrading to you, your friends, the poor schmuck whose ass you kicked, the random girl you took advantage of, and everyone else you came in contact with last night. There are better ways to spend your time. I guess it depends on whether or not you like maple syrup.

Dear Rob:

Why did I hear Guns 'n Roses on a classic rock station today? – Big-Ass Leather Jacket Guy

Big-Ass, you've just posed a question that's given me no lack of puzzlement as well. You see, I still think of Guns 'n Roses as a current band, one that I would buy a concert ticket to go see, one who's new live album I acquired only a few short months ago. I remember Guns 'n Roses from my current lifetime. Of course, we all know that classic rock means old music from times like the seventies and ancient periods like that, and so one possible interpretation of this is that you and I are getting old, and already becoming musical dinosaurs attached to the past and that we are no longer, cool, with-it kind of guys. That is obviously false – I'd guess that station just made a mistake.

Dear Rob:

What's your secret? - Inquisitive

It's all about the love, baby, and failing that, it can be kind of about bitterness and spite.

Rob Schulze is a Collegian columnist.

Graduation time as a choice; too many credits required

As a second semester junior, I have been thinking about graduation. I recently became more excited when I realized that I have completed all of my General Education Requirements (Gen Eds) and only have five classes left to take in order to complete my major and my minor. But as many other students have chosen to do, I will be here for an extra semester (credit-wise I am a first semester junior).

I have been more than fine with this idea until recently. When I was going over requirements with my advisor, I realized that after I complete my major and minor, I will have two semesters of nothing to do, and that is what got me.

I don't understand this. Every student needs 120 credits to graduate, 140 if you are a double major. It's fairly easy to complete Gen Eds within the first two years, and then most majors require about 30 credits, which can be completed in one year (two 15 credit semesters). If you choose to have a minor, it generally can be completed in about one semester (the average minor is five 200-level or above classes). Therefore it is possible to graduate in three and a half years.

Emily Vacanti

But there are a couple of reasons why other people take four full years to graduate. The people who screw around for one semester and then buckle down for the other three and a half semesters complete their degree in four years. Also, engineering students are required to complete a greater number of credits, so there is a reason why they take four years.

My main gripe is that there are many students like me who don't understand why we have to be here for an extra semester or even an extra year after we finish our majors and complete our Gen. Ed. requirements.

Even though I spent my first two years here experimenting with a lot of different classes, I still find myself with time on my hands at the end of my junior year. Freshman year I took multiple science courses that I didn't like such as: Chemistry 111 (a weeding course for those who aren't serious about science and true hell for those who didn't get very far along in high school science); different earth science courses for Climatology; and a couple of unnecessary math courses (I found out they were unnecessary after I took them), I soon realized that science and math were definitely not for me, so sophomore year I took a few Legal Studies courses but they did not help me with my eventual choice of major.

My junior year has also mostly been spent taking courses that I need. This semester I should be taking only required courses except that the University screwed up, and I couldn't get all of the classes that I need because there aren't enough sociology classes, teachers, and enough funding. It appears the only thing that we have enough of, or too much of, is students. So I have four courses left in my major and one left in my minor. The undergraduate secretary in the Sociology department even told me that I would not be able to take my junior year writing class until my senior year. She said that no one takes it until senior year, and even then you have to fight to get into it.

I just don't get it. With all of the other courses that I took which I won't end up needing, I will still have a year of useless, unneeded courses to take next year. Honestly, every student should not have to fulfill the same number of credits. It's ridiculous to have to spend more time in college than absolutely necessary based on a generalization for all majors. I don't want to spend an extra semester here taking four additional courses that will mean nothing to me, ever. Something should be changed so that when you are done with all of your Gen Eds, your major, and if you choose to have a minor, your minor, you should be allowed to graduate.

I know that some students may choose the fastest major on campus just so they can obtain a degree, but many students choose to go to graduate school, medical school, or law school. Prospective medical school applicants take a ton of science classes that will keep them in school for four years or more. For those who will apply to graduate school, their undergraduate education may easily cause them to be in school for four years, depending on the major. And for students who want to go to law school, four years of undergraduate education is to be expected. So for many people, four years is a requirement. But for some students like me, it should not be.

I am planning to go to law school one year after I graduate college (yes, I'm taking a year off). And if I'm in school for an extra semester, I will be delaying my entrance for a year and a half, simply because I have to complete extra credits that I don't need to enhance my education. I'm trying to work out a plan to graduate in four years and catch up to where I should be, but it looks like that is going to be hard.

No one should be in my situation, forced to try to catch up to graduate on time. I honestly believe that if a person is done with their Gen Eds, their major, and whatever else they're doing in college, and feels confident with their education, screw the number of required credits. You should be allowed to graduate. I want to, and so do others in my circumstances.

Emily Vacanti is a Collegian columnist

Mona wallows in a puddle of mediocrity

By Wes Wrightson
Collegian Staff

Directed by Nick Gomez with Donny DeVito, Bette Midler
Neve Campbell
Playing at Showcase Cinemas

One would think a film with an all-star cast like this (Bette Midler of the Divine Ms. M and the rest of the world refers to her, Neve Campbell and Danny DeVito in a film like Drowning Mona) would soar to great heights. Instead it sinks like a 0.0 on a GPA.

Drowning Mona is a whimsical black comedy in which the murder victim is treated to endless, and highly absurd, whodunit. Only the whodunit takes a seven backseat to the myriad complex feuds and squabbling between the many characters. The cast of characters are all mediocre at best and their commander-in-chief is the lovable Danny DeVito. He, too, is funny at times, but mostly I was aggravated by my self-wrought waiting for it to end. The previews before the movie were actually better than the film itself.

The film was well cast, but it seems no character had any real depth. Danny DeVito and Bette Midler last starred together way back in 1984's Ruthless People (which also starred Oliver Platt and Bill Pullman) but that film is just a golden memory now.

Drowning Mona's humor resides mostly in the characters that live in the dim backwater of Verplanck, NY. The residents of this town do nothing but fewer the Nation's IQ.

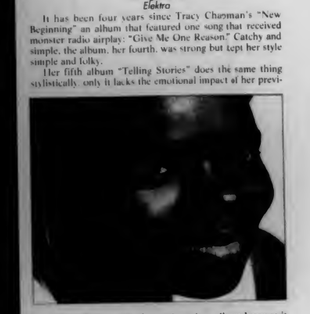
The story follows Mona Dearly (Midler), who is hated by nearly everyone in the small town. In the film's opening moments, we are treated to Mona's death as her car careens off a cliff (which look as if it could have been in California). Anyway, since Mona is hated by nearly everyone in the town, everyone is a suspect. Mona is seriously one mean-spirited woman. The sheriff in charge of the investigation is Wyatt Rash (DeVito), and he handles the case with his usual aplomb: methodically and intricately. Any number of people in the town could have killed the ol' hag.

The cast of usual suspects (and a very simpleton cast at that) begins with Jeff: Mona's stub-armed son who drinks beer and has a short fuse. Jeff also is a landscaping partner to Bobby Calzone (played by Casey Affleck). Bobby is engaged to be married to Wyatt rash's self-absorbed daughter (Neve Campbell) named Ellen. Then there is Phil. Mona's estranged husband who has liaisons with a sexy waitress named Rona (Jamie Lee Curtis). Phil is a simpleton-like character who insists that he was the one who was the sufferer in the marriage. Rona is no slouch herself, as she is two-timing on Phil with his own son, Jeff.

Among the other various dim-witted folk are: Feege (Peter Dobson) a

Turn to MONA, page 7

Tracy Chapman's lastest album Telling Stories fails to measure up to her previous standards



Chapman's newest lacks emotional sizzle

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

Tracy Chapman
Telling Stories
Elektra

It has been four years since Tracy Chapman's "New Beginning" an album that featured one song that received monster radio airplay: "Give Me One Reason." Catchy and simple, the album, her fourth, was strong but kept her style simple and folky.

Her fifth album "Telling Stories" does the same thing stylistically, only it lacks the emotional impact of her previous effort. She seems to have released an album because it was time to release another album, not because she was really moved to release an album, an unfortunate event. Standards for Chapman have been high since her first release, 1988's self-titled "Tracy Chapman" which featured both "Fast Car" and songs that were able to emotionally impact listeners.

"Telling Stories" lack of emotionally impacting songs is what leads to its eventual ho-hum sound. Starting with the first track, probably the only song that will be the recipient of much air-play, "Telling Stories" is a fine song, a good listen, and not much more. Instead, the album lags after the first song.

Alternately telling stories of personal experience of relationship and politics, the songs feature what is an almost country sound at times, something that might be fine if they meshed at all, rather the sound insomnia-hat contrived.

A stripped down song with an Irish sound in the background, Chapman sings on "Paper and Ink" that "Money is only paper/only ink" a fine observation but one made countless times before and in no way gaining from

Turn to CHAPMAN, page 9

Mona

continued from page 6

strutting cop, a resourceful auto mechanic named Lucinda, and a snooping old coot named Clarence. The film is moderately amusing at times. That, I have to admit. One example is the various versions of how Jeff lost his hand; all of the versions have Jeff reaching for a beer. The love/hate relationship between Bobby and Jeff also is good for a few laughs. However, the pace of the film really slows down after the killer is identified, and that is what ruins the film in the long run.

The director of the film is Nick Gomez who brought us such fare as Laws of Gravity, New Jersey Drive, and Illtown. He has been on a little hiatus from big screen features as of late (he's been doing cutting-edge TV like episodes of "Oz," and "The Sopranos"). Gomez extracts potent comedy from the lame script here and does the best he can with the cast and the dialogue.

The actor who made the biggest impression on me was Mona's son Jeff (played by Marcus Thomas). Jamie Lee Curtis also did all that she was asked to, by playing a character who believes that life has passed her by. DeVito is the only character here who exudes any sort of calm – a departure from the loudmouth characters he usually plays. All in all Drowning Mona is a film that is only slightly amusing and barely tolerable. There are some funny moments, but mostly it was all stuff I have already seen or heard from actors who I actually cared about. C

Read Arts online at www.dailycollegian.com

Alternative Spring Break: Cape offers viable vacation

By Alaura Wilfert
Collegian Correspondent

CAPE COD – We all need to take the time to relax and go on vacation, especially when exams and papers have transformed life into an ulcer-inducing world of stress. Time, somehow, can always be made for vacationing, but what about money? We all know college students are "broke" and mom and dad eventually get tired of dishing out the cash. Since leisure is essential to human life but funds are a scarcity, Cape Cod's off-season deals are a perfect solution.

Cape Cod, known as a bustling summer vacation locale, is often overlooked during the winter season. Many summer travelers assume that after the sunshine season is over, Cape Cod shuts down, becoming a large ghost town.

Cape Cod might be unfortunately overlooked, but it is definitely not forgotten. In the last three years it has actually become a popular winter vacation site.

"The winter's not yet as crazy as the summer but it seems to be getting livelier every year. Folks keep coming this way for the cheap fares and those nature walks," George Duggan, a ten-year resident of the Cape, said. "Something always seems to be going on."

The Cape Cod community, with roughly 200,000 people living there year-round, has practically doubled in the last ten years. Far from an isolated winter ghost town, it has become one of the fastest growing communities in New England. Even with this population increase, there is still plenty of open space for those looking for solitude or a quiet getaway – at least in the winter.

So with the mixture of a large residential population and an enormous increase in winter tourists, Cape Cod's off-season is thriving with luxurious hotel accommodations, fabulous restaurants, and a long list of activities all for the right prices.

> " "The winter's not yet as crazy as the summer but it seems to be getting livelier every year. Folks keep coming this way for the cheap fares and those nature walks," George Duggan, a ten-year resident of the Cape, said. "Something always seems to be going on."

> "Cape Cod is a nature lover's dream in both summer and winter. It is complete with beautiful ocean views, sandy wooded paths, and marvelous wildlife. The Cape's winter climate is generally mild – perfect for walks on the beach or hikes through the summer bike trails."

The first thing on every money conscious traveler's mind is where to stay that's in the budget. During the off-season, many small oceanfront motels and bed and breakfasts are closed, but most inns and chain motels are now open year round. Inns, with their gracious hospitality, laid back atmosphere, and cozy fireside sitting rooms, are ideal for a romantic getaway. Motel chains, however, provide the perfect environment for UMass party groups to crash over spring break without upsetting too many love-frenzy couples.

The Colonial House Inn on Route 6A in Yarmouth Port is the lovers' paradise. Constructed in the 1730's and extensively renovated over the last 270 years, the inn provides a combination of colonial elegance with present day luxuries. Nestled into a picturesque street lined with stately trees, this inn is a delight to the eye. The spacious guestrooms are all individually decorated with hand-painted vases and framed landscapes, as well as furnished with antiques. Arranged primarily for couples, the rooms all have one double, queen, or king size beds; cots are available to families for an extra fee.

In addition to the charming guestrooms, the inn has a year round heated swimming pool, a two-person jacuzzi, three intimate dining rooms, a small bar, and lovely gardens.

The inn also offers "theme weekends" and "mystery weekends" throughout the winter. The "theme weekends" are planned around Cape cultural events and festivals. The "theme weekends" allow the guests to play as characters in a murder mystery. Their job is to solve the murder.

"What do you think you're on vacation here?" Malcolm I. Perna, the Innkeeper, said jokingly. "We like our guests to relax, with comfort and cocktails."

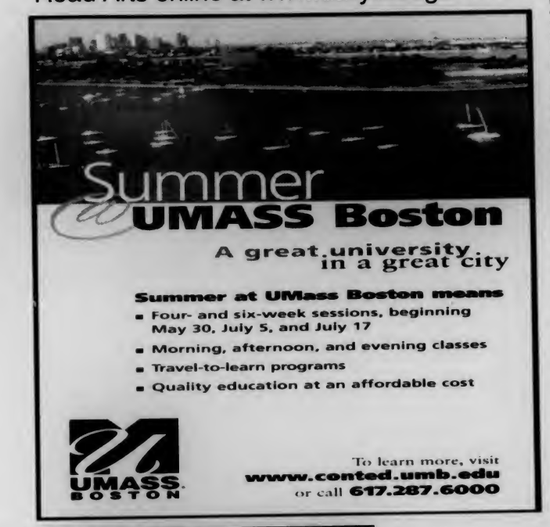
Surprisingly, this historic inn is inexpensive during the winter season. November 2nd through April 30th, the room rates are $85.00 a night, Sunday through Thursday and $105.00 a night, Friday and Saturday. The room fee includes a light breakfast for two and an incredible dinner, with choices from their 14-entree menu.

If romance is not part of your vacation plans and partying is the route you want to take, a chain motel, like Days Inn, is the better choice. Days Inn, on Route 132 in Hyannis, is simple and affordable. The large rooms are scarcely decorated – less things for "drunk" college student's to break. The rooms come moderately equipped with a

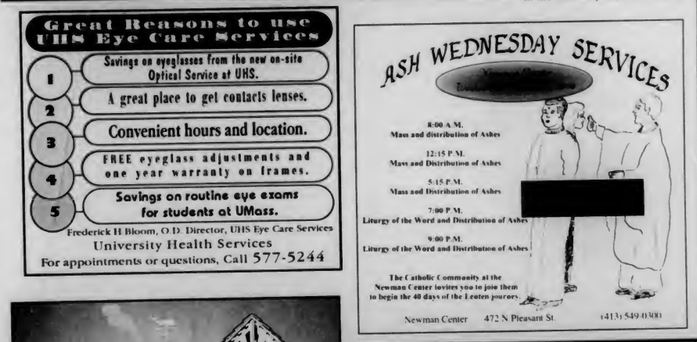
Turn to CAPE, page8

Local Choir Debuts

By Kristi Ceccarossi
Collegian Staff



Next month the Chamber Choir will perform a new piece by local composer Dr. Ronald Perera, an award winning faculty member at Smith College. Perera's work "The Golden Door" is a multi-part composition written in homage to those who came to the United States despite adversity, despite conditions at Ellis Island, with hope and aspiration in the late 1800's and early 1900's.

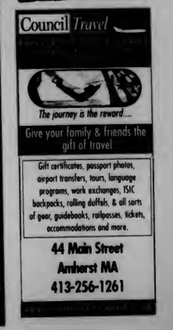


Dr. E. Wayne Abercrombie, UMass faculty member and conductor of the Chamber Choir described the piece as an aspect of community, heritage, relationships — the qualities we associated with the word 'home.'

"The Golden Door" is not only distinct in its subject matter, but also in its design. The final movement of Perera's piece is comprised of speaking names of those who have immigrated to this country, called out by the choir and audience.

Abercrombie is hoping to make this performance an opportunity for the Chamber Choir to personalize Perera's music to the University by using names from people of the area who have themselves, or have ancestors who have immigrated to America. With the permission of Perera and with the support of the student and faculty population, next month the choir will be able to do just that.

Anyone interested in submitting his or her name or the name of a relative or friend should contact Abercrombie as soon as possible at ewa@music.umass.edu.



www.dailydcollegian.com

THE LALLY
SCHOOL
AT RENSSELAER

Management and technology.

Application and innovation.

GET THE JUMP
On The New Economy
The Lally School at Rensselaer.
Business savvy for a world gone digital.

The MBA@Rensselaer

why not change the world?™

Rensselaer
http://lallyschool.rpi.edu 518.276.6586

Cape

continued from page 7

bed(s), cable TV, a dresser, a table, a telephone, and a full bathroom. All the rooms also have sliding glass doors that lead out onto a small balcony. The motel offers both smoking and non-smoking rooms.

In addition to the rooms, the motel provides guests with a large indoor swimming pool, a Jacuzzi, and a coffee shop.

The rates for the off-season, as anticipated, are low. The rooms are $72 a night during the winter season. A continental breakfast of coffee, juice, muffins and bagels is included in the room fee.

We all need to eat sometime, and Cape Cod is known for its fabulous restaurants. Most restaurants stay open all year, except the small seafood or clam shacks that line the oceanfront. There's only two ways you can go for food: expensive or cheap. Cape Cod has both price ranges but during the off-season even some of the most expensive restaurants lower their prices.

The Old Yarmouth Inn, on Route 6A, is a cozy wood-paneled restaurant suitable for couples or small groups – not the party hang out. It is on the expensive side, but worth the extra money for incredible food and friendly service. If you like your drinks on the spicy side, start with their bloody Mary, followed by a delicious garden salad with their creamy garlic house dressing. For an entree, the chicken marsala is superb. Also recommended by their waitresses is the tomato basil bisque or their make-your-own pizzas. Make sure you save room for their elegant desserts. Their New York-style cheesecake topped with fresh strawberries is unbelievable.

If cheap food with a relaxed bar atmosphere is on your agenda, then the Squire is the place to go. The Squire, in the center of Chatham, offers a unique blend of "crazy" locals and partying tourists. Its specialties are steamers, fried clams, and beer. The bar, occupied by drunken excitement, is the place to sit, to meet the locals or to watch a game on TV.

COURTESY DON SCHWARTZ

Outdoors lovers might consider spending their Spring Break on sunny, affordable Cape Cod.

Even during the winter months, there is always something to do on Cape Cod – commune with nature or live it up at the nightclubs.

Cape Cod is a natute lover's dream in both summer and winter. It is complete with beautiful ocean views, sandy wooded paths, and marvelous wildlife. The Cape's winter climate is generally mild – perfect for walks on the beach or hikes through the "summer" bike trails. A camera is a necessity for these outdoor adventures.

"I always see people frolicking in the woods — no matter how damn cold it is out there," Mr. Duggan said.

Nature is not for everyone but don't fret, there's always the nightlife. The Mill Hill on Route 132 in West Yarmouth is a fun bar and dance club. It is open during the day but the "good times" don't start until about 9:30 p.m. From 3-8 p.m. the bar is serving up drinks and pool is free. At roughly 9 p.m., on most weekdays and weekends, "theme" night begins. The Mill House regularly puts up a calendar of bizarre themes, like Brazil night or 80s night, and their corresponding weeknights. During these "theme nights," 19-year-olds and up are permitted into the club with a valid I.D. –under 21-year-olds must be in the club before 11:30 p.m. to remain for the night. The club requires a $10 cover charge for the bands and drinks are standard bar prices.

The Mill House, open all night, is hopping with locals and tourists. It's a great place to party, dance the night away, and meet new people.

With Spring Break approaching quickly and weekends always five days apart, don't overlook what Cape Cod's off-season has to offer. If your "wealthy" friends are planning an expensive week in Jamaica that you can't afford, there's always the other option. Remember the Cape's only two hours away from the Amherst area.

Collegian
Accounting Cl
ALL MAJORS WELCOME TO APPLY
Work 8 hours p
flexible sc
Must possess stro
and communica
Deadline for appl
Friday, M
Contact Christine Carroll for more info pick up applications in Rm. 113 in Campus Center Basemen

STUDENT EMPLOYEES
W·A·N·T·E·D
Summer Conference Housing is looking for YOU!

How about a summer job that is here on the UMASS campus and lets you meet new people everyday?

JOBS

How about working with a department that will host over 9,000 people on the UMASS campus this summer?

February 22- March 31, 2000 applications for Summer Conference Housing positions will be available in the University Conference
Services Office, 918 Campus Center.

Completed applications are due by April 7, 2000.

Thomas

continued from page 12

well that the squad would be leaning even more heavily on her for that lift, with five freshmen comprising the meat of a team long on enthusiasm but short on experience. Those increased expectations may have gotten to the 21 year-old in the season's early goings; Thomas weathered an abysmal shooting slump over the first month of the '99-00 slate that saw her averages drop right off the table.

But as any seasoned athlete will tell you, the cure for performance woes is to take a step back, evaluate your role and get back to basics. With O'Brien shifting her fiery senior between the point and shooting guard spots over a variety of games, Thomas was able to reestablish her rhythm and produce for the Maroon and White.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Tonia Thomas

"This year, my shot hasn't fallen like it had in the past," Thomas said. "That's forced me to take on a little different role. Playing the point, I've been trying to get other people open and get them shots. But whatever my role, I'm still always trying to just make that play, and make something happen."

Perhaps the biggest factor in helping Thomas shoulder that disappointing stretch was the uncanny togetherness of the UMass squad. Being over 2,000 miles from home and having your shot feel about that far off would be too much for a lot of student-athletes to bear, but Thomas had a virtual second family to look to for support when her confidence started to falter. And that's a luxury that she has been blessed with for much of her athletic life.

"I've been fortunate in the past to have teammates that were very close to me, so that's nothing new," Thomas said. "But from my point of view, my teammates here are like my 10 other sisters. I'm all the way up here from Texas, so this is my family away from my family. These girls have been here for me just like I've been there for them, whatever the situation."

Situations in which to shine have indeed come for Tonia Thomas during a distractingly inconsistent season overall for the team. She shredded UNC-Charlotte for 16 points and five rebounds in a November 21 road loss, then dropped 10 more points on Holy Cross two days later in yet another disappointing defeat. She would again reach the 16-point plateau in UMass' 60-54 home win over Furman three days after Christmas, but her best game of the year would come two weeks later, when she bombed the Bunnies of St. Bonaventure with a season-high 17 points on January 9 at Mullins.

"Last year, I'd come into the game and hit a couple threes to get things going," Thomas said. "This year, I kind of picked my spots. St. Bonaventure was one of those games."

But just as a well-timed trifecta can often be worth more than just three points, Thomas' flashes of brilliance have often been as devastating to her opposition as a dagger. The senior cites her team's February 24 showdown with Fordham, in which the Rams crawled back from a sizeable early deficit only to be buried by a pair of Thomas treys.

"I may have struggled with the three a little this year, compared to last year, but I'm still very comfortable with it," Thomas said. "When we played Fordham this year at home, they started coming back on us. But then I hit a big three that changed the whole game around. A shot like that, at the right time, can pick up the whole team."

With such a fully stocked arsenal of basketball ballistics at her disposal, Thomas seems like a defender's worst nightmare. So how would the mighty Minutewoman go about shutting down a player of her own caliber?

"Guarding Tonia Thomas is definitely going to be tiring," Thomas said. "I'm just always moving, sprinting up and down the floor. I don't jump when I shoot; I just line it up and release it. And when I'm on point, you never know when I'm going to take it to the hole, dish it off to one of my teammates, or shoot the ball. I think if I had to guard myself, I'd do a lot of homework and watch a lot of film."

In a mouthful, stopping Tonia Thomas borders on impossible. That's one reason her coach of the last two years foresees the Lone Star State product leaving a lasting impression wherever her next journey takes her.

"I think it would've been fun to have Tonia for four years," O'Brien said. "She's a kid that has enough personality, and knows how to talk to people, so that I think she's going to have a chance to be very successful in whatever she tries to do in life."

banner

continued from page 12

Georgetown limping into the Big East Tournament, the Colonials closed by winning nine of their final 12 contests, all conference wins that propelled them to a first-round bye, leap-frogging pre-season favorite Xavier. Tom Penders' crew landed just 15 wins, so its only ticket to the prom comes with a conference tournament title. It just depends which team shows – the one that beat Maryland in early December – or the one that succumbed to Bradley three days later.

By no means is the Atlantic 10 where it used to be, having temporarily stolen the "Beast of the East" label away from the Big East a few years back. However, the conference has lost its flavor. Temple replaced UMass as the potential title contender of the bunch, with Dayton as its wingman. The conference's RPI has plummeted as many of the basement teams have dreadful strengths of schedule and many poor losses.

Kevin Lyde's reinstatement will be huge for the Owls. Coach John Chanes suspended the sophomore center indefinitely on Friday pending an investigation into payment for a summer school class in 1997, while Lyde was still attending Oak Hill Academy in Washington, D.C. Temple Athletic Director Dave O'Brien restored his eligibility effective immediately.

It hardly marred yesterday's Atlantic 10 award ceremony, where Temple nearly took home all the hardware. Sanchez reeled in conference player of the year, Chaney top coach honors and Lynn Greer the A-10's Sixth Man Award. In addition, Mark Karcher landed all-conference team honors, joining Sanchez, Dayton pivot Mark Ashman, UMass sharpshooter Monty Mack and St. Bonaventure floor general Tim Winn.

Brett Mauser is a Collegian columnist.

Chapman

continued from page 6

Chapman's description. Her songs of relationships feel like she saying things that either her, or others, have said before. In "Devotion" and "Wedding Song" Chapman sings of, in the first case, nothing more than her devotion, over and over simply stating and in the second, discussing her dreams of her wedding, certainly sweet, but the song runs long.

Which isn't to say that the songs aren't good, simply that, by standards that Chapman has set for herself, "Telling Stories" falls well short, unfortunate since, by her time frame, we won't hear from her again for another four years.

C+

www.DailyCollegian.com

EXPANDED HORIZONS
Day Spa
Tanning • Hot Tub • Massage • Body Wraps
Spring Break Special
10% Student Discount
Buy Any Unlimited Tanning Package and receive a Free Bottle of Australian Gold Accelerator
529-9996 31 Union • Easthampton
LOOK & FEEL GREAT !!!

Indifferent front office drives class act away

Bourque will never be forgotten for his miracle moments on ice

Matt Despres on the NHL

It wasn't supposed to end like this.

Somewhere, somehow, there is a flaw in the script, a missing line or page that neatly ties everything together. When we wake up in the morning, it will all be okay.

Except that, no matter how many times we close and open our eyes, it won't be. Raymond Bourque was supposed to be great; it turns out he was the best. He was supposed to play forever; 20 years and counting is about as close as you get. He was supposed to finish as a member of the Boston Bruins, the only professional organization he had known in his career. There was no written agreement or contract. That was just the way it was.

Though he will now give his body and talent to the Colorado Avalanche, the city of Boston has his heart forever. Regardless of team, city or location, Ray Bourque will always be a Boston Bruin. He came to Boston as an innocent young player full of promise, and will take his place in the Hall of Fame wearing the black and gold.

Some of the comics who fascinate themselves with the Boston pro sports scene will call him a traitor, claiming he jumped ship in the team's darkest hour. But really, who was the one to jump? Bruins ownership took the plunge long ago, leaving the team in such a poor state that even Bourque, the ultimate symbol of loyalty and dedication, was fed up with the obvious lack of desire surrounding the organization. It takes quite a bit of prodding to drive a man of his character away from the only place he has known since his teenage years. Apparently owner Jeremy Jacobs didn't mind, which isn't all that surprising: the loss of Bourque wouldn't weigh too heavily on the mind of someone that is indifferent towards the game of hockey.

The simple fact that he was there everyday is something we took for granted as in life, it takes the departure of a friend to truly realize how important they are. Bourque was a friend to every man, woman and child that ever crossed his path, and was equally important to them all. Though it is a significant loss for Boston, we should feel happy that Colorado, for a short time at least, gets to experience this remarkable individual. How many games he plays for them is irrelevant; he will leave a huge mark on the city and every player that sits in the dressing room with him.

The highlight reels of Ray Bourque will spin repeatedly in the coming weeks, showcasing the special moments he brought to us all. Remember the night back in 1990, an epic three-overtime affair between Boston and Edmonton that saw both teams exhausted and trying to claim game one of the finals? Down by two in the third period, it was Ray Bourque that lifted a tired Bruin club on his back, netting two goals and forcing overtime. Though the Oilers' Peter Klima rather outlassed the Bruins, an entire second game was played that night because of one man. Even the Garden lights had to take a breather and enjoy the show.

How about December 3, 1987, a night repeatedly singled out by the captain himself as a highlight of his tenure in Boston? Shedding his No. 7 in honor of Phil Esposito, Bourque adopts No. 77 for himself, forging a new identity that will live forever in Bruins history. The class displayed by the young Bourque that night was something that has not been topped.

Or maybe it has. Who can forget the night when the Boston Garden sadly shut its doors for the last time, and Bourque escorted Normand Leveille around the Garden ice? Leveille, who saw his career cut off at the start by a brain hemorrhage, beamed with pride as Bourque took his arm and skated around the fabled arena. It's only fitting that the one man that can top a Ray Bourque moment is Ray Bourque.

Certainly to be included in this highlight reel for the ages is the All-Star game of 1996, held at the Fleetcenter in Boston. With 37 ticks left on the clock a wide-open Bourque busted over the blueline and lifted a perfect backhander into the top corner, winning the game and securing himself game MVP honors. The Boston crowd, so often spoiled by his Herculean feats, rose once again to honor their captain.

While the highlights will appeal to us all, it will be the Boston fans that delight in recalling the subtleties of his game – his ability to block shots, his exciting rushes up the ice, and later in his career, the sniper like passes along the wings – his minute-logged per game, a thing of legend as his age increased and the minutes grew with him – the way he killed penalties, and then jumped over the boards seconds later to quarterback a power play – his vision, his humble nature – his heart. He will continue to execute these things to perfection each night, but it won't be for us anymore. And that will be the hardest thing.

It Bourque wins a cup with his new team, we should stand by him with all of our support; however, after two decades with one team, how much will another logo on his ring mean? In the end though, it should not matter. Cup or no cup, there is nothing that can take away from what Bourque has given to this town for half of his life. He will always be ours, and that alone is worth more than any trophy. He will always belong to us.

Matthew Despres is a Collegian Columnist.

Beantown mourns as Bourque gets trade wish to wrong team

By Matthew Despres
Collegian Staff

BOSTON – "We love you Ray, wherever you play," proclaimed a sign held in the outstretched arms of a young fan at the Fleet Center on Monday night. The boy, far too young to remember anything much beyond the past few NHL seasons, acted as a voice that spoke for 21 years worth of Bruins fans.

And so, life without Raymond Bourque began on Monday night for the Boston Bruins as they took to the ice against the Ottawa Senators. A mist of black and gold clad fans filtered through the turnstiles, quiet for the most part and detached from the game at hand – a disaster of a performance in which the Bruins were handed a 5-1 loss. The long faces in the crowd came together as a mirror, reflecting the apathy that the Bruins were wading through on the ice.

Technically, Bourque was still a Bruin at the time the trade that would send him and veteran teammate Dave Andreychuk to the Colorado Avalanche didn't officially come down until around 9:30 p.m., leaving most fans in the dark until the post-game exodus onto Causeway Street. For all intent and purposes though, he was gone, caught someplace between Beantown and the details that the Bruins brass were busy hammering out with interested clubs. The fans that made it out to the Fleet were determined to hold onto No. 77 for at least one more evening.

"Ray Bourque is not an icon, he's not a legend; he's a god," said Ian Parag Shah, a lifelong supporter of the Bruins. "I'm disappointed he did not play tonight, but I knew the circumstances and wanted to be here either way. It would have been great to see him one more time."

The feeling was shared by Randy Straight and his son Chris, both of whom traveled from New Hampshire on the outside chance that they might witness the final act in one of sports most enduring tales.

"We realized this could be his final game," said Chris, watching the pre-game skate from his balcony seat. "If he doesn't play, though, I'd like to see him acknowledge the crowd somehow tonight."

There was no dramatic farewell, and no official announcement of any kind. Bourque, who has spent the last 20 years quietly becoming a legend, left town in the same manner he played: deflecting all attention directed his way. His decision not to speak to the media before yesterday morning at Logan International Airport was a gesture that left fans wondering if he should have, or could have, handled the situation differently.

"He didn t say goodbye. He should have said goodbye," said Darlene Sipple, a Saugus resident and season ticket holder, whose support of Bourque will not fade with his shedding of the Bruin sweater.

A FleetCenter employee, who wished to remain anonymous, thinks Bourque did the right thing. "It's a shame he had to go, of course. He's a quiet guy, though, and it's better he leave this way."

Or perhaps, better had he not left at all. The Avalanche is a team with undeniable talent, but a severe identity problem at a critical point in the season. The possibility that the Avalanche could miss the playoffs, however slight it is, is something that has not been lost on the fans.

"I wish he had been traded to a better team," said disappointed fan Brendan Cheney, who was weary of the unclear Colorado situation. "Hopefully he comes back and plays another year."

Thai Corner
On Boltwood Walk
Eat In - Take Out
Lunch: Monday - Saturday 11:30 - 3:00
Dinner: Sunday - Thursday 5:00 - 9:00
Friday - Saturday 5:00 - 10:00
OCMP Welcome
Home-style Thai Cooking rice + noodles
flavorful entrees
Best Pad Thai in town.
31 Boltwood Walk, Amherst, MA 253-1639

NEW! TREADMILLS: THE FUTURE IS NOW!
ANOTHER AAC EXCLUSIVE
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
256-0080
SO. AMHERST
www.amherstathletic.com

UMass
INTRAMURAL SPORTS
STILL TIME TO ENTER:
Softball (M/W/C).....A.S.A.P.
Co-rec Soccer (M/W).....A.S.A.P.
Volleyball Special (C).....A.S.A.P.
OFFICIALS NEEDED
Softball Clinics.....3/20, 3/22, 3/24, 3/24
Co-rec Soccer Clinics.....3/22, 3/23, 3/24
Volleyball Special.....3/21
Don't Miss The... ACTION
Call for times and locations.
More Info:
215 Boyden, 5-2693
On the Web: http://www.umass.edu/umsa

THOSE POOR BASTARDS IN FLORIDA ARE GOING TO MISS THE REAL "SPRING BREAK"

ALL 24 TAPS, 2.25 PINTS INCLUDING GUINNESS, BASS, PETE'S, MAGIC HAT, LONG TRAIL, BLUE MOON, NEWCASTLE

MARCH 9-18

THE HANGAR
Pub and Grill

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENT

CANTONES' PIZZA- for fast delivery to UMass see our menu and coupons at www.cantones.com

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Apply now for best locations. Amherst Center 1,2 and 3 bedroom apartments. Gas heat, hardwood floor. April showings for June and September. Lincoln Real Estate. No fees charged. 253-7879.

Apply now for best locations. 3 bedroom condos. Gas heat, hardwood floors, bright heated basement with study and laundry area. 1/2 mile to campus, on bus route. April showings for June and September. Lincoln Real Estate. No fees charged. 253-7879.

AUTO FOR SALE

'79 Jeep l/10 Pu 4x4, V8, VT with plow. Runs great. $2000. 538-7608.

'87 Volvo Wagon. 180,000 miles auto, $1300.00 o/b/o 256-0776.

AUTO FOR SALE

1980 Jetta rebuilt engine, new clutch, new brakes. Always starts. Runs like a demon. $600 586-0534.

'92 Subaru Loyale wagon 4x4. Clean, runs great, air, power, roofrack. $2500.00 o.b.o. 665-0453.

COMPUTERS

Laptop blowout! Brand new IBM = Toshiba laptops! Now only $890. Don't miss out on this amazing deal. Supply is limited. infinity101@looksmart.com 546-7665.

EMPLOYMENT

COPYWRITER Part-time, student preferred. (413)536-5086 12-7pm.

Connect to the future. International company seeks PC users. $25-75k potential. 1-888-827-9733 www.roadforsuccess.com

Get paid $$ to surf the web cu2freedom.com

EMPLOYMENT

3 Job Opportunities on Nantucket Island, MA beginning May. A.) Office manager with good typing, computer and telephone skills. B.) Office assistant, errand runner, mother's helper, household help. C.) Auction gallary assistant: furniture porter, display, delivery. Salary and housing. Drivers liscence required. (508)228-3942 or send reume: P.O. Box 2607 Nantucket, MA 02548.

Movers: Local moving company is hiring individuals for moving positions. Flexibility and good attitudes are a must. Start at $8.00 per hour. Raise commensurate with performance. Call 584-4746.

$$$Summer Cash$$$. Student bussiness Mngmt/sales position with national firm. Pays $10-12 plus commission. Available to Soph, Jr and Sr only. For info go to http://www.jablon.com

EMPLOYMENT

Full and Part-time summer job opportunities available. Crabapple whitewater raft guides. No experience necessary. We will train. Must be athletic and hard working and have previous costomer service experience. Afternoon trip co-ordinator. Requires previous customer service experience. Job involves greeting guests, managing retail store and co-ordinating afternoon river trips. Call 413-339-0188 for application and/or more information.

Summer Employment; Outdoors. Weight loss/sports camp looking for energetic people to lead campers in a fun filled summer. Located in West Stockbridge, MA. in the heart of the Berkshires. Call for more information. Toll Free 877-FIT-CAMP. email marc@camp-kingsmont.com

Exotic dancers Wanted. Earn $500-1000 weekly. Call Exotica 532-8888.

EMPLOYMENT

Camp Canadensis, Pocono Mountains, PA. Premier residential coed summer camp. We are looking for energetic, qualified and caring staff to teach all general athletics, gymnastics, hockey, tennis, mountain bikes, golf, motorcycles, outdoor adventure, ropes, archery, drama, video, photography, fishing, WSI, waterfront activities, arts and crafts, cooking and much more! Excellent facilities and great salary! 6/21/00-8/18/00. Call (800)832-8228 or apply on-line: www.canadensis.com

UAHC Crane Lake and Eisner Camps, Reform Jewish co-educational Camps located in the Berkshires of Massachusetts, seek qualified, dedicated counselors and specialists, including Waterfront, Athletics, Arts. Good salary, r&b included, travel assistance. Crane Lake Camp: Contact Brad Gerstle, 800-227-2660 ILUVCAMP@aol.com; www.cranelake-camp.com. Eisner Camp: Contact Louis Bordman, 212-650-4130 EISNERGUY@aol.com; www.eisner-camp.org

LOST & FOUND

Lost a black cd case with 23 cds. If found please call 546-4596. Thanks.

MISCELLANEOUS

Get paid to lose weight and inches. All natural, doctor reccommended. 1-800-397-7715.

Score big, score often with mybytes.com. Register today and get a free CD of cool music and much more.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Beautiful 5 Bedroom House. 10 minutes from campus and on bus route. Call immediately! 256-2384.

ROOM WANTED

21/m looking for a place to stay. Now til 6/1. Call Nik @ 549-3826.

SERVICES

Know your rights. Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

STEREO EQUIPMENT

Boston Acoustic sub/sat series. Six 8" speakers with two 16" subwoofers. Also central channel speaker. $800 value for $300. Like brand new. Need money 586-0534.

TRAVEL

Study Spanish. Internships in Guatemala. College Credit. www.casaxelaju.com (512)416-6991.

#1 Panama City Vacations! Party Beachfront @ The Boardwalk, Summit Condo's, and Mark II. 1-800-234-7007. www.endlesssummertours.com

TRAVEL

#1 Spring break Vacations! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas & Florida! Book it now! All major credit cards accepted! 1-800-234-7007. www.endlesssummertours.com

There's plenty of space to get your ads in The Collegian classifieds!! Call us at 545-ODAY (6329)

Five College Community Calendar

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 8

Meeting – There will be a Mandala Pioneer Valley special meeting on volunteer recruitment and training for Bike Week 2000 from 8-9 p.m. in the Grey Coal Lounge in the Student Union. There will be free pizza provided. Contact Nathan at 256-8165 or James at 586-4088 for more information.

Meeting – The Stuttering Support Group will beat 7 p.m. in Arnold House room 411. Call Lisa at 577-4023 for more information.

Open House – There will be an open house and open mic night in the Graduate Lounge of the Campus Center from 7-10 p.m.

Speech – A speech entitled "Crossing Genders and Genres" will be given at 12:30 p.m. in Herter 301.

THURSDAY, MARH 9

Lecture – Pat Griffin, Professor of Social Justice Education at UMass, and Matt Ouellett, Associate Director of the Center for Teaching at UMass, will present a lecture entitled "Making Schools Safe for LBGT Students: A Look at What Schools are Doing." The lecture begins at 12:30 p.m. in room 903 of the Campus Center.

Speech – The Graduate Women's Network/Women's Studies department will host Betty Reid Mandell and panel speaking on women's economic rights from 3-5 p.m. in room 903 of the Campus Center.

Workshop – A workshop on contraception and safer sex will be held at 3 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services. Men and women are welcome.

NOTICES

Community – Spring 2000 final examination schedules will be available beginning March 9. Copies will be delivered to students in residence halls; and will be available to off-campus students in the registrar's office. The schedule will be available on the Web beginning March 1.

Community – Mass Appeal, the newest co-ed a cappella group at UMass, is looking for students to arrange music. Email Erica at massappeal@mailcity.com for more information.

Help – From Feb. 15-April 13 on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays from 5-8 p.m. student volunteers from the School of Management will assist non-resident aliens with the preparation of their Federal and State income tax returns. Call 545-5603 for more information.

Nominations – Nominations are now open for the offices of President, Trustee, and all Area Governments Officers. Nomination forms may be signed out at the Student Government Association office in 420 Student Union and are due by March 8.

Scholarships – The STEMTEC/NSF Teaching Scholars program is offering scholarships to students who are interested in exploring a career in K-12 mathematics or science teaching. Students do not need to be enrolled in a certificate program to apply. Applications are due by April 1. Contact Johanna at 545-0626 for more information.

Support – A grief support group is available to all students who have experienced the death of someone they love. The small and confidential group will meet on Wednesdays and Thursdays evenings. Telephone pre-screening is required for enrollment. Call 577-5316 if interested.

Support – Al-ANON and ALATEEN are offering local meetings for those affected by someone else's drinking problem. Call 253-5261 for meeting times and locations.

Voting – A reminder to registered voters: A voter can only vote absentee due to absence from his/her residence community during polling hours, physical disability preventing the voter from going to a polling place, or religious belief. For more information call 256-4035.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

BOOKBUCKS™ From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks,* you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

Ustore CAMPUS CENTER

Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

HSCN 4 Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	31	Gavel to Gavel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	32	NBC/22 Springfield
4	CBS/4 Boston	33	CNN Headline News
5	ABC/5 Boston	34	CNN
6	PBS/57 Springfield	35	CNN Fn
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	36	CNN Si
8	UPN/20 Hartford	37	TBS
9	Weather Channel	38	BET
10	NBC/30 New Britain	39	College TV Network
11	Fox/61 Hartford	40	Univision
12	PBS/24 Hartford	41	Comedy Central
13	WCVH & HSCN	42	Cartoon Network
14	International	43	TV Land
15	UMass Academic TV	44	C-Span 3
16	WB/New Haven	45	ZDTV (Tentative)
17	Sundance	46	Bloomberg Financial Network
18	The Learning Channel	47	History Channel
19	UVC-TV19	48	HSCN Programming
20	ABC/40 Springfield

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MARCH 8, 2000

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	12	Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (R)		Irish Tenors: Live From Belfast (R) (In Stereo)			Irish Tenors: Live From Belfast (R) (In Stereo)
WFSB	3	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	City of Angels "City Me a Liver"			★★★ "The First Wives Club" (1996, Comedy) Goldie Hawn.		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	City of Angels "City Me a Liver"			Drew Carey	Spin City	20/20	Nightline
WCVB	5	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Two Guys-Girl (Norm			Drew Carey	Spin City	News	Friends
WLVI	56		Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends	Nanny	Dawson's Creek (In Stereo)			Roswell "Fifth South" (In Stereo)		News	Nanny
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Dateline (In Stereo)			West Wing "Mr. Willis of Ohio"		Law & Order "Marathon" (R)	Tonight Show
WTXX		8	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Blind Date	Real TV	7 Days "Lifeboat" (In Stereo)			Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		News	Caroline
WVIT		16	News	NBC News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Dateline (In Stereo)			West Wing "Mr. Willis of Ohio"		Law & Order "Marathon" (R)	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	11	Simpsons	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)			Get Real "Waiting" (In Stereo)		News	Frasier
WWLP	22	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Dateline (In Stereo)			West Wing "Mr. Willis of Ohio"		Law & Order "Marathon" (R)	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	8	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Paul Anka: Night at a Lifeline (In Stereo)			Audra McDonald in Concert		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	28	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Two Guys-Girl (Norm			Drew Carey	Spin City	20/20	Nightline
WSBK	38		Judge Judy	Judge Judy	NHL Hockey: Boston Bruins at Buffalo Sabres. (Live)					Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		Med Abt. You	Judge Mathis
WTBS	72		Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Ripley's Believe It or Not!			WCW Thunder		Ripley's Believe It or Not! (R)
A&E	51		L.A. Law "Spoliation"		Law & Order "Sanctuary"		Biography: Maureen O'Hara			Investigative Reports (R)		American Justice (R)	Law & Order "Charm City"
CNN	29	21	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire	World Today			Larry King Live		Newsstand	Sports
COM	53	36	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	★★ "Elvira, Mistress of the Dark" (1988) Cassandra Peterson.			South Park	Man Show	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	27		Your New House (R)		Wild Discovery: Creatures		On the Inside: Bridge			Iron Island: Yali		Iceman: Stone Age	On the Inside: Bridge
ESPN	31		Sportscenter		College Basketball: MAS-American Conf.		Soccer Champ. — Teams TBA			College Basketball: Big East Tournament First Round – Teams to be Announced			Sportscenter
LIFE	52		Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Chicago Hope "Sanridonj"			True Life	Diary	Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	33		MTV Jams	Best Suite	True Life (R)	MTV.Com (R)	TRL Wanna	TRL (R) (In Stereo)		N Sync		Undressed	Loveline
NICK	43		All That	Catdog	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Spongeb	Spongeb	Jeffersons	Jeffersons	All in Family	Jeffersons	All in Family
SCIFI	55		★★★ "Amazing Stories: The Movie" (1992) Mark Hamill.				★★★ "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom" (1984, Adventure) Harrison Ford.			★★★ "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom" (1984)
TLC	67	26	Home Again	Home Again	Crash Test (R)		Extreme Machines (R)			UFOs Uncovered: Are Aliens		Search for Alien Life	Extreme Machines (R)
TNT	25		In the Heat of the Night		ER "Good Luck"	Ruth Johnson	★★★ "Buffalo Soldiers" (1997, Western) Danny Glover.			"Freedom Song" (2000, Drama)		"Freedom Song" (2000, Drama)	Danny Glover. (In Stereo)
USA	32		Baywatch "The Trophy"		UFO "Impact" (In Stereo)		Walker, Texas Ranger			★★★½ "Fatal Attraction" (1987, Suspense) Michael Douglas. (In Stereo)		Texas Ranger
HBO	63		(5:45) ★ "Baby Geniuses" (1999, Comedy) Pg		★★ "Naked Gun 33 1/3: The Final Insult" (1994)		Sopranos "Full Leather Jacket"			Three Wise Walls Could Talk 2" (2000, Drama)		"Never Again"
MAX	65		(4:45) "Unforgiven" (1992) R		Crimes of Honor (In Stereo)		★★★ "Titanic" (1997, Drama) Leonardo DiCaprio, Kate Winslet. (In Stereo) PG-13					Stalker Guilt	Passion Obsv
SHOW	60		★★½ "Crocodile Dundee II" (1988, Comedy) Paul Hogan. PG				★★½ "A Night at the Roxbury" (1998) Will Ferrell.			★★½ "Ringmaster" (1998) Jerry Springer.		Red Shoe	Beggars

Baldердash By Tim Dwyer

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Horoscopes

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – Your attitude may be threatening your own job security at this time. Take care that you don't come off as arrogant or superior.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – Imitation may be flattery for some, but you are likely to find it unnecessary in the extreme – whether you're doing it or watching it.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – Once you know what is asked of you today, you'll be able to jump right in and have a go at it. Ultimately, it's uncertainty that holds you back.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – Someone close to you may be asking too much, too soon – and it will be up to you to let him or her know just where your feelings are.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – What worked for you yesterday may not be a sure thing today. Be ready to adjust when necessary in order to improve your chances.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – You are likely to go places and meet people today that please you in ways you had not anticipated. See to it that you return the favor.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – You may become alarmed by a sudden development on the home front, but with a little thought you can regain control in time to avoid a crisis.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – You may receive an invitation today, which you cannot afford to refuse – even if it means some last-minute preparation or a difficult journey.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – Carry yourself proudly today and let others get out of your way. Why should you always be the one to give in or give up? Be firm!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – It's a good day to try out a new skill or to explore a new hobby more fully. Opportunities you enjoy today may lead to further options.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Someone you meet today is sure to affect you more strongly than you had anticipated. The result, in the long run, will bring you great joy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – What appears in the distance today will give you pause, and may have you searching for a way out before the day is done. Stay calm!

Quote of the Day

"Always go out on limbs, that's where the carrots grow."

–Mick Foley

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

Robotman By Jim Meddick

ACROSS

1 Yield
5 Share
10 Brewer's grain
14 Maity of baseball
15 Kind of berth
16 Jai —
17 Make less distinct
18 Organic compound
19 Harmass part
20 Wise ones
22 Hazier
24 Chocolate candy
27 Type of drapery
28 Size
32 Got up
35 N.A. country
36 Doze
38 Lewis Gantry
40 Football great Simms
42 Spits
44 British title
45 Spanish title
47 Sag
49 Sister
50 Farm homes
52 Foolproof
54 "Cheerio!"
56 Bargain
57 Musical intro
60 Indian address
64 "— Cheatin' Heart"
65 Philadelphia player
68 Ploy
69 Sheriff Andy's son
70 North Dakota city
71 Bonaparte's exile island
72 Make one's way
73 Attack on a castle
74 Beach stuff

DOWN

1 Track parts
2 "Cinder" end
3 Football QB Williams
4 "I found it!"
5 Montreal's prov
6 FedEx rival
7 Chooses
8 Abounds
9 Quiver contents
10 Strong-scented flower
11 Out of the wind
12 Den
13 — Izzie
21 Incites, as a dog
23 Singer Smith
25 Sedimentary material
26 Charger
28 Tea holders
29 Pesticide
30 House covering
31 2000 and 2011
33 Muscat native
34 Object
37 Boastful
39 Philosopher Descartes
41 Dawdled
43 Irritated
46 — estate
48 Tender pods
51 Cranes
53 Signals
55 Statesman Stevenson
57 Vatican head
58 Bankrupt
59 "Jane —"
61 Luau dance
62 Book ID
63 Necklace part
66 "Incredible!"
67 Caviar

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

© 2000 United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Lunch

Quarter Pound Burger

Macaroni & Cheese (vegetarian)

Golden Burger (vegan) (Berkshire, Hampshire & Worcester only)

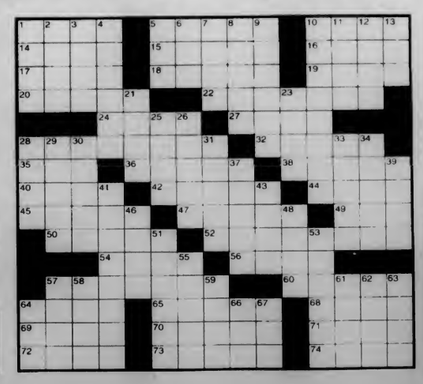
Harvest Burger (vegan) (Franklin only)

Dinner

Roast Beef

N.E. Lite Cod

Vegetarian Cacciatore (vegan) (Berkshire & Worcester only)



Korean BBQ Tofu (vegan)

Mediterranean Bar Special

Today's Staff

Night Editor: Sam Wilkinson
Photo Technician: Teresa Canino-Rivera
Copy Editor: Kathleen Ralls
Production Supervisor: Joylyn Lombard
Production Staff: Roberto Delgado, Melanie Thomas

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of sports.

Last call for Minutemen

Men's hoop needs first-round win in tourney

By Kathleen Ralls
Collegian Staff

It's the first step in a series of four to get into the NCAA tournament for the Massachusetts men's basketball team. Four wins in a row will earn them an automatic bid into the Big Dance for clinching the Atlantic 10 tournament that starts today at the First Union Spectrum in Philadelphia, Pa.

UMass (15-14, 9-7 A-10), the No. 3 seed in the East, is set to face West No. 6 Duquesne (9-19, 4-12 A-10) in the second game of the first round at 2 p.m. The winner of this game will move onto the second round and play George Washington on Thursday at 2:30 p.m.

This marks the fourth year in a row the Minutemen have wrapped up third place in the East. Temple (23-5, 14-2 A-10) and St. Bonaventure (19-8 11-5 A-10) are the top seeds in the East in front of Massachusetts. Dayton (21-7, 11-5 A-10) earned the top shelf in the West in front of GW (15-4, 9-7 A-10) and Xavier (19-10, 9-7 A-10).

The good news is that UMass have swiped 14 straight games from the Dukes including an offensive outpouring on Jan. 27 at the A.J. Palumbo Center where the Minutemen came home with an 84-75 victory. UMass Coach James "Bruiser" Flint has a 5-0 record during his time. The last time the Duquesne took down Massachusetts was on Feb. 9, 1991 with a 68-67 decision.

The bad news is that UMass has not filled four straight wins all season, but have won three in a row three times. On Saturday, the Minutemen lost their bid to escape a first round matchup with a bye when St. Bonaventure trounced them, 86-69. But the Dukes are experiencing a monstrous of a skid, losing 12 of their last 13 after beginning the season on a 9-7 run.

There's still room for improvement this late in the season, and UMass is in a position to do that. Sophomore Shannon Crooks has progressed at a rapid pace at the point for the Minutemen, and could be key in controlling the tempo.

"I think the main thing for us is to get back to the kind of defense we are used to," said Crooks, who is averaging 11.4 points per game.

"We haven't been playing the kind of defense we usually do and we need to do that."

The Minutemen rank second in the conference in steals with 9.26 per outing while blocking four shots each time out, good enough for fourth in the A-10.

Crooks, who spouted off to the Bonnies' Cyrus Caswell on Saturday after the senior elbowed the Minutemen in the mouth, needs to keep not just his squad calm but himself.

"I talked to Bruiser and I need to stop letting things off the court affect my game," he said. "I was doing that at the beginning and I need to just play my game."

Wayne Smith sits atop the Dukes' scoring chart averaging 17.1 ppg and seven rebounds per game. Courtney Wallace backs Smith up with 12.9 ppg while shooting over 80 percent from the free throw line. Three other players, Charles Stanfield, Shawn Tann and Devin Montgomery, all average seven points per contest.

For the Minutemen, it will be senior Monty Mack out front, averaging a team-high 19.7 ppg. On Saturday, Mack netted 28 points in the loss.

Senior co-captain Chris Kirkland will have to utilize his explosiveness off the blocks to reach his average of 13.1 ppg and six rebounds.

Picking up the slack on the boards will be junior Kitwana Rhymer, one of the biggest surprises this year. The center from the Virgin Islands routinely brings in seven points and boards per outing.

Filling out the starting lineup will be senior co-captain Mike Babul, who will be looked upon to shut down Smith and Kevin Forney, who ring up 20 and 19 ppg, respectively.

Jonathan DePina was one of his biggest games against the Bonnies, tying a season-high 11 points, four boards and three dishes, and could be the scoring punch off the bench with freshman center Micah Brand recovering from pneumonia.

MEN'S HOOP
UMASS VS DUQUESNE
1ST ROUND OF A-10 TOURNEY
TODAY 2PM @ TEMPLE
91.1 FM WMUA
BRETT MAUSER - PLAY
ADAM BYRNE - COLOR
PG PREVIEW

DAN SANTELLA / COLLEGIAN

If Monty Mack, left, is forced to carry the load for the Minutemen against Duquesne, UMass may be spending less time in Philadelphia than it had planned.

Texas tornado blows through UMass

Senior guard Thomas puts wraps on basketball odyssey

DAN SANTELLA / COLLEGIAN

A vicious defender, an outspoken entertainer and a fiery competitor, Tonia Thomas gave UMass some flashes of pure excitement on the hardwood.

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

She struts into the Mullins Center in sweats and unlaced Timberlands. The beats coming through her headphones are loud enough to get those around her bouncing, but she chomps her gum to the rhythm for good measure. In no time at all she'll hit the parquet for practice, making her own music with the snap of a basketball through twine and the squeak of sneaker soles on hardwood.

But for the moment, senior Tonia Thomas has time to reflect on a somewhat brief but unquestionably meaningful career in Maroon and White. For the diminutive Texas native who commands attention in a big voice both on and off the court, her stint in Massachusetts has truly been about getting an education.

"In my two years at UMass, I've matured and I've grown, not only as a player but as a person," Thomas said. "When I first came here, I was closed-minded about a lot of things. But as I've matured, I've become a lot more open-minded."

The road to b-ball glory has taken the Seguin original through a number of settings and situations. Thomas picked up a passion for the sport very early in her life, thanks to a close-knit family that shared a penchant for hoops and a willingness to teach the scrappy youngster the game's ins-and-outs.

"I've been playing basketball for a very, very long time," Thomas said. "I learned it many years ago from my brother and my aunt. I followed my brother Andy around, and anything he wanted to do, I wanted to be involved in. So I picked up the sport from him. I was always the little tomboy, playing basketball with the guys.

"But once we got older, and he kicked me around like 'you can't hang with me anymore,' I started playing with my aunt, Helen. She pretty much taught me from then on."

Thanks to the tutelage of her roundball relatives, Thomas developed a knack for the game that melded beautifully with her god-given speed and quickness. By the time she reached Seguin High School, Thomas had her sights set on not only making the Matador starting hoops roster under coach Judy Nelson, but also the track and field team in the spring. Neither feat proved to be a problem for the natural athlete.

After a standout high school career in which she earned four varsity letters in basketball and carried the mantle of team captain her senior year, Thomas opted to bring her brash court presence to the University of North Texas in Denton. But unfortunately for the confident guard, her game didn't seem to fit as neatly into the Big West Conference's style as she'd hoped.

"If I had to guard myself, I'd do a lot of homework and watch a lot of film."
-Tonia Thomas

"That was probably one of the worst years, basketball-wise, that I've ever had," Thomas said. "I struggled in the Big West, against teams like Pacific and Nevada. But then I transferred to Weatherford Junior College, and had one of the most outstanding years I've probably ever had. That was a great experience."

The Seguin sharpshooter made an instant mark on coach Bob McKinley's crew, averaging 14 points per game for the Coyotes. After ripping up the juco circuit and honing the finer points of her game, Thomas felt it was time to elevate her basketball journey to a final plateau: NCAA Division I.

And when it came time to choose a school, Thomas reached back to her roots and picked a place where she felt right at home.

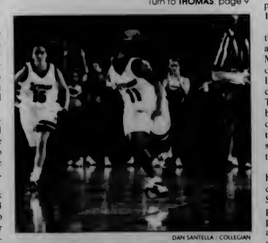
"One of the big reasons I came here was the area," Thomas said. "I'm from a country area myself, so when I came up here I really liked the atmosphere. I liked the players, the coach and the campus. I think the whole area really kind of spoke for itself."

Not only was the 5-foot-5 force enticed by the intangibles of the UMass program; she also licked her chops at the thought of facing top-notch competition, day-in and day-out, and improving herself as much as proving herself out on the court.

"Coming here, I was moving up to a whole new level," Thomas said. "The competition up here is very intense; you play against great athletes each and every time you step on the floor, whether in practice against your teammates or with an actual opponent."

That ultimate level of competition translated into a breakout first season in Maroon and White for No. 11. Thomas appeared in all 30 games the team played during the '98-'99 campaign, torching the twine to the tune of 149 points and a jaw-dropping .451 shooting percentage from beyond the three-point arch. And the versatile backcourt bomber showed off more than just a deft shooting touch; she also racked up 52 rebounds, 28 assists and 19 steals for the Minutewomen in 454 minutes of action.

But the biggest benefit reaped by Jeanie O'Brien's squad with the addition of "Texas" may have been one that can't be measured with any kind of statistic. Game after game, Thomas injected the UMass lineup with a competitive fire that proved as contagious as it was inspiring.



"Tonia has brought a presence to the floor that we haven't had," O'Brien said. "She's a great athlete that shoots the ball very well, but more than that she brings a lot of energy to the court."

And as proud as Thomas is of her numbers, she is also aware of her role as the team's chief spark plug.

"When I step on the floor, every time out, I know that the one thing I have to do is bring emotion," Thomas said. "I try to get the crowd into it, get my teammates into it, and do something to give everyone a lift."

Heading into her senior season, Thomas knew full

Turn to THOMAS, page 9

DAN SANTELLA / COLLEGIAN

An underrated ball handler, Thomas also had the offensive skills to dominate, but had little chance to reach her potential in only two seasons at UMass.

Chaney eyes banner

Temple, Dayton A-10 favorites

COURTESY A-10 MEDIA RELATIONS

Temple coach John Chaney has his strongest team in six years and the rest of the A-10 will likely be playing for second place in the conference tournament.

It was determined about midway through the season that each team's game plan was to miss Temple altogether. With Pepe Sanchez back directing the offense after an early injury, the Owls stampeded through the Atlantic 10 schedule and into the one spot. A late-season triumph at No. 1 Cincinnati further proved Temple's supremacy in all facets.

So everyone's playing for second place.

Clearly the class of the conference, the Owls winning the championship seems inevitable, but the Bell Atlantic Atlantic 10 Tournament, which starts this afternoon at the First Union Spectrum in Philadelphia, starts a whole new season, and an entirely new foundation of hope.

Last season, Rhode Island lived its dream by upending Temple in the championship game, thanks to a Lamar Odom hoist at the buzzer. It's a prime example of what can happen. A winning streak and you're dancing. One slip and you're at home.

The consensus says that the A-10 will land likely three squads in next week's NCAA Tournament, potentially four, depending on how things pan out in the four-day conference war. Temple and Dayton, the West No. 1, figure to be locks, while St. Bonaventure and Xavier might need a victory or two to prevent their bubble from bursting.

The Bonnies finished as they had hoped to, beating both the Musketeers and UMass in the final week to secure a first-round bye and, more importantly, to assure the earliest they'd face Temple would be in the final. With solid non-conference victories against Southern Cal and UNC-Charlotte under its belt and a one-point tweaking of Temple, St. Bonaventure suffered a moderate mid-season swoon before marching through March. It should make the Big Dance barring an embarrassing crash in the A-10s. Twenty wins should be plenty.

Xavier hurt its chances immensely when losing in Olean. Despite beating Cincinnati (Temple and Xavier were the only two teams to do so) in December, the Musketeers' road record should keep them on the outside looking in. With only two conference wins away from home (La Salle, Rhode Island), the Muskies' only worthwhile arguments stem from the beginning of the season, when they rolled to wins over Louisville and Washington before knocking off the Bearcats; however, losses to La Salle at home and then at Duquesne are RPI killers.

And then there are the rest, which includes UMass, a squad that has dipped into a moderate valley at the most unfortunate time.

Saturday's 17-point loss at St. Bonaventure exhibited the Minutemen's weaknesses: shooting and rebounding. Without Micah Brand, one could propose UMass was hobbling and undermanned. But not even Brand could cover up this vulnerability. Not to mention St. Bonaventure torched UMass' man defense for 86 points, the third-highest point total against the Minutemen this season.

UMass' road starts with a date against Duquesne, the winner of which will draw GW in the second round. Just a week ago, the Colonials stormed into the Mullins Center and escaped with an 87-86 victory. The District wasn't done justice until GW picked it up late. With

Turn to BANNER, page 9

Softball off to trying start; Minutewomen now at 1-9

By Jesse Greenspan
Collegian Staff

Things are just not going well for the Massachusetts softball team.

Another difficult road trip down south in Columbus, Ga., in which the Minutewomen lost three consecutive games this past weekend, has left the team 1-9 on the year and searching for answers as to why a season that began with such promise, has turned so sour.

At the start of the season the Maroon and White were ranked No. 16 in the USA Today/NFCA Preseason Coaches Poll and were looking to improve on last season's 43-10 record. Now, after stumbling out of the gate, they are just looking for something positive to build on before the Atlantic 10 portion of their schedule begins.

On Friday, March 3, UMass began the NFCA Leadoff Classic at 12 p.m. against No. 5 Oklahoma. The Minutewomen could scrounge out only six hits and two runs against Lana Moran of the Sooners, and were on the short end of a 9-2 drubbing. Teri Rooney was pretty much the only bright spot for UMass, going 3-for-3 on the day. Carrie Jeffries picked up the loss and dropped to 0-3 on the season. Oklahoma improved to 20-1 on the year.

During the nightcap of the double-header, UMass had to put its thoughts of avenging an earlier 9-7 loss to No. 9 Stanford on hold when the game was postponed due to lightning. It was pushed back to 2:30 p.m. the next day, and meant that the Minutewomen would be forced to deal with a very good Mississippi State team before they had a chance to play Stanford. Final score: 7-0 Mississippi State.

Against Stanford, UMass's dream of revenge was shot down quickly. Jamie Forman-Lau pitched the Cardinal to a 7-0 win, and Jenni Shideler drove in four runs. The Minutewomen were held to only four hits on the afternoon by Rooney, first baseman Brandi Cross, third baseman Cierra "Scooter" Wheeler, and utility-player Ashley Bakkan. Jennifer Hadley went the distance for the Maroon and White, giving up nine hits and striking out two. Stanford improved to 17-3 on the year, with two of those wins coming at the bands of the Minutewomen.

On Sunday, the Minutewomen finally picked up their first win of the year against Boston College in the tournament's Bronze Medal Pool. Jeffries gave up only four hits and struck out four for the win. Rooney once again led the offense by going 4-for-4 with a triple, on her way to being named to the NFCA Classic All-Tournament Team. This time, however, she had support in the lineup from Bakkan (2-3 on the day) and freshman Kaila Holtz (2-4).

Just when it appeared that the Minutewomen were breaking out of their hitting slump, the bats once again fell silent later on in the day against Hofstra. Wheeler, Holtz, Kiley Scofield and Emily Robustelli collected the only four hits for UMass on the way to a 6-0 loss. Jen Smith picked up the win for the Flying Dutchwomen, striking out four, while Hadley fell to 0-3 on the year for the Minutewomen.

On March 9 the Maroon and White will try and change their luck when they travel down to Tampa, Fla. for the Speedline Invitational.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Volume CVI Issue 31 Thursday, March 9, 2000

SGA witnesses heated Senate debates

Candidates announce spring campaigns

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

On a night when two motions came up for lengthy debate, one senator turned 21 and at least five separate senators were warned for talking out of turn, the Student Government Association leadership also came into question.

Current SGA President Jeff Howe and current Trustee Seth Avakian confirmed that they would seek a second term in upcoming elections, while both Jim Eltringham and Phil Zetye announced that they too would seek the SGA's top position. Asif Sayani said that he would seek the trustee position and run with Eltringham, and while Zetye would not name his running mate, rumor ran rampant that Andy Foley, who was appointed as Baker's representative, would run as Zetye's trustee.

After the assembled senators sang happy birthday to Senator Jen Worcester, the meeting began outright with Avakian's Trustee report, one in which he discussed the Commonwealth College.

"We need to make sure that the SGA has a presence at the Commonwealth College Dean Search because the next dean will be in charge up there for the next five to 10 years," Avakian said, adding, "and it can't be run any worse than it is now."

Avakian then yielded the floor to Howe who responded to a recent controversy surrounding last week's Senate vote to increase the number of beers allowed in dorm rooms, saying that the media had completely manipulated the issue.

The SGA president, who appeared on Court TV's 'Pro's and Con's' to debate the beer motion, discussed its initial acceptance by the University administration before it was quashed by Chancellor Scott, said that the media can be just vicious.

"We should have put forward our successes with the policies, instead, the University backed away from them," Howe said, referencing alcohol policies on campus.

Asked by Senator Zachary Spillman whether or not the SGA should be more cautious when it came to passing motions such as the one addressing beer, Howe responded that he never intended to put six more beers in dorm rooms, instead pointing out that he had been asked by the administration to work on the issue.

"This was my attempt to forge a relationship with the administration," Howe said. Spillman again asked whether this meant the SGA should be more cautious, to which Howe advised that the Senator "listen to the answers that I give."

After two new election commissioners and five new area governors were sworn in, Senator Rob Moore brought a motion to the SGA suggesting that the UMass Board of Trustees allow the Student Legal Services Organization defend UMass students in criminal cases.

Moore said that the motion had been a long time in the works and that he thought there was a strong possibility that the Board of Trustees would support the motion. Chuck DiMare, who runs the SLSO office, spoke in defense of the office and in favor of increasing their sphere of power.

"We have a 25 year history on this campus," DiMare said. "We won 13 cases against the University before having our right to work within the Commonwealth revoked."

Of the 2,000 students that use legal services, 400-500 are involved in criminal cases, something that the SLSO can't help with. The motion passed unanimously to the cheers of the SGA. DiMare's reaction was positive, although somewhat guarded.

"We don't necessarily have the resources to help with these cases as much as we'd like to," DiMare said, referencing cuts in the office that have limited it to fewer than three full-time attorneys.

Fiery debate followed on a motion to allow buildings under 24-hour-quiet policies during study times to allow for one hour of relax time.

Siyani debated against the measure, saying that he was the only SGA Resident Assistant and knew what was going on in buildings.

"It's a horrible horrible horrible horrible horrible idea," Siyani said. "Everybody's final exams schedules will conflict, thus making it impossible to choose an hour that won't interrupt students' ability to study."

He added that the motion was absolutely ridiculous and that he couldn't believe it was under debate, before getting warned by Speaker of the Senate Mikale Billard for saying "shit" in reference to what students do with their time.

Avakian debated for the motion, saying that he wouldn't speak like, "Asif 'Angry RA' Sayani," did. The Trustee argued that students can't just relax wherever they'd like to go, and for students that want to study during the one hour of allowed relaxation time, students could go to the library. Avakian agreed that students do many things with their free time, and jokingly he asked Billard if he could say "poop" in regard to what Sayani had said previously.

"No, you're warned too," Billard said.

After continued debate, the motion was failed by a roll-call Senate vote, 29-17.

Following the first debate, Howe pushed for a motion to be passed that called for non-unit employees, employees that do not have a contractual agreement for a raise, to give up their annual raises for the year if they made more than $75,000.

After confusion, Senator Mark Boniface debated against the motion, saying that the SGA had no right to ask people to give up their raises. Voicing opinions presented by others, Boniface wondered aloud if the SGA had the right to tell administrators what to pay their employees.

Avakian, who debated for the motion, said that the SGA had the right to tell the administration anything they wanted to.

Boniface countered, asking if the employees deserved a raise, to which Avakian responded, saying that, "they don't, or at least not as much as students deserve getting into their classes."

Boniface asked how he could say that, and Avakian responded that the student body gave him the power to.

The motion passed, 31-12, to which Avakian said that he was shocked that it wasn't a unanimous vote.

Boniface responded, saying, "I think we have no right to mandate that people give up their salaries, absolutely no right. It's absolute bullshit."

One more motion was passed allowing students to have access to information about classes and professors during their summer New Students Program.

The Student Government Association comes to order last night at its regular meeting.

UMass celebrates Int. Women's Day

By Elizabeth Pariseau
Collegian Correspondent

Students, professors and members of campus activist groups met yesterday in the Student Union Gallery for an afternoon of poetry and art held to celebrate March 8th as International Women's Day.

The gallery has been decorated with the artwork of a number of women in commemoration of March as National Women's History Month. Many of the exhibits there deal with violence against women, and its effects, both personal and public.

The afternoon of readings was held both in celebration of International Women's Day and as a protest against the fact that the United Sates has not ratified a treaty adopted by the UN over twenty years ago. The U.S. was instrumental in drafting the treaty, known as the Convention to End Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW), but has been one of the last countries to ratify it. According to Claudia Rhodes, Associate Coordinator of the Amherst chapter of Amnesty International, by refusing to ratify the treaty, the United States "finds itself in the company of the governments of North Korea, Afghanistan, and Saudi Arabia. . . places where women are notably badly treated."

Professor of Women's Studies Alex Deschamps followed Rhodes as a speaker. She emphasized cooperation and unity among women in a global economy as a means of ending oppression and furthering the empowerment of women in every country. She encouraged women at UMass to "think about the academy as a privilege. Education is not only about the A's and B's but new ways of thinking, working and doing." Part of these new ways of thinking, according to Deschamps, is connecting with what she called "other worlds of women," in different cultures, both in other countries and within the U.S.

International activism was the theme of many of the speakers yesterday. Roya Affolter, a graduate student in International Education and Development, played an original composition on the violin, which she dedicated to the Baha'i population of Iran. Since the foundation of an Islam Republic in Iran in 1978, according to Affolter, men and women of the Baha'i faith, who believe in the equality and similarity of all religions, as well as the equality of men and women, have been denied basic human rights including education and marriage in Iran. Many have also been executed for their beliefs under the Iranian regime, though there has been pressure from other governments, including that of the United States, to discontinue such persecution

Tenzin Dolma, representing the UMass chapters of both the Tibetan Students' Association and Students for a Free Tibet, took the microphone to inform listeners of the persecution of Tibetan citizens by the Chinese government. Violations of rights that specifically affect women, according to Dolma, are numbered under China's strict population control laws, and include forced abortion and sterilization, often in unsanitary conditions, and infanticide. Women also constitute one-third of Tibet's political prisoners. Dolma appealed to those gathered and those listening over WMUA to contribute to the fight for a free Tibet.

Rhodes noted that International Women's Day, still widely celebrated in many Third World countries, was actually begun in the United States in 1909. Celebration of it as a national holiday, however, has fallen out of tradition. Though protest and activism were the themes of many of the readings, celebration of this holiday was another idea that found expression among the participants. "Give thanks for being a woman," said Deschamps. "Be loud. Be heard."

The creative endeavors of many members of the UMass community were heard in the course of the afternoon. Blank sheets of paper were hung on one wall of the gallery, and a number of artistic tools including pastels, markers, and chalk were provided, so that even those who were performance-shy could contribute creatively to the event.

Performers included Yanti Mirdayanti, a graduate student in the University's German department. Mirdayanti had a number of photographs and poems displayed around the gallery, which depict life both in her native Indonesia and in America.

Though the program saw a small audience, it was hoped by all involved that it was a step towards more widespread celebration of International Women's Day in this country, and towards ending discrimination and violence against women. Claudia Rhodes also mentioned that the program had been useful in giving women a valid forum for expression. "It's about making women comfortable with themselves." She said. This mission, she said, went beyond the adversarial empowerment advocated by feminists early in the women's movement. "Now it's about women coming into their own. It's more about natural equality," she said. "The way it should be."

JANET BARR / COLLEGIAN

Monika Johnson is reflected as she looks at the artwork in the Student Union Gallery before The International Women's Day Event.

Financial cushion questioned

By Melissa Hommel
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts' financial cushion was one of the issues recently raised in the ongoing debate about the necessity for academic budget cuts on campus.

The financial cushion, according to UMass University Performance Measure System: 1995 Report on Annual Indicators (President's Office Document #1495-050), "The financial cushion reflects long-term financial health of the institution and its ability to weather, or to 'cushion' itself, from short-term operational ups and downs. A solid financial cushion will buffer a campus from the effects of a low or negative operating margin, an unplanned expense or revenue decrease."

"The financial cushion reflects long-term financial health of the institution and its ability to weather, or to 'cushion' itself, from short term operational ups and downs." 1995 Report on Annual Indicators.

According to the document, the University has a financial cushion of about 11.9 percent for the year of 1998 and a target financial cushion of from 12.5-15.5 percent for the year 2002. The Amherst campus within the University system has the highest budget cushion out of all of the other schools with the Boston campus receiving 2.1 percent, the Dartmouth campus allotting a negative 5.5 percent and the Lowell campus at 6.9 percent.

According to comments made by Scott in a previous Collegian article, the University's share of the state allocation was $219 million.

A representative from the Graduate Student Employee Organization explained that, because the university has an operating budget of about $285 million, the financial cushion for the percentage set aside by the University would amount to about $33 million. These funds are set aside by the campus with the sole intent of helping the University to make it through financial rough spots and hardships smooth.

The organization expressed concern about the fact that the cushion had not been mentioned as an option for dealing with the budget concerns during the past three months of deliberations about the issue.

According to comments made by Scott in a previous Collegian article, the University's share of the state allocation was $219 million, an increase of $8.9 million from the previous year. However, the increase was $10 million less than what was requested. This caused the financial windfall, which is negatively affecting the current budget.

When questioned about the issue of the financial cushion at the Chancellor's forum on Tuesday, Vice Chancellor of the Administration and Finance Paul Page commented that the situation was not as simple as it may seem. He explained that the finances in the account set aside for the cushion were typically used in the case of problems with areas like housing and not for the problems that we currently face.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 68 LOW: 43	HIGH: 59 LOW: 32	HIGH: 46 LOW: 29

SOURCE: CNN.COM

Every Man's Nightmare
Come see Kathleen's view on the crisis that plagues every man's soul and penetrates into his deepest fears: losing the remote control. Check out the horror of it on the Ed/Op page.
P.AGE 4

Beyond the Mat
This week's Arts cover takes a look at the pop-cultural phenomena of wrestling. We also serve up or weekly dose of Trax. Arts: we're drawn with CGI.
P.AGE 5

The Mack Is Back
Monty Mack led the Minutemen attack in a 77-52 win today to advance them in the A-10 Tournament.
P.AGE 12

Arts & Living 5
Comics 11
Crossword 11
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 12

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

HRTA holds annual fair

By Brian Lohnes
Collegian staff

Yesterday the Hotel Restaurant Travel Administration (HRTA) department held its career fair in the Campus Center. Planners and students alike seemed to declare it a success. Business turnout was better than expected with only one company failing to attend the fair.

Seven student organizers plotted and planned the fair for the benefit of potential internship and job seekers in the HRTA department. Fair worker Pamela Chmura said, "We only had one no show. Top of the Hub." She added, "The students are very enthusiastic, there are a lot of different companies and a lot of different opportunities."

Another career day worker, Katie McCann elaborated on the types of businesses that attended the event. "We have a lot of chain hotels and restaurants, also we have a lot of country clubs, more than usual," she said.

When asked about what kind of opportunities the country clubs can offer to prospective students McCann said, "They are offering internships and looking for food and beverage managers and management training."

Student Jeremy Hamilton said that the event was, "A very good experience." He praised the vendors who attended for their enthusiasm towards the students. "They were all very interested."

He stated that the specific field he was looking to go into was restaurant management and catering but he wanted to keep his options open. "Whatever I can get I will take, I won't refuse anyone," Hamilton said.

Tony Costanzo of the Crowne Plaza Resort located on Hilton Head Island in South Carolina said he liked what he saw yesterday. "I have been attending this job fair for the last seven years, usually we take about seven or eight students a year" said Costanzo. He continued that the thing he looks for most in students is personality. "Interns have entry level jobs, they need to be professional and highly social."

Another company in attendance was Friendly's Ice Cream Corporation. Their Division Recruiter Theresa Buss also said that social skills were important. "We are looking for people who are positive and really upbeat." She talked about "people skills" in a service industry.

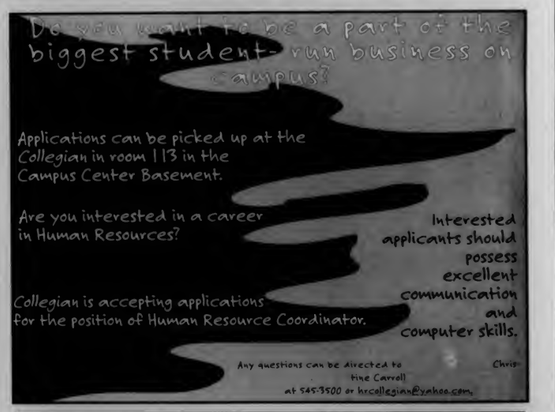
"In this industry when you are dealing with the public you need to be happy." She has attended the fair for the last three years and Friendly's has been there for the last five. Their company also uses UMass students, "We usually take four or five per year, and we actually have a UMass graduate as a General Manager in one of our restaurants.

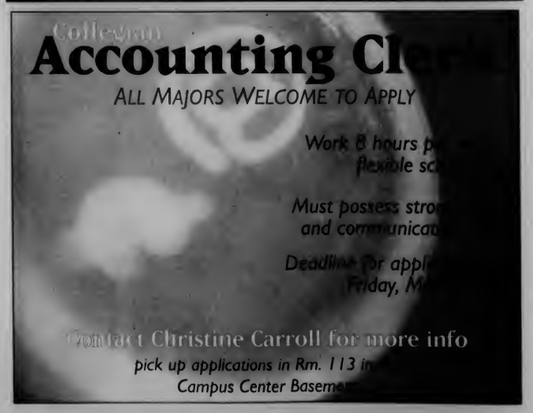
Most students were very focused on what they wanted to pursue at the career fair. Gary Hermanson, a senior HRTA major was interested in restaurants, theme parks and resorts. He was focusing his search on jobs rather than internships. Location was also important for many students. "I want to look at a lot of Boston restaurants," Hermanson said.

JANET BARRY/COLLEGIAN

Jillanna Novich talks with Kevin McCabe about a career in the Restaurant Business, during the HRTA Career Fair.

"We thought this would be a more exciting way to raise money and people seem to be willing to donate. The money we're raising will go to the families within the community." – Emma Eliasson





TERESA CANINO-RIVERA/COLLEGIAN

These two seem all tied up

Lucy Collingwood, a junior exchange student from England and Emma Eliasson, a sophomore exchange student from England spent the day tied together in an effort to fund raise for their Alternative Spring Break trip to Alabama.

Rejuvenated NRA readies self for an election-year showdown

By Juliet Eilperin
Washington Post

The National Rifle Association is back. After several years of waning influence on Capitol Hill, the venerable association of shooting enthusiasts and gun rights advocates is enjoying a renewal as it gears up for what could be a watershed election this fall.

Membership is on the rise after several years of decline, and the NRA's legislative and political arms have raised more money than ever before. Having so far blocked new limits on gun shows and other controls, the group is expanding it grass-roots network to support favored candidates and maintain the pro-gun majority in the House.

"Our constituency, unlike much of the conservative movement, is very energized," said Chuck Cunningham, who has been brought back from a stint at the Christian Coalition to direct the NRA's efforts to mobilize voters.

NRA officials say such energy is the result of the new assault on guns by the Clinton administration and congressional Democrats in the wake of the Columbine High School massacre and other shootings, such as last week's killing of a 6-year-old in Michigan.

"It's become clear what their campaign's about," said James J. Baker, the group's chief lobbyist. "They've decided they were going to make guns an issue in the November 2000 elections."

How effective the NRA proves to be in fighting back could be critical to whether Congress adopts new gun restrictions in the future. Despite a recent wave of new shootings, a proposal to institute 72-hour background checks on gun show sales is hung up in negotiations between the House and Senate and appears unlikely to make it into law this year. Whether the NRA can maintain a coalition against such controls will be one of the big questions at stake in the fall elections.

While national polls repeatedly show the majority of Americans support new firearms restrictions, the gun lobby has historically been able to offer financial support to its allies and turn out voters and campaign volunteers based on its single issue.

With only a few dozen House seats considered competitive in the coming election, the role of any aggressive outside group can help sway the balance of power in Congress. Some congressional observers believe the NRA could tilt the electoral outcome in several key districts that feature a sizable number of gun activists, including ones in such battleground states as Michigan, Montana and Pennsylvania.

"Clearly, they are not in the majority, but they do have a very intensive and vocal minority," said Rep. Rosa L. DeLauro, D-Conn., one of Congress' most outspoken gun control proponents. "They are willing to thwart the will of the Congress as well as the will of the public."

NRA officials don't appear nervous that last week's shooting in Michigan or other incidents will hurt their cause. "I don't think there's really a reasonable person in America that thinks that this horrible tragedy in Michigan says anything about legal gun ownership," said NRA spokesman Bill Powers. "It's says a lot more about parenting and responsibility, and having a bed for a little first-grader."

Just a few years ago, the NRA was struggling to remain relevant. Its membership slipped from 3.5 million to 2.8 million, and the value of its cash holdings and investments dropped in half over a six-year period. The group's executive vice president, Wayne LaPierre, offended Republicans such as former President George Bush when he distributed a fund-raising letter calling federal firearms agents "jack-booted government thugs." Then LaPierre was challenged within his own ranks for not being aggressive enough. Some Republicans became disenchanted with an ally they saw as unyielding in light of certain political realities, and Congress passed a ban on assault weapons and other restrictions during President Clinton's first term.

The NRA has since moderated its tone and focused on rebuilding its financial and political base. The new round of gun control initiatives, including Clinton's recent State of the Union proposal to institute a new gun licensing requirement, prompted an influx of members and cash.

Membership has surged to 3.2 million, and NRA officials predict it will reach 3.5 million by Election Day. The group's Institute for Legislative Action raised $25 million, an unprecedented sum, and its political action committee, the NRA Political Victory Fund, also outpaced past years with a $4 million take in 1999.

JANET BARRY/COLLEGIAN

Helen Eggleston, a freshman Art major, takes advantage of the warm weather to paint this scenic shot.

Heroin curses small towns

By Hector Tobar
Los Angeles Times

CHIMAYO, N.M. – For two centuries, the sick have come to an adobe church in this village in the Sangre de Cristo Mountains. The fine, talcum-like dust in the sanctuary's tiny chapel is said to possess miraculous powers. Each year a few pilgrims leave their crutches propped up against the walls.

Now the town of Chimayo itself is suffering from an ailment that not even "the Lourdes of America" has been able to cure. It is a sickness that has shattered the lives of dozens of families here and many more in towns peppered across the stark but beautiful valleys and mesas of northern New Mexico.

Chimayo is the "heroin capital" of Rio Arriba County, a rural region of 34,000 people with one of the highest rates of drug overdoses in the United States. In all, nearly 100 Rio Arriba County residents have overdosed in the past half-decade, according to state officials, a death rate more than triple the national average.

A series of drug-related crimes – ranging from the mundane and pathetic to the horrific – has triggered both a crackdown by federal agents and a small but growing protest movement against the state's Republican governor, Gary Johnson, who has called for the legalization of drugs.

No one has been able, however, to stop the overdose deaths in Rio Arriba County. At least 19 county residents died last year, all but one of them male, most of them 30 or older.

Allen Sandoval, 36, succumbed to heroin last June, about five miles up the road from the Chimayo. He left the world with several religious medals and cards in his pockets, along with 15 cents in change.

Death found him outside his home, on the dusty ground of a town whose bleak, narrow streets resemble those of an impoverished Latin American village. A few hours before he died, he used a pocketknife to carve his initials in the tree that looms over his mother's front porch.

"He would say, 'Mom, mom, I'm afraid. I don't want to die,' " said Olivama Sandoval, his mother. "But we couldn't help him. He was so afraid of death, and look where he's at now."

Sandoval was laid to rest in June in the town cemetery, next to a friend who died two months earlier, also of an overdose.

No one can say with certainty why drug addiction is so rampant in this corner of the Southwest. Heroin use has been on the rise across the United States since the early 1990s. Emergency room admissions for heroin overdoses have doubled since 1991, with the most dramatic increases in overdoses in urban centers such as Baltimore and Newark, N.J. But a recent study by the U.S. Conference of Mayors found that the availability of heroin in rural areas now matches that of big cities.

Some speculate that this state's proximity to Mexico has brought an especially potent mixture of the "black tar" heroin produced there. Nearly everyone agrees that the region's unrelenting poverty is a factor. In overwhelmingly Mexican-American Rio Arriba County, the poverty rate is about 30 percent, reflecting the century-long decline of northern New Mexico's subsistence farmers.

Lauren Reichelt, director of health services for Rio Arriba County, said the drug problems are spurred in part by "cultural dislocation and cultural oppression. People are in pain."

The epidemic has reached its most intense proportions in the isolated settlements in the region, in places such as Cordova (population 700), where at least six residents died of overdoses in the past few years.

Heroin, a sedative, soothes its users with a brief but powerful sense of euphoria. It erases all discomfort of body and mind. It makes the weak feel strong and the lonely feel loved. Then its magic wears off – after minutes, or hours – leaving its users even less able to face pain than before.

"For a long time heroin wasn't big around here," said Anthony Trujillo, a church deacon in nearby Santa Fe. "All of a sudden, in the last few years, it's the drug of choice. ... I don't think there is anyone in Rio Arriba County who has not lost a friend or a relative."

Drug abuse has fed a wide variety of crimes across the state, police officials say, with the crime rate increasing in New Mexico each year since 1993, bucking a nationwide trend.

A substitute teacher at Espanola Middle School was arrested in 1998 for selling heroin near school grounds. At least 1 in 4 homes in Chimayo is burglarized each year, according to the New Mexico State Police.

Perhaps the most notorious drug-related crime in recent years was the 1998 carjacking and murder of 18-year-old Erik Sanchez, a standout student from Espanola. Sanchez's captors took him to a bridge over the 600-foot-deep Rio Grande gorge and threw him over the railing – it remains unclear whether he was still alive. The assailants, two men from Taos, allegedly wanted to sell his car for drug money. One pleaded guilty to the murder and is serving a life sentence; the other is scheduled to go to trial this year.

IT'S YOUR BODY
If your car has an accident, don't let the tow truck drag it wherever. Demand Dana! We offer a lifetime warranty on all our body shop work.
DANA BODY SHOP
968 Bridge Road, Northampton, Mass.
586-7250

Did you know that the Daily Collegian is funded solely on advertising revenue?
DO YOU WANT A JOB THAT MATTERS?
Become an "advertising account executive." The Daily Collegian is looking for outgoing, motivated students interested in earning money while gaining experience!
Fill out an application and bring a resume to 113 Campus Center Basement, attn: Christine Carroll by March 24th

www.skicoupons.com
YEAR ROUND RESORT TOWN DISCOUNTS, DEALS & SAVINGS
Log on.....Print.....Save $$.....For FREE !!
Discounts on lift tickets, lodging, restaurants, equipment, activities and much more!

STUDENT EMPLOYEES
W·A·N·T·E·D
Summer Conference Housing is looking for YOU!
How about a summer job that is here on the UMASS campus and lets you meet new people everyday?
JOBS
How about working with a department that will host over 9,000 people on the UMASS campus this summer?
February 22- March 31, 2000 applications for Summer Conference Housing positions will be available in the University Conference Services Office, 918 Campus Center.
Completed applications are due by April 7, 2000.

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Our Opinion
Handgun Problem

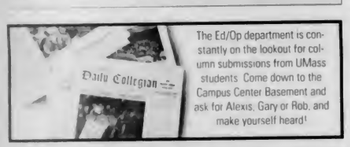
it is time to do something.

Not later – not some other time, not after a couple of brunches with the lobbyists – now. Gun legislation is needed and it is needed badly, and there is no excuse for any more dragging of the political feet.

With the rash of school shootings including the recent murder of six-year-old Kayla Roland, it should be apparent that there is a need, and a fire-rate, for something to be done. There are currently several proposals on the table for Congress to enact.

The most divisive issue is the drive for legislation, which would force background checks on people attempting to buy guns at gun shows. Is there any legitimate reason why a law should not be passed to regulate gun shows? We aren't talking about flea markets or baseball card shows, where all you can get is some overpriced crap or maybe an overpriced baseball card – we are talking about guns, weapons that exist to kill.

There is no reason that someone who does, in fact, feel the need to purchase a weapon should be able to bypass regular background checks by going to a show rather than a store. There are, of course, reasons that one would want to purchase a gun with minimal effort and no waiting – reasons like rage, jealousy, and revenge. In addition to simply preventing potential wife- in the best interest of society, should not be having guns [illegible] registering them (which is the entire point of background checks in the first place), the waiting involved and the fact that someone knows what you are up to must be more then enough to cause a would-be murderer to reconsider.



And what about the broader issues? The banning of handguns all together, for instance? The statistics on this issue speak for themselves. Yesterday, to michaelmoore.com, in the last year there were 16,000 handgun related murders. 15,500 of those were committed by people known to the victim. 300 of those victims died at the wrong end of their own guns. There are not worldwide statistics or statistics for all the countries in the world in general – these figures are solely for the good ol' USA.

Take a look at another country where handguns are completely banned – Great Britain, for instance. A great deal smaller than our own land mass, sure, but still a major industrial country with a population of [illegible] million people – people just like Americans, who get angry and get upset and everything else – this nation had a grand total of 12 handgun murders in the last year.

Wow.

What has to happen for handguns to happen? Perhaps. Not soon, however, and not easily. Not by any means will it be easy. It is a goal for the future, to be achieved [illegible] without hope of immediate realization. What about other, more immediate goals – such as background checks at gun shows? Registrar Senator Orrin Hatch, in charge of the committee which is [illegible] legislation, was quoted in the Boston Globe as saying that he is very leery to agree to any sort of the legislation proposed.

Well that is not acceptable. We here at the Daily Collegian firmly believe that the background check legislation is a great first step towards greater safety in this country, and should be supported.

The Ed/Op department is constantly on the lookout for column submissions from UMass students. Come down to the Campus Center Basement and ask for Alexis, Gary or Rob, and make yourself heard!

Your Opinion
Use Your voice

Dear Voice

To the editor

I would like to thank Kenneth Vinciguerra for his column entitled "Uncle Sam is going too far," published on Friday, March 3. Vinciguerra draws attention to an act being considered by the House of Representatives, the Methamphetamine Anti-Proliferation Act (S486, HR 3917), which "Bans the dissemination of drug recipes and other demonstrative information to the manufacturing and use of methamphetamine and other controlled substances." This is another attempt to expand the failing drug war at the expense of basic First Amendment rights, making it illegal to distribute information related to manufacture or consumption of [illegible] drugs.

Remember, our Congress will listen to voters, but only if the voice they hear is loud enough. Using the incredible technology of the Internet this couldn't be easier. Just visit http://www.house.gov/writerep/ to find and contact your Representative in the House by email, and http://www.senate.gov/ to find your Senator.

In addition, Vinciguerra mentioned the unjust asset forfeiture laws. Under current laws, police can seize property if they believe it is connected with a drug crime even if they can't bring enough evidence to charge the owner. In fact, in 85% of federal cases, the owner is never charged with a crime. This doesn't stop the police from keeping the property; if the owner wants it back, he must prove the property's innocence (the property is guilty until proven innocent) and must provide his or her own lawyer to do so. Legislation is in progress to reform these laws (H.R. 1658 and S. 1931), but it needs your support to pass through the Senate. For more information and to sign onto a petition supporting reform visit www.forfeiture.org.

Vern Coffey
Amherst

Loss of a loved one

Dear So-called Friend,

I'm afraid Dave is beyond repair. He used to enjoy coming over to my house so much more than he currently does. The fun we used to have just hanging out has come to an end.

There is no more of that and Dave is sad. You see, after the fun subsided, we would settle into our 75 dollar pink floral couches and watch TV. But now it's not so easy. And I think you know why.

If you want to just drop it off in the mailbox while we are at class or just slip it back onto the coffee table the next time you are over, please feel free to do so. We really just want our baby back.

Yours Truly,
You Know Who

Kathleen Ralls

I never sent this letter, and never really thought about writing it other than for the purpose of playing a joke on my friend Deb. But here's the story behind why I'm writing it now.

I came home Sunday night to find my house in disarray. I couldn't say that it was necessarily messy, but something was missing. I just didn't know what. But Dave didn't let me mull the issue over too long. What he told me was not really that big a deal to me or my roommate Courtney, but as her boyfriend, it certainly got to him.

What was it? The remote was gone.

He was in an uproar; the clicker, the flicker, the remote, whatever you want to call it, was reported missing as of Saturday morning. To us, it just meant a little more exercise. Maybe somebody was trying to tell us that running, ice skating and going to the gym just weren't good enough. But Dave had other ideas.

"Ever since Saturday, when we walked into the house and CSPAN was on, it's been gone," Dave explained with an air of enragement. "I mean, who watches CSPAN anyway?"

Couches were immediately turned over and vacuumed in hopes of finding the missing link to our family. Desks were actually cleaned and CDs were put back into their respective cases, all in Dave's valiant effort. His main concern was that he would have to actually get up off of the couch and change the channel to ESPN when Court's Home Garden Television got too much for him. Already taking out our recycling and washing our cars, I secretly think he was concerned we would have some new manicuring plans for our house and lawn this spring. But I like to keep those ideas to myself.

After rampaging through our house and considering a peek into the trash, Dave and Court did some detective work and realized that our friend Deb had last seen it on Saturday morning. After sitting back down with some waffles, she switched off the HGT. Nobody had seen it since.

Fast-forward to Sunday night. Deb decides to sleep over on the couch and comes by after 11 p.m. Dave readies himself and opens the backdoor for her.

"Do you know where the remote is?" he asks her before she even takes two steps inside my house. She laughs at his uncharacteristic abrasiveness and plows through to the living room. Now, Deb is very level-headed and starts asking where Dave has looked. She doesn't ask Court or I; the two people who actually live there, because we really haven't bothered looking.

The remote was gone. He was in an uproar; the clicker, the flicker, the remote, whatever you want to call it, was reported missing as of Saturday morning.

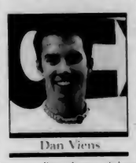
"Wouldn't it be funny if I left it in the waffle box in the freezer?" Deb jokes as she and Dave race to the refrigerator. It would certainly make a great ending to the search but, alas, it wasn't there.

"That would be worse than leaving milk on the shelf," Dave muses through his apparent frustration. Courtney, who is accustomed to living under tornado-like conditions, has just gotten a new bed that day and had to clean her room, is positive it isn't in there. I start looking through my room, which is relatively neat, before I give up. We'll all pitch in and buy Dave a remote to Court's TV just to make him happy, I think. And to stop his ranting.

Dave begins to search the shelves where the TV and VCR are. His focus is unlike I've ever seen it and it's got me worried.

"I had a dream Saturday night that it was behind a picture on top of the TV and I got up and rushed over here to see if it was there, but it wasn't," Dave dejectedly explains. His wrinkles have doubled in size and I think he might need glasses after all the strain he has put on his eyes.

At this point I joke that Dave is not going to allow Deb to go to sleep before the mystery is solved. Feeling through the crumbs and quarters in our couch, which Dave said he had already thoroughly searched, Deb suddenly hurls back, brandishing the remote! Dave is indescribably excited as I smartly taunt him about how he claimed to have already looked in that most obvious of locations. It goes right over his head as he settles back into is comfort zone and zips through the channels as though he was not a day and a half out of practice.



Rest assured, we all slept well that night.

Kathleen Ralls is a Collegian columnist.

New Years' Phishing trip

By the time this is printed it will have been two months since New Year's Eve. These two months have given me enough time to contemplate how I spent my turn of the millenium. Now I can finally write about it.

On the 28 th of December in the year 1999, the 12 of us woke up. Sue, Jay, Julie, Luke, Mike, Daily, Andrew, Christine, Polok, Melissa, Buca and I were ready for our trip. The only things that stood between us and the greatest New Year's celebration to date was obtaining our RV and driving 1,500 miles. After a couple of hours and some strategic packing, the Phishmobile was ready to follow the lines going south. We had in excess of 24 hours worth of driving before we would arrive at Big Cypress Seminole Indian Reservation in Florida. Once we got there we knew that we would be in store for a celebration that no other band besides Phish would or could orchestrate.

Dan Viens

The driving wasn't bad. The RV was alive with energy and anticipation. Later it would be more alive with fungus and grime because the 12 of us called it home for a week. We made stops here and there on the way down. For the most part Buca and Luke slept, and I drove and bitched. Each time we reached a major landmark our grins got bigger. Not only were we seeing something cool, but also we were closer to Phish and it was getting warmer. Finally, after about 20 hours of driving, we reached Georgia.

There we stopped for a little while. The sun was like a drug that brought our bodies back to life. But like any drug, we knew that eventually it would wear off and we would have to go home. That wasn't for another week though.

After this brief stop we continued south. We didn't know how much longer it would take to get there, but we knew we were close. Then the traffic started. Right near the Florida border, we hit about three hours of gridlock caused by a six-car pile up. Because of this we had to take a detour through the back roads of Georgia. This is when we realized that we were really in the South. There were broken down cars and weird dogs on all of the front lawns. You could tell that we were in the land of Jerry Springer guests. Finally we got out of traffic and we were in what we thought would be the home stretch to Phish.

When we got into Florida we stopped at the Florida welcome center so we could obtain some free freshly squeezed O.J. We also decided that this would be a good place to fill up our water. It turned out that no location would really be a good place to fill up our water tanks. We couldn't figure out how to do this or how to work anything else on the RV besides the generator and engine. This weird rest-stop security guy, whose name escapes me, gave us a hard time because I drove over the grass a couple of times. Eventually we were on our way again. I think Buca was still sleeping.

After a couple more stops for food and fireworks we were within minutes of Alligator Alley. This road would take us to our final destination. Some nice guys who spoke fluent half-English let us follow him right to the on ramp. We got on Alligator Alley and we were cruisin'. We knew that we were close. We realized that we would probably have to spend a few hours in traffic, but that's to be expected. After a few minutes we got to the traffic. At this point it was midnight on December 30. Every now and then the traffic would move a couple of miles. Then it happened. The traffic just stopped. We were right in the middle of a 25-mile traffic jam. This is equivalent to waiting in traffic from Springfield to Route 9. It was awful.

It was the dead of night. We had driven 27 straight hours and things started getting ugly. Daly and some of the others bided their time by making wax artwork on paper towels. Polok, Jay and I lit fires in the breakdown lane with lighter fluid so no cars could cheat and get past us. After a long, chilly and restless night, the sun rose. This filled everyone with hope as we could now see our surroundings. With this view also came a view of the traffic in front of us. It was as far as the eye could see, both in front and in back of us.

To make a long story short we waited 15 hours in traffic before we got in. We picked up four girls from Canada and then we finally entered Big Cypress. It was about 19 hours later than we had anticipated, but we were there and not at some friend's party in bitter cold Massachusetts. We set up camp and got ready for the shows on the 30th.

The RV was alive with energy and anticipation. Later it would be more alive with fungus and grime because the 12 of us called it home for a week.

I won't go into the majority of the festival because I don't have enough space and most of you probably couldn't really appreciate it, but I will tell you about the 31st. Phish closed the afternoon set with the Eric Clapton / Jimmy Cale cover of After Midnight. The refrain of this song goes: 'After midnight we gonna let it all hang down / After midnight we gonna find out what it's all about.' The crowd was going nuts because we all knew that at midnight we would be right back where we were and we would truly see what it was all about.

After the afternoon set we went back to the RV and chilled for a little while. Then after some "preparing" we headed back for the remainder of the show. We entered the concert field a little past 11. As soon as we walked in, there was electricity in the air. Everyone could tell that we were in store for a special night. All the Phishheads were wearing crazy outfits, balloons were rising into the air and glowsticks were already flying. Everyone there was in a mind-altered state, some natural and some unnatural. It was 15 minutes before the year 2000. I was with 11 great kids that I knew and 75,000 others that I didn't. We all knew that we were in store for almost eight hours of Phish. We wouldn't know if Y2K hit until sometime the next day when we reentered civilization. I had a phat suit on and to top it all off we were in the Florida everglades. This was honestly the first time in my life that I knew in my heart I didn't want to be anywhere else. There was no other place in the world that could've been a better atmosphere for me at this moment.

On stage, this guy with a big mask started pedaling on a stationary bike. As he pedaled the giant clock on stage was moving. After a little while he got tired and stopped pedaling. Then in the middle of a field Phish rose from under some sort of canopy and proceeded to the stage on a giant hot dog. Once they got to the stage they fed Father Time sausage links (meat-sticks) to bring him back to life. Father Time started pedaling again and in a few minutes the clock hit 12. Everyone went crazy. I kissed Sue and the most amazing fireworks went off for 20 minutes. They seemed like they were only 50 feet above us. Then we danced and laughed for another seven hours. The end of the show came when the first sun rise of the new millenium came over the everglades and the Beatles' Here Comes The Sun played over the loud speakers.

There was another half a week to go before we got home, but nothing came close to our New Year's Eve. It was magic. I was at the greatest event with the best group of kids I could've asked for. It was the best Phishin' trip I've ever been on.

Dan Viens is a Collegian columnist.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Sam Wilkinson Managing Editor Shawn Ilinitch Business Manager
Ben Alamed Web Developer Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager
Sage Brousseau Co-Advertising Production Manager Jake Lilien Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martynetti Arts & Living Editor Joslyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Hugh Reel Black Affairs Editor Christine Connare Women's Issues Editor
Alexis Paddock Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor Marc Menschel Finance Manager
Gary Mendoza Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor Joshua Szymanski Distribution Manager
Jake Lilien Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Katie Beith Promotions Manager
Jeanne Gorlovsky Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Catherine Turner International Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Position Vacant Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Mary Green News Editor Chris Brennan Assistant Finance Manager
Kara Stokes Photographer Editor Eric Faber Assistant Advertising Manager
Alissa White Co-Sports Editor Amy Gargantia Assistant Business Manager
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Fridays during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the Massachusetts Collegian in 1911, the Weekly Collegian in 1916 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

ENTERING THE SQUARE CIRCLE

DRAMATIC WRESTLING AND PROFESSIONAL SHAKESPEARE

ONLINE WRESTLING

POPULARLY STYLIN' AND PROFILIN'

By Sam Wilkinson

Cities have found another number of ways to knock professional wrestling. It's [illegible] lent it too [illegible] to talk and is too dangerous.

The critics are [illegible] liar and wife Parents group decry scantily clad women and men that just [illegible] special who, this morning, plain to wrestling fans this what they are watching [illegible]

That take on wrestling heads [illegible] attacks on [illegible] fan base [illegible] but nothing but hacks and rednecks [illegible] ers and b'll [illegible] billies all t[illegible] stupid to understand what the are watching [illegible]

Wrestling, for all of its attacks from the outside, remains strong within American, Canadian and Mexican culture. While Mexican wrestling is a world unto itself both Canadian and American wrestling has been thriving with the WWF grabbing handfuls if fannies left and right and ECW and WCW in various stages of growth.

But why? Is the fan base only an aging group of middle-aged men who like to see [illegible] or is there more to it than that?

Some would disdain that such a comparison is simplistic and unfair. "There's no way that what we enjoy can be similar to something as lowly as professional wrestling. Such [illegible]

WRESTLING PLOTS [illegible]

Courtesy of WWF.com, ECWwrestling.com, WCW.com

By Sam Wilkinson

As it is with anything popular professional wrestling has gained quite a fan following. Huge television numbers and pay-per-view buys prove the point but unlike traditional fan audiences wrestling's fans are segmented into separate groups, marks and smarts.

Marks are fans who don't know the difference they think what they are watching is real they cheer for their favorites they don't understand that behind everything they see there is some element of [illegible] some minute amount of planning something that has determined what they will see.

Smart- on the other hand- know. They know about the scripts and the finishes.

Oftentimes, well before the finish has been finished. They [illegible] cheer for favorites, but finally, that regardless of their support what they are going to see has already been determined.

And yet they stay fan. That the sport is scripted doesn't matter it them, that it is good does. With the proliferation of the Internet such smart fans have been able to come together to discuss the good, the bad, the ugly and everything else that goes on within professional wrestling.

Or as Sean Shannon who is the webmaster of www.rantsbarsandrings.com said "we can talk about wrestling at several levels."

Citing the recent debut of the Radicals on WCW's Nitro, Scott Keith who is the WWF Chris Benoit, Dean Malenko, Perry Saturn and Eddie Guerrero has made an immediate impact with the number one contenders. Shannon said, "the Radicals were able to showcase their debut at several levels on the Internet, be it a buzz [illegible] who was the impact of the Radicals leaving struggling WCW for the WWF further erodes WCW's position, the smart level wherein it is recognized that the Radicals four wrestlers who know how to tell a story in the ring and Eddy Guerrero does a great interview" or the mark level wherein it is observed that, upon their debut, that they beat the New Age Outlaws, a long-time WWF tag team, was fairly cool.

We can talk about those things all at once and understand those levels at the same time or if someone wants to focus on one of those levels, we can do that too and talk just about that," Shannon said.

Shannon has been online discussing wrestling since 1994 when, as he put it, "I got my first Internet account at Antioch College and visited rec.sport.pro-wrestling." Shannon had been searching for a community to discuss his fandom since nobody really liked professional wrestling at the private school that he attended.

"I was pleased to find that there were easily accessible people to talk with."

Scott Keith was a part of the same usenet news group that Shannon found, albeit slightly earlier.

"My first exposure to the online smart community came in September of 1992 when I got a computing science account in University. We weren't really told about things like newsgroups in class but we were free to diddle away on them in our free time," Keith said.

He said that he had only a passing affiliation with "smartness" but had no idea about the term or Dave Meltzer to journalist that some might describe as the first journalist of wrestling reporting) or just how fake it actually was.

"I typed wrestling as a search to see what I found, that ended up being rec.sport.pro-wrestling. A lot of the people there eventually went on to bigger things, but while discussion were heated much of the time things were generally pretty calm and friendly."

He said that where he [illegible] had guys were "heels" and [illegible] "babyfaces."

"I discovered that wrestlers liked to [illegible]

turn to WRESTLINGNET, page [illegible]

By Sam Wilkinson

Whether or not you like it, there are a few basic facts about wrestling that can't be ignored. It's the highest rated show on at least three separate television stations, two of them cable, USA and TNN, and one of them network. UPN, and it's a valuable community: CBS has offered up to $100 million in support of the World Wrestling Federation's Raw to convince them to move net works.

Every Monday millions of fans tune in to watch either Raw or World Championship Wrestling's Nitro every Wednesday a little more than a million watch WCW's Thunder several million watch WWF Smackdown on Thursday nights and little less than a million watch Extreme Championship Wrestlings ECW on TNN on Friday nights.

Wrestling is a proven ratings earner a money-maker and a cultural event. Nevermind the millions that tune in each week each month fans buy pay-per-views, wrestling events held on grand scales where stories are culminated. Wrestlers have also crossed over from promotions regularly WWF's Rock is rumored to star in The Mummy 2; WWF's Mankind does commercials for Chef Boyardee ravioli. WWF's Stone Cold Steve Austin is a regular on CBS. Nash Bridges. WCW's Goldberg appeared in last summer's Universal Soldier.

But whatever cross over appeal they've ever had in Hollywood and elsewhere, they've had to earn within the squared circle and with the fans of the sport/sport entertainment, depending on where you stand on that particular issue.

All three promotions go at their fanbase in totally different ways each offering a different type of entertainment to their fan base. WWF easily the most successful of all three offers [illegible] and glamour, fireworks and the biggest name in all of sport-entertainment. The Rock FCW offers long matches amazing moves and unbelievable risk but without the glitter of the WWF. WCW is attempting to redefine itself after a dominant run in the mid-'90' when no other promotion could come close to their spectacle. Currently most of its low ratings, where WCW's could leave it in any number of places but wholesome family entertainment seems to be in the sights of the struggling federation.

But really it's probably a little more complicated than that.

WWF

Ran by Vince McMahon out of Stamford, CT the WWF was the first wrestling promotion to [illegible] national in the early [illegible] Wrestling has been run in [illegible] ries prior to McMahon [illegible] buying up those [illegible]

turn to WRESTLING INTRO

■ wrestling plots

continued from page 5

reveal their own ignorance.

Imagine, if you will, Romeo and Juliet, be it any of the movie versions or the performed play live. Imagine the characters and the storyline. Imagine the fighting.

There is no difference from the thoughts in your mind and what is seen at professional wrestling events or shows on the television. People watching Romeo and Juliet come to hate some of the performers. It's natural and expected, and if it doesn't happen, the play is being performed poorly. Tybalt kills Mercutio and we hate Tybalt. It has to happen for the play to touch us as it does, for not only is Romeo having a hard time getting together with Juliet, he's lost his best friend.

We hate Tybalt for it. Thus Tybalt is a heel, the man we love to hate. When Romeo kills Tybalt, somewhere inside of us, somewhere, we are happy, we have seen justice done, we have seen revenge and something that panders to our needs as humans.

When Romeo gets together with Juliet, we enjoy ourselves, because that's how it's supposed to work out, thus rendering us all the more upset when both die at the end.

But Romeo and Juliet just as easily could be any wrestling feud. Tybalt punks out Mercutio, friend of Romeo, in the ring, thus embarrassing Mercutio. Fans hate the heelish Tybalt, booing his every move. They cheer when he is defeated by babyface Romeo. They cheer him as he stomps Tybalt, and are behind him fully as he pursues Juliet, perhaps, in this case, the championship belt. Despite his greatest effort, despite putting his absolute all into a match with some sort of stipulation, Romeo cannot win, thus losing Juliet, his everything.

The only difference between the two? One is held over weeks within the ring, the other his held for a night in a theater.

The reality is, and something that those critics refuse to accept, is that we can see the violence, the sexuality and the danger anywhere. Such things are not limited to wrestling rings and television shows. Critics absolutely could not deny that Mercutio's death is violent in nature just as Romeo and Juliet's love is sexual, and with the death inherent within the play, danger certainly must be a consideration.

Mick Foley lost his final match the other night after falling off a sixteen-foot cage, through the cage better yet and into the ring. Despite his attempts to defeat Triple H, he was twice bloodied and beaten, left only to limp from the ring. He gave his heart to the ring to the competition, to the matches that eventually left him injured and pained, his children and wife crying at ringside. His dedication to what he did was more than evident, his performances touched fans and rightfully so, as he walked from the ring after his final match, they chanted his name.

He gave so much within the ring that fans came to love him and support him and when he lost his final match, one with a retirement stipulation, his fans were saddened and crushed. Their icon, their hero had given it his all and lost, putting on nothing short of a great performance for all in attendance.

Romeo's fans cried for him because, unfairly, he left us all, never getting what he deserved, never getting what was owed to him.

There's no good reason to believe that the Mick Foley's of this world can't be Romeos. And that's why wrestling touches those of us who choose to be fans.

Sam Wilkinson is a Collegian columnist.

Guide corrupts TV awards

Hey, do you like crap? Yeah, I'm talking to you. When you sit around on the couch, taking up space and valuable air, what are you truly looking for? It seems that America is infatuated with junk that fills the airwaves, with such brilliant things as infomercials, tabloid talk shows, and my personal favorites: dating games. I came to the realization a few days ago, that I could never sell a used car. Not because I don't think I'd have the ability to sell you a used car, but because I felt I could never be slimy enough to con you into it. My decision came from simply watching television trash. Because idiots like "Howling Jim the Wolfman" a fourty year old car salesman/werewolf, are stealing my precious moments on this earth, I have been forced to do something that I swore I never would. I'm about to point out a reason why we should not be watching television.

Earlier this week, there was a tragedy on my TV. TV Guide decided to take out enough advertising time to give themselves an award show. Yes, in the tradition of the Blockbuster movie awards, the MTV music video awards, and the Adult Film Superstars awards, TV guide now hands out awards for television excellence. The real television awards are actually known as the Emmys, and they take place in the beginning of the fall, when the new seasons are just starting. However to be perfectly honest, if I could think of one publication that I would want to sponsor the Emmy Awards, it would certainly be TV Guide. Think about it. TV Guide is supposed to be experts in television, in the same sense that Sports Illustrated is the epitome of sporting magazines, and Hustler is the epitome of...well you get the point. So, I would certainly not have any qualms with TV Guide having a say in who wins an Emmy award, simply because it is the most read publication in the country, and it is a very credible source. However, after what I saw at the TV Guide Awards, I've changed my mind.

If you try to tell me that the best series on television is anything but a certain HBO series of drama, you're getting a beating. Tony Soprano style. The award winner for best drama series at this year's Golden Globe Awards, and the most nominated series at last year's Emmys, is not to be missed. The brilliant acting combined with one of the greatest scripts in the history of television, makes it something that comes only once in a lifetime. However, according to TV Guide, it was not one of the best drama series of the year. No, instead TV Guide felt it was necessary to choose "ER." "Touched by an Angel," "Providence," and "The Practice," as worthy contenders for the award. Okay, let's weed out the category right away. No one's going to deny that "ER," and "The Practice" are terrific series. But, "Touched by an Angel" and "Providence?" What kind of watered down crack were you smoking TV Guide? If you watch "Touched by an Angel," you should be touched by a dose of reality: you're a loser. And as far as the awful series starring Melina Kanakaredes. I live twenty minutes from Providence, and all I can say is that no one there watches the stupid show that's supposed to be about the gorgeous city. They're too busy watching taped episode's of "The Sopranos."

In more worthless atrocities that consumed the night, "Everybody Loves Raymond" won Best Comedy Series, David Hyde Pierce won for Best Actor in a Comedy Series, and apparently the Best New Show on TV is CBS' "Judging Amy." I'm sorry, but Ray Romano isn't that funny, David Hyde Pierce should have won that award five years ago, but not now, and I think I can think of about twenty new shows that are better than "Judging Amy." Hell, even "WWF Smackdown" is more entertaining than that piece of crap.

Moving on, the TV Guide awards presented such high quality and important recognitions to Eddie from "Frasier" for Best TV Pet, Bob Costas for Best Sportscaster, and let's not forget "Buffy the Vampire Slayer" for Best Teen Show (which by the way is a travesty because Katie Holmes puts Sarah Michelle Gellar to shame, and "Dawson's Creek" is so much better, so put that in your pipes and smoke it 721 Dickinson. Yes, TV Guide has officially hit an all-time low. It's taken on a low that we didn't think could get any lower after they did a cover story on "7th Heaven" proclaiming it the "Best show on television."

Despite what you may have read in any other trashy publications, Cheers and leers," is one of the most widely read columns in the country and belongs to TV Guide. (By the way, how ironic is it that a newspaper would sarcastically give someone an award for plagiarizing, while stealing the name of that particular column from a magazine that is copyrighted by a national publication?) The TV Guide Awards took a stab at doing a live "Cheers and leers," which could have been very funny if given the opportunity to be. However, the short and unfunny jokes proved to be almost as worthless as the show itself.

If you think that the trashy awards show ended with stupid and embarrassing award categories, you're dead wrong. The magazine also awarded a prize to "Television's # 1 fan." These people spent their entire lives memorizing episodes of "Star Trek," while doing Latke Impressions, and bumping into wall like Kramer. To put it briefly, they were losers with lives that were so pathetic, that they put even me to shame (Just sour grapes because I didn't win).

The TV Guide Awards, proved to be the tip of a sinking iceberg that we once knew as quality entertainment. As the television industry struggles to create quality programming such as "The Sopranos," and "Sex and the City," to name a few, such as TV Guide completely shun those efforts away by filling two hours of time with an awards show that is much worse than FOX running dead air for 120 minutes. I would love to spend the rest of my life defending the struggle to design some good stuff to watch. However, if that fails, I guess I could always just sell used cars with the Wolfman.

Ryan Benharris is a Collegian columnist

Beings reign supreme, Barbie turns gangsta, and other are mindless

SUPREME BEINGS OF LEISURE
Supreme Beings of Leisure
Palm Pictures

Cool name. Actually, this four-piece "pop-tronica" group has a lot more going for them than just a classy moniker. Their laid-back sound floats effortlessly through a room, car, or anywhere you let these beings loose. Geri Sorianno-Lightwood's vocals provide a suitable guide through these sonic landscapes (I promised myself I would never use that phrase, oh well), provided by Kiran Shahani on bass, Rick Torres on guitar, and keyboardist Ramin "Ram" Sakurai, all of whom also contribute to programming. DJ True is on hand to lend some wax scratches on a few tracks, as well as a four-piece string section conducted by Suzie Katayama to add some depth to the sound.

The proceedings get a bit too leisurely at times, like on "Truth from Fiction" or "What's the Deal," where you could be forgiven for nodding off. But there is nothing leisurely about the pace of "Strangelove Addiction" or "You're Always the Sun," where the b.p.m. count gets a shot in the arm for some happenin' beats that would make Moby or Daft Punk proud. These beings are at their best, however, when they achieve a happy medium between these two styles. "Never the Same" opens the album with some great lyrics and melody from Sorianno-Lightwood, and "Golddigger" is probably the catchiest track off the album and is ripe for a breakthrough single.

I am one step closer to heaven," Sorianno-Lightwood sings on "Never the Same." After listening to this, I'm not sure I would go that far, but when summer rolls around and you're blasting this with the top down, it could prove a pretty divine experience. Grade A-

-(Michael Delano)

GANGSTA BITCH BARBIE
This is Not a Test
Choosy Mom Records

The question: Can a Boston band called Gangsta Bitch Barbie overcome its name and still make good music? Is such a thing possible? I know they've been nominated for Boston Music Awards and had some radio airplay on major stations, but still... can it be anything resembling good?

Shockingly, the answer is a resounding yes. In this debut disc GBB bust out eight punk/metal songs with constant intensity and inventiveness, keeping up the effort with nary a weak movement.

In keeping with the tradition of overcoming stupid names, first song "Suplex Ninja" is a rocking intro to the album with heavy riffs, a catchy chorus, and lyrics that are way more serious and meaningful than expected form a song called "Suplex Ninja." Another standout song is "KingPin," with some impressive bass work bassist Jim Shippy and a cool fast presentation that erupts from the speakers.

The best song, however, is definitely "Godzilla." Usually I despise songs about things like scary monsters and space aliens, but in this case I just couldn't help myself – this song is great. Just try to not like this song, because even if you don't like lyrics like "I knew Gamera had some more stamina" and "Can my man Rodan open for Godzilla," they will be in your head all day. Alternately heavy and funky, switching between rapping and screaming vocals from singer Ken Smith, the song always keeps you bobbing your head. Absolutely outstanding.

Are there any problems? Well, yes, actually, but they don't come from the band. The recording quality could be a little better, especially on the vocals, which can be unintelligible at times. That's pretty much the only complaint that I can come up with, though.

I confess, I like a band called Gangsta Bitch Barbie. I can't help it – the music is simply good. So good, in fact, that This Is Not A Test completely deserves its score of A.

(Rob Schulze)

Rap City
Best of... Compilation
Virgin

Finding artistic eminence in a rap video these days is about as inextent as a nutritious dinner at White Castle. Black Entertainment Television, which began its downward spiral after Ananda left Teen Summit, is the consummate purveyor of syrupy, "ghetto love" riffraf and demon-eyed, gold-toothed "ghetto thug" mish-mosh. In the visual stratosphere of Rap City, hip-hop is widely exemplified by its ability to appear marketable and utilitarian to a broad demographic. So goes the constant rotation of their playlist.

The auditory soundtrack, Best of Rap City, is no exception. Although many songs ("Nas is Like", "Make Ups 2 Break Ups", "Discipline", "Art of Storytelling II") are certifiably dope, the album takes zero chances establishing a variety of sound styles. Thus, everything compiled has already surfaced and circulated through mainstream culture and there is absolutely nothing for the backpackers and underground hounds. Overlooking my personal biases towards the borage of dirty South glamor ("Ha", "Make 'Em Say Uggch", "In Decatur Rmx."), there are virtually no redeeming qualities to the disk...and playing it reminds me why I stopped watching B.E.T. in the first place. C- (David Katzoff)

Mindless Self Indulgence
Frankenstein Girls Will Seem Strangely Sexy
D.A.M.N! Records

Imagine, if you will, a bizarro universe in which all of the good bands were relegated to embarrassing opening-act club tours and their fans were all substance-addicted teenage suburban punks, and the worst of

Turn to TRAX, page 7

Council Travel
The journey is the reward...
Give your family & friends the gift of travel
Gift certificates, passport photos, airport transfers, tours, language programs, work exchanges, ISIC backpacks, rolling duffels, & all sorts of gear, guidebooks, railpasses, tickets, accommodations and more.
44 Main Street
Amherst MA
413-256-1261
www.counciltravel.com

arts is smart

DO YOU NEED YOUR WISDOM TEETH REMOVED?
If so, patients are being enrolled for a wisdom tooth research study. Your wisdom teeth can be extracted by a Board Certified Oral Surgeon. Financial compensation will be provided for your opinion on a research pain medication.
For more information call:
SCIREX Corporation at (860) 285-0569
Outside Windsor call toll free 1-888-285-0569
SCIREX

Coming Soon...
The Apartment Guide
...on March 27th
Special Classified section place ads in Collegian Newsstand next to Uhaul Rental Office

EXPANDED HORIZONS
Day Spa
Tanning • Hot Tub • Massage • Body Wraps
Spring Break Special
10% Student Discount
Buy Any Unlimited Tanning Package receive Free Bottle of Australian Gold Accelerator
529-9996
31 Union • Easthampton
LOOK & FEEL GREAT !!!

GIFTS from GLASS to GOLD
starting under $20.00
Earrings by Ed Levin
silverscape designs
GOLDSMITHS GEM GALLERY
One King St., Northampton 584-3324 • M-Wed 10-6, Th-Sat 10-9, Sun 12-5
264 N. Pleasant St., Amherst 253-3324 • M-Sat 10-6, Thurs 'til 8, Sun 12-5 watch out.

Alternative Spring Break
5 days in the Ozarks, MO
Meditation, Yoga, Music & Dance. Self discovery, Lots of Fun.
Vegetarian Food.
$195 pre registration, rideshares
www.ru-students.cx
1-800-870 5348

安城中國餐館
AMHERST CHINESE FOOD
we do not use "MSG"
253-7835 or 253-2813
62 Main Street, Amherst

$1 Sushi
Rock & Roll
10:30-1:00
Fri-Sat
Nights

ICHIBAN いちばん
AUTHENIC JAPANESE AND KOREAN RESTAURANT
1 Roundhouse Plaza, Northampton, MA
(413) 585-1185
(Behind City Hall, off Main St.)
10% Student Discount

KARAOKE
Sun-Thu: 11:30-1:00
Fri-Sat: 11:30-1:30
with valid student ID

■ trax

continued from page 6

the worst bands headlined stadium tours and sold millions of albums. In that universe, this band would reign supreme. I find it impossible imagine that the members of Mindless Self Indulgence could listen to their own music and not realize how utterly horrible they sound, so I can only assume that they have made worthlessness their goal; they aspire to suck.

Frankenstein Girls Will Seem Strangely Sexy contains 30 (!) tracks, all of them bad. They belong to the same genre as such notable impossible-to-take-seriously bands as the Insane Clown Posse and Ramstein; as bad as those bands are, however, these guys are infinitely worse. I can't think of a single reason, not one single reason, to recommend this album to anyone.

F (David Troupes)

The Wilkinsons
Here and Now
Giant Records

Yee Haw! It's The Wilkinsons. Okay, I just hurt myself yelling "yee haw," but it was worth it. I'm not really sure what Here and Now is trying to be, but much like a kid who can't make up his mind at the candy store, it really needs to pick something.

The Wilkinsons is a band that emerged out of Canada in 1998 with their debut release, Nothing But Love. The first single off of the album, "26 cents" had some constant time on country top 20 boards, and this made the band into some sort of a country item. Here and Now is the anticipated second release from the band, and will hit the American markets on April 4th. What Here and Now seems like it is trying to accomplish, is to design a sound that will be accepted with open arms by everyone who has fifteen bucks to drop on a CD. The first song on the disc, "Jimmy's Got a Girlfriend," is supposed to be a country song, but it's got that Backstreet Boys pop sound blended in. Almost every song on the album seems like it was written to appeal to a younger audience, even though it is country music. After the "Jimmy's Got a Girlfriend," which is the stupidest thing I've ever heard in my life, the CD just gets worse with awful lyrics and even worse acoustic guitars and pianos.

It is quite difficult to see who is the true leader of the band, but the three members are shown on the front of the album posing in a way that only Abercrombie and Fitch would be proud of, in a way that screams, hey little girl, you like N'Sync, well you'll love this. Personally I think I'd rather listen to N'Sync. I'm sorry, but even after reading the press kit that was sent to me on Here and Now, I still couldn't find anything that had any merit at all. I simply cannot take an album seriously that is promoted by an arrogant quote such as, "After their last album, The Wilkinsons have really grown up. Amanda is now 18 and Tyler will soon be 16 – and quite the heartthrob of the teen-age girls." That's just wonderful. Anyway, as I stated before, spend your fifteen bucks on a haircut or something that will benefit your brain in more ways than this piece of junk will. Yee Haw cowboy. Here and Now gets an F (Ryan Benharris)

Great Big Sea
Turn
Sire Records

Great Big Sea has clearly practiced and honed the craft of energetic folk music, and their new album, Turn, delivers 13 tracks of enjoyable acoustic music. Although the guitar is clearly the centerpiece of their sound, organs, banjos, flutes, and other interesting instrumentation help to change things up. The songs are a mix of original songs and charmingly arranged traditional tunes.

Despite the tight sound and refined production values of Turn, however, little on the record truly manages to grab the listener. The vocals are adequate but not incredibly inviting, and there is a certain homogeneity of sound present, both within the album and within the larger school of folk music to which the band belongs. There are some highlights to be found, such as "Ferryland Sealer," a soaring traditional song with powerful, edgy (relatively speaking) vocals and excellent accordion work.

For fans of traditional, regional folk music, Turn is definitely worth a listen – just don't expect anything revolutionary.

B- (David Troupes)

■ wrestling intro

continued from page 5

around the United States. McMahon brought America Andre the Giant and Hulk Hogan, the junkyard Dog and Minnesota's governor, Jesse "the Body" Ventura. He brought fans in unheard of numbers to watch his events; he sold pay-per-views and turned the WWF into a somewhat profitable commercial enterprise.

By the mid-90's, after Hulk Hogan left and the WWF was punished by a government inquiry into steroid abuse by the federation, the WWF hit rock bottom, skipping along for a few years in the mid-90's when the promotion struggled to survive, both popularly and financially. Low ratings and PPV buyrates and a mass defection of stars to the fledgling WCW could have spelled the end of the WWF. But the federation rebuilt, redefining its roster around younger and less established stars. By letting those stars define themselves, WWF was suddenly bringing its fans "Attitude," something that has both been boon and bane for McMahon.

Wrestlers told fans to "suck it" if they didn't like them. Wrestlers asked fans whether or not they should beat the hell out other wrestlers. Wrestlers offended fans, insulted them, ran them down and did a lot of things that had previously been treated as somewhat out of bounds in wrestling circles. McMahon brought fans wrestling and storylines that features pimps and hos, stereotypes and perversion and as a result, was roundly criticized for the move. But the fans absolutely loved it.

WWF climbed in the ratings, eventually again taking the lead from WCW and has since never relinquished those ratings; it has been the number one federation in America for more than a year straight, and even though recent big-name stars have been lost to injury or retirement, the WWF shows no signs of letting up.

Austin, a beer swilling foul-mouthed S.O.B. entertained fans in over a year long feud with McMahon, hitting him with chairs, delivering his Stone Cold Stunner, and drinking a beer after every win. Lost after a serious neck surgery, Austin should return later this summer.

Mick Foley, known to Chef Boyardee commercial watchers as Mankind, to others as either Dude Love, Cactus Jack, or as a recent best selling author, Foley lost a match at last month's No Way Out PPV in which he promised to retire. Most likely not a stunt, Foley was well known for taking serious bumps including falls two falls off sixteen foot cages through tables, two falls through cages onto the mat, one of which, his final bump, saw him go through the cage and the mat. He won Japan's King of the Deathmatch and was well respected as perhaps one of the world's greatest hardcore wrestlers, if not the best ever. But he was also good on the mic, and like Austin, Foley was able to rile his crowd with what he said and how he said it. But Foley's most likely, from now on out, retired, as the bumps have taken a sickening toll on his body, something that, now that he has two kids, he didn't want to be a part of anymore.

But the WWF has other stars, none who can replace Austin or Foley, but others who can occupy the fan's mindset including, most notably, The Rock, who has fan's absolutely eating out of his hand. Armed with a bevy of easy to remember catchphrases, the Rock's third person promos are the best in business, as fans know what he's going to say and chant along with him as he asks if everybody "smells what The Rock is cooking?"

For every fan favorite, or "babyface" if you're interested in the technical wrestling term for it, there must be a despised man, or "heel," and that man is Triple H. Currently the WWF champion and foil to Foley In his final match, Triple H is hated by the fans, yet is more than acceptable in his bad guy championship rule. Worthy of the belt, Triple H looks to go against the Big Show at next month's WrestleMania, although that will change to a Triple H -vs- Rock if history is any indicator.

Other big stars in the WWF include the seven foot Show, Kane and Undertaker, although UT won't return for several months due to an injury of his own, Chris Benoit, Rikishi and others, all of whom bring their own special something to the ring, be it Benoit's technical wrestling skill or Rikishi's mobility despite his ... huge and almost bare ass would be a good way to put it.

The WWF owns television ratings, media events, and with the world's largest wrestling event, WrestleMania, approaching, there is no reason to believe that the WWF will struggle in competition any time soon.

WCW

When McMahon was buying up federations, he was able to purchase all but one. Jim Crockett's National Wrestling Alliance in the southern territory attempted to maintain independence, but after struggling in the late 80's and early 90's, NWA was bought by media magnate Ted Turner, who renamed NWA WCW and put the show on television.

After a few years of struggle, opened up the pocketbooks that brought stars to the promotion that make it competitive with the WWF. Unfortunately, those stars provided only an immediate building block; their egos, on the other hand, after years in the business as major draws, ended up ruining, in a lot of ways, the promotion by refusing to let new names come up through the ranks.

After a hot ratings period in the mid-90's in which the WWF was absolutely crushed by WCW's New World Order angle in which former wrestlers from the WWF "took over" or at least, attempted to take over, WCW, ratings stagnated when it became clear that the Atlanta based promotion was out of ideas.

Politics dominated the backstage part of the show, as wrestlers refused to job (lose) matches to put over newer and younger talent. After hiring away writers from the WWF, the promotion almost showed a sign of possible rebound, before falling apart in complete disarray, as politics forced the new writers out of their positions, while talent, including the WWF's Benoit and ECW's Raven, left for different if not greener pastures. Buy rates for PPVs have absolutely plummeted and the organization, while not being in financial trouble, what with the backing of Turner, Time-Warner and now, Amhip via On-Line, is struggling creatively.

Watching a WCW show, one will see a strange mix of old familiar faces, including Hogan, Ric Flair, Bam Bam Bigelow and Sid Vicious, as well as newer wrestlers including Jeff Jarrett, a person the fans love to hate. Also in the mix are extremely talent foreign wrestlers from both Japan and Mexico, two nations that bring a great diversity of talent to the United States.

Also hurting WCW immensely is injuries that have decimated the top stars of the promotion. Kevin Nash is out with a broken ankle. Formerly in the WWF as Diesel in the mid-90's, Nash was a major player in the NWO angle. Bret Hart, a great wrestler with what some might describe as a tainted mindset, has been out with post concussion syndrome. The real pain for WCW though is the loss of Goldberg, the man who once sported a 140 match-winning streak, if WCW is to be believed, and is the man that WCW wants to build their promotion around. His loss to an arm injury has hurt the company tremendously.

If anything bright is ahead for WCW, Goldberg's return is it, as he will be pushed to the top of the southern promotion with the hopes that he can lead them away from the vast wasteland WCW is getting closer to on a regular basis.

Unable to compete with the WWF in terms of "Attitude", WCW can only hope to offer the kind of show that parents feel their children should see, something that will only happen when WCW offers fans shows that anyone is willing to see.

ECW

America's third promotion, Extreme Championship Wrestling entered the game rather late, offering its first ever pay-per-view in 1997 and only getting a cable television contract last August.

But the show now regularly pulls a 1.0 rating and draws more viewers to TNN than any of their other shows.

Known more for their edgy booking and insane wrestling, ECW claimed to bring wrestling back to wrestling, regularly featuring longer matches with more talented wrestlers.

Out of Philidelphia, a viewer watching ECW can expect all the women of the WWF, some of the talented foreign contingent of WCW and more wrestling than either of them. But the wrestling isn't your father's wrestling. Regularly featuring highspots, fans can expect to see wrestlers take 20-foot dives through tables, vacuum cleaner shots and blood. Lots of blood.

Some of the wrestling is brutal. Besides the blood, endless chairshots abound, women regularly fight or are fought, and men brutalize one another. Tajiri's kicks to the body are perhaps the nastiest to watch, although being on the receiving end of a Mike Awesome "Awesome Bomb" would probably be truly devastating. Other wrestlers prefer to take it to the air, like Rob Van Dam, who's Five-Star Frog Splash takes him ten feet in the air and another two when he bounces off the wrestler he lands on. Sabu's triple jump moonsaults have to be seen to be believed.

The shock value of the show is one of the two things that keeps fans coming back. The promotions appeal, beyond the wrestling itself and the clear amount of effort put out by wrestlers, is the fans ability to be close to the action. Unlike the WWF or WCW, ECW shows stick to smaller venues, sell tickets at lower prices, and allow fans to be as close to the action as is possible, sometimes even being a part of it.

ECW is currently building, and while it is unfair to compare them to either the WCW or WWF for financial reasons, it should be noted that they've never had a PPV sell lower than WCW's Superbrawl 15, clearly, a major achievement for the small promotion. However, just as damaging to the federation is its inability to keep workers in the promotion. ECW has already lost the Dudley Boys and Taz to the WWF, three major performers for the up and coming organization.

But ECW is developing, currently given talent underutilized in other promotions the chance to succeed within their ring, something that will keep their talent fresh and fans pleased.

All three promotions are able to offer their fans their own certain something, be it the ECW hardcore matches, WWF "Attitude" or WCW's family entertainment but at the same time, all three are constantly shifting slightly, one way or the other. More scantily clad women are showing up on WCW shows, more interviews and skits are being seen on ECW and more wrestling is being seen in the WWF. Such changes mean that all three promotions are constantly offering their viewers something slightly different from their normal and all three offer something entertaining.

■ wrestling net

continued from page 5

a concealed razor blade and that Muta's (the Great Muta was Japanese wrestler in the WWF) dreaded mist was really colored water," Keith said. "To other people, this may be like telling them there's no Santa Claus, but to me it was like saying there really was a Santa Claus and this is how did the trick with the chimney."

Keith said he read the RSPW Frequently Asked Questions, absorbing the knowledge that he could from the list. He ended up taking over the RSPW in 1998 and proceeded to watch it expand to ten times it's former size.

"Wrestlers and promoters used to stop by and "hang out" with us, and it wasn't any big deal," Keith said. "In 1993, we were so influential as that WCW used to change entire angles just to swerve us. That ended pretty quickly."

Keith is known on the Internet as the Netcop, a title he picked up after correcting what he described as "particularly idiotic postings." He now writes Retro Rants, reviews of old pay-per-views, rating each match on the five star system, five being the best and no stars being DUD.

"I focused on my Netcop Rants for PPVs and general topics. They were all over the map stylistically speaking and tended to be reactionary," Keith said. "After one particulary negative reaction that caused me to take a long hard look at my work and shift the focus from a reactionary perspective to a historical one."

The Netcop watches, by his count, at least three hours of wrestling a day, and describes it as "helping to pay the bills."

"I watch for reviews, columns, or just my general interest."

Keith, in doing his Retro Rants, took a job writing for wrestlemaniacs.com and described his career as being a "cakewalk from there." He oversees a second website with Shannon, rantsylvania.com, a place where all of his rants are available as well as his new booking schemes for promotions.

He described his shift from nobody to net celebrity as so gradual that he didn't realize it, but then CBS Sportsline bought out wrestlemaniacs.com.

Run by Rick Scaia, who got into the newgroup scene seven years ago and found terms for the concepts that he'd been watching, wrestlemaniacs.com brought Rick Scaia together with Mike Samuda, Keith and Shannon, among others.

"I found people who loved all the wrestling, who traded all the wrestling tapes including Smoky Mountain Wrestling (a short lived promotion) and when Alex Marvez came to Dayton to cover the Cincinatti Bengals for our local newspaper, he continued to write a wrestling column," Scaia said. "We got hooked up and I put his stuff on the web for him. That's when News from Dayton was started."

Starting once weekly, News from Dayton was written by Scaia and eventually appeared a couple of times per week. He changed the name from News from Dayton to Online Onslaught, and together with Samuda, Scaia created wrestlemaniacs.com which CBS Sportsline later bought.

"Once they saw our vision, we were easy to work with and brought the total package of established people, they decided we were what they wanted, so we established the Wrestleline name."

Scaia no longer incurs cost for running the site and actually receives an annual stipend for his work with bonuses for page performance.

"Truth told, we probably undervalued our site. A lot more people are entering this and making more money, so certainly, when the time comes, Wrestleline will hopefully be more lucrative for us," Scaia said. "But I've no complaints getting paid to do something that amounts to a hobby."

Wrestleline.com gets close to ten million hits per month, or somewhere around 300,000 per day.

"We're one order of magnitude underneath wwf.com. When they got their first 100 million hits, we got our first ten million hits," Scaia said. "That puts us in our place."

For Scaia, he's pleased that CBS has let the site maintain its reputation and credibility with the wrestlemaniacs brand name, but there have been a few minor adjustments.

"We're geared towards a certain type of reader," Scaia said. "But for Wrestleline to succeed, we need to have more markish things like our weekly rankings. These are things that annoyed me about other sites and now its on my site."

Scaia said that he now has to have a character of some kind. For him, taking off the Rock, he's the Rick.

"It goes against my beliefs, but I'm to attract my audience. The Wrestleline product has changed the appeal as far as the smartness of the audience," Scaia said. "It makes me sick to have to do the Rick, but it is a popular feature, and my emails out of this world. I try to keep my column as smart as I can, but have to answer questions that are considered common knowledge amongst fans."

Besides the characters, Shannon, Keith, and Scaia all have various issues with what they do. For Keith, the Wrestleline product meant that, after joking that he should get tapes from any of the big three promotions, WWF, WCW and ECW, a WCW representative called him the next morning and two days after that, Fed-Exed him $100 worth of new videos.

Keith has also been rumored to be getting a job with one of the major promotions, but, as he put it, "nobody seems to be talking on that one."

For Shannon's part, he dislikes how seriously everyone seems to take what he does and what they do online.

"When you're trying to talk about a subject logically, and pseudo-gladiators are mocking you for nonsensical reasons, it gets annoying really fast," Shannon said.

Keith agreed, saying, "I try to go to great lengths not to insult other people unless they either started it or it's part of an ongoing joke."

He said that the pointless sniping at one another is ridiculous.

"There are reporters out there who simply make up rumors or just cut and paste from other reports. I've built my reputation through my writing skills and opinions, rather than by making any false claim about being a 'reporter' or 'objective' or any nonsense like that," Keith said. "How these kids can take themselves so seriously when they're 'reporting' about something as surreal and ridiculous as profession wrestling is beyond me. What we get second hand should be taken with several hundred grains of salt."

For all the negatives, the positives far outweigh them.

Scaia said he will enjoy what he does until the product becomes disinteresting, a thought that Keith echoed.

"I would hardly consider myself 'absolutely hardcore' but I did mark out for Jericho's WWF entrance, the Radicals 'surprise' appearance on RAW and really great wrestling matches. I marked out for the People's Elbow when it got over, and I mark out for the Worm." Keith said, adding that being a fan involves getting into it. "Sometimes you have to cheer for the good guys and boo the bad guys."

Keith said he'd always know that there's guaranteed to be just one more angle that will hold his attention long enough to wait out the worst parts of professional wrestling until he can find the Rock or Jericho or Benoit or the Hardy Boys.

"Whether it be a surprising invasion in 1998 or a dancing sumo wrestler in 1999 or a clueless putz and his blue-haired sidekick in 1997, that is why I can be so cynical and bitter and still watch wrestling as much as I do," Keith said.

Meanwhile, Scaia enjoys being read, knowing that people derive some satisfaction from the work he does.

"I like knowing people are interested, now that we've seen what we can do, that's a carrot for us," Scaia said, adding quite frankly that, "it's ridiculous that I can do this for money, but if we can make money, we should."

And Scaia is still a fan, something that can lead to both pleasure and pain, as in WWF's last PPV "No Way Out," when Mick Foley lost what will probably be his final match.

"I don't think I've been so disappointed in a match as I was when Foley lost. I didn't want to have to see that last Sunday. I was jumping out of my seat for the bumps, so when Foley lost, I sank in couch." Scaia said. "I realized that might be it."

Keith agreed, saying that Foley's retirement touched him deeply as a fan."

Keith's favorite part is when he can watch a WCW program and see some little part of it that he suggested.

"I can see that someone is listening, it makes it worthwhile for me to continue," Keith said, then joking that he also likes being an online "icon" because, "I can be worshipped by 14-year-olds the world over and still maintain my anonymity."

Apply Now for Best Locations
Apartment Rentals
Location Location Location
Check them out:
www.amherstlincolnreality.com
or call
Lincoln Real Estate
253 - 7879

University of Massachusetts Boston
Vietnam Today
July 16 – August 10, 2000
This travel/study program based at Hue University in Vietnam, immerses participants in the culture, history, and politics of this fascinating country
Three undergraduate credits.
To learn more, contact:
University of Massachusetts Boston
Division of Continuing Education
100 Morrissey Blvd.
Boston MA 02125-3393
UMASS BOSTON
617.287.7913
www.conted.umb.edu

College hockey's elite battle it out

Reinprecht leads candidates for prestigious Hobey Baker Award

For the past two seasons, the Hobey Baker Award winner has hailed from the Hockey East conference. Two years ago, Boston University forward Chris Drury earned the honor as the best college hockey player in the nation. Last season, it was New Hampshire's Jason Krog who took home the hardware.

However, it seems like that streak is in jeopardy this year.

Although the league has four solid candidates in Boston College forwards Brian Gionta and Jeff Farkas, Maine forward Cory Larose and UNH goaltender Ty Conklin, the race remains wide open. The 10 finalists for the award will be announced on March 16, while the recipient announcement will take place on April 7 in Providence at the Frozen Fou..

The frontrunners

Steve Reinprecht – University of Wisconsin

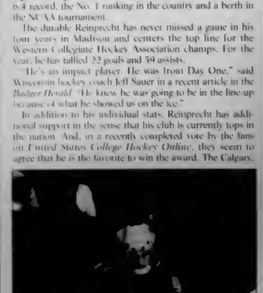
The senior forward has arguably been the top player in the country. The Badgers captain leads the country in scoring with 61 points and has helped to propel his club a 27-6-4 record, the No. 1 ranking in the country and a berth in the NCAA tournament.

The durable Reinprecht has never missed a game in his four years in Madison and centers the top line for the Western Collegiate Hockey Association champs. For the year, he has tallied 32 goals and 39 assists.

"He's an impact player. He was from Day One," said Wisconsin hockey coach Jeff Sauer in a recent article in the Badger Herald. "He knew he was going to be in the line-up because of what he showed us on the ice."

In addition to his individual stats, Reinprecht has additional support in the sense that his club is currently tops in the nation. And, in a recently completed vote by the fans on United States College Hockey Online, they seem to agree that he is the favorite to win the award. The Calgary, Alberta native had almost twice as many votes as the second place contender, Michigan State forward Shawn Horcoff.

Jeff Panzer – University of North Dakota



As a team, Wisconsin's chief rival in the WCHA this year has been the University of North Dakota. On the individual level, Reinprecht and Fighting Sioux standout Panzer have battled it out for statistical supremacy.

Michael Kobylanski on College Hockey

Panzer, a junior left wing for UND, trails his WCHA counterpart by only three points in both the country and the league. Behind the scoring punch of the Grand Forks product, the Fighting Sioux is right behind Wisconsin in the polls with a 24-7-5 mark.

Shawn Horcoff – Michigan State

With the graduation of All-American Mike York following last season, the pucksters in East Lansing, Mich. had to be worried about where their offensive punch would come from. In the end, they had to look no further than Shawn Horcoff.

2000 Hobey Baker Candidate Brian Gionta of Boston College

1999 Hobey Baker Award recipient Jason Krog with UNH head coach Dick Umile

The senior center for the Spartans broke free from the shadows of York this season and is third in the nation in scoring with 56 points (11 goals, 45 assists). Thanks to his solid two-way play, Michigan State has been in the Top 10 poll for the entire season and appears to be on its way to the NCAA tournament.

"The best part about Shawn is that all he cares about is winning," said MSU hockey coach Ron Mason in a recent article on the Spartans web page. "He's not worried about individual awards...Shawn will do whatever he can to give us the best chance to win the game. He's one of the hardest workers that I've ever had, up there with Kelly Miller and Rod Brind'Amour."

Andy McDonald – Colgate University

Nestled in the rolling hills of upstate New York lays the best kept secret in the country. McDonald, the senior captain for the Red Raiders, has posted 47 points on the season and has led Colgate to a 21-7-2 record. The Hamilton, NY school should also receive an at-large bid into the NCAA tournament barring an upset in this weekend's Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference tournament.

"Andy is a very dynamic player who has developed so much over the past few years. He means so much to our program," Colgate hockey coach Don Vaughan said. "Andy does just as much work for the program off the ice as he does on it. He's represents everything that the Hobey Baker Award stands for."

Brian Gionta – Boston College

One of the two returning finalists from last year's Hobey vote, Gionta has continued to electrify the crowds at the Silvio O. Conte Forum this season. Although his offensive production has dropped off slightly from his first two years in Chestnut Hill, the diminutive forward remains one of the top players in the country.

Gionta is currently tied for second in the nation in goals with 27, trailing only RPI forward Brad Tapper in that department. The Rochester, NY native is likely to repeat his All-American status again in 1999-2000, but he might have to wait until next year to take home the Hobey.

1998 Hobey Baker Award recipient and 1999 NHL Rookie of the Year Chris Drury

The contenders

Mike Comrie – University of Michigan

The sophomore forward for the Wolverines followed up a spectacular freshman year in which his was tabbed the Central Collegiate Hockey Association's Rookie of the Year by notching 18 goals and 33 assists during the 1999-2000 campaign. Behind the play of Comrie, the Wolverines won the CCHA regular-season title and earned a trip to the NCAA tournament. His 51 points currently place him fifth in the nation in scoring.

Jeff Farkas – Boston College

Although not as flashy as his teammate Gionta, Farkas leads the Eagles in scoring with 49 points and is tied for third in the country in goals. A solid offensive presence, the senior forward has 181 career points at BC and is probably headed for a pro career after graduation from the Heights.

Ty Conklin – University of New Hampshire

After a sophomore season in which Conklin went 18-3-1 and posted a miniscule 1.84 goals against average, the junior goaltender for the Wildcats appears to be on his way to All-American honors this season. The Anchorage, AK native boasts a 20-6-6 record and a 2.53 GAA in 33 games for UNH this year.

Brad Tapper – RPI

Tapper, a junior forward for the Engineers, leads the nation in goals with 30 and brings an uncanny scoring touch every time he sets foot on the ice for the Engineers. RPI has a record of 19-12-2 on the season thanks mainly in part to the play of Tapper.

Cory Larose – University of Maine

The senior forward for the defending national champions has enjoyed a stellar career in Orono. However, the 1999-2000 campaign could be his finest, as he has scored 46 points on the season for the Black Bears. In the process, Larose and Maine appear to be heading back to the NCAA tournament to defend their title.

The longshots

Graham Mclamson – University of Wisconsin

Goalie has a 28-7-1 mark and a 2.44 GAA for the No. 1 Badgers.

John Pohl – University of Minnesota

Sophomore center ranks fifth in the country with 51 points.

Mike Mottau – Boston College

Solid two-way defenseman should repeat All-American status.

Lee Goren – University of North Dakota

Complements Panzer to form a potent offensive attack for No. 2 UND.

Michael Kobylanski is a Collegian columnist.

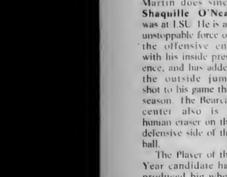
2000 Hobey Baker Candidate Shawn Horcoff of Michigan State

All-America cadidates debated as "Big Dance" nears

Martin is frontrunner for Player of the Year; Penn and Sanchez top guards



The greatest month in sports is fast approaching as March madness is right around the corner. There will be 64 teams fighting for one goal, the National Championship.

We also must not forget the spectacular performances by individual players and coaches during the regular season. The Massachusetts Daily Collegian has selected a man who supposes the blue of Duke, Bryan Smith and a truly blue UMass supporter, David Rose, to go head-to-head in an all-out war over their first team All-America picks.

Center:

Smith's pick Kenyon Martin, Cincinnati. A player has not been able to dominate a game the way that Martin does since.

Shaquille O'Neal was at LSU. He is an unstoppable force on the offensive end with his inside presence, and has added the outside jump shot to his game this season. The Bearcat center also is a human eraser on the defensive side of the ball.

1999 Big 10 Player of the Year and All-America candidate Scoonie Penn

The Player of the Year candidate has produced big when he needed to, evidence being a 33-point performance at DePaul last week in a 2-point Cincinnati win. If that was not impressive enough the No. 1 team in the land scored only 64 points.

It's tough for me to admit that a player from "thug U" deserves such high accolades, but he does.

Chris Milan is second, but is not even close to snatching the honor from the hands of Martin.

Rose's pick - Martin, Cincinnati. Head coach Bob Huggins said it best a couple of nights ago in a television interview when he said, "If Kenyon does not win Player of the Year, there should an investigation of some sort."

Two years ago, Martin was just a 6-9 player who could dunk, rebound, and block shots. However, over the last two years, Martin has added an outside shot to his game and has become one of the most dominant players in the country. For the season, Martin averaged 19.5 points, 10 rebounds and 3.5 blocked shots per game in being named Conference USA's Player of the Year.

It should come as no one's surprise that the Bearcats are the number one team in the country with a 28-2 overall record. If the Bearcats want to see that "One Shining Moment" in Indianapolis, Martin will have to lead the way.

Move over Mihm; Martin is the best center in the country this year.

Power Forward:

Smith's pick - Shane Battier, Duke. The 6'8" power forward was best known as the best defensive player in the country for the efforts that he put forth in his freshman and sophomore campaigns, but this year Battier has stepped it up on the offensive end. After averaging 7.6 and 9.1 PPG in his first two seasons respectively, the defensive stopper has almost doubled his scoring output to an astonishing 17.1 a contest this year, while grabbing 5.5 rebounds each time out.

All this and he still takes the charges under the basket, plays the best man-to-man defense of any player in the country and is the emotional leader of the No. 3 Blue Devils. With all these things on his side Battier has chosen to stay for his senior season already, sorry NBA scouts.

Rose's pick- Marcus Fizer, Iowa State. Battier has had a great year, but I have to go with the Big 12 Player of the Year on this one. Not many people had heard of the 6-8 junior going into this season; now he has led the Cyclones to the Big 12 regular season title and 26-4 overall record.

22.8 points and 7.6 rebounds a game do not lie. Neither does shooting 61 percent from the field. Fizer is the man in the paint for the Cyclones, whom I feel will make a serious run in the NCAA tournament.

While Battier's numbers are nice, he plays on a team. While the Devils have had a great season, no one expected a mark of 26-4 out of Iowa State. Fizer is the main reason why.

Small Forward:

Smith's pick - Chris Carrawell, Duke. With the graduations of four first round draft picks in the 1999 NBA Draft, Elton Brand at No. 1, Trajan Langdon at No. 11, Corey Maggette at No. 15 and William Avery at No. 14 Carrawell was called upon to carry much of the scoring load vacated by these players. Carry the load you say, he has done more than that. He has gone from putting up just under 10 a game to just over 18.

Player of the Year and All-America candidate Kenyon Martin

Throughout his career, the frontrunner for ACC Player of the Year has played in the shadows of great Blue Devil All-Americans and was thrust into the limelight this season. He responded like no other, leading Duke to the ACC title and a 24-4 record after the Devils dropped their first two contests of the season.

Bryan Smith and David Rose on College Basketball

Rose's pick - Dan Langhi Vanderbilt- What is this Bryan, "The Duke Postseason Awards Column?" Carrawell had a tremendous senior season and probably will be second team All-American, but first team? Now I'm telling you know, you'll be naming Carlos Boozer Player of the Year. Langhi is a 6-11 forward who can hit the three pointer and drive to the hole on defenders.

He was selected the Southeastern Conference Player of the Year after averaging 22.4 points and 6.1 rebounds a game. He also shot 40 per cent from downtown and 87 percent from the charity stripe. He had a number of stellar games this season, including scoring 31 points in games against Florida and Tennessee, both Vandy victories. He also led the Commodores in scoring in 22 of their 27 games this season. Vanderbilt went into the season as a team who could possibly have NIT aspirations. Now they are 18-9 and should make the big dance.

Player of the Year and All-America candidate Chris Carrawell

Shooting Guard:

Smith's pick - A.J. Guyton, Indiana. Hands down the best shooting guard in the country. Michael Redd has an argument, but not in my eyes. Ohio State will not have both members of the starting backcourt. He proved that he was no fluke last year and has become the primary scorer of the Big 10, the deepest conference in college basketball.

Rose's pick- Guyton, Indiana. - This is someone we can both agree on. Guyton has had an outstanding senior season for Bobby Knight at Indiana. He has gone through the entire season and has yet to be hit by an unidentified flying object thrown by Knight. That does it for me.

Oh, did I mention that he is also averaging 20.5 points a game, shooting 47 percent from the field and, 43 percent from downtown. He scored 22 points in a win over Temple, 21 points in a win over Kentucky, 31 in a win over North Carolina, and 34 points in a win against Michigan State.

Point Guard:

Smith's pick - Scoonie Penn, Ohio State. The former Boston College player has emerged as the nation's premier floor general. Sorry Mateen Cleaves, but this is the truth. He transferred to OSU after Jim O'Brien, his coach at BC, left the Eagle program in the midst of turmoil. How lucky the Big East is that these two departed for Columbus.

He led his team to the Final Four last year and the Buckeyes are heading into the tournament with a vengeance. He as close to the Player of the Year in the Big 10 as Martin is in Conference USA. Remember, he was the co-Player of the Year last season, sharing the award with the aforementioned Cleaves.

A-10 Player of the Year and All-America candidate Pepe Sanchez

Rose's pick - Pepe Sanchez, Temple- O.K. calm down. Before you call me crazy, or for some crazier than I already am, let's look at a couple of facts.

First the Owls are 5-4 without him and 18-2 with him. Need more persuading? Try this: in 20 games this season, Sanchez has averaged 8.3 assists, 3.5 steals and just 2.1 turnovers a game. For those who are not math majors, that is more than a 4 to 1 assist to turnover ratio. He is the smartest player in college basketball, and after the Owls got off to a lackluster start without him, it looks like they will garner a number two or number three seed in the NCAA tournament with him.

Now that the battle of All-Americans is out of the way, let's see how we stack up when it comes to a couple of other postseason awards:

Coach of the Year:

Smith's pick - Mike Krzyzewski, Duke. This guy flat-out gets it done. He had to deal with the departure of four of his stars and still his team possesses the No. 3 ranking.

Of course he brought in a great crop of recruits, but who knew that he would get as much out of Jason Williams, Mike Dunleavy, and Boozer as he has.

He also sped up the mergence of Carrawell and Battier as scoring threats as well as defensive stoppers.

All this after enduring back surgery in the off-season. Did I mention that he has a nose for sniffing out trips to the Final Four.

Rose's pick - John Brady, LSU. O.K. Now that we have realized that Bryan thinks that Duke is the "Greatest Thing Since Sliced Bread," let's me tell you about the real Coach of the Year.

Can anyone tell me where LSU basketball has been since Shaq left for the NBA? It has been in the trash-can. For six straight years, the tigers have been in the black hole of college basketball. Now, they're back.

Brady has completed a remarkable turnaround. LSU was 9-18 in his 1st year in Baton Rouge and 12-15 last season and 4-12 in the SEC. This season, the tigers have gone 25-4 overall and 12-4 in the conference. That record in conference matched the greatest turnaround in SEC history and Brady deserves all the credit for turning a team of underachievers into one of the best teams in the SEC.

Player of the Year:

Smith's pick - Martin, Cincinnati. I have nothing to say, except look at the numbers, they do not lie.

Rose's pick - Martin, Cincinnati. He was the best player in the country this year. His stats speak for themselves, but also the amount of shots he changed during the year just by his presence inside makes it easier for the Bearcats to play defense. Huggins has an Andre The Giant-sized void next year with Martin's absence.

Bryan Smith and David Rose are Collegian columists.

A-10

continued from page 12

was also chosen as Defensive Player of the Year and was also named to the All-Academic team.

•There was no surprise in the Rookie of the Year voting as Brown took home the accolade as well as a spot on the A-10 second team.

•UMass was well represented across the board as Mack was named to the All-A-10 first team and Chris Kirkland was a member of the third team averaging 15 PPG and 6 RPG. Mike Babul found a spot on the All-Defensive team and was also a member of the All-Academic team.

•John Chaney was named Coach of the Year as his Temple team is the No. 1 seed in the tournament overall and boasts the nations No. 5 ranking.

Kathleen Ralls is a Collegian columnist.

hoop

continued from page 12

shooter at best, proved his range by drilling 5 of 11 attempts from behind the arc.

GW's phenomenal freshman tried to turn the game into a one-on-one war with Shannon Crooks and his play seemingly worked. The Everett native never looked in synch from the perimeter and missed a crucial dunk that would push the Minutemen's lead to six in the warning moments.

King's putback in response cut the lead to two, cuing a Brown three from the left wing that kept GW ahead for good Crooks scored 14 points but on just 6-for-24 shooting.

The Minutemen's 16th win proves pivotal for a potential postseason birth. Whether it will be extend their season for to a possible NCAA berth or by locking up a winning season, this after UMass' miserable 14-16 campaign last year. Flints .500 record makes his squad eligible for the National Invitational Tournament (NIT) played simultaneously with the Big Dance.

By the end of the first half Smith's disappearing act was quite evident as the sophomore sensation went without a field goal for the game's first 20 minutes. Almost as impressive was that Babul and his partners in crime had allowed him to hoist just two shots. Coming into the game the Toronto native averaged 15 attempts each time out. He'd scored just 16 points in the Dukes' final two contests, carrying his struggles into the conference tournament.

The Minutemen's 16th win proves pivotal for a potential postseason birth. Whether it will be extend their season for to a possible NCAA berth or by locking up a winning season, this after UMass' miserable 14-16 campaign last year. Flints .500 record makes his squad eligible for the National Invitational Tournament (NIT) played simultaneously with the Big Dance.

By the end of the first half Smith's disappearing act was quite evident as the sophomore sensation went without a field goal for the game's first 20 minutes. Almost as impressive was that Babul and his partners in crime had allowed him to hoist just two shots. Coming into the game the Toronto native averaged 15 attempts each time out. He'd scored just 16 points in the Dukes' final two contests, carrying his struggles into the conference tournament.

"We just got to go out there and play smart," Mack said. "Do the things that we know how to do best and that's play defense. It's going to be a battle."

"We know how the play now and we know what to expect from certain players," Mack said.

When UMass could not convert from the field, they fended off an old enemy to put on quite a show. After shooting a miserable 63 percent from the free throw line this year, the Minutemen dropped 16 of 19 freebies to help distance themselves in the second half.

"The right people shot the ball. If the right people shoot the ball, you're going to get a good performance," remarked Flint.

Game time is around 2:20 pm or 20 minutes after the conclusion of Temple and Virginia Tech, today's first quarter final.

Crooks aided Mack with 12 first half points on 5-for-8 shooting. Six came on back-to-back three-pointers in a 30-second span, the tail end opening the Minutemen's lead to 37-20 with 2:25 remaining in the opening half.

Bradley

continued from page 12

Crucial Ligament. In the words of her coach, Bradley's return from such serious knee problems is a true testimony to the athlete's character.

"Unfortunately for Jay, when she tore her ACL, she wasn't able to do some of the things we thought she could do," O'Brien said. "Anybody who has had to overcome injuries and surgery knows that it's tough to do sometimes. A lot of people think that you can just come back and be the same player you were before you got hurt, but it's hard to do. You're always a little bit scared, especially if it's something that was painful. She's fought through it all, though."

Bradley made her return to the UMass lineup in November of '98 a memorable one, scoring 10 points in 15 minutes against St. John's at home on Nov. 14. But the injury bug again reared its ugly head when the Minutewomen hosted Kansas six days later, as Bradley was forced from the game with a right calf injury after playing 22 minutes. She would sit out UMass' next eight games, five of which ended in defeats.

Bradley would once again labor through the pain, overcoming a lackluster return at Rhode Island on Dec. 14 with a 10-point showcase against Richmond two weeks later. She turned in a quality six-point outing in the Atlantic 10 quarterfinals against Xavier, though the Musketeers sent UMass packing with a 74-58 defeat. It appeared as if Bradley's darkest days of adversity were behind her.

But the 21-year old's journey took an even rockier turn just prior to her senior season, when Bradley and then-teammate Kelly Van Huisen were charged with shoplifting following an Oct. 15 incident in Hadley. Van Huisen was dismissed from the team, while Bradley was stripped of her captaincy and suspended for the first three games of her senior season.

"I may have gotten myself into trouble, but the worst part of the suspension was that I let my teammates down," Bradley said. "I've always felt good about being there for them, so when they were losing at the beginning of the year, watching that was really hard. But I've talked to my mother a lot, and talked to the Lord a lot, and I believe everything happens for a reason. It has made me push myself harder than ever, and made me very grateful to have been given a second chance."

And through the remainder of her final stretch run in Maroon and White, Bradley did indeed make the most of that second chance. Despite struggling through the aftereffects of a second knee operation performed during her suspension, she came off the bench to put up nine points and five rebounds at Rice in only her third game back. Her two clutch field goals against George Washington on Feb. 17 were arguably the biggest shots of the year by any UMass player, and her 10-point performance against Fordham on Senior Night left many wondering how more playing time might have affected Bradley's output down the stretch.

But regardless of her stats, Jaywana Bradley has made a mark on the UMass program with her attitude and character that her coach feels has benefited the entire squad.

"But she's been a great athlete for us; she's come into a lot of games in her career and put up some good numbers," O'Brien said. "More than that, she's brought a good attitude out there on the floor. She's been a lot of fun to have around, and she's been a good leader to some of the younger kids, just making sure they're O.K. in that motherly kind of fashion that the older kids often have. So hopefully the rest of her life will be as successful as her time here."

MacFarland

continued from page 12

With enough energy and anger to play relentless defense for yet another 40 minutes, MacFarland followed O'Brien through the exit of the pressroom.

Only 28 hours earlier, she had emerged from the same room, away from the same reporters, behind the same coach, but with a much happier expression. It would eventually be her final fond memory of college basketball.

* * *

When she drove to the hoop and drew the foul that won UMass the game, she said she was as confident as she has ever been playing basketball.

With the contest tied at 54, MacFarland, who exploded for 15 points in the second half of the team's A-10 quarterfinal win over Virginia Tech, stepped to the free-throw, legs shaking, head spinning.

VA Tech called time out to ice her, hoping she'd miss both freebies. Only 3.5 seconds remaining on the clock, she calmly walked to the line and sank two free throws as well as any Hokie hopes for victory.

"[Teammate] Jaywana Bradley told me that I scored my best for last," MacFarland said. "I think I did."

For the first time during her senior season, MacFarland played the role of UMass hero. She and the other Minutewomen waited in the locker room, expecting coach O'Brien to bring them back to earth with one of her typically sour but encouraging talks.

Alison MacFarland

Instead, O'Brien, much to the surprise of her entire team, came in cheering, "yeah, baby."

"We all laughed. We had never seen that side of her before," MacFarland said.

Unaware of the loss that would follow the next day, she enjoyed her last victory while wearing the Maroon and White.

* * *

Traveling four years into her past, MacFarland admitted it didn't take much to get her hooked on UMass. The small signals, like the O'Brien phone call she overheard in eighth grade, spoke loudly to her.

An uninventive tactic by the assistant coaches grabbed MacFarland's attention. Later, it won her verbal commitment to the Minutewomen.

"When I looked at other schools, they looked like they had high school gyms," MacFarland said. "[The UMass coaches] took me to the center of the court and told me that I couldn't open my eyes. Then they said open your eyes.' I opened my eyes, and I saw the Mullins Center. They told me that I'd be playing here for the next four years."

Then she laughed, recalling her quick reply. "I said 'okay, sold.'"

(Unsurprisingly, another UMass senior told the same exact story.)

Even before she arrived in Amherst, MacFarland took pride in her affiliation with UMass, so she says. It certainly didn't hurt when the Minutewomen upset Stanford, 65-56, in November of 1996 while she was a senior in high school.

"I found out that they had won and I went crazy. I was still in high school. I came to practice the next day in my UMass shorts, UMass shirt, and was bragging: 'yeah, we beat Stanford,'" MacFarland said.

Little did MacFarland know that four years later she would own her own win against a ranked Stanford squad. UMass upset the Cardinal 74-69 this season on Dec. 12. Two months later, a college basketball game against No. 25 GW would pause just for her. The officials gave her the basketball, and O'Brien, a hug. She had scored her 1000th collegiate point – something she never did in high school. Something she never thought she was capable of in college.

And the Mullins Center seats were full during this trip to center court. The cheering she probably dreamed about in the twelfth grade was real. The time between the two visits made the second one special, as she proceeded to play her best game of the season during another soon-to-be famed UMass upset victory.

It would be the second-to-last time she would play in the arena that so quickly won her love. One week later, she cried during her home finale, regretful of a time – early in her career at UMass – when she didn't feel completely at ease within the program.

* * *

As was the case for her high school years, selflessness and battles for a moment to shine consumed much of MacFarland's collegiate playing career.

Perhaps it was because she was so successful so early. She played in all 30 games as a freshman, scoring 19 once and 17 twice. Reporters created all sorts of "sky-is-the-limit" cliches to describe her.

But she eventually had to stop being the kid with great potential that had leeway to mistake every now and then. She had to grow up.

"No more freshman mistakes any more," she recalled O'Brien saying to her the first day of practice for her sophomore season.

She responded by averaging over 10 points per game that year. She was part of an NCAA Tournament team. She was a 20-point scorer three times. The one thing she wasn't was happy.

"Then sophomore year came around, and there were new freshmen on the team, and [I] had to grow up to take them through the steps. But at the same time, [I was] trying to figure out what's going on. I think that had a lot to do with it," MacFarland said, admitting that her sophomore season was her most difficult. "I didn't figure things out, and I didn't really talk to Jamie a lot. Maybe I was intimidated."

What MacFarland had ignored most of the season came to a difficult emotional climax the moment it ended. Iowa had ousted her team from the first-round of the NCAA Tournament. O'Brien was upset, and the seniors were experiencing regret similar to what MacFarland endured last Sunday, when her career ended.

She sat on the bench, crying because she felt she had played poorly.

"It really bothered me and I was sitting alone," she said. "Coach O'Brien came up to me. I thought she'd be mad, but she just tried to console me. I turned to her and said, 'when I suck, I really suck.' After that, I told my mother that I would never allow myself to feel that way again."

But it seemed obvious that the program had dipped by her junior year, and even more possible that MacFarland would struggle – if not physical struggle, then certainly emotional.

Then UMass suffered a slew of injuries her junior year. One player was kicked off the team. Another quit because of it. And MacFarland was forced to make a number of sacrifices, doing whatever she could to help. Her numbers were down and her minutes were way up. The Minutewomen battled for an honorable, but unusually ordinary, 16-14 record. She, like her bruised teammates, was tired.

Yet she calls it her easiest season.

What O'Brien told her three years earlier had come true. She was tougher from her struggles.

"Now, I just kind of laugh," she said, thinking about the days when her coach used to intimidate her. They talk constantly now as player-and-coach, as Minutewomen, and as friends.

* * *

Sacrifice started for MacFarland in high school.

MacFarland won three state titles in her first three years. But she did not her senior year. With only budding talent, the team lost to the eventual champion Red Bank Catholic, its biggest rival.

Nick Russo, her coach of her junior and senior years remembers why.

"We were on their court (Red Bank's), and up by eight going into the last quarter," Russo said. "I decided to give Alison a break, and take her out for one minute. One minute. When she came back in the lead was down to two points. We never got the momentum back. It's something I'll always regret."

Russo felt that she might have been under-appreciated. Many people thought she could not play at UMass because she wasn't a guard in high school. And after all, she didn't get the title her senior year.

What she did do – that she has quietly done at UMass – is dedicate her time and leadership to helping young players who later succeeded.

The point guard from her senior year of high school, Regan Apo, was only a freshman at the time. MacFarland, according to Russo, would always bail her out of trouble, taking over the ball-handling duties in pressure situations.

When MacFarland left St. John Vianney High School, Apo eventually became All-State in New Jersey. She led the Lancers to three more state titles. But Russo feels that no one remembered who helped her reach that level.

"Given the type of unselfish player that Alison is, it doesn't surprise me that not everyone knows how much trouble she went through to bring them (the younger players) along," he said.

Apo, now the point guard for Atlantic-10 rival Temple, met MacFarland on the court twice this season, winning one of the two games. A predicted future star, Apo received most of the attention.

* * *

Now more comfortable around her team than Norm Peterson at his barstool, MacFarland tried to pretend that her week of practice before the Atlantic 10 Tournament was just like any other. Sadly, it was her final episode.

"Three minutes left in the game," O'Brien shouted to the first unit last Wednesday. "You're up by three. What are you going to do?"

MacFarland ran to receive the ball from the post, passed it, and cut to the left corner. Like most possessions this season, MacFarland did not get to take the shot. Point guard Kathy Coyner, who canned the free-throw-line jumper, got a sturdy pat on the back from her.

"Do it again… better," O'Brien shouted.

Four players looked tired, but MacFarland, head up, waited for the ball. She was ready to run again.

"She's hard on us because our young players are so good," MacFarland says of O'Brien in a tone of understanding she only recently acquired. "… The sky's the limit for this program and I can say that I was a part of it."

Just a single part of the UMass basketball body, she was too modest to ever admit that she became the heart.

The saga of Rodman continues

Step right up folks...

The Feb. 3 signing of seven-time NBA rebounding champion Dennis Rodman by Dallas Mavericks marked another season of the tattooed-wonder's sideshow antics.

Apparently, the two-time Defensive Player of the Year would rather rack up technical fouls than Las Vegas lawsuits.

Mavs owner Mark Cuban signed the free-agent forward for the rest of the 2000 season as a shameless ploy to increase anemic ticket sales and maybe to help the team's rebounding. Rodman, who was reportedly looking to play for a contender, instead went to a team that at the time was 26-27 and swimming in lottery-limbo.

Rodman waited for a phone call from the powerhouse Los Angeles Lakers and head coach Phil Jackson. But when Jackson and the rest of the league showed a lack of interest, the 38-year-old veteran inked a contract with the perennial-loser Mavs.

So much for a contender.

Although, before Rodman's grand arrival on Feb. 9 against Seattle Dallas head coach Don Nelson had his squad sizzling winning 12 of their prior 15.

Since then Rodman has given the team 14.3 rebounds a game, received two ejections resulting in fines, showed some uninspired play, and has sent Commissioner David Stern running for the Alka-Seltzer. The team, much like Rodman's marriage to pin-up girl Carmen Electra, has gone sour, winning only four of 13 games.

Yesterday, however, all of that changed, as the Mavericks released Rodman. Reports out of Dallas say that the Worm had a run-in with owner Mark Cuban and criticized both Cuban and the Mavs in the process.

The Worm was a significant cog in the world championship machines of the Detroit Pistons of the late 80's and the second Chicago Bull three-peat. Despite still being a great rebounder, though, he can now only offer shock-value to an already slumping organization.

The latest episode revolving around Rodman may signal the end of his career. With few teams willing to take a chance with his flamboyant off-the-court antics, it seems likely that the Worm has laced up his sneakers for the last time.

Rodman is no longer a hot item. His popularity roller coaster makes him the NBA's version of Vanilla Ice. His once best-selling books and cross-dressing dolls couldn't even be sold at local yard sales for five cents nowadays. Obviously, the Mavs owner was the last to know.

No one is listening anymore, Dennis. Take your handful of NBA released Rodman. Reports out of Dallas say that the Worm had a run-in with owner Mark Cuban and criticized both Cuban and the Mavs in the process.

The Worm was a significant cog in the world championship machines of the Detroit Pistons of the late 80's and the second Chicago Bull three-peat. Despite still being a great rebounder, though, he can now only offer shock-value to an already slumping organization.

The latest episode revolving around Rodman may signal the end of his career. With few teams willing to take a chance with his flamboyant off-the-court antics, it seems likely that the Worm has laced up his sneakers for the last time.

Rodman is no longer a hot item. His popularity roller coaster makes him the NBA's version of Vanilla Ice. His once best-selling books and cross-dressing dolls couldn't even be sold at local yard sales for five cents nowadays. Obviously, the Mavs owner was the last to know.

No one is listening anymore, Dennis. Take your handful of NBA released Rodman. Reports out of Dallas say that the Worm had a run-in with owner Mark Cuban and criticized both Cuban and the Mavs in the process.

It is time for the Rodman Show to end. The credits have been rolling since his last rebound against the Utah Jazz in the 1998 Finals.

Give it up, Dennis. The circus act is over.

Michael P. Doyle is a Collegian Staff member

ABC lowers "Boom" on Esiason

By Larry Stewart
Los Angeles Times

Boomer Esiason is out, Don Ohlmeyer is back.

ABC is going to overhaul "Monday Night Football," and the network dropped a couple of bombshells Wednesday.

Howard Katz, ABC Sports president, said Esiason, even though he had a year left on his contract, will not be returning to the "Monday Night" booth.

Also gone are producer Ken Wolfe, who had been on the series for 14 years, and director Craig Janoff, 12 years.

"Boomer did everything we asked him to do," Katz said. "He is a terrific person. I just think it could be better."

Esiason may have been deemed fine for Sunday afternoon telecasts, but in the glare of the "Monday Night" spotlight, his work during the two years often was criticized by the media and the public in general. His ouster does not come as a complete surprise, although it was assumed he would be allowed to finish out his contract.

The big surprise Wednesday was the announcement that Ohlmeyer, 57, the producer of "Monday Night Football" when it started in 1970, is coming back.

Katz and Ohlmeyer have been best friends since Katz, fresh out of college in 1971, went to work for Ohlmeyer as a production assistant on "Monday Night Football." Ohlmeyer left ABC in early 1977 for NBC, then started his own company, Ohlmeyer Communications, in Los Angeles in 1983 and hired Katz as the company's president.

When ESPN bought Ohlmeyer Communications in 1994, Katz went to work for ESPN and later became president, replacing Steve Bornstein. Katz has been the head of ABC Sports since last April.

Ohlmeyer, who became the West Coast president of NBC, announced his retirement in October 1998. Since leaving NBC, he has been working on improving his golf handicap.

Katz, at first in passing, asked Ohlmeyer about returning to "Monday Night Football" in December. Ohlmeyer said his initial reaction was: "Are you out of your… mind?"

Discussions turned serious about two weeks ago, and the decision was made last weekend.

Al Michaels will remain as the play-by-play announcer. Ohlmeyer first mentioned the possibility of his return to Michaels 10 days ago.

"I thought he was joking," Michaels said. "When I realized he was serious, I said, 'Are you daft'?

"Once Don retired from NBC, I thought that was it, that he might make a movie or write a book, but never go back to work." Said Ohlmeyer: "I envisioned not doing anything again."

He said he had some hurdles to get over before accepting Katz's offer. "For one thing, I hate to travel," he said. "Another thing, it will take time out of my life.

"I hope Thomas Wolfe was not correct," he added, referring to the 1940 novel, "You Can't Go Home Again."

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENT

CANTONES' PIZZA- for fast delivery to UMass see our menu and coupons at www.cantones.com

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Apply now for best locations. Amherst Center 1,2 and 3 bedroom apartments. Gas heat, hardwood floor. April showings for June and September. Lincoln Real Estate. No fees charged. 253-7879.

Apply now for best locations. 3 bedroom condos. Gas heat, hardwood floors, bright heated basement with study and laundry area. 1/2 mile to campus, on bus route. April showings for June and September. Lincoln Real Estate. No fees charged. 253-7879.

AUTO FOR SALE

'79 Jeep I/10 Pu 4x4, V8, VT with plow. Runs great. $2000. 538-7608.

AUTO FOR SALE

1980 Jetta rebuilt engine, new clutch, new brakes. Always starts. Runs like a demon. $600 586-0534.

'92 Subaru Loyale wagon 4x4. Clean, runs great, air, power, roofrack. $2500.00 0.b.o. 665-0453.

COMPUTERS

Laptop blowout! Brand new IBM = Toshiba laptops! Now only $890. Don't miss out on this amazing deal. Supply is limited. infinity101@looksmart.com 546-7665.

EMPLOYMENT

COPYWRITER Part-time, student preferred. (413)536-5086 12-7pm.

Leaders needed: Summer teenage bycycling trips. US, Canada, Europe. Minimum 4-week time commitment. Salary plus expenses paid. Student Hosteling Program, Ashfield Rd., Conway, MA 01341. (800)343-6132 www.biketrips.com

EMPLOYMENT

3 Job Opportunities on Nantucket Island, MA beginning May. A.) Office manager with good typing, computer and telephone skills. B.) Office assistant, errand runner, mother's helper, household help. C.) Auction gallary assistant: furniture porter, display, delivery. Salary and housing. Drivers liscence required. (508)228-3942 or send reume: P.O. Box 2607 Nantucket, MA 02548.

Get paid $$ to surf the web cu2freedom.com

Movers: Local moving company is hiring individuals for moving positions. Flexibility and good attitudes are a must. Start at $8.00 per hour. Raise commensurate with performance. Call 584-4746.

Exotic dancers Wanted. Earn $500-1000 weekly. Call Exotica 532-8888.

EMPLOYMENT

UAHC Crane Lake and Eisner Camps, Reform Jewish coeducational Camps located in the Berkshires of Massachusetts, seek qualified, dedicated counselors and specialists, including Waterfront, Athletics, Arts. Good salary, r&b included, travel assistance. Crane Lake Camp: Contact Brad Gerstle, 800-227-2660 ILUVCAMP@aol.com; www.cranelake-camp.com. Eisner Camp: Contact Louis Bordman, 212-650-4130 EISNERGUY@aol.com; www.eisner-camp.org

Connect to the future. International company seeks PC users. $25-75k potential. 1-888-827-9733 www.roadforsuccess.com

LOST & FOUND

Found on campus: Woman's clock. Call 546-7364 to identify.

MISCELLANEOUS

Get paid to lose weight and inches. All natural, doctor reccommended. 1-800-397-7715.

Score big, score often with mybytes.com. Register today and get a free CD of cool music and much more.

ROOM FOR RENT

Room in nice house. Bus route, washer, dryer. $350+ 548-7039.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Beautiful 5 Bedroom House. 10 minutes from campus and on bus route. Call immediately! 256-2384.

ROOM WANTED

21/m looking for a place to stay. Now til 6/1. Call Nik @ 549-3826.

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

SERVICES

Rental problems? Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Qestions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the conditions of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

STEREO EQUIPMENT

Boston Acoustic sub/sat series. Six 8" speakers with two 16" subwoofers. Also central channel speaker. $800 value for $300. Like brand new. Need money 586-0534.

TRAVEL

Be flexible...Save $$$. Europe $159(o/w + taxes). CHEAP FARES WORLDWIDE!! Mexico/Caribbean $199 (r/t + taxes) Call; 800-326-2009 www.4cheapair.com

Study Spanish. Internships in Guatemala. College Credit. www.casaxelaju.com (512)416-6991.

TRAVEL

Mexico/Caribbean or Central America $229 rt. Europe $169 ow. Other worldwide destinations cheap. ONLY TERRORISTS GET YOU THERE CHEAPER! Book tickets on-line www.airtech.com or 212-219-7000.

#1 Panama City Vacations! Party Beachfront @ The Boardwalk, Summit Condo's, and Mark II. 1-800-234-7007. www.endlesssummertours.com

#1 Spring break Vacations! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas & Florida! Book it now! All major credit cards accepted! 1-800-234-7007. www.endlesssummertours.com

Call us at The Collegian Classifieds to get your ad in the paper!!

545-3500

Be the first to get your ad in the paper after Spring Break!!

WWW.DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM

Five College Community Calendar

THURSDAY, MARCH 9

Lecture – Pat Griffin, Professor of Social Justice Education at UMass, and Matt Ouellett, Associate Director of the Center for Teaching at UMass, will present a lecture entitled "Making Schools Safe for LBGT Students: A Look at What Schools are Doing." The lecture begins at 12:30 p.m. in room 903 of the Campus Center.

Speech – The Graduate Women's Network Women's Studies department will host Betty Reid Mandell and panel speaking on women's economic rights from 3-5 p.m. in room 903 of the Campus Center.

Workshop – A workshop on contraception and safer sex will be held at 3 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services. Men and women are welcome.

FRIDAY, MARCH 10

Prayer – The Muslim Student Association presents Jummaa Prayer from noon to 2 p.m. in the Campus Center. Check the listing in the elevators for the room number.

NOTICES

Community – Spring 2000 final examination schedules will be available beginning March 9. Copies will be delivered to students in residence halls, and will be available to off-campus students in the registrar's office. The schedule will be available on the Web beginning March 1.

Community – Mass Appeal, the newest co-ed a cappella group at UMass, is looking for students to arrange music. Email Erica for more information.

Help – From Feb. 15-April 13 on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays from 5-8 p.m. student volunteers from the School of Management will assist non-resident aliens with the preparation of their Federal and State income tax returns. Call 545-3660 for more information.

Scholarships – The STEMTEC/NSF Teaching scholars program is offering scholarships to students who are interested in exploring a career in K-12 math or science teaching. Students do not need to be enrolled in a certificate program to apply. Applications are due by April 1. Contact Johanna at 545-0626 for more information.

Support – A grief support group is available to all students who have experienced the death of someone they love. The groups are free, small and confidential, and meet on Wednesday and Thursday evenings. Telephone pre-screening is required for enrollment. Call 577-5316 if interested.

Support – AL-ANON and ALATEEN are offering local meetings for those affected by someone else's drinking problem. Call 253-5261 for meeting times and locations.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

BOOKBUCKS From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks, you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

Ustore CAMPUS CENTER Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	21	Gavel to Gavel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	22	NBC/22 Springfield
4	CBS/4 Boston	23	CNN Headline News
5	ABC/5 Boston	24	CNN
6	PBS/57 Springfield	25	CNN Fn
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	26	CNN Sı
8	UPN/20 Hartford	27	TBS
9	Weather Channel	28	BET
10	NBC/30 New Britain	29	College TV Network
11	Fox/61 Hartford	30	Univision
12	PBS/24 Hartford	31	Comedy Central
13	WOCH & HSCN	32	Cartoon Network
14	International	33	TV Land
15	UMass Academic TV	34	C-Span
16	WB/ New Haven	35	ZDTV (Tentative)
17	Sundance	36	Bloomberg Financial Network
18	The Learning Channel	37	History Channel
19	LIVE/TV19	38	HSCN Programming
20	ABC/40 Springfield

THURSDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MARCH 9, 2000

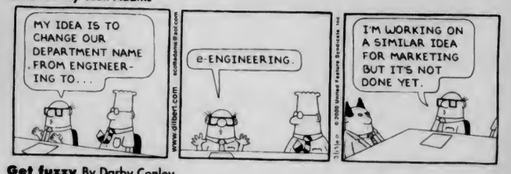
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	12	Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Walking to a Better Life		Great Performances: Andrea Bocelli			Wait for God	This Old Hse
WFSB	3	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		Diagnosis Murder "The Flame"	48 Hours (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		Diagnosis Murder "The Flame"	48 Hours (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Whose Line?	Whose Line?	Who Wants to Be a Millionaire		20/20 Downtown	News	Nightline
WLVI	6		Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends	Nanny	Popular "Tonight's the Night"		Charmed (R) (In Stereo)		News	Friends	Nanny
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends	Cod, Devil	Frasier (R)	Stark Raving	Frasier (R)	Will & Grace	News
WTXX		8	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Blind Date	Real TV	WWF Smackdown! (In Stereo)				News	Real TV (R)	Blind Date
WVIT		10	News	NBC News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Friends	Cod, Devil	Frasier (R)	Stark Raving	Frasier (R)	Will & Grace	News
WTIC	8	11	Simpsons	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends	★★★ "Cool Runnings" (1993, Comedy) Leon. (In Stereo)					News	Friends
WWLP	9	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends	Cod, Devil	Frasier (R)	Stark Raving	Frasier (R)	Will & Grace	News
WGBY	10	8	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Four Tops in Concert (In Stereo)				Four Tops in Concert (R) (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	20	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Whose Line?	Whose Line?	Who Wants to Be a Millionaire		20/20 Downtown	News	Nightline
WSBK	41		Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	WWF Smackdown! (In Stereo)				Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)	Mad Abt. You	Judge Mathis
WTBS	42		Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	★½ "Over the Top" (1987, Drama) Sylvester Stallone.				★★½ "Point of No Return" (1993, Drama) Bridget Fonda.
A&E	43		L.A. Law		Law & Order "Volunteers"		Biography "John Wayne: American Legend" (R)				Inside Story (R)	Law & Order "Mushrooms"
CNN	45	23	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live			Sports	Moneyline (R)
COM	53	30	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	★★ "Brewster's Millions" (1985, Comedy) Richard Pryor.				Kaufman: Hollywood	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	48		Your New House (R)		Wild Discovery: Mothers		On the Inside "St. Louis Arch"		Egypt's City of the Dead (R)		Into the Unknown (R)	On the Inside	St. Louis Arch"
ESPN	51		Basketball	Sportscenter	College Basketball: ACC Tournament First Round -- Teams TBA				College Basketball: Big East Tournament Quarterfinal			Sportscenter
LIFE	52		Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Chicago Hope "Austin Space"		"Love's Deadly Triangle: The Texas Cadet Murder" (1997, Drama)			Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	53		MTV Jams	Real Suits	Diary (R)		MTV.Com (R)	TRL Wanna	TRL (R) (In Stereo)	Smashing TV	Celebrity	Senseless	Undressed	Loveline
NICK	55		All That	Catdog	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Catdog	Catdog		All in Family	Jeffersons	All in Family	Jeffersons
SCIFI	59		"Twilight Zone: Rod Serling's Lost Classics" (1994) Jack Palance.				★★½ "Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade" (1989, Adventure) Harrison Ford.					"Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade" (1989)
TLC	60	28	Home Again	Home Again	Hurricane Andrew		Storm of the Century (R)		UFOs -- 50 Years of Denial (R)		UFOs and Alien Encounters	Storm of the Century (R)
TNT	62		In the Heat of the Night		ER (In Stereo)		★★★★ "MASH" (1970, Comedy) Donald Sutherland, Elliott Gould.					★★★½ "The Dirty Dozen" (1967) Lee Marvin.
USA	63		Baywatch "It Looks Could Kill"		JAG "Dungeons Justice"		Walker, Texas Ranger				★★★½ "Fried Green Tomatoes" (1991, Comedy-Drama) Kathy Bates, Jessica Tandy. (In Stereo)
HBO	65		★ "Space World" (1997) Meagrie Brown, PG-13				★★½ "Nadine" (1987) Kim Basinger, PG				★★½ "There's Something About Mary" (1998) Cameron Diaz, R	Naked Players	"Savior" (1998)
MAX	66		★★★ "Ever After: A Cinderella Story" (1998) Drew Barrymore.				★★★ "The Negotiator" (1998, Action) Samuel L. Jackson. (In Stereo) R				★ "Wishmaster 2: Evil Never Dies" (1999) R
SHOW	68		"The Wishing Tree" (2000, Drama) Alfre Woodard. (In Stereo)				★★★ "Coming to America" (1988, Comedy) Eddie Murphy. R				★ "Belly" (1998, Drama) Nas, DMX. (In Stereo) R

Over the Hedge By Fry Lewis



Dilbert By Scott Adams

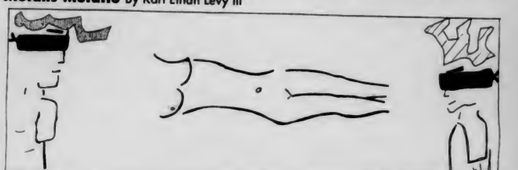
Balderdash By Tim Dwyer

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Doonesbury By Gary Trudeau

Get fuzzy By Darby Conley

Foxtrot By Bill Amend



Spunk By Mike LaRiccia

Nona By Anna Faktorovitch

Mutans Mutatio By Karl Ethan Levy III

Horoscopes

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – You can be unusually creative even while performing the most menial or mundane tasks, and the results will surprise and impress others.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – You can capitalize today on your own recent mistakes, thanks to a turning tide that opens up more doors and opportunities for you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – You may have to start making apologies today, even before you've done that which you are sure will offend in some way – but don't be sheepish.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – Don't give up or give in prematurely today. There is still some fight left in you, and you must be willing to give it all you've got.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – How it sounds and how it looks may prove more important in the long run than what it really means. Image, then, proves ever more important.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Matters of the heart demand attention today. You've been turning away form your own feelings lately, and it's time to get reconnected.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Though you still have work to do at this time, you may be able to let up just enough today that you guard against illness – or disenchantment.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – You may be quite impatient with loved ones who are slow to get with the program today. Take the time to explain just what you're after – and why.

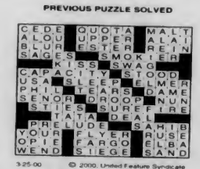
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – You may be somewhat out of step today; stay slow to those who seem to be more keenly on track than you are. You can get the guidance you need.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – You're going to want to get the whole story from someone you trust today, especially after others volunteer important information.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – A distraction must not keep you from pursuing your immediate goal today. Take time out, as necessary, to refocus and regain perspective.

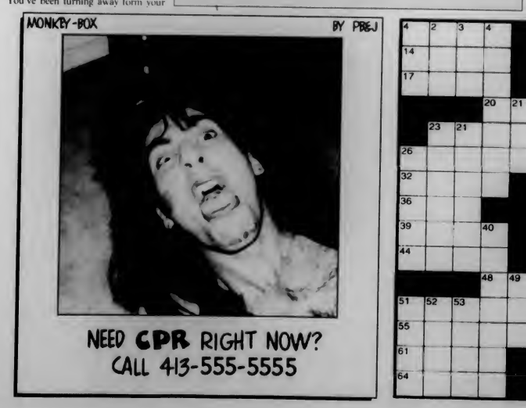
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – A secret may come out today which requires you to come clean. In the end you'll be better off for the trouble – and wiser, as well!

Quote of the Day

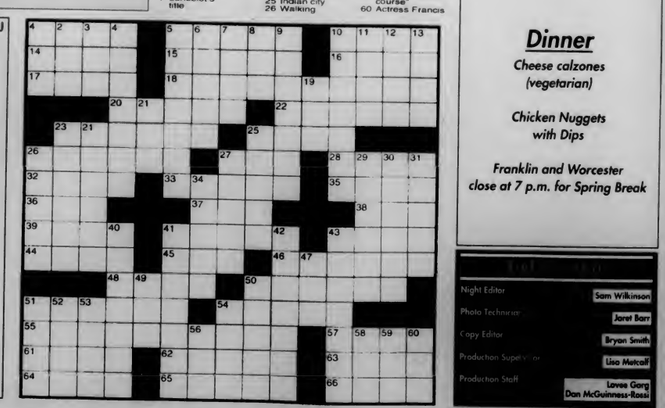


"...I'm evil, but I'm a necessary evil."

–Chancellor Scott



ACROSS
1 Pollution
5 Frisk about
10 Encourage
14 Tiny amount
15 Overhead
16 Astronaut Armstrong
17 Nabisco cracker
18 Heinz product
20 Delight
22 Rough
23 Actress Francis
25 Exit
26 Aviator Earhart
27 Whale habitat
28 "Newsweek" competitor
32 Confront
33 Carry a prop
35 Engine cover
36 Toronto's prov
37 "Yuck!"
38 Dachshund, e.g.
39 Smell
41 Actress Potts
43 Italian monetary unit
44 Weight of a container
45 Thing, in law
46 Black eye
48 Traffic snarls
50 Used the rink
51 Pin
54 Sheer fabric
55 School area
57 Space holder
61 Actor Baldwin
62 Cowhand's rope
63 Water, to Jose
64 Withered
65 Light swords
66 Godiva's title



DOWN
1 Lancelot's title
2 Me, to Miss Piggy
3 Baseballer Mel —
4 Antelope
5 Beach structures
6 Ebb
7 Elbow
8 Pre-holiday night
9 Battle of Bunker Hill participant
10 Dig up
11 Back
12 Some liquors
13 Otherwise
19 Ghost's greeting
21 Luau garland
23 Heather, on "Melrose Place"
24 Cleric
25 Indian city
26 Walking
27 Gestures
29 Antiseptic
30 Docked
31 Mystery award
34 Fixes the piano
40 Make merry
41 Blouse part
42 Arctic dwellers
43 Word for-word
47 Computer in "2001"
49 Part of a play
50 Intoxicate
51 Meadow sounds
52 Regulation
53 Frankfurt's river
54 Workbench attachment
56 Ice-T's music
58 — Khan
59 Cow's "second course"
60 Actress Francis

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

3-25-00 © 2000 United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Lunch

Grilled Cheese Sandwich (vegetarian)

Tavern Batter Cod

Eggplant Zucchini Casserole (vegan) (Berkshire & Worcester only)

Grilled Cheese on Multigrain Bread (vegetarian)

Dinner

Cheese calzones (vegetarian)

Chicken Nuggets with Dips

Franklin and Worcester close at 7 p.m. for Spring Break

Night Editor: Sam Wilkinson
Photo Technician: Jaret Barr
Copy Editor: Bryan Smith
Production Supervisor: Lisa Metcalf
Production Staff: Lovee Garg, Dan McGuinness-Ross

UMass Dukes it out in 77-52 route of Duquesne

Rebounding not a factor as UMass looks to GW

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

PHILADELPHIA – Look at the rebounding column and one might think that the Massachusetts men's basketball team was packing its bags early on just like the winter seemingly has. Taking on an undersized Duquesne squad, the clean-up story remained the same.

Unfortunately for the Dukes, so did the result. Wayne Smith burned the Minutemen for 30 points in the Dukes' 84-75 loss in Pittsburgh. This time around the Minutemen cut the Dukes offensive circulation at its heart, forcing them to resort to outside shots. With Smith, the teams leading scorer, at 17 points per game, blanketed and uninterested, UMass harassed the Dukes en route to a 77-52 victory in the first round of the Bell Atlantic Atlantic 10 Tournament yesterday at the First Union Spectrum.

Chris Kirkland began the march down the one-way street with a pair of baskets that sprung the Minutemen for an 11-0 run out of the gates. Before Duquesne could answer, it'd let the horse loose, allowing Monte Mack to drain a three that would become a theme of mid- to late afternoon. The sniper marksman kept bombing away from the outside, finishing with a game-high 25 points.

With Duquesne creeping closer, drawing within five at 25-18 behind a Simon Ogunlesi dunk at the 6:41 mark, UMass forged ahead, assuring that it planned on a longer stay in the City of Brotherly Love. The Minutemen used a 17-6 run in the final 6:41 of the first half to blow the lead up to 16 before the Dukes would get little from his cohorts. Courtney Wallace posted 13 points on the afternoon to lead Duquesne. The rest of the team made just eight field goals.

Much of the same happened after intermission; the Minutemen equaling their previous 11-0 run from the opening held in round two. What was just 16 ballooned to 27 in the first four and a half minutes of the second frame. Mack and Kirkland paved up to 51-24 before Jamal Hunter finally ended the drought with a free throw at the 15:06 mark.

UMass	77
Duquesne	52

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Forward Winston Smith came off the bench and provided a spark with eight points in 24 minutes of play in the Minutemen's 77-52 win over Duquesne in the first round of the Atlantic 10 Tournament.

Flint allowed his starters to rest momentarily before the Dukes showed some life that: cutting the deficit to 16 behind a Charles Stanfield trifecta with 3:49 remaining. However, the hope was short-lived as UMass upped it to 20 for good a minute later.

The victory sets the Minutemen up for a date with George Washington, which snuck in and out of the Mullins Center with a one-point victory, 87-86, last Tuesday. It marks the third time in four years under Flint, which UMass and GW have squared off on the second stage, both previous meetings taken by the Colonials. Tommy Penders' crew is the second-seed out of the West division after closing by winning nine of its final 12 contests.

The Colonials (15-4, 9-7 A-10) are led by SirValiant Brown, who seared UMass for 35 points in the teams' previous meeting. After the win, GW suffered a humbling 98-67 loss to Temple in the nation's capital. Even still, their late-season run allowed the Colonials to earn a first round bye in the A-10s.

Brown ran circles around the Minuteman backcourt. Shooting just 10 for 27, but wreaking havoc in the foul column, helping Kirkland and Mack to three first-half fouls apiece. Chris Monroe and Mike King matched Brown's 35 as a tandem.

One advantage will be the Minutemen's size even with Brand alling. UMass hammered GW underneath, out-rebounding the Colonials 57-34. However, Penders and company shot 46 percent, including 48 percent from downtown. Brown, an average sharp-

Turn to HOOP page 9

History sides with UM as A-10 tourney rolls on

PHILADELPHIA – It was almost perfect for the NO. 3 East seeded Massachusetts men's basketball team.

Perfect because it was a first round victory over Duquesne, the No. 6 seed in the West in the Bell Atlantic Atlantic 10 Tournament. Perfect because the Minutemen expanded on a 40-24 half-time lead while shooting 84 percent from the free throw line. And perfect because it marked the second consecutive contest that the bench stepped in and made itself an intangible force, chipping in with 13 points in 60 minutes of play.

The key word above though, is almost, as the victory set UMass up for a second round faceoff with West No. 2 George Washington, who beat the Minutemen last Tuesday at the Mullins Center by a point, 87-86.

The Colonials earned a first round bye by placing second in the West division, which gave them an extra day of rest. And almost because UMass will have to deal with its depleted bench sooner or later with freshman center Micah Brand out for the remainder of the season with pneumonia.

However, history is certainly on the Minutemen side when it comes to the A-10 Tournament. Take a look:

•From 1992-96 UMass set a tournament record with 16 straight wins, all the while capturing five straight tournament titles. It took home three wins five times, having a first round bye every year. The last win came in 1997 when it beat LaSalle in a first round matchup.

•UMass leads the conference with five tournament titles, while Temple is second with four in the A-10's 23-year existence. Of the current members St. Joseph's is next with two.

•In 1992, Massachusetts skipped past Rutgers in a quarterfinal meeting by a score of 106-94. The combined total of 200 points is the most scored in an A-10 Championship game. That tally of 106 is also the most points any UMass team has put up in the championship round.

Massachusetts has produced some of the most successful individual performances during the A-10s as well. Check out these opportunists:

•Lou Roe is the only player in A-10 history to be a member of All-Championship teams. As a senior in 1995, Roe was named Most Outstanding Player of the tournament.

"Out of five players that have competed in four A-10 title games, a pair hail from UMass, Roe (1992-95) and Dana Dingle (1993-1996). Dingle doubled his achievement by being the one of just two players to start in all four games. Temple's Jason Ivey (1993-96), Derrick Battie (1993-96) and William Cunningham (1993-96) are the other three that have played, with Cunningham earning a start in all of them.

"The odds are against GW's freshman phenom SirValiant Brown leading his team to a title. The point guard averaged a league-leading 24.3 points per game, just ahead of Monty Mack's daily output of 19.7 PPG.

However, UMass' Marcus Camby is the only player to lead the league in scoring (20.5 PPG) and his team to the championship in 1996.

"The lowest seed to win the tournament title is Virginia Tech, which completed the feat in 1984 as a No. 5 seed.

This year's seniors have never advanced past the second round of the A-10s. Three years ago, in 1997, UMass ousted LaSalle, 64-69, but dropped a close one to GW, 58-49.

In the first round of the 1998 championship, the Minutemen made it past Vilginia Tech, 64-58, but was once again sent packing by GW, 88-83. Last year was the same storyline. After sweeping past Duquesne, 80-70, Xavier tapped them for all they were worth, with the end result being a 72-68 Musketeer win.

Around the league:

"Temple's Pepe Sanchez was the easy choice as A-10 Player of the Year with 6.3 PPG and 166 assists in a season that was abbreviated due to an ankle injury. The senior point guard

Turn to A-10 page 9

Roller coaster career reaches end for basketball's Bradley

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

"SIX...FIVE...FOUR...THREE..."

Each and every one of the 5444 fans in attendance on that winter-night seemed to be echoing the seconds as they dropped from the Massachusetts shot clock. With the home team clinging to the slimmest of leads over heavily favored George Washington late in the second half, it seemed as if a single squandered possession would dash any hopes of a Maroon and White upset.

The Minutewomen swung the basketball desperately around the perimeter, searching in vain for a seam in the mighty Colonial defense. The ball finally came to rest in the hands of senior Jaywana Bradley, strung out on the right baseline, with less than three ticks to shoot and GW's Marie Ingleston viciously scaling off her path to the hoop.

A million things could have been going through Bradley's mind. A disappointing senior season in which she underachieved in limited minutes on the floor. A dismal-to-non-existent stat sheet. A season-ending string of injuries that required two seasons under the knife and robbed her of quickness and mobility. A single moment of moral weakness in October that would stain her career forever.

But Jaywana Bradley is a warrior. In this, the heat of battle, her mind simply could not focus on anything but the moment. She could envision nothing, save making the play that would keep her team on the trail of its biggest win of the year.

"I had never beaten them in my whole career, so I just needed to beat them," Bradley said. "That game, I just said to myself, 'Jay, it's time for you to go.' So I just did what I had to do, knowing that I had nothing to lose."

What she did was juke Ingleston right out of her shorts, pulling up to stick an improbable 12-foot jumper with absolutely no time left on the shot clock that proved to be the final nail in GW's coffin. As the home crowd exploded in applause, the former captain was finally able to taste the vindication that had eluded her for so long.

"When I look back on that game, I'm going to think that it's about time I played like that," Bradley said. "No one else really knew it, but I knew that I was capable of playing like that; sometimes I just don't push myself as hard as I should because I'm scared of getting hurt again."

Much like the arc on that fateful jump shot, Bradley's basketball career has been marked by decidedly high and low points. The Bronx native enjoyed an absolutely stellar high school run, captaining her Manhattan Center squad for three full seasons and leading the Lads Rants to the school's first ever city championship. Bradley earned a staggering amount of personal recognition as well under coach Valerton MacDonald, including being named an All-State selection, Manhattan Player of the Year and City Championship MVP during a senior year title run in which she averaged 24 points and 12 rebounds per game.

But as dominant as she was in high school, Bradley admits that she may not have been truly prepared to make the jump to college hoops.

"I really didn't have a clue what it would be like playing college basketball," Bradley said. "I played for four years in high school, but the intensity level was nowhere near what it is here. So it was like a slap in the face for me.

"I also played the one, two, three, four and five in high school. So coming here and only playing guard was a real transition for me."

The difficulty of that transition left Bradley on the bench for much of the '95-'96 season, though she did make a few memorable appearances during the team's first ever run at the NCAA Tournament. She capitalized on her season-high 22 minutes of playing time at home against Temple, netting 12 points on 6-of-7 shooting from the field. And though she played only five minutes in UMass' first round tourney loss to Michigan State, Bradley values that experience as the brightest of her college career.

"My biggest memory, without a doubt, was making the NCAA Tournament my freshman year," Bradley said. "It was the first time in the history of the school that we made the tournament, so that's got to be number one on my list."

Bradley enjoyed an expanded role during her '96-'97 sophomore campaign, starting 11 games for coach Joanie O'Brien and posting three outings with double-figure scoring. Her biggest game that season came once again at the expense of the Owls, who watched her rack up a career-high 13 points on their home court.

The '97-'98 season was a dismal one for Bradley, as she was forced to sit out the entire slate while recovering from off-season surgery to repair her torn left Anterior

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

No UMass basketball player has had to overcome more adversity than senior Jaywana Bradley has in her 5 year career

Turn to BRADLEY, page 9

Versatile MacFarland has memories of UMass that will last a lifetime

By Aaron Saykin
Collegian Staff

Eighth-grader Alison MacFarland sat in the office of Bill Bulman, a guidance counselor at St. John Vianney High School in New Jersey. Long before she ever thought of choosing a college, MacFarland was looking for the right high school. She had just finished taking entrance exams, and was in the midst of a tour.

He was talking on the phone when she arrived. MacFarland eavesdropped.

"No, coach," MacFarland remembered Bulman saying to the voice on the other end. "All of our players have committed somewhere else, but I can refer you to so-and-so from another nearby high school."

Bulman found colleges for his students, but as coach of the high school's girls' basketball team, he found them for his athletes.

A reflective MacFarland, who completed her senior season with the UMass women's basketball team last Sunday, recalled his words as he put down the phone.

"That was UMass coach Joanie O'Brien," Bulman had said, she remembered. "She just finished her first season there and she's looking for some girls for her program. She said she wasn't interested in great scorers. She wanted to build around unselfish players that work hard."

Even in the spring of 1992 – while an angelic-looking Arkansas Governor seduced America – a 14-year old MacFarland, like the future president, had a feasible dream. And an education from a Catholic high school seemed to engender a slightly higher moral standard.

She wanted to play college basketball, Bulman knew it.

The phone call – although not for her – was what she considered the first sign that pointed her to Amherst.

But as talented as she was, MacFarland would have to play fourth fiddle for the Lancers. The first belonged to her teammate and High-School All-American Erica Gomez, as she tuned up for a collegiate career at UCLA. What little that remained was split between two All-State teammates that capitalized on opportunities from Columbia and Sacred Heart.

Lucky for MacFarland that she fit O'Brien's 1992 description to a tee: unselfish, hard-working, and pretty good with the ball... even if she was a 5-foot-9 center for most of her high school days, and never once scored 20 in a game.

"I'm tough, but I'm going to make you stronger," were the words of O'Brien that seemed to linger in the mind of MacFarland after their first meeting.

And what exactly did that mean? Was she going to sit the bench because of coaching philosophy? Would she be the target of constant criticism?

Would she be able to handle it?

***

An exciting four-year journey through the UMass women's hoop program did not have the story-book ending onto which most writers would like to latch. While not emerging as a hero, MacFarland's finish was nonetheless fitting.

The spotlight, as usual, was monopolized by her teammates.

Her final appearance for the Maroon and White left the usually sweet-talking MacFarland with a bitter pill to swallow. With four microphones and six tape-recorders absorbing every word, she addressed the media in her final press conference after a tiring 66-55 loss to George Washington last Sunday in the semi-finals of the Atlantic 10 Tournament.

While wiping random tears from her eyes before they hit her cheeks, MacFarland chided her younger teammates for losing their composure during the game. She wasn't so sure her overachieving team simply ran out of gas. She was angered because some of her younger teammates actually responded to GW's "dirty" play – in effect abandoning the discipline that an under-talented squad must rely upon to win.

"No, I don't think that was the issue at all," she said when asked if her Minutewomen just weren't good enough to beat a ranked team. "A lot of it had to do with composure. When you're in games like this, and it could be the last game of your career or season, you don't even think about being tired. You just keep going."

Turn to MACFARLAND, page 9

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Alison MacFarland put an exclamation point on her storybook career as a Minutewoman by scoring her 1,000th point in UMass' biggest win of the year.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Volume CVI Issue 52 Friday, March 8, 2000

Funding cushion unavailable

Using surplus would cause more problems

By Melissa Hommel
Collegian Staff

The budget issues that are currently affecting the campus were the primary focus of yesterday's faculty senate meeting.

The meeting opened with comments from Chancellor David K. Scott on the financial cushion that currently exists at the University.

"There is no 33 million dollar reserve fund," Scott said. "There is no financial reserve. There are unspent funds at year's end in units and departments across campus that are, in the main, earmarked for specific purposes."

He also explained that in order to use the financial cushion, the administration would have to present a solid plan to the Board of Trustees on how the funds will be replenished later and why the need to be used now.

"If you use the financial cushion, you have to have a cast iron plan as to how you are going to replace it," he said.

The usage of the cushion, according to Scott, is strictly for a state ordered cut in the University's budget, and not for the proposed budget cuts that are currently occurring on this campus.

"If you have an executive order from the state to reduce the budget, you draw on the financial cushion," he said. "It is not meant to draw on a plan."

In addition, he said that if he did make the decision to use the cushion right now to alleviate budget problems, the University might face problems in the future and lose that option.

Scott explained that if this occurs, "I have in the short-term removed the flexibility of the University to deal with the problems in the most logical manner."

Paul Page, Vice Chancellor for Administrative and Finances, also commented that the financial cushion was a ratio that is taken at the close of the fiscal year.

There are "unrestricted monies at the end of the fiscal year that have not been spent." He explained that the money that existed in that fund had already been allocated to other projects on campus.

He explained that the Board of Trustees themselves requires the University to have a financial cushion.

"Institutions must have a reasonable cushion for borrowing purposes. Bond rates and interest rates depend upon the financial health of an institution," he said.

He also went on to say the University could use the cushion in times of sudden and unpredictable financial downfalls.

"No fiscally responsible institution should use its financial cushion instead of making prudent plans to balance revenues and expenditures on an on-going basis," he said.

He went on to say that the money that was already allocated is typically dispensed to services like infrastructure and auxiliary operations. He explained that most of the building and construction takes place on campus during the summer months, while housing also needs funds in order to sustain operations during the summer.

"There are specific uses for which these funds are put aside," Page said. Since the total amount of funds that are not allocated is recorded in June, the funds that later go towards infrastructure and auxiliary operations are not added into the total.

He went on to say that even if these funds were used, the University would have to come up with a way to replenish them after the usage.

"We have to replenish them, we need them," he said.

The areas in which the University overspent funds in the budget was also addressed by the Chancellor. He explained that money went primarily toward both scholarships and financial aid.

He said that the University had planned to spend a total of one million dollars in the area of financial aid and scholarships, but instead spent close to eight million dollars on the venture.

"Should we have stuck by one million dollars rather than the 7.8 million?" Scott questioned. "Should we have done that? Yes, yes, and yes again, I stand by the decision."

He also explained that funding went toward the library and the investment in gender equality in the area of sports. He explained that the decision was made to increase women's sports with men's sports rather than cutting.

"If we do have to reduce the budget, we will reduce men and women's sports hand in hand," Scott said.

Also addressed at the meeting was the upcoming budget for the 2000-'01 year, and the financial commitments that the University was planning to make. Scott explained that money would be allotted to the areas of salaries, the valedictorian and salutatorian program, information and technology, and infrastructure. No other standing commitments could be made at this time.

It's a dog's life

A local pooch spends the day lounging about in front of Herter Hall soaking up some of the fantastic rays

Poetry on buses

By Virginia Avedisian
Collegian Staff

When you get onto a bus on campus, what do you expect to see on the side? Well, many students will be surprised at what they will see within the next few weeks at UMass. The University has decided to make bus travel a "poetic experience." With the help of the Poetry Society of America (PSA), MassLive, the Pioneer Valley Transit Authority (PVTA) and design companies such as Titanium and Impress Inc., graduate students taking creative writing are bringing poems-on-posters to area buses.

The project will begin Saturday, March 11th with a poetry reading and party at the Fine Arts Center. Taking part are acclaimed poets such as James Tate, Dara Wier, Paul Mariani and Steve Clingman. Also expected to attend are members of the supporting organizations and UMass President William M. Bulger. A reception featuring award-winning singer Anita Suhanin, formerly of Groovasaurus, will immediately follow. A bus decorated with sample posters will also be present for all to see.

Poetry in Motion was founded by the PSA in New York City in 1992. Since then, the program has put artfully designed posters on railways, subways and buses in cities across America such as Atlanta, Baltimore, Chicago, Dallas, Los Angeles and Philadelphia. The national program features poetry chosen from a wide variety of cultural and aesthetic backgrounds. Locally, it will also include writers such as Sylvia Plath, Raphael Alberti and Wislawa Szymborska. UMass is the first University to host the program and hopes to make it an ongoing feature in future years.

"I was living in New York City when 'Poetry in Motion' first began there, and I remember looking up on the subway expecting to find the usual advertisements for podiatrists, only to see a poem by Ezra Pound," said MFA student Lisa Olstein. Excited by the memory, she immediately responded when MFA Professor Dara Wier suggested someone try to bring the program to the University. For the past 17 months, she and other student coordinators have spent "endless hours waging a campaign to achieve that goal," she said.

In all, 1,200 posters of 12 different poems will be posted on PVTA buses, with four groups of 400 posters appearing at four-month intervals. UMass MFA students chose the poems with the assistance of MFA professors and the approval of the PSA in New York. Local companies Titanium and Impress Inc. designed the posters pro bono, and the PVTA provided free ad space. In addition, MassLive offered financial support and free use of its website. The PVTA estimates that thousands of writers will see the posters by the end of this year.

"In the Poetry Society of America's 90-year history, no program has ignited the public's imagination the way 'Poetry in Motion' has," said PSA President Elise Paschen.

"We are thrilled to be extending the program to the Pioneer Valley, where so many colleges are located, and hope it will continue there for many years to come!"

"This program does not just put poetry on buses, it brings public and community arts into the daily lives of people," commented Lisa Olstein.

Principal of Impress Inc., Hana Teensma, said, "What a thrill is was to help put poetry in motion. Our eyes were opened when we had the honor to visualize some of these old and new classics, like a class assignment. We each put aside our daily routines of designing books and magazines and carved out a little place of creative space to read, dream, think and play with these wonderful words. We are a changed group."

Debated pill effective

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

According to most researchers, the "morning-after" pill is one of the most effective contraceptive techniques available on the market, but recent studies have indicated that America's "pregnancy prevention" pill can cause harmful side effects to female fertility.

The University of Massachusetts Health Services offers the pill to students who have experienced unprotected intercourse or under circumstances in which the condom broke. In effect, it is an emergency contraceptive that must be used within 72 hours of unprotected intercourse for it to be effective.

The "morning-after" pill combines a strong dose of synthetic hormones, similar to those found in the regular birth-control pills. However, unlike normal birth-control pills, the "morning-after" pill changes the lining of the uterus to prevent implantation of the fertilized egg.

Experts at the Emergency Contraception website state that the pill will most likely cause its patients to feel nauseous and may even cause side effects such as vomiting. According to the site, it's not quite effective as other forms of protection either.

"According to current statistics, it reduces your chances of getting pregnant by 75 percent," the site concludes. "Translation: if 100 women have unprotected sex, about eight will get pregnant. But if all 100 women take the 'morning-after' pill, only two will get pregnant."

Other side effects include the possibility that some women may experience headaches, dizziness, cramping, tender breasts and irregular bleeding. However, the website states that the benefits of using this kind of emergency contraceptives far outweigh the symptoms, which officials say do not usually last longer than a day.

"Advocates argue that the side effects are minor compared with the consequences of the estimated 2.7 million unwanted pregnancies every year in the United States," the site stated.

The Federal Drug Administration predicted that if doctors and women adopt emergency contraceptive pills (ECP), emergency contraception could prevent up to 2.3 million unintended pregnancies every year in the U.S., one million of which are now terminated in an abortion. According to statistics, this would reduce the level of abortions to about 40 percent of their present levels.

According to the site, because of the overall effectiveness of the pill most women are taking it as a safety precaution, even in circumstances in which they wouldn't have become pregnant.

"The number of women who take the pills and still become pregnant is only about 2 percent," the study stated.

While the pill is not effective as a form of birth control, no deaths or serious complications have been reported in the approximately 25 years that the pill has been used. According to the study, in the very unlikely chance that a woman takes the pills and remains pregnant, "there is no reason to suspect that one time emergency use of the pills would be associated with birth defects."

JESSE CROMWELL/COLLEGIAN

Spring blooms

One UMass student fooks at flowers in Durfee Conservatory.

Free Tibet Day raises awareness

By Virginia Avedisian
Collegian Staff

Today is International Free Tiber Day and as students participate in the current actions of Students for a Free Tibet they are faced with many serious problems.

One of the major problems the student organization faces is the fact that President Clinton recently announced his intention to pull out all stops to get Congress to grant China permanent "normal trade relations" (NTR) status in the coming year.

The President said that, "the only way to lock in America's benefits from the World Trade Organization (WTO) agreement with China is to first grant China permanent normal trade relations status." He also states, "We will do anything we can to succeed."

The annual debate itself is a battle in the ongoing human rights struggle. The threat of sanctions is the most powerful lever on China that the United States has. China has shown that it fears conversations on human rights and will go to great lengths to avoid criticism of its human rights record. Having China's human rights record discussed annually on the floor of the House keeps the spotlight firmly on China. Congress will face public scrutiny if it surrenders this most valuable handle it has on China. If it does happen, the United States would lose the power to push for human rights, labor rights and democratic reforms.

Supporters of PNTR will spend $20 million on heavy-hitting lobbyists, claiming that the U.S. must grant China PNTR to fulfill obligations under the World Trade Organization (WTO). Also, they claim that PNTR is necessary to guarantee U.S. access to Chinese markets, and that continuing this strategy of "engagement" with China will allow Chinese citizens to buy their way to democracy, religious freedom, decent wages and working conditions.

Yet Secretary of Commerce Bill Daley said "PNTR isn't a legal necessity, continuing our annual review process will completely fulfill our WTO obligations."

Also, supporters of the movement have said, "on constructive engagement policy with China isn't conservative and engaging. China's record on human and labor rights, the environment, religious freedom and democracy has, if anything, gotten worse in the last five years."

Activists such as Wei Jingsheng say, "China only improves when under outside pressure, making it critical for the U.S. to hold on to its best bargaining chip for helping the Chinese and Tibetan people to make gains in these areas."

The Tibet movement is pushing for the US to reserve the right to sanction China at some point in the future. If permanent NTR status passes, the U.S. will have given up its only meaningful tool in the struggle for human rights. Holding an annual debate on China's trade status is in no way a violation of any WTO-related agreement. The annual NTR debate is simply a conversation held on the floor on the House and the WTO agreements do not in any way prohibit free speech. If Congress actually voted to revoke or withhold NTR status, the US would probably be in violation of the WTO agreements. The organization is simply asking for a debate.

Students are encouraged that they can win this struggle. They simply need a majority of the vote in the House of Representatives to win. They already have a lot of support from groups such as AFL-CIO and Public Citizen. Yet in order to build this majority against permanent NTR, the organization must make sure that members of Congress understand that they are being "pushed" into a false choice between permanent NTR and no NTR. Students are also encouraged to call their local representatives and ask about their position on permanent NTR status.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 47 LOW: 17	HIGH: 43 LOW: 31	HIGH: 43 LOW: 26

Battling O.C.D.

Collegian columnist Wes Wrightson gives the real deal on obsessive-compulsive disorder. Read about it in today's Ed/Op section.

ED PAGE 4

Run off and Join the Circus

Today's abbreviated Arts takes a look at Pat McGee's major record label debut as well as the circus touching down in Amherst. Arts: we've been on break all semester.

ARTS PAGE 3

Double Deuce

UMass forward Chris Kirkland lived up to his uniform number, dropping 22 points on the dazed Colonials of GW in A-10 Tournament action yesterday. Turn to the back for the facts, Jack.

SPORTS PAGE 8

Arts & Living 3
Comics 7
Crossword 7
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 8

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

Campus Perspectives

Compiled by Matt Foster • Photos by Kara Stokes

Where are you going for Spring Break and what will you be doing?

"I'm going to my house to make pottery."

Eric Becker
BDIC
Senior

"I'm going to the Dominican Republic to volunteer at an orphanage and teach orphan children how to speak English."

Ashley Rose
BDIC
Junior

"I'm actually not going anywhere, I'm going home. I'm going to sleep for four days then I have a lot of work to do, so for the next two or three days I think I'm going to do work."

Mark Stephens
Sociology/English
Senior

"Home, I'm going to do a lot of work."

Kelly Wynn
Communication Disorders
Junior

"I'm visiting family in New York and going home."

Wes Jacques
Senior
Sociology/Education

"I'm going to Daytona Beach and then to Key West. I'm going to PARTY! I'm also going to travel and camp."

Christina Ciampa
Biology
Sophomore

■ lacrosse

continued from page 8

goalie in the country as a sophomore," Barnes said. "Her name is Jen Nardi and she's a tremendous goalkeeper."

The Big Red will also lose the battle of tenure, fielding only two seniors, neither of whom will be between the Cornell pipes, where Barnes suggests that much of the game's action might take place.

Trying to overcome UMass' reputation for being purely a defensive team, the skipper hopes to pick up the tempo at the other end of the field this season. The guns he looks to fire will come in the form of senior co-captain Rebecca Minaker, who scored 15 points last year, and senior Noelle Cassidy and junior Rachel Ingrallea, each of whom tallied over 20 in 1999. Senior Stephanie Pavlick, who leads all returning offensive players with seven assists, will be helped by juniors Tay Salen and Kara DePaula, the latter of whom finished off the previous regular season with a two-goal, one-assist effort against A-10 rival Duquesne.

"This year, we're going to do a lot of different things," Barnes said. "We're going to be exciting and take a lot of shots. We'll play good defense and we'll take our chances when we finally get them offensively, but we're not going to take any big risks."

■ hoops

continued from page 8

with a 14-2 intereonference record. On Feb. 1, TU crunched the Minutemen, 75-48, and then treated them to a 72-54 welcome loss at the Peter I. Tsongas Center.

"You can't worry about the losses; you just have to go out and play," said UMass James "Bruiser" Flint.

GW's SirValiant Brown, who finished the regular season as the nation's second-leading scorer with 24 points per game, was yesterday's high scorer despite connecting for just 8-of-26 from the floor. Combined, the Minutemen shot 66 percent from the floor, including 81 percent in the second half.

UMass senior Chris Kirkland tallied a team-high 22 points, taking advantage of his agility to cruise past GW's big men. Monty Mack, who was forced out of the game briefly after a collision which left him writhing on the hardwood, returned to chip in 17 points and four assists. Backcourt mate Shannon Crooks dropped five dimes of his own, and slashed the paint for 21 points as well. Other high scorers included Kitwana Rhymer (who recorded a double-double with 12 points and 11 boards) and Winston Smith, who did a great job of spelling foul-plagued Mike Babul (three personals in the first half) and picked up eight big points in the process.

Already enjoying an 11-9 advantage at the 14:41 mark, UMass went on a 7-0 run to open the lead up even more. But GW would return the favor four minutes later, using a 5-0 spurt to trim the gap to 22-18. Crooks and Kirkland combined for 12 points in the last 4:57 to maintain a 41-32 Maroon and White edge at the break.

"We wanted to go inside to [Kirkland]," Flint said. "I thought our decisions weren't as good as they could have been in the first game [against GW]."

UMass' transition play took over on the tired Colonials' legs in the second half, after Mack drilled a pull-up with 15:58 left to establish a 10-point Maroon and White cushion, 49-39. The Minutemen then put on a dazzling display of breakaway dunks, and a Rhymer alley-oop flush off a Crooks feed increased the UMass lead to 66-46 with 8:57 to go.

George Washington calculated foul trouble into its equation in the second half, against a Minuteman squad that shot 27-of-54 from the candy stripe. The Colonials attempted to regain control by fouling with over six minutes left on the ticker. But Kirkland, Mack and Smith combined for 14 points in the last six minutes to seal up the win.

■ gym

continued from page 8

March 31, regardless of the team's national ranking. Every score in the low 220s posted this season can be erased, starting the Minutemen off with a clean slate, if they take the gold at the ECAC. And Johnson isn't worried a bit.

"I think we're the favored team going in," Johnson said. "We're starting to hit our sets better and if we keep it up, we'll be all set next weekend."

Their biggest foe at the meet will be the Temple Owls, UMass' archrival. With senior Mike Moran posting some mighty high scores throughout the season, the Maroon and White should be a little nervous. But only a little.

UMass' Jeff LaVallee, Moran's former teammate, has defeated the star of the Temple team on virtually every event this season. And even if Moran comes out on top of the all-around competition next week, the depth of the UMass squad is so great, that almost every man for Temple would have to give 110 percent in order to take the ECAC Cup away from the Minutemen. Knowing this, junior Mike Alexander is more than confident about the upcoming battle.

"Our goal at ECACs is just to hit our sets," Alexander said. "If we all hit, Temple and the rest of the conference should be no trouble for us. In fact, I predict that by late Saturday night, I'll be shining up not only the [ECAC] Cup, but also coach Johnson's head for a good look on our first trip ever to the NCAA National Championships."

The Minutemen are certainly confident enough, and perhaps rightfully so. They outrank Temple by almost a point, and they have improved significantly throughout the season. So if Johnson and Alexander are right, and all goes well, UMass will be on its way to Iowa in just a few short weeks.

insight middle east 2000

A Three-Day Insider's Look into Management Consulting for Ph.D.s, M.S.s, and M.A.s

McKinsey & Company, a management consulting firm with over 5,500 consultants in 80 offices in 42 countries, invites you to gain insight into the world of management consulting. This comprehensive seminar, designed exclusively for Ph.D.s, M.S.s, and M.A.s, will cover a range of topics important to those who are exploring alternative career possibilities in the Middle East. The agenda will include:

- An introduction to consulting via case excercises
- Team-based problem solving exercises
- An interview workshop
- Recreational, team-building activities
- An introduction to our Middle East office

Applicants should be expecting to finish their graduate degree in 2001. Applicants should also have experience in the Middle East or demonstrated interest in the region. No business experience is required.

All applications must be received by March 15. Finalists will be notified by March 27.

For more information, visit our web site at http://www.mckinsey.com/insightmiddleeast

McKinsey & Company

Insight Middle East 2000 will be held April 13 to April 16.
All expenses will be paid.

http://www.mckinsey.com/insightmiddleeast

Big Apple Circus comes to town

By Melody Zagami
Collegian Correspondent

The Big Apple Circus
Concert Hall
March 7

I'll be honest, I hate the circus. I've never liked the smelly animals, the scary clowns or the lines for the port-a-potty. But OOPS! The Big Apple Circus Stage Show is not your average circus. With the exception of an adorable puppy and some extremely talented birds, there are no traditional animals. The Big Apple Circus Stage Show is exactly that, a stage show. It highlights the talents of jugglers, acrobats, musicians and even thespians.

By using the stage and only the stage this show is a totally different circus experience. And judging by the audience's reactions and my own, it's definitely fun for all ages. The opening scene sets the tone for the entire show. It seems as though we're in for a different show than we paid for. A thespian emerges from behind the curtain announcing that tonight's show is Shakespeare's Villians and Lovers. He proceeds to introduce a scene from Romeo and Juliet. But the ringmaster comes out and informs him that there's a circus scheduled and he's confused. And from that point on the fun begins and doesn't quit until the finale.

The performers have come from all over the world and trained in top circus and performing arts schools throughout the continents. The lighting and set design are perfect as are the costumes. It is everything you expect from the circus and much more. And considering the size of the space and the format of a traditional circus it is amazingly wonderful and entertaining.

All of the elements of a traditional circus are present but without the elephants, annoying clowns and dirty tent. This is the circus for people who like theater, but I think it will satisfy true circus fans also. This circus has changed my negativity towards circuses and I will welcome my next circus experience. The PAC was a solid full house. I was sitting between a young couple and a group of elderly and there were kids everywhere. This show promotes a really nice wholesome feeling that you just don't get going to see the latest blockbuster or plays around campus. Also clocking in at about two hours, it wasn't too long or too short.

There was a fifteen minute intermission and the length was perfect. This is so refreshing in the world of three-hour movies and two-hour plays. It was really fun and although that sounds kind of basic, isn't that the whole point of entertainment? In my opinion, it is and The Big Apple Circus Stage Show is fun for young and old alike.

Pat McGee almost Shines

By Adam Martignetti
Collegian Staff

PAT MCGEE BAND
Shine
Warner Brothers

The energetic, acoustically powered Pat McGee Band has been lauded for their explosive live shows and their relentless touring schedule. However, the band has yet to fully translate the energy of their live shows into a palpable album effort. Shine, the PMB's first album released under a major record label, is an attempt to change that.

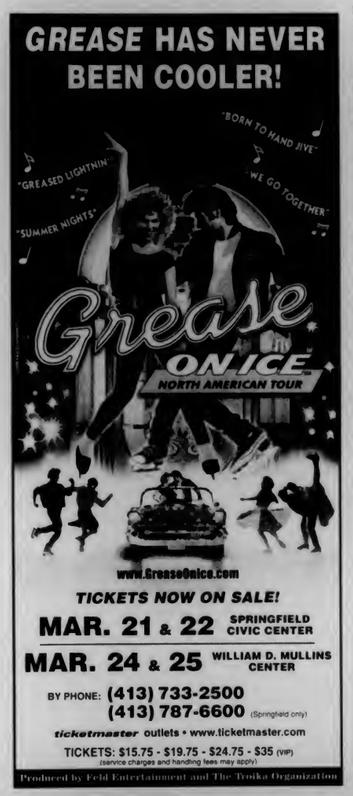
The first track, "Runaway," serves as a slap in the face to those who have never heard the band before. This pop gem has a great hook and McGee's sincere vocals croon over the fragile refrain.

"Rebecca," the second song about a girl's encounter with the world, is an even more refined tune. Here, McGee's guitar is back grounded in favor of another great piano hook. The rich fusion of sound is PMB at their peak.

McGee continues his introspective on life with "Anybody." This track is in essence what to expect from Shine. The bridges are held together by a couple of string chords, but mostly the song is McGee strumming a few guitar chords and pouring out a soulful melody.

"Drivin'" adds a banjo to the mix, which can never be a bad thing. The banjo does well to this lively ballad, despite the seeming contrast in styles.

At five minutes plus, "Haven't Seen for a While," seems entirely too long. It also seems an odd choice for the vibrant band highlighting neither their spark nor their musical diversity.



"She'll be your hero when lightning falls," McGee sings on track six, but the song is flat. It's almost as if you're expecting some distorted power chord to crush the acoustic melody. Ironically, the electric guitar is used sparingly later, but the song never achieves the crescendo that McGee seems to be struggling toward. I find "Lost" equally unappealing. It's too typical.

A rich bass line and some great backup vocals put PMB back on track temporarily with "Fine." Here the group melds more than anywhere else producing the album's best song by far. "Take the world around you and see what's within you," holds strong even when it's harmonized after the music fades. The piano and great production values only add to the pleasure of this track.

"What Ya Got" has got a country twinge to it. Al Walsh's mellow vocals probably add to this perception. Even the second guitar though is not of the rock realm.

Listening to the rest of the album, I can't help but think PMB struggled here. Does "I know" at 6:23 really need to be reprised on the final track? Probably not. Pat McGee band is undoubtedly at their best trying to create a fusion of different sounds with acoustic guitar. In fact, their almost exclusively acoustic tunes need some sprucing up. However, too often Shine comes off as a one-man effort, with McGee strumming the same three lively chords and laboring in his own earnestness. The choruses especially fall into this trap on more than one occasion.

It's impossible to deny that these guys are lively, even eager. But, they seem eager to rock. This album doesn't rock. There are moments of clairvoyance and poignancy, but the consistency is lulling rather than arousing. Sometimes sincerity and a tuneful guitar just aren't enough. C+

Write for Arts.

Watch historic crime

By Martie Zad
The Washington Post

The History Channel comes up with eight impressive cases in its four-night "Perfect Crimes" series Monday through Thursday at 9 p.m.

Stories of two of the country's most infamous crimes air each night. The first involves a near-perfect one that barely failed; the second was a seemingly perfect crime, one that remains unsolved. Armchair detectives get to review the evidence. The lineup:

Monday: The Brinks Robbery, in which nine men made off with $2,775,000 from the Boston headquarters of Brinks Inc. in 1950, was a case that was finally cracked just five days before the statute of limitations ran out. The Zodiac Killer," responsible for five deaths in California and possibly as many as 49 in the 1960s and 1970s, loved to take credit for the deaths and may still be walking the streets.

Tuesday: Hansen, Hawkins and Boggs was the insurance company that finally solved a case in which a doctor helped fake a death. In the Black Dahlia case, the prime suspect in the sensational Hollywood death of Elizabeth Short died in a fire before charges could be filed.

Wednesday: Stella Nickell killed her husband by putting rat poison in his Excedrin. Wanting more money after collecting his insurance benefits, she sued the drug company and put poison in other bottles, causing another death - which led to her arrest. The second story is about William Desmond Taylor, a film director who was shot to death in 1922. Many involved in the case said they knew who did it, but no one was prosecuted.

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Our Opinion
TV gone beserk

NBC's I.R is the most frequently watched television series in the nation. A good, wholesome show, right? Of course – it's a program dealing with somewhat realistic life-like events, and thousands if not millions of viewers nationwide tune in. And how about Friends? That's another great show with even greater ratings. We've got ER, Friends, NYPD Blue, and many many more. So overall, American television is great, right? Well, not exactly.

These days, TV has gone absolutely berserk. There are a great number of television shows aired that are adored by thousands of people, but those shows are degrading and show our "true" American value system.

Let's start with ABC's Who Wants to be a Millionaire? This was the first of several "big money" shows that premiered at the end of last century. To get on this show, thousands of potential guests answer a series of questions, hoping to advance through several preliminary rounds, with the expectation of sitting next to Regis Philbin. Then, the lucky finalist has to answer 15 questions in order to earn $1,000,000.

Now, this is a very entertaining show, but the sad part is that more people tune in to ABC to watch this show than the news! That's sad. It's sad that so many people in this country are so money driven that they would rather see someone win (or lose) a few thousand dollars than know what's happening in the world around them. Not only is that sad, but it's also disgusting.

And what about one of the more current abominations on television? Namely Who Wants to Marry a Multimillionaire? This show's one-time airing took the cake. There were a number of fairly successful, self-confident, attractive young women on stage competing with each other in order to marry an older wealthy man they didn't even know. They had a beauty pageant-like swimsuit contest, they modeled, and also answered a series of questions. Then the winner was chosen by the "lucky" bachelor himself, and the ceremony was held on national television with the added class of a 3-carat diamond, courtesy of the television network of course.

This is one of the most pathetic shows to ever air and the more pathetic thing is that it received some of the highest ratings in television history. Of course the empty marriage without love didn't last very long and the two aren't even speaking to one another, but that's not the point. The point is that our country has sunk so low that in order to get great ratings, television networks will stoop so low as to have an unsuspecting single woman marry a man she doesn't even know... on national television.

And the most recent despicable display of American interest occurred three days ago when a colonoscopy (the viewing of a human colon via a probe inserted into the patient) was aired on television. Not only is the completely disgusting to watch, it shows that we as Americans have no shame and will do anything for money, prestige and attention.

While there are a great deal of television programs that are wholesome and actually educational in many ways, there seems to be an increase in the amount of "smut" we see on the screen these days. But as long as people keep tuning in and the ratings keep soaring, these shows will always exist. Perhaps we as Americans need to recheck our value system if we are to remain respectable and to retain the title of "superpower" we seem to hold so dearly.

Government has only one choice

(U-WIRE) PROVIDENCE, R.I. – As I read the news about the incident at Buell Elementary School in Mt. Morris Township, Mich., where a six-year-old boy shot and killed a fellow classmate over a "school-yard scuffle," I could not begin to find the words to express the confusion that this event, and previous ones like it, have instilled in mind. My first thought was of how I handled problems when I was in first grade. I would resort to name-calling. Simply calling someone "jerk" or "boogerboy" was enough to relieve my anger. Reading about this shooting, I wonder what reason is there for a six-year-old to resort to violence to handle a "school-yard scuffle?" As I continued to read the article on the Internet, however, a quote by the prosecutor of the case suddenly brought a pressing issue to mind that surrounds this case and others like it: "There is a presumption in law that a child ... is not criminally responsible and can't form an intent to kill. Obviously, he has done a very terrible thing today, but legally, he can't be held criminally responsible."

Jason White

This quote is related to a broader issue that revolves around the recent classroom shootings that have plagued our nation during the last three years. The issue is whether or not the idea of gun control is a major factor in handling these classroom shootings.

I have noticed that the discussions that occur after incidents of classroom shootings tend to revolve mostly on the problem of the violent nature of our society. It seems that the majority of people, especially gun-ownership advocates, are calling for a control on the sources of these violent tendencies rather than for a control on the means in which they are carried out. Such sources are seen as television and media, the decay of the quality of our educational system, etc. People are calling for censorship of media and the formation of school programs based on peer mediation as possible control devices. Yet I am very upset that usually, the idea of tightening control on guns or even banning them completely is rarely discussed, if not shunned completely. This is a huge mistake indeed, as I will explain shortly.

As the prosecutor said, this child cannot be held criminally responsible, and there is a rational reason for this. The same reason can probably be applied to other children who have resorted to classroom shootings to express their aggression. It is because children are not rational adults. This is a very important distinction to make. Children are unstable to various degrees during their development into rational adults. They can have uncontrollable feelings of extreme anger or over-joyous states of happiness, because they are still learning to rationally handle their emotions. In our nation of 260 million people, with our different ethnic, religious, and ideological beliefs, we are bound to have a plethora of diverse influences over the development of our children. With so many children bound to be different from one another, some will experience such extreme feelings of aggression that they may feel it necessary to resort to violence as an outlet. This is where the violent nature of our society comes in to play. It is not the only influence that drives a child to commit such a serious tragedy, but one of the many influences that may lead a child to commit such an act. Starting a campaign solely against the violent nature of our society not only does very little to help the situation, it is also against the principles that our country was founded on.

By the last statement, I mean that the government's right to dictate how people behave is severely limited and for good reason. Although it would prove efficient and beneficial if all of society could cooperate on an established set of detailed, universal ethics, the government's capacity in enforcing such ethics is limited. In a democracy, the government is subject to the beliefs and ideas of its people, not the other way around. If it were otherwise, the government would be reduced to a totalitarian state. However, to prevent anarchy, the government is limited to enforcing general rules that can be applied to all people. This is the function of the Constitution: to provide general rules of conduct that do not infringe on the rational freedoms that a democracy promises its citizens. To expect the government to control the violent nature of our society is to ask it to go beyond its limits of controlling public behavior. The government can only control specific aspects that clearly violate the welfare of the country (i.e., murder, robbery, pollution, etc.). The violent nature of our society is so vague and abstract and due to so many different behavioral variables, that it goes beyond the responsibility of the government.

Yet a democracy, though it may not have the full right to dictate behavior, still has the obligation to ensure the well-being and safety of its citizens. When considering these shootings, since the government cannot conduct its obligation by attacking the causes of the problem, the only viable solution is attacking the means of the problem.

This is where the issue of gun control becomes a major factor in finding solutions to this serious problem. Calling for a complete ban on the ownership of guns is a good solution, if not the only rational one, in response to these crimes. Our government prohibits the use of certain drugs and strictly controls the use of alcohol and tobacco in order to protect the welfare of society. Prohibiting the ownership of guns falls under the same argument. The argument that people have the right to "bear arms" or to "shoot guns for fun" is just as invalid, in the context of our laws, as the argument that people have the right to "get high" or "smoke crack for fun."

Even if the Constitution protects the so-called "right" to own guns, people forget that a democracy is designed to improve on itself and dissolve the laws that may become anachronistic. The Second Amendment to the Constitution can and should be abolished under the context that guns are too much of a threat to the general welfare of our society to be a personal freedom for all to enjoy. There are those who disagree with me on this point, yet I cite one fact in support of my argument: America is the only highly developed nation in the world that allows its citizens to own handguns and rifles, and while deaths by fatal shootings in other developed countries are usually no more than a 10-70 a year, such deaths total about 10,000 a year in our country. I cannot think of any other evidence that is more blatant in proving that banning guns is a major deterrent to crime.

Basically what I have argued is that the only controllable factor in these schoolyard shootings is the availability of armaments to those who are too irrational or unstable emotionally to handle them, i.e. children. Under its obligation of preserving the welfare of our society, the government must ban the ownership of guns.

Jason White is a columnist at Brown University's Brown Daily Herald.

Write for Ed/Op!

Organized chaos daily

Everyone has his or her own little peculiarities in life, whether they can't concentrate on certain things for certain amounts of time or they can't take too many orders in a row, whatever it is, everyone has a problem. My problem is that I have what they (the doctors) like to call Obsessive Compulsive Disorder. It's not bad to have it just means that I am a bit impulsive in life.

OCD is characterized by compulsive thoughts and/or behavior that interfere with normal life. A good example of this is when I get a paycheck from work. I put it into the bank and then spend it like it grew on a tree. The compulsions one has are repetitive and ritualized, kind of like Jack Nicholson's character in As Good As It Gets. His character would not step on any cracks in the sidewalk, would lock his doors exactly five times, and have a certain ritual when it came to eating.

Wes Wrightson

I don't do any of this, as I don't have a severe case of OCD, but I do notice some things that are pretty weird. One example is when I am finished a meal here at school in the dining hall. I put napkins over the rest of the uneaten stuff in order not to look at it. I can't for the life of me tell you why I do this, I just do; it's become a ritual. Usually obsessive and compulsive behaviors can occupy many hours of a person's day, but they don't occupy a lot of mine.

My family and I figured out that I had this by looking at the stupid and thoughtless things that I have done in the past. Usually I would be doing really well in life (meaning school, sports, and social life) and then BOOM! – something bad would happen to me to bring me all the way down to the bottom of the barrel. My analogy is that it's kind of like a sine curve. I would be doing well at the top of the curve and then, all-of-a-sudden, something bad would happen and I would be at the bottom. That is one sign that someone has slight OCD tendencies.

I know that I don't have both obsessive and compulsive thoughts, and that is rare, I guess. In some ways it is similar to ADD. For example, people with OCD are often characterized by anxiety, and tend to not sit still for long periods of time. As my friends can attest, I never sit still; I always have to be doing something active.

I looked up OCD on the Internet and found out some information on the topic. At least 80% of all OCD sufferers have both obsessive and compulsive thoughts, and over five million people have this disorder. It affects men, women, children – just about anyone can be born with it. Did you know that even the Big Guy who fooled around with Monica Lewinsky has this tendency?

What causes it and how can it be treated? Certain stressful events like the death of someone that is close to you can trigger the onset of OCD, but not all kinds of stress trigger the onset. The ways in which people can be treated include taking drugs and behavior therapy. For example, I take a pill everyday that causes me to think about my actions more than I used to in the past. It is the most effective drug to combat OCD and is called something like a seratonin re-uptake inhibitor. I don't know what that does or how it works, but It makes me think things out more clearly.

I know that it takes some balls to admit that I have this, but I hope this column makes someone else out there feel a bit better and lets the rest of you know that it's not like I had any choice in the matter. I was born with it. I'm not ashamed to admit that I have this stupid disease; it's just another thing that I have to deal with in my crazy life, and I deal with it by taking medication. As I said before, everyone has their own little problems in life, and no one's perfect. If you think that you are perfect, you're wrong. It took a lot of thinking and soul-searching to be able to admit to myself that I had a problem, but I finally have and it feels great. I realized the reason why I made some bad choices in my life and made some mistakes: it was all out of my control.

Wes Wrightson is a Collegian columnist.

The beginning of the end

I'm an old fart. I'm yesterday's news. I'm the past. I've depleted my mojo. That's how I feel because I'm graduating in May. How does it make me feel to have spent four years reorganizing my brain into something that should belong to a college graduate? Old and tired.

The four-year sitcom entitled Czernich: The UMass Years is wrapping up production soon and some of the cast members will never be working with me on a regular basis again. They'll be off making feature movies and pretzel commercials. That's truly depressing. So if this is my last semester, why not make the most of it?

I got to do things I've never done during my long college career. Things that I've always wanted to do. I've never stayed over at the colleges that my friends from high school attend. The invitations have always been there, but I've never taken them up on their offers to visit. I've always heard stories of how fun it is to visit other colleges. The food, the parties and singing "Hey Jude" at 2:00 a.m. with a dorm room packed full of people backing you up. Okay, that's definitely on my list.

Next on my list is to finally meet my English advisor. I know I have one and I even know her name, but I've never actually met her except for that one time when I just missed her in Antarctica (If I had just been two minutes earlier I would have met her face to face.). Instead I was just in time to see her helicopter take off in to the frigid Antarctic winds. As the laughing penguins surrounded me their leader handed me a note. It read:

Dr. Czernich,

You have missed me again! I still hold the top-secret formula for banana flavored Cool Whip! It's mine! All mine! So there. Ha Ha Ha!
Good luck on your finals.

Professor Lydia Smith

(Someday I'll catch up with her and steal that formula which was rightfully mine to begin with!)

I also want to visit a nightclub. I'm serious. All my years here at UMass and I've never visited a nightclub. Trouble is, which nightclub is right for me? Can I find one that plays classic rock? Maybe I should replace that idea with hitting the bars in downtown Amherst instead. After all, isn't a bar just a nightclub without the dancing? If that's the case, then I'd prefer going to the bars. Not only that, but bars are more likely to have beer nuts.

Sitting at a table on the concourse is also something I haven't done. All these years I've always had admiration for the various clubs, businesses, and other organizations that are out there recruiting people, promoting events or selling things. However, I would not sit at a concourse table for some campus-based organization. Instead I'd choose one that I would find closer to my heart. It would be a booth representing pet adoption. I'd even bring two animal friends with me. They would be a Shiz Tzu named Taylor and a Chihuahua named Rocky.

Passerby: Oh they're so cute...
Jason: Yes. I'm so proud of them both.
Passerby: They're both yours?
Jason: Well not really...They're my parents.
Passerby: Uh...heh heh.
Jason: Do you have a problem with that?
Passerby: Okay. I just meant...
Jason: No! I don't want to hear it! I'm sick of you people who think that pets are unfit parents!
Passerby: Dude, Chill...
Jason: No you chill out! Taylor and Rocky have been the best adoptive parents that a blond haired boy from Northern Antarctica could ever have! They are fine role models! They have taught me that drinking from the toilet bowl is just as acceptable as drinking from the hose...
Passerby: Okay, okay.
Jason: Sure there was that one awkward moment that I walked in on them when they were sniffing each others' butts, but they sat me down and explained what they were doing.
Passerby: No! Please shut up! Please!
Jason: They always put a roof over my head and Alpo on the table...

Jason Czernich

There are more things I could do to make this last semester the most fun one yet such as:

When a member of one of the various religious cults on campus tries to convince me to join, I could try to recruit him or her to join the cult of Big Eyed People With Toothy Grins Who Sleep All Day Every Sunday.

Call the UMass Student directory, tell them I'm a supervisor, and ask them to call me back. When they do I will not pick up until the phone has rung fifty times.

Take control of the little island that is near the south end of the Campus Pond for a week. If anybody tries to cross the bridges that connect the island to the rest of the campus in that time period, my soldiers will ask to see a birth certificate. If they do produce one we will then ask them, "Anything to declare?" and then send them on their way after being strip-searched.

Yes it's going to be a great semester...
Jason Czernich is a Collegian columnist.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 •
http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Sam Wilkinson Managing Editor Shawn Blinitch Business Manager
Ben Alamed Web Developer Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager
Sage Brousseau Co-Advertising Production Manager Jake Lilien Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pashkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jake Lilien Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jeanie Gorlovsky Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Multicultural Affairs Editor
Mary Grein News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Adam White Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor
Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Christine Connare Women's Issues Editor
Marc Menschel Finance Manager
Joshua Szymanski Distribution Manager
Katie Beith Promotions Manager
Catherine Turner International Affairs Editor
Samantha Poulter Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Chris Brennan Assistant Finance Manager
Eric Faber Assistant Advertising Manager
Amy Garganta Assistant Business Manager

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1907, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Please send us your letters to the editor. Please bring down a copy of your letter with your name, address and phone number written on it. If possible, please bring it down on disk saved as a Word file or an RTF file. Letters should be no more than 400 words and address a relevant concern. If you are criticizing the Collegian, include the name of the article, column or editorial, and the date that it ran. We will try to print as many submissions as possible, but we do not always have availabl

Multicultural Affairs

Student association helps to strengthen Asian identity on campus

By Virginia Avedisian
Collegian Staff

When students think about how many international groups there are on campus, many do not realize just how diverse this campus really is. The Asian American Students Association (AASA) is one of the student organizations that promotes and represents the diversity of this University.

The AASA was established in 1975 with a mission to serve the needs and interests of Asian and Asian American students, while providing them a supportive atmosphere here at the UMass.

The goals of this organization include advocating unity among Asians and Asian Americans, as well as promoting the voices, views and experiences of Asian and Asian American students. It strives to provide Asian and Asian American students with a solid foundation through educational, social and political means. The AASA also promotes the understanding and awareness of the Asian and Asian American community and its surrounding communities.

It sponsors plans and participates in many social activities including sports tournaments, dances, barbecues, cultural events and movie and casino nights.

Some educational activities that the AASA sponsors are Asian Night, the Asian American Special Interest Residential Program (SIRP), and AASA Scholarships.

Asian Night is an annual celebration of the cultural richness of Asia and Asia America. It is an evening of expression, education and reflection of the people of their culture and where they stand as Asians in America today.

The Asian American Special Interest Residential Program (SIRP) was constructed by Asian American activists to give fellow students of Asian descent a living and learning environment favorable to all areas of growth. The SIRP strives to end racism and discrimination and to support the empowerment of Asian and Asian American students at the University. SIRP is located in Dwight Residence Hall and provides its residents with a sense of community.

AASA Scholarships are available to any Asian or Asian American undergraduate currently enrolled at UMass. Further details are available at the AASA office.

Aside from all of the educational activities that the AASA provides, it also offers a variety of political activities such as Asian American Studies, RealizAsian and The East Coast Asian Student Union (ECASU) Conference.

Asian American Studies consists of the interdisciplinary study of the historical and contemporary experiences of people of Asian descent in the United States. Although Asian and Asian American students are the largest student group of color at UMass, the University's curriculum does not include courses that study the history of Asians in the United States. AASA supports the struggle to gain an inclusive curriculum at UMass.

RealizAsian is the journal of AASA at UMass. It is published three times during the academic year and is the only form of media completely dedicated to the Asian American voice on campus. The purpose of the journal is to keep students informed and connected to Asian and Asian American issues. Submissions are always welcome.

The ECASU Conference is an annual seminar hosted by rotating colleges and universities to promote the potential that Asians and Asian Americans have as a whole and to overcome the sense of invisibility and under-representation they experience in the United States. Every year, AASA sponsors a group of students to be UMass representatives to address the issues of the Asian and Asian American communities.

Anyone interested in getting involved with the AASA can sign up at any meeting at no cost. Important issues and upcoming events are discussed at the general meetings. For more information, students can stop by the AASA office located in Room 411 in the Student Union.

Melting pot now a cluster culture

By Stuart Silverstein
Los Angeles Times

A new "demographic divide" has started to profoundly influence American economic and political life as immigrants and their families cluster ever more unevenly across the country, a new report contends.

The report, being released Thursday by the Santa Monica, Calif.-based Milken Institute, points to growing differences between long-time immigrant magnets such as Southern California and less diverse heartland communities.

Demographer William H. Frey and economist Ross C. DeVol, the study's co-authors, challenge the prevailing wisdom among scholars that California's changing ethnic makeup is beginning to be mirrored in a significant way in middle America.

That view, and a public impression that the Midwest and other regions are becoming more ethnically diverse, greatly overstates the actual changes that are taking place, the authors contend.

If their projections prove accurate, and they were immediately challenged by other experts, it could affect everything from regional social tensions to the messages delivered by marketers and politicians.

As Frey, a prominent demographer, put it in an interview: "I didn't hear George W. Bush speaking Spanish in Georgia."

The co-authors write that melting-pot regions including California, Texas, southern Florida, the Eastern seaboard and Chicago "will become increasingly younger, multiethnic and culturally vibrant."

By contrast, the report says, so-called heartland regions will become older and more staid while remaining far less ethnically diverse.

These patterns of settlement among immigrants and U.S.-born Latinos and Asians are contributing to "regional demographic divisions that will be just as important as old distinctions such as city versus suburb or rural versus urban," the study says.

DeVol said in an interview that regions drawing large numbers of immigrants could be long-term economic winners. "A new infusion of people who want to get ahead in life, and who instill that in their children, behooves those areas," he said.

But the report's "demographic divide" finding was disputed by some immigration specialists. They contend that the researchers' methodology misses a substantial recent dispersion of immigrants around the country.

Females fight for liberation

By Dexter Filkins
Los Angeles Times

ARASADITHIVU, Sri Lanka - In a land where women are prized for their quiet passivity, one of the world's most ruthless guerrilla groups is riding toward victory on the strength of its female fighters.

The women of the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam, rebels waging a war for an independent homeland in this island nation, are emerging as the movement's most important weapon after thousands of men have died in battle.

With vials of cyanide hanging from their necks, women Tigers are choosing their way into government bunkers and police stations. They are hacking to death men, women and babies. Women Tigers are wrapping their bodies with explosives and killing dozens in suicide attacks. As the men fall, the women fighters are stepping into the upper ranks of a guerrilla army once reserved exclusively for men.

Seetha, a 22-year-old leader of 1,500 women fighters, stands just over 5 feet tall, wears her hair neatly trimmed and says she might one day like to have a family. Dressed in camouflage fatigues and toting a machine gun, she talks with the cool confidence of a battle-hardened commander.

"It's difficult to say how many people I've killed," said Seetha, who gave up her real name when she became a Tiger. "Sometimes after a battle, there might be 50 or 75 bodies lying around. It's hard to say how many of them were mine."

Seetha is one of thousands of Sri Lankan women who have joined the Tigers, changing not only the face of the notorious rebel army but also challenging long-held views of their gender in this traditional society.

The Tigers' ranks were filled only with men in 1983, when the predominantly Hindu Tamil rebels launched their struggle against Sri Lanka's Buddhist majority Sinhalese government. Now, after 17 years of fighting and with more than 55,000 Sri Lankans killed, women make up a third of the fighting force, which some experts number at as many as 15,000 fighters.

Stripped of their old identities, the women are proving just as ruthless as the men: In September, a squad of mostly women Tigers armed with swords and knives entered the Sinhalese village of Bonapola and butchered 48 civilians. In December, a woman suicide bomber threw herself at President Chandrika Kumaratunga and blew herself up, blinding the Sri Lankan leader in one eye. A couple weeks later, another woman exploded herself outside the prime minister's house, killing 10 other people.

Anton Raja, a Tiger spokesman, said the use of women in war is part of a larger vision of the guerrilla leadership to liberate Tamil women from the bonds of tradition.

"In the old society, women were cultured and nice. We loved them, but they had no major role outside of the kitchen," Raja said. "We went around to the women and told them: You are the equal of men, you have the same rights, you can join us in the struggle."

The result, according to Raja: "Hundreds and hundreds of women signed up to fight."

The Tigers have a reputation for being one of the world's most sophisticated and coldblooded guerrilla armies. In a region with few telephone lines and fewer cars, dictatorial leader Velupillai Prabhakaran has created a present-day Sparta, where nearly every family contributes to the war effort. His small force of guerrillas has seized the Tamil heartland on the northern and eastern fringes of the island and fought an army of more than 100,000 to a standstill.

How to become cultured abroad

Students Encouraged to Study Abroad

Thinking of studying abroad? There's more to it than just a plane ticket, say those in the International Programs Office (IPO) here at UMass.

Already ranked seventh nationally among public research Universities in a recent study, and eighth in the list of top public land grant Universities, the University Study Abroad Programs have recently been expanding to include more opportunities for exposure to multicultural diversity—both in other countries and in the U.S.

Though the most popular locations to study abroad from UMass remain English-speaking countries such as the United Kingdom, Ireland and Australia, the IPO is currently encouraging students to study in less familiar territory, especially in South America and Africa. Studying in these locations, the office believes, has advantages over study in Western Europe, which often seems more familiar to students.

The further a student travels from his or her 'home base'—linguistically and culturally speaking, they say, the better perspective they will have on their own lifestyle in this country.

"I think leaving your home culture is profound no matter where you go," says Carol Lebold, coordinator of the African exchange here at UMass. "The biggest gift [of study in a foreign culture] is to know something different about yourself and your own cultural context." Better understanding of such issues as class and race can be gained by seeing them demonstrated in another cultural context, they say.

Another advantage of study abroad, according to Lebold, is the opportunity to better understand cultures that seem strange to American students, and, as Lebold put it, "to get beyond stereotypes of what is 'different.'"

UMass student Johari Curtis, who recently completed study abroad in Chile, says she found many advantages to studying in a country that is considered 'third world.' Curtis says she chose Chile as a place to study because of its geographic variation and for its safety level compared with other South American locations.

She points out that speaking Spanish, which is the language of Chile, provided her with "a constant learning experience," and that much of a cultural identity can be conveyed through language. One important thing she says she learned in Chile is that "not all Spanish is the same"—the Castilian Spanish taught in University courses is very different from the Spanish spoken in Chile. Ultimately, she says, "You [also] learn more about your native language by speaking another language."

Curtis says she went to into her time in Chile concerned about coming across as "a bratty American," but quickly gained a new understanding, she says, "of being more fortunate."

"I learned a lot about politics," she says, referring to the Pinochle case, currently hot news in the Chilean government. A military coup several years ago, which saw the assassination of Chile's former socialist President, put Chile's current President Pinochle in power. Since then, according to Curtis, people who spoke out against his regime have been mysteriously disappearing. Such practices have earned the Pinochle administration condemnation from western governments. According to Curtis, though there is an "underclass" of people who protest the new government, the middle class family she stayed with "love what [Pinochle] did." Still, it was troubling to her and her fellow American students that "some people are still afraid to speak out against him, and there are still a lot of people missing."

STAFF PHOTO / COLLEGIAN

The Josephine White Eagle Cultural Center, located in the basement of Chadbourne, provides detailed list of up and coming Native American events in the area.

She admits that she and her fellow American students "stirred up controversy by asking a lot of political questions." Ultimately, she says, she gained a new appreciation of what it means to have freedom of speech.

The problem of culture shock, like that experienced at times by Curtis, is common when students study abroad. That's where IPO faculty member Laurel Foster Moore steps in. She is the instructor for several courses that educate students about the cultures they will be visiting in preparation for their trip. Though these classes are offered as an optional addition to a general orientation through IPO students studying abroad are strongly encouraged to take them. Foster-Moore says that her courses give students a more thorough introduction to "typical difficulties" they will experience in other countries. From proper ways of greeting people to different views on human rights, and, as she puts it, "different concepts of the individual within a society" found abroad. "An emphasis on being direct and honest and certain aspects of body language typical in mainstream American culture may not be acceptable in foreign cultures[," says Foster-Moore. A typically American greeting such as a firm handshake or a pat on the shoulder "may in fact cause great consternation in another cultural context."

Though studying abroad can be an important learning experience, Foster-Moore, Lebold and others emphasize that valuable multicultural learning can take place without venturing beyond home borders. "Students need to research and know something about their own country," says Foster-Moore. Lebold cites awareness of the concept of "multiple layers of culture" as essential to cross-cultural understanding in any area. Lamet says she is especially proud of the recent addition of the Global Education requirement of students majoring in the Social-Behavioral Sciences.

About Multicultural Affairs

By Mariele Scherzinger
Collegian Staff

Hi. The Multicultural Affairs page has a new editor – me, Mariele. I am an exchange student at UMass for the current academic year. The exchange program with which I am here is between the various UMass campuses and those of the federal state of Baden-Wurttemberg, in Germany. Each year the programs sends about a hundred students back and forth. Having a foreign cultural background, I am most interested in the national and international flavor of academic life on this campus.

We, the Collegian Staff, hope to cover aspects of academic, social and recreational activities in this field which often go with little public notice. This includes organizations and clubs, institutions, concerts and performances, fundraising and scholarships, awards, and feature articles on students and staff. It is the purpose of this page to accentuate the cultural diversity on a campus as large as this one.

If you are interested in the Multicultural Affairs page, perhaps concerning your own contribution to it, contact me at 545-1762 (Collegian) or mariele@ipo.umass.edu.

German student learns the ups and downs of American higher education

By Mariele Scherzinger
Collegian Staff

The most frequent question I've been asked about my status as a foreign exchange student is how I like it here in the USA. And I usually say that I like it, thank you for asking. A country's citizens always like to hear pleasing things about it. Rarely anyone asks about culture shock, or how long it takes to overcome it. Although in all of Europe you will find that American pop culture is dominant in all areas of the entertainment industry, it is a different thing to see it in the movies and to live it. Not only that, an exchange student is transported into a completely different location with a different language. You also find yourself in an environment where attitudes and education differ considerably.

Generally, American students finish high school at 18 years old and start college right away. By the time they have their bachelor's degree they are 22 and about to start working full-time. In the country where I am from, people go through 13 years of high school and may be 20 years old when they graduate. They may not necessarily start higher education right away. The way the university system works is that you need a certain number of attendance certificates. When you have them, let's say after two years, you do your intermediate exam. The exam itself does not mean anything, it does not give you any title, but it automatically transports you from undergrad to graduate level. Then you continue to collect certificates, which usually takes between two and four years. You are usually in your mid- or late 20s when you get your university degree.

It is a highly liberal system that gives a free hand in deciding how many and which classes to take a semester. You don't usually register, you just show up. Every university and every department has different policies on how to handle this, but generally, it is extremely liberal. You get a graded attendance certificate for your class if you hand in a term paper. There usually are no mid-term papers or essays. The term paper is due at least four weeks after the end of the semester. Unless you put pressure on yourself to write it, no one else will, since you don't have to write a paper at all.

Some people may study only part time and be enrolled as students for six years or more. But they can be, because up to this moment, higher education in Germany is free. (There is a lot of political dispute over this, and it may not stay free much longer.)

German universities are financed through tax money. Since you don't pay for your education it is available for a much higher percentage of people.

However, a public institution would by no means invest in certain things I found here at UMass. Lounge rooms with televisions. A large number of computer labs. Pinball machines. UMass students would probably rate the equipment of a German university to be poorer than an American community college.

Most universities in Europe are century-old institutions, and are situated right downtown. Commercial institutions such as coffee shops, stationary shops, barbershops or others may be found nearby, but they would not be university-run. There is university-run housing, but nowhere near campus, and only a small percentage of students live there. One thing that makes American campus life significant is its social life, the dorm culture. It practically does not exist in Germany, and you will have to find social activities elsewhere. The American concept of sororities and fraternities does not exist, either. No frat parties on the weekend.

German students start their university studies later than Americans, and they finish them later. However, you find more maturity in them. I had a difficult time sitting in class with American college freshmen. They appeared so much more immature than German 18-year-olds. In Germany, drinking is legal from 16 years on, but often enough the laws on that are not stressed, so people start drinking even earlier than that. By the point they reach 18, save 21, the original thrill has long declined. Partying and drinking is highly common, but at the point when you start higher education, at 19 or 20, it is nothing special any more. American kids really get started at that point though.

I found it very hard to socialize with UMass students. I don't seem to match my peers. When it comes to comparing the two college systems, they both have their advantages and disadvantages. Germany offers a more inexpensive and more liberally handled education, but it has more inconveniences and you are not very likely to obtain a degree until you are at least 25.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENT

CANTONES' PIZZA- for fast delivery to UMass see our menu and coupons at www.cantones.com

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Apply now for best locations. Amherst Center 1,2 and 3 bedroom apartments. Gas heat, hardwood floor. April showings for June and September. Lincoln Real Estate. No fees charged. 253-7879.

Apply now for best locations. 3 bedroom condos. Gas heat, hardwood floors, bright heated basement with study and laundry area. 1/2 mile to campus, on bus route. April showings for June and September. Lincoln Real Estate. No fees charged. 253-7879.

AUTO FOR SALE

1980 Jetta rebuilt engine, new clutch, new brakes. Always starts. Runs like a demon. $600 586-0534.

AUTO FOR SALE

'92 Subaru Loyale wagon 4x4. Clean, runs great, air, power, roofrack. $2500.00 0.b.o. 665-0453.

COMPUTERS

Laptop blowout! Brand new IBM = Toshiba laptops! Now only $890. Don't miss out on this amazing deal. Supply is limited. infinity101@looksmart.com 546-7665.

EMPLOYMENT

COPYWRITER Part-time, student preferred. (413)536-5086 12-7pm.

Make a Difference AMERICORPS.ORG Joining AmeriCorps is a great way to get experience, take on new responsibilities and know the satisfaction of building a community. In exchange for a year of community service in the area sof public safety, education, human needs and the environment, AmeriCorps members receive an education award ($4725), a monthly stipend and health coverage.

EMPLOYMENT

3 Job Opportunities on Nantucket Island, MA beginning May. A.) Office manager with good typing, computer and telephone skills. B.) Office assistant, errand runner, mother's helper, household help. C.) Auction gallary assistant: furniture porter, display, delivery. Salary and housing. Drivers liscence required. (508)228-3942 or send reume: P.O. Box 2607 Nantucket, MA 02548.

Get paid $$ to surf the web cu2freedom.com

Movers: Local moving company is hiring individuals for moving positions. Flexibility and good attitudes are a must. Start at $8.00 per hour. Raise commensurate with performance. Call 584-4746.

Wanted during Spring Break- Student Handyman must have car. Call 413-549-1578

EMPLOYMENT

UAHC Crane Lake and Eisner Camps, Reform Jewish coeducational Camps located in the Berkshires of Massachusetts, seek qualified, dedicated counselors and specialists, including Waterfront, Athletics, Arts. Good salary, r&b included, travel assistance. Crane Lake Camp: Contact Brad Gerstle, 800-227-2660 ILUVCAMP@aol.com; www.cranelake-camp.com. Eisner Camp: Contact Louis Bordman, 212-650-4130 EISNERGUY@aol.com; www.eisner-camp.org

Connect to the future. International company seeks PC users. $25-75k potential. 1-888-827-9733 www.roadforsuccess.com

LOST & FOUND

Found on campus: Woman's clock. Call 546-7364 to identify.

MISCELLANEOUS

Get paid to lose weight and inches. All natural, doctor reccommended. 1-800-397-7715.

Score big, score often with mybytes.com. Register today and get a free CD of cool music and much more.

ROOM FOR RENT

Room in nice house. Bus route, washer, dryer. $350+ 548-7039.

ROOM WANTED

21/m looking for a place to stay. Now til 6/1. Call Nik @ 549-3826.

SERVICES

Have you been ripped off by a retailer? Contact the Student Legal services Office regarding your rights as a consumer. 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

STEREO EQUIPMENT

Boston Acoustic sub/sat series. Six 8" speakers with two 16" subwoofers. Also central channel speaker. $800 value for $300. Like brand new. Need money 586-0534.

TRAVEL

Study Spanish. Internships in Guatemala. College Credit. www.casaxelaju.com (512)416-6991.

#1 Panama City Vacations! Party Beachfront @ The Boardwalk, Summit Condo's, and Mark II. 1-800-234-7007. www.endlesssummertours.com

#1 Spring break Vacations! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas & Florida! Book it now! All major credit cards accepted! 1-800-234-7007. www.endlesssummertours.com

COMING SOON!
Need an apartment?
Leasing an apartment?
Check out the Collegian Apartment Guide!
Your ad could be here

Don't wait any longer!! Call us NOW at 545-3500 to get your ad put in The Collegian Classifieds!!

The Collegian Staff wishes everyone a fun and safe Spring Break....Whatever you may be doing!!

Five College Community Calendar

FRIDAY, MAR. 10

Prayer – The Muslim Student Association presents Jummaa Prayer from noon to 2 p.m. in the Campus Center. Check the listing in the elevators for the room number.

NOTICES

Community – Spring 2000 final examination schedules will be available beginning March 9. Copies will be delivered to students in residence halls, and will be available to off-campus students in the registrar's office. The schedule will be available on the Web beginning March 1.

Community – Mass Appeal, the newest co-ed a cappella group at UMass, is looking for students to arrange music. Email Erica at massappeal@mailcity.com for more information.

Help – From Feb. 15-April 15 on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays from 5-8 p.m. student volunteers from the School of Management will assist non-resident aliens with the preparation of their Federal and State income tax returns. Call 545-5660 for more information.

Scholarships – The STEMTEC/NSF Teaching scholars program is offering scholarships to students who are interested in exploring a career in K-12 math or science teaching. Students do not need to be enrolled in a certificate program to apply. Applications are due by April 1. Contact Johanna at 545-0626 for more information.

Support – A grief support group is available to all students who have experienced the death of someone they love. The groups are free, small and confidential, and meet on Wednesday and Thursday evenings. Telephone pre-screening is required for enrollment. Call 577-5316 if interested.

Support – AL-ANON and ALA-TEEN are offering local meetings for those affected by someone else's drinking problem. Call 253-5261 for meeting times and locations.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

UMASS
St. Patty's Day
Tee's
$16.99
Only available at University Store
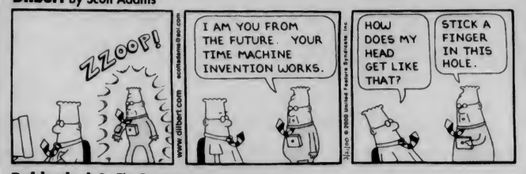
M-Th 8:30-6
Fri 8:30-5 & Sat 11-4

'Tis A Fine Way To Wish Someone A Happy St. Patrick's Day!



HSCN 4 Hosting Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	21	Gavel to Gavel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	22	NBC/22 Springfield
4	CBS/4 Boston	23	Cartoon Network
5	ABC/5 Boston	24	CNN
6	PBS/57 Springfield	25	CNN Fn
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	26	CNN Si
8	UPN/20 Hartford	27	TBS
9	Weather Channel	28	BET
10	NBC/30 New Britain	29	College TV Network
11	Fox/61 Hartford	30	Univision
12	PBS/24 Hartford	31	Comedy Central
13	WOCH & HSCN	32	Cartoon Network
14	International	33	TV Land
15	UMass Amodemic TV	34	C-Span
16	WB/New Haven	35	ZDTV (Tentative)
17	Syndicate	36	Bloomberg Financial Network
18	The Learning Channel	37	History Channel
19	UVC-TV19	38	HSCN Programming
20	ABC/40 Springfield

FRIDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MARCH 10, 2000

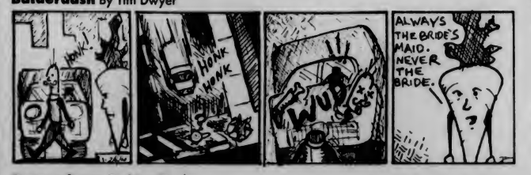
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Four Tops in Concert (In Stereo)			Roy Orbison Anthology (In Stereo)			Wash. Week	Well St. Week
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Kids-Dendest	Cosby	Now and Again	"Boy Wonder"	Neah Bridges "Line of Sight"		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Kids-Dendest	Cosby	Now and Again	"Boy Wonder"	Neah Bridges "Line of Sight"		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Boy-World	Boy-World	Sabrina-Witch	Hughleys	20/20		News	Nightline
WLVI	7	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends	Nanny	Jamie Foxx	Jamie Foxx	Steve Harvey	For Your Love	News		Friends	Nanny
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Providence "Tying the Not"		Soap Opera Digest Awards (In Stereo Live)				News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Blind Date	Real TV	"Showdown in Magic Town" (2000, Action) Charlie O'Connell		News		Real TV (R)		Blind Date	Caroline
WWJY	10	News	NBC News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Providence "Tying the Not"		Soap Opera Digest Awards (In Stereo Live)				News	Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Simpsons	Fresier	Seinfeld	Friends	World's Wildest Police Videos		Greed: The Series (In Stereo)		News		Friends	Fresier
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Providence "Tying the Not"		Soap Opera Digest Awards (In Stereo Live)				News	Tonight Show
WGBY	6	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Well St. Week	Saluta to British Comedy on American Public TV				Cherrie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Fresier	Boy-World	Boy-World	Sabrina-Witch	Hughleys	20/20		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld		NHL Hockey	Boston Bruins at Carolina Hurricanes. (Live)				Fresier	Mad Abt. You	Judge Mathis
WTBS	72	Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	"Soldier Act" (1992, Comedy) Whoopi Goldberg, Maggie Smith,						"Honeymoon in Vegas" (1992) James Caan
A&E	51	L.A. Law (Summy Dobrish)		Law & Order "Pride and Joy"		Biography: Julius Caesar			L.A. Detectives		Poirot	Law & Order	Biography
CNN	23	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire	World Today			Larry King Live		Newsstand	Sports	Moneyline (R)
COM	36	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	"Ferris Bueller's Day Off" (1986, Comedy) Matthew Broderick, Mia Sara,						"Trapped in Paradise" (1994) Nicolas Cage,
DISC	52	Your New House (R)		Wild Discovery Welsh		On the Inside "Bridges" (R)		News			Discover Mag.	Storm Warning (R)	On the Inside "Bridges" (R)
ESPN	49	Basketball	Sportscenter	College Basketball: Big East Tournament Semifinal – Teams TBA				College Basketball: Big East Tournament Semifinal – Teams to Be Announced.					Sportscenter
LIFE	50	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Chicago Hope "Wag the Doc"		"A Face to Die For" (1996, Drama) Yasmine Bleeth, James Wilder,				Once and Again (In Stereo)
MTV	53	MTV Jams	Best Suite	True Life (R)	News	TRL Wenne	TRL (R) (In Stereo)			ACOG At MTV	Dana	Fanatic	N Sync	Henson-MTV
NICK	55	All That	Caitlog	U Pick Nicktoons (In Stereo)					Jeffersons	All in Family	Jeffersons	All in Family	Jeffersons	All in Family
SCIFI	65	Sliders (In Stereo)		Brimstone (In Stereo)		Good vs. Evil (In Stereo)		Good vs. Evil "Nurse Evil"		Good vs. Evil (In Stereo)		Good vs. Evil (R) (In Stereo)
TLC	28	Home Again	Home Again	Houston – Emergency		NYPD Scuba		Alien Secrets: Area 51 (R)		Aliens Invade Hollywood (R)		NYPD Scuba (R)
TNT	54	In the Heat of the Night		ER "Double Blind" (In Stereo)		"Top Gun" (1986, Drama) Tom Cruise, Kelly McGillis,						"Flight of Black Angel" (1991) Peter Strauss,
USA	59	Baywatch "Scorcher"		JAG "War Stories"		Walker, Texas Ranger		"Casino" (1995, Drama) Robert De Niro, Sharon Stone, (In Stereo)
HBO	93	"Cousins" (1989, Comedy-Drama) Ted Danson, PG-13				"Judgment Night" (1993, Drama) Emilio Estevez, R						"Blowback" (1999) Mario Van Peebles, NR	Dennis Miller
MAX	95	(5:45) "The Xanax Kid" (1994, Drama) Ralph Macchio, PG				"Sometimes They Come Back ... For More" (1998)		"You've Got Mail" (1998, Comedy) Tom Hanks, PG					Passion Cove
SHOW	96	"Madonna" (1996) Frances McDormand. (In Stereo) PG				"Star Trek: Insurrection" (1998) Patrick Stewart, PG						Stargate SG-1 "Nemesis"	Outer Limits "Simon Says"



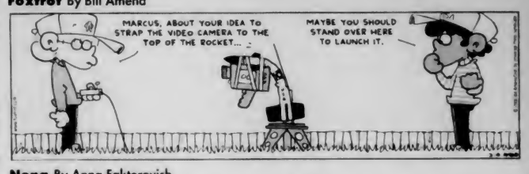
Dilbert By Scott Adams

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Baldердash By Tim Dwyer

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau



Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

Nena By Anna Faktorovich

Horoscopes

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – Be ready to face a crisis today – though it may not actually materialize. Still, it is always better to be safe than sorry – especially today.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – Promises may come your way today which are difficult to take at face-value, but it is likely they will all be kept in the long run.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – You are in need of a little boost, and you know just whom to go to before the day is out. That special someone can lift your spirits and inspire you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – You'll find yourself recounting a favorite tale today – again and again. The more you tell it, the more you're likely to learn from it.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – You're not going to be the one to lead the way into something unknown or dangerous. You may, however, find temptation too much and follow willingly.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Even the most trivial development can prove important to you before this day is out. Pay particular attention to the unexpected.

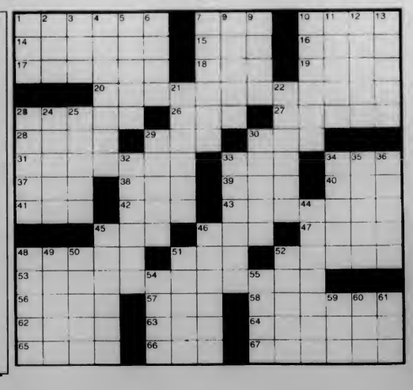
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Someone may be making decisions for you at this time, and it's simply got to stop. Go straight to the source – and stop it ASAP!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – Someone working with you may be in need of a talk – and it'll be up to you to say what must be said without hurting anyone's feelings.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – Something that seems trivial to you may be a matter of official policy and very difficult to change. Be prepared to put up with it!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Surrounding yourself with cries will do nothing for your self-esteem today – so you must know when you are endangering your confidence.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – You may have to work slowly today in order to keep track of your own progress. There isn't anyone else to watch over you at this time.



AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – You're interested in pursuing a higher purpose today. Follow your instincts, and along the way you may actually receive a calling.

Quote of the Day

"The secret? I don't know. I guess you've got to find something you love to do, then do it for the rest of your life."

–Max Fisher, Rushmore

ACROSS
1 Vinegar's acid
7 Concealed
10 Shed feathers
14 Errrapture
15 Blvd.
16 Pierre s girlfriend
17 Go by, as time
18 Deceive
19 Thin coir
20 North American swallow
23 An Osmond
26 — Gets
27 Foggy
28 Computer image
29 Spring month
30 Fishing gear
31 Sgt. Joe Friday's series
33 Singer Rawls
34 Machine part
37 Precious stone
38 Rocky Mountain tribe
39 — up to: confess
40 In the past
41 Type of curve
42 Scoundrel
43 Cousteau's attire
45 Wing
46 Composer Rorem
47 Capri, e.g.
48 Luxurious fur
51 Commuter vehicle
52 Prepare to propose?
53 Bank's concern
56 Screenwriter James
57 Over there
58 Satchel
62 Filberts and pecans
63 Legendary bird
64 More uniform
65 Pop quiz
66 Celebratory poem
67 Composed

DOWN
1 Exist
2 New neighbor
3 Spacewalk- to NASA
4 Giving a gratuity to
5 March "Glamour" e.g.
6 "Moonshadow" actress
7 Comet discoverer
8 Wall climbers
9 Consider
10 European capital
11 Skiaps
12 Quota
13 Very small
21 Covered with armor
22 Sum
23 Gnat's cousin
24 Farmer's concerns
25 Roves
29 Copper e.g.
30 Went by boat
32 Atoms: centers
33 Deepest
34 Make happier
35 Nimble
36 Lodging place
44 — out: chosen
45 First-born
48 Slight variation
49 Meager
49 Debate
50 Sugar sources
51 Family of baby chicks
52 Unprincipled person
54 Beginner
55 Currier's partner
59 Bain or Claire
60 Matching group
61 Before, to a poet

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

© 2000 United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

Only Berkshire and Worcester open today for breakfast, lunch and dinner.

Lunch

Worcester Breakfast Sandwich
Chicken Tetrazzini
Spanikopita
African Vegetable Stew

Dinner

Cheese Calzones
Chicken Nuggets with Dips

Hampshire and Worcester close after dinner for Spring Break.

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Adam Mortignetti
Photo Technician	Caitlyn Winkworth
Copy Editor	Erica Mattison
Production Supervisor	Alan Basque
Production Staff	Elana Premack, Vlad Zakashansky

Hoops keeps driving on

COURTESY UM MEDIA RELATIONS | COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Despite an electrifying 33 points from GW freshman SirValiant Brown, the Colonials were shown the door in yesterday's A-10 quarterfinal by UMass' Chris Kirkland and his 22 points.

By Kathleen Ralls
Collegian Staff

PHILADELPHIA – Last Tuesday, the George Washington Colonials spoiled senior night at home for the Massachusetts men's basketball team squeaking by 87-86.

This time, however, 86 points would be all the Minutemen would need to suppress GW in the Atlantic 10 quarterfinals, 86-68, yesterday at the Spectrum.

With the victory, No. 3 East seed UMass (17-14) advanced to its first semifinal since 1996, when it captured the conference championship. It also marked the end of a chapter for the No. 2 West seed Colonials (15-13), who reached the semis in each of the last five years.

Massachusetts	86
George Washington	68

Tonight at 7 p.m., the Minutemen will match up with top East seed Temple, which steamrolled past Virginia Tech, 71-52, in the other quarterfinal matchup. The Owls have already hosted UMass twice this season, en route to capturing the regular season A-10 crown.

Turn to HOOPS page 2

Minutemen on cloud nine

PHILADELPHIA – They picked a perfect time to heat up. But one can only wonder how the members of the Massachusetts men's basketball team will fare when the surroundings heat up around them.

Perhaps a 66 percent shooting afternoon would come against a raw squad such as George Washington – a young and quick, yet often too erratic squad. With the pace more to the Minutemen's liking they went inside and out, toying with the Colonials' suspect front line that surrendered a conference-worst 81 points per game on average.

Brett Mauser

The Minutemen's eyes now turn to No. 7 Temple, which has other ideas, namely stepping in front of its archrivals' only path into the NCAA Tournament.

UMass scored only when it needed to, backing the ball out and resetting the offense when it could feel the tempo quickening. It was a trap the Maroon and White had fallen into in round one against the Colonials, an 87-86 loss in Amherst. Instead the Minutemen went to Chris Kirkland on the block, who often became the first option offensively. When he was unsuccessful (which wasn't often: 22 points, 6-of-9 FGs) he made it to the charity stripe, where he connected on all 10 of his attempts, or he created opportunities for his teammates. Unfortunately, the senior co-captain didn't have such luck in UMass' pair of previous meetings with the Owls, scoring 10 points total in the two outings.

It was an eerie feeling knowing that the Minutemen could score, really, when they felt like scoring. After a season riddled with inconsistency on the offensive end, everything was suddenly coming together for a unit that has seen the lowest valleys and the highest peaks, though none higher than yesterday's. With Kirkland pounding away inside, the backcourt continued its control of the airwaves: Shannon Crooks and Monty Mack teamed for 38 points, out dueling GW's guard tandem of SirValiant Brown and Bernard Barrow despite the former's game-high 33.

However, their luck might be second-guessed when the ball goes up tonight against one of the nation's stingiest defenses. After hitting all the holes in the games leading up to the battle with Temple, the Minutemen could find the court a shade more congested, despite the numbers on the floor remaining the same.

Forget about repeating the 81 percent second half shooting. The Maroon and White would settle for half that against John Chaney's matchup zone. Surely nothing will come easy, or as easy as it has in the tournament's first two installments. But still, the comfort level has heightened on offense while the defense has been there throughout, holding GW 13 points under its season average.

Even more perplexing is the manner in which the team's offensive efficiency has carried over to the free throw line. After draining 16-of-19 on Wednesday night against Duquesne, UMass canned 27-of-34 attempts yesterday to hold off the feisty Colonials. This follows a season in which the Maroon and White trailed only Rhode Island for worst-at-the-stripe "honors".

Maybe it's a sudden collective focus on the goal at hand. Or perhaps everything will come down from the cloud the Minutemen are currently sitting on when the opponent is Temple and not the conference matadors. After all, rumor has it that what goes up must come down.

The Minutemen hope they never do.

Brett Mauser is a Collegian columnist.

Men's gym eyes home stretch and clash with Temple

By Gary Mendese
Collegian Staff

Some students are going to enjoy Spring Break by catching some rays in Cancun or Jamaica. But one group that could certainly use the vacation, the Massachusetts men's gymnastics team, has bigger fish to fry. The biggest of those fish takes the form of Temple University.

Over the next week, the Minutemen will be having the two most important meets of the season: the final regular season meet against Army and the University of Illinois tonight at 8 p.m., and the ECAC Championships held March 17th-18th at 7 p.m. at the Blake Arena in Springfield. Tonight's meet, while certainly important, won't make a huge difference in the final overall national rankings. But if No. 14 UMass defeats No. 15 Chicago, the Amherst boys will be on their way to a great showing at ECACs.

"[Tonight's] meet is really important," head coach Ron Johnson said. "We're going against UIC who's just above us [nationally]. If we hit, we'll still show that we're one of the top 12 teams in the nation."

But no matter what the final outcome of tonight's meet, the real story will be told at ECACs next Saturday. Because of a new rule enacted last year, the winner of the ECAC Cup automatically takes a spot at the NCAA National Championship on

Turn to GYM page 2

Maroon and White out to shellac Crimson, Big Red

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

The road to the Atlantic 10 women's lacrosse title might be a long one for Massachusetts, but it won't stray far from Amherst. In the conference's second year in existence, the Minutewomen will host the championship tournament on May 6th and 7th.

"This year, we look to contend for the A-10 title," UMass coach Phil Barnes said. "We'd like to bring it to UMass, and what's great is that the A-10 tournament will be right here at Totman Field at the beginning of May."

First, though, UMass must fight through six A-10 games and nine non-conference matchups, the first two being a blend of fall colors during this spring break against the Harvard Crimson and Cornell Big Red tomorrow and on March 15th, respectively. Over the course of 22 previous square-offs, the Crimson and Minutewomen have each emerged victorious 11 times, while Cornell has never faced Massachusetts in competition.

"Harvard's a very good team traditionally, and we've beaten them the past two years," Barnes said. "They definitely want to win this game because they want to put themselves back on the map."

The Minutewomen's cross-state rivals, who fell in Amherst by a 10-3 margin in the first game of the 1999 season, will come to Garber Field bursting the leadership of co-captains Alli Harper and Jeanne Ficociello. Sophomore Heather Hussey is also poised to have a breakout year, possibly beginning on Saturday.

The Crimson will mix with the Maroon and White looking to capitalize on its promise and talent, but if experience becomes the game, the young Harvard squad could conceivably take some lumps. While UMass puts nine seniors and their combined 209 career games worth of experience on the artificial turf of Garber this weekend, Harvard's unit is comprised largely of nine freshman and eight sophomores.

Four of the Minutewomen's starters and their goalkeeper are returning to a defense that ranked No. 8 in the nation last season, allowing 7.40 goals per game. The other nine teams that graced the country's Top Ten also nailed down a slot in the NCAA Tournament, the goal of this year's Massachusetts team.

Senior defender and co-captain Lynne Young, who finished her first three years at UMass with Northeast region All-American honors, will head the group standing between the opposition and the nation's toughest net to get a ball into.

"Last year, we had the No. 1

Turn to LACROSSE page 2

Ice water in their veins

Hockey keeps cool heading into tourney

By Bryan Smith
Collegian Staff

It is judgment time for the Massachusetts men's hockey team, with the quarterfinals of the Hockey East Tournament of the slate this weekend. The Minutemen will take on Boston University in a best-of-three series, with the winner earning a spot to play in the semifinals to be held next weekend at the Fleet Center.

The tourney comes on the heels of a grueling final six games of the season, a stretch in which UMass played No. 4 New Hampshire, No. 6 Boston College and two games with No. 7 Maine and earned a spot in this year's tournament.

By securing the eighth and final playoff spot, the Maroon and White will play yet another top-10 team, the No. 2 Terriers, just because BU is No. 2 in the land and the HE regular season champions does not mean that the Minutemen will be steamrolled. UMass played eight in their three matchups against BU this season, losing each game by just one goal. The Minutemen had opportunities as well as leads in every one of those contests, but in the end could not put the Terriers away.

In the first game of the season series, UMass had a 1-0 edge heading into the third period, but could not stop the BU barrage as the Terriers netted two goals in the final

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

UMass forward Nick Stevens

COURTESY BU MEDIA RELATIONS

BU assistant captain Chris Heron frame to escape the Mullins Center with a 2-1 victory. Maroon and White goalie Markus Helanen made 37 saves in the loss.

The following night at Walter Brown Arena, BU again squeaked out a victory by netting a goal late in overtime to down the Minutemen by a score of 4-3.

The final game of the regular season series with BU once again left the Minutemen with a sour taste in their mouths and the Mullins Center faithful stunned. UMass had a 2-0 lead going into the third period, but a Terrier squad that had not lost in the new millennium (Feb. 4) notched three goals in the final period to leave Amherst, yet again, with a 1-goal win.

"BU has two things: they have a lot of skill and they work really hard. And they get great goaltending from Rick DiPietro, and that's three," head coach Joe Mallen said. "They have all the pieces, and I said 'this team can play.'

"We've obviously shown, the scores have been 2-1, 4-3 in overtime on a bad bounce goal and 3-2 here, that we can skate with them, we can play with them. Our guys are looking forward to this."

History does not side with BU when they have been the No. 1 seed in the tournament. In 1998, the top-seeded Terriers lost the quarterfinal series at Walter Brown to Merrimack College.

Men's tennis forges on without lure of riches

By Farrah Alexander
Collegian Staff

Do you want to be a millionaire?

Each time Andre Agassi, Pete Sampras, and Jim Courier step foot on the court, they ponder over this question. Money is one of the major factors motivating them, in addition to many other frivolous perks that are right at their fingertips. Although most college programs don't offer accommodations that are this posh, many are a microcosm of this lifestyle, spring-boarding athletes to millionaire status. What most colleges do offer is a tease, often in the form of scholarship programs. This is where the University of Massachusetts men's tennis team should be given a lot of credit because it is a non-scholarship program. The squad's achievements can proudly be attributed to pure 100-carat determination and heart. But it was determination and heart that head coach Judy Dixon thought her team could have used more of when it dropped a pair of matches last week against George Washington and Bloomsburg. This Monday, the Minutemen will be facing Barry University who is the favorite, but Dixon is hoping that her team will have an awakening and draw on the confidence and determination that guided it through previous victories.

"Our guys have to re-find the hunger that they had in the fall," Dixon said. They had a lot to prove because last year their fall was less than scintillating. They've lost a little bit of that [hunger] now and I think they've been sort of resting on the fact that they were 5-0. When they get a little bit too confident, they don't work as hard. But I think that this weekend was a wakeup call for us. I think we will be hungrier. The team captains have tried to regroup the team in meetings without me and that's been very good. I expect to see a different team. I expect we'll be competitive in all of the matches."

Following Barry University, the Maroon and White will be taking on Lamar, where former UMass men's tennis coach Tom Lowry coaches.

"We put that match together because he used to work here. Lamar and Barry have scholarship money, and they have a lot of foreign players. But we're always best when we're sort of the hungry tiger team, because we don't have the scholarship money or the foreign players, but what we have a lot of is this sort of greediness that has gotten us far," Dixon said.

The Maroon and White will hopefully ride on this wave of conviction during spring break when they take on Barry on the 15th, and Lamar on the 16th.

The Massachusetts

Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Volume CVI Issue 33 | Monday, March 20, 2000

Alumni honor leaders

COURTESY ALUMNI ASSOCIATION

Juniors Michael Mercuri, Jamie Jee, Lauren O'Malley and Tiffany Proto were selected by the Alumni Association to receive scholarships for outstanding leadership and community service.

By Alicia Upano
Collegian Correspondent

The Alumni Association recently selected four juniors to receive its annual "Leaders in the Making" scholarship for outstanding leadership, distinctive character, and active community service.

After reviewing the six page application, letters of recommendation, and financial aid information, the Alumni Association chose Jamie Jee, Lauren O'Malley, Michael Mercuri, and Tiffany Proto to receive the $2,000 scholarship. Jason Germain, Alumni Association Coordinator, said the students were selected for "going beyond the call of duty, going beyond the classroom."

Proto said, "Every [student selected] is from different roads of life; it's a whole mix of people." Proto is a Nursing major and is involved with the Student Alumni Relations Society and the Class Council of 2001. She has also been a member of the Sigma Kappa sorority since her freshman year. Although she said the application process required a lot of hard work, "It was fabulous. I feel very honored."

Mercuri, double majoring in Sport Management and Marketing, has shown leadership skills by working his way into the position of president of the Sport Management Club from his initial position of secretary. Along with academic success, Mercuri has community service experience with the Newman Center. He said as an alum he would like to help students from UMass, especially in the Sport Management Department. He hopes to own a sport marketing agency.

Jee hopes to use this award as a platform to sponsor student engagement and political action. A History major with a minor in Political Science, he is active in national and international issues, and encourages student activism. It is the issue of universal health care that Jee wrote about in his scholarship essay, but Jee also favors hands-on community service. He has just returned from a week of community service in Cherokee, NC, with the UMass Alternative Spring Break program, and is organizing the Labor Party Club.

Jee believes the relationship between alumni and students is important, and is "intensely interested in talking to alumni and [seeing] what processes they have gone through since they left UMass, and [seeing] what they've learned."

O'Malley, a sociology major aiming for a certificate in criminal justice, has learned much in her college career through her travels. She took a semester off from school during her freshman year, but despite the setback, studied in Cork, Ireland, as a sophomore. During this "great cultural experience," she was able to travel around Ireland and Europe. This summer she plans to go abroad again to Spain.

O'Malley also spends her time volunteering for the Western Massachusetts Labor Action, assisting with benefits and drives, and working as a personal care attendant for a 45-year-old man with multiple sclerosis. In the future, she plans to enter the Peace Corps and attend graduate school.

The Distinguished Alumni Awards Luncheon at the State House in Boston recognizes prominent alumni. In the past, actors Bill Pullman and Bill Cosby, and astronaut Katie Coleman were given awards. This year, these students who the Alumni Association believes will be active alumni of distinction upon graduation will be recognized on April 11 at the luncheon.

UHS offers expert eye care

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

"The eye is the window to the soul," said Frederick Bloom, director of Eye Services at the University of Massachusetts Health Services (UHS), reflecting upon Eye Services 25 years of improving patients' eyesight.

Bloom and other eye specialists in the field have sought different optic techniques in hopes of improving eyesight, with the realization that in the eye care field, there is always "more than meets the eye."

Eye Services, located on the first floor of University Health Services, offers full service optical eye examinations, contact lense fittings, ultraviolet (UV) lenses, safety eye-ware, sports goggles, and other eye accessories and examinations.

In addition, Bloom said his service takes pride in offering up to 35 percent lower fees for frames and lenses than most eye-care specialists. He said they offer on-site repairs and adjustments for students relying on one of the most important senses.

Every day students depend on their eyesight to perform tasks such as reading and note-taking. Bloom said that when their eyesight worsens, students turn to Eye Services for a solution. It is during these moments, Bloom said, that he must be prepared to know the best means of fulfilling his patients' needs.

According to Bloom, the most common eye problems for students result from eyestrain. He pointed out that during their academic careers, students are continually straining their eyes by reading under inadequate lighting conditions. In some instances, over-wearing lenses can cause abrasions and ulcers that lead to eye irritation.

Even with the number of patients he sees increasing each year, Bloom said he attempts to treat each patient with the same kind of care.

"Over the last 25 years, we've seen over 80,000 members, students, and others," Bloom said. "We want to treat everybody like they'd want to be treated when they see a provider and go get medical care. And if I'm advising you, I want to advise you as if you were a family member."

He said a student walked in to Eye Services one morning because she had lost her contacts and did not own a pair of glasses. He said she called at 8:30 a.m. he saw her at 10:30 a.m., and less than an hour later he was able to match her with another pair of contact lenses.

Bloom said there are many students who are unfamiliar with the kinds of services offered at Health Services, and it is not rare for him to hear a student state, "Wow, you have eyeglasses here."

In addition to working with its patients, Eye Services works directly with UMass sports team physicians in helping to provide eye-care relief for eye-related injuries.

"We work very closely with the UHS team physicians of the men and women's varsity basketball, football, and hockey teams," Bloom said.

According to him, he will see almost three thousand to four thousand cases of eye injuries each year.

Not all students who come to Eye Services are in need of prescriptions or eye-care. Some are looking for glasses that will make a fashion statement. Head Optician Donna Sims

Turn to UHS page 2

Some herbal products deadly

By Guy Gugliotta
Washington Post

Mounting evidence suggests that increasing numbers of Americans are falling seriously ill or even dying after taking dietary supplements that promise everything from extra energy to sounder sleep.

The victims include men and women of all ages, as well as children whose parents are feeding them snacks, drinks, and nostrums made with herbal supplements that are neither regulated by the federal government nor tested for their effects on the young.

While the Food and Drug Administration issues periodic warnings about the dangers of individual supplements, no organization or agency has ever made a comprehensive analysis of the sickness and death associated with them.

But in attempting the first national survey, The Washington Post collected statistical snapshots from health officials, researchers and advocates reaching almost every state in the country. Among the findings:

Abuse of the bodybuilding supplement gamma-hydroxybutyrate (GHB) and similar substances has skyrocketed in recent years. In 1997-98, Texas recorded 86 hospital visits involving GHB. In 1999, three Florida poison centers logged 549 GHB incidents and two deaths. Last December, Phoenix Suns forward Tom Gugliotta, no relation to this reporter, took a GHB-related supplement, collapsed on the team bus, and nearly died at a Portland, Ore., hospital.

Tests continue to reveal dangerous contaminants and poor quality control in supplement ingredients. California investigators in 1998 found that nearly one-third of 260 imported Asian herbals were either spiked with drugs not listed on the label, or contained lead, arsenic or mercury. Last month, state officials discovered five Chinese herbals that contained powerful diabetes drugs. Health professionals across the country complain they cannot be sure how powerful a supplement is because the actual potency of the pill often doesn't match the legend on the label.

The weight loss and energy supplement ephedra, also known as ma huang, and its derivatives are producing a stream of complaints from many states, including Georgia, Kentucky, Minnesota, Nebraska, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Texas. New, previously unreleased FDA data implicate about two dozen different ephedra products in 134 cases involving everything from jitteriness, chest pains and insomnia, to addiction, stroke and death.

US keeps eye on China, Taiwan

By Tyler Marshall
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON – In the wake of Taiwan's dramatic presidential election, Asia specialists believe that the United States faces one overriding challenge: keeping all sides cool during the uncertain post-election period, as a new, untested leader assumes power on the island.

"What's needed is a little bit of time for people to calm down, breathe normally, and think through in an unemotional manner where things are going and [about] the stakes that are involved," said Robert Suettinger, a senior White House adviser to China during President Clinton's first term. "The Chinese (pre-election) rhetoric really roiled the situation."

Those who track cross-strait relations were encouraged Saturday by the initial "wait and see" reaction from Beijing.

"The real question mark in all this is China, and if they try to overplay their hand by what they say and do," noted Richard Haass, director of Foreign Policy Studies at the Brookings Institution, a Washington-based think tank. "Their restrained first reaction is a good sign."

But for China's Communist leadership, which wants to reunify Taiwan with the mainland, for a fledgling Taiwanese government that must establish its credibility,

Turn to TAIWAN page 2

Clinton addresses oil prices

By Bob Drogin
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON – President Clinton moved Saturday to create an emergency heating oil reserve for hard-hit Northeast states, but he warned that there is "no overnight solution" to the fast-rising gasoline and oil prices that have shocked the nation.

Clinton proposed several steps he said would help insulate Americans from future vagaries in the price of imported oil. He urged Congress to pass tax credits to promote fuel-saving cars, to encourage use of alternative fuels, and to increase domestic oil production.

But administration aides and independent experts cautioned that none of the new measures will have an immediate effect on oil prices that have tripled in the past year – and may go higher still as the summer approaches.

Clinton did not say if he is considering releasing oil from the emergency Strategic Petroleum Reserve, as some critics have demanded, to replenish domestic supplies. Nor did he address proposals by some lawmakers to halt the export of about 60,000 barrels a day of Alaskan crude oil to Asia and to divert it instead to West Coast markets.

"We have to be clear there is no overnight solution to this problem," Clinton said as he announced the moves in his weekly Saturday radio address. "Instead of taking short-sighted and risky steps now [that] we might regret later, we should use this opportunity to start down the right path toward real long-term energy security."

Clinton called on Congress to immediately reauthorize the $560 million barrel Strategic Petroleum Reserve before the current authorization expires at the end of March "to insure that we have all available tools" in event of a national crisis.

Clinton left later Saturday on a week-long trip to India, Bangladesh, and Pakistan.

On Friday, the White House said Clinton would only decide whether to tap the emergency oil stockpile after oil ministers from the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries meet on March 27 in Vienna, Austria. Clinton said Friday he had spoken with Saudi Arabia's King

Turn to OIL page 2

Dickinson Homestead portrays poet's lifestyle

By Heather Palmer
Collegian Correspondent

The Dickinson Homestead, home of poet Emily Dickinson, is now open for the 2000 season. The Dickinson Homestead was the birthplace of Emily Dickinson, and her home for all but 15 years of her life.

The Homestead has two new attractions this season. This year, a replica of the well-known "white dress" is on display. The replica is modeled after an aging garment that is believed to have belonged to the poet. Dickinson had been known to wear all white in the later years of her life.

The original dress is not dated, but is fashioned similar to the styles popular in the 1870s and 1880s.

"The original dress was displayed at the homestead a few years ago," said Ruth Owens, Homestead tour guide. "The dress is owned by the Amherst Historical Museum and is now being preserved off-site.

"The original dress was beginning to frail. Through the Amherst Historical Museum the dress was recreated in England. We have documented the recreation on the wall opposite the dress."

Another new addition to the Homestead is an exhibit exploring her publications in the Springfield Daily Republican. The exhibit was put together by Martha

Turn to DICKINSON page 2

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

Tours of the home of poet Emily Dickinson will now include an exhibit exploring her publications in the Springfield Daily Republican.

Today — HIGH: 51 LOW: 23

Tuesday — HIGH: 55 LOW: 34

Wednesday — HIGH: 53 LOW: 39

Wake Up and Smell The Candidates

Fewer than one in five people bothered to vote in 1998. Read what columnist Chris Collins has to say about the difference your vote could make. Ed-Op: when we want your opinion, we'll give it to you.

PAGE 4

Julia In Her Wonderbra

Read reviews of three new films, including the new Julia Roberts flick. Also, we'll give you a breakdown of the winners at the Screen Actors Guild Awards. Arts: We ruined your Spring Break by telling your mom you went drinking in Mexico.

PAGE 5

Red Hot Hupp

Senior All-American Marci Hupp played a big part in the water polo team's super successful West Coast swing over break. Those in the know read Collegian sports. Do you?

PAGE 10

Arts & Living 5
Comics 9
Crossword 9
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 10

ON THE INTERNET

www.dailycollegian.com

■ Dickinson

continued from page 1

Ackman, a professor of women's studies at Mount Holyoke College, and her students in a course held at the Homestead last fall entitled "Emily Dickinson in Her Times."

"Only ten of her poems were published during her lifetime, seven of them were in the Republican," Owens said. "The exhibits also show the progress of Dickinson's poems, from [her] original work to the first book of poems published in 1890."

The two new exhibits are part of the Homestead's tour. The tour includes a walk among the gardens and through her home, including her bedroom that contains her original bed and other furniture belonging to the family.

"We have her original bed," said Owens, "and a replica of her stove, dresser, and writing table. We have tried to make the room look the same as it was when she lived here. We have hung pictures of her favorite authors. We have also placed a basket at the window where we believe she would lower food outside to her nephews. It was a game she liked to play with the children.

"Although we do not have a lot of the original articles from the home— they are on display at Harvard University— we feel the Homestead resembles the home Emily lived in. It is hard to have everything exactly the same because other people had lived here after Dickinson. We have pictures of her family and the way the town of Amherst looked in her day."

The Homestead is open until mid-December. Highlights in the upcoming months include the Emily Dickinson Poetry Walk on Saturday, May 13 at 1 p.m., an open house from 1-5 p.m., Living History Day on Sept. 9, and the Birthday Open House on Dec. 9 from 1-5 p.m.

■ Taiwan

continued from page 1

and for American lawmakers eager to protect a longtime U.S. ally from Beijing bullying, any ill-considered action could provoke excessive, hard-to-contain responses, these analysts fear.

Said a senior Clinton administration official: "It's an especially difficult time."

A series of provocative Chinese moves during the pre-election period – including a veiled threat to invade the island if the Taiwan electorate produced the "wrong" result – heightened tensions during the run-up to last Saturday's election, triggering investor panic in Taiwan and angry responses from Capitol Hill, and causing the State Department to summon China's ambassador to the United States, Li Zhao Xing, to protest Beijing's statements and stress the need for calmer rhetoric.

Senior U.S. policy makers say they are consciously trying to keep tempers and rhetoric cool, counseling patience on both sides and stressing that there will be no change in the long-standing American policy toward the region that supports the eventual peaceful reunification of Taiwan with China through political dialogue.

"We're talking like mad to one side and then the other to convince them where their interests really lie – namely in working out their problems face to face in dialogue," said one senior U.S. official.

A series of factors complicates their task, including: Beijing has demonstrated a particular inability to understand the negative impact of incendiary threatening rhetoric on Taiwan, and how badly it plays into the politics of democracy, be it in Taiwan or the United States. Despite Saturday's initially muted response from China to the events in Taiwan, concern remains that Beijing could quickly fall back to its earlier, bullying tactics.

"There's going to be a lot of popular pressure on the Chinese government to not to lose face over this," said Jay Carter, a China historian at St. Joseph's University in Philadelphia. "Whatever is said privately, Beijing is likely to take a very hard line publicly."

In the United States, the Taiwan elections have drawn an unusually high level of interest, and any provocation by Beijing would quickly spill into the heat of the presidential election campaign. There are also crucial initiatives relating to Taiwan and China currently before Congress that could easily erupt into political firestorms if conditions in the region should deteriorate.

The Taiwan Security Enhancement Act, already passed by the House and now awaiting action in the Senate, would boost the U.S.-Taiwan security relationship, while the crucial debate over China's entry into the World Trade Organization is just now beginning.

At the same time, the administration is mulling over a shopping list of military equipment that Taiwan wants to buy from the United States, including Aegis frigates equipped with sophisticated antimissile radar. Debate over that list could quickly fuel emotion in the United States and the region.

DAN SANTELLI/COLLEGIAN

In the name of peace

Lyle Miller, Lee Holt and Margaret Holt are a few of the activists who have been holding vigils every Sunday on the Amherst common for the past 20 years to promote the idea of global nuclear disarmament.

■ oil

continued from page 1

Fahd about the need to stabilize oil prices at levels that satisfy both producing and consuming nations.

An administration official said Saturday that OPEC leaders have assured U.S. officials they will increase production. "It's no longer a question of if and when," the official said. "It's now how much."

But even if OPEC nations sharply increase output next month, it would take four to six weeks for extra supplies to reach American consumers.

Hoping to shore up support for as much of an increase as possible, Energy Secretary Bill Richardson will leave Sunday for a weeklong round of energy diplomacy.

Aides said Richardson would meet with officials from OPEC member nations, including Algeria, Indonesia, Nigeria, and the United Arab Emirates. He met Saturday at an undisclosed location in California with Saudi Arabia's oil minister.

Overall, U.S. oil output fell last year to the lowest level in decades since foreign oil was cheaper to buy. But oil has jumped from $10 a barrel in 1998, to more than $30 a barrel today.

In his radio address, Clinton said he would ask Congress to create a regional home heating oil reserve for the Northeast and New England. Aides said that heating oil could be sold from the reserve to increase local supplies in event of future shortages. The size and cost of the proposed reserve was not disclosed.

Clinton also proposed a ten-year tax incentive program, costing about one billion dollars, to support new domestic oil exploration and production. He also proposed tax credits for a broad array of alternative fuel sources, including solar energy systems, wind power, biomass, and more fuel-efficient cars and homes.

Republican National Committee Chairman Jim Nicholson said in response that Clinton's foreign policy toward OPEC countries "has crashed and burned, and the American people are suffering for it today."

■ UHS

continued from page 1

said.

"They [students] take glasses to be a fashion statement and they're concerned with how they look," Sims said. "I really like helping people feel good about the way they look in their glasses."

Performing routine eye checkups, cornea and retinal exams, and eye pressure exams, Bloom makes shining a light into your eyes to evaluate the retinas and placing a spectroscope over them to examine the interior segment, seem quite interesting and fascinating.

In these interior areas, some of the body's most common diseases occur in the eye. Diabetes is one of those diseases that can show up in the eye as a result of high eye pressure. If not treated immediately, Bloom said that it can lead to blindness by compromising the blood supply in the back of the eyes that is needed for sight.

Besides, good looks [are] good health, Bloom stated. According to him, individuals should have eye exams every year to test for diseases and the need for different lenses. Depending on an individual's condition, Bloom said that he might recommend lenses ranging from UV-protected to tinted for protection against bright light, and sometimes he may prescribe no lenses at all.

University of Massachusetts Boston

Vietnam Today

July 16 – August 10, 2000

This travel/study program based at Hue University in Vietnam, immerses participants in the culture, history, and politics of this fascinating country. Three undergraduate credits.

To learn more, contact:
University of Massachusetts Boston
Division of Continuing Education
100 Morrissey Blvd.
Boston MA 02125-3393

UMASS BOSTON

617.287.7913
www.conted.umb.edu

Sophomores – Juniors – Freshmen

US Resident 3.5 GPA Want to study abroad

Come to the ONSA

Scholarship Information Session

When: Wednesday, March 22
7:30-9:00 pm

Where: Campus Center 101

You are invited to attend the upcoming Office of National Scholarship Advisement (ONSA) information session to learn more about national, competitive scholarships.

Many of these scholarships require students to begin preparing for the application process well in advance of fall deadlines, so take the opportunity to get information now.

If you are unable to attend the information session but would still like to learn more about national, competitive scholarships, please feel free to contact the ONSA office by e-mail at onsa@acad.umass.edu or by phone at 577-2610.

Fulbright Marshall Rhodes
NSEP Glamour USA Today

Scholarships – Fellowships

GREASE HAS NEVER BEEN COOLER!

www.GreaseOnIce.com

TICKETS NOW ON SALE!

MAR. 21 & 22 SPRINGFIELD CIVIC CENTER

MAR. 24 & 25 WILLIAM D. MULLINS CENTER

BY PHONE: (413) 733-2500
(413) 787-6600 (Springfield only)

ticketmaster outlets • www.ticketmaster.com

TICKETS: $15.75 - $19.75 - $24.75 - $35 (VIP)
(service charges and handling fees may apply)

Produced by Feld Entertainment and The Troika Organization

UMass INTRAMURAL SPORTS

STILL TIME TO ENTER:
Softball (M/W/C)....A.S.A.P.
Co-rec Soccer (M/W).....A.S.A.P.
Volleyball Special (C).....A.S.A.P.

OFFICIALS NEEDED
Softball Clinics.... 3/20, 3/22, 3/23, 3/24
Co-rec Soccer Clinics 3/22, 3/23, 3/24
Volleyball Special.....3/21

Don't Miss The... ACTION

Call for times and locations.
More Info:
215 Boyden, 5-2693
On the Web: http://www.umass.edu/umim

Coming Soon...
The Apartment Guide
March 27th

all underclassmen, please look away. this is an announcement exclusively for seniors

Psst...

(class of 2000 only)

the secret to becoming an eGrad
is just around the corner. keep reading

and soon you'll know how to get the right start in the real world.

Our Opinion

A rose by any other name

For those of you who don't already know, the town of Amherst, MA. was named after one Lord Jeffery Amherst. In the past he was revered for ridding colonial settlers of Native Americans so that the newcomers had more land for farming. Before the age of political correctness, not many people cared that Lord Jeff accomplished this by killing the Native Americans with blankets infested with smallpox. But we live in different times.

There is currently a small movement afoot in Western Mass. to rename the town of Amherst because Lord Jeff's ethical standards did not quite meet those of our own. Those involved argue that his actions were so horrible he should not have a town named after him.

While the Daily Collegian acknowledges the validity of this argument, there are several flaws inherent in this view. The most obvious and weakest argument is the emotional argument. Even though there are those who know that Amherst was disreputable in his dealings with Native Americans by today's standards, many people still have emotional attachments to the name. People who grew up here, or who moved here, or who attend and have attended Amherst College, or who attend or have attended UMass, Amherst - all attach many positive memories to the name Amherst. Changing the name of the town erases the place that people attach to the name, which may make them feel as though they have lost a connection to a sense of self.

Thus many people who argue against changing the name are probably motivated by an emotion which stems from the idea that Amherst has played an important part in their lives, a part that is detached from Lord Jeff's actions towards Native Americans some 240 years ago. But there are other more salient arguments to be made.

Renaming Amherst is only a small step in the politically correct direction, and renaming every hill, river, town, mountain, college, or tuft of grass in the United States that bears the name of a rapacious, dead, white European male is a daunting task. If we are really to put history to rights, we would be obligated to change the names of many, many places, and then the emotional argument would have relevance: our country would be so changed who would recognize it?

The Collegian believes that the names given to places in the state of Massachusetts reflect the history of the land and the people. Many of the names are of Native American origin (Massachusetts and Quabbin are two such examples), and many of the names are of European origin, like the name Amherst. Changing the names of places named after disreputable Europeans may actually hamper the efforts of those who are trying to educate people about racism, colonialism, and history. If the name of the town of Amherst is changed, future generations will not be aware of Jeffrey Amherst and his unscrupulous behavior. The name as it currently stands offers parents and educators alike a teachable moment when young people question how the town was named. That the Collegian believes that changing the name would offer residents little benefit, whereas allowing the town's name to remain as it is provides educated citizens with an opportunity to discuss an era in our nation's past. Educating young people about our nation's past is more important than quibbling about political correctness.

2000 election is a wake up call

Fewer than one in five people aged 18 to 24 bothered to vote in 1998. Chances are if you are reading this, you are somewhere in that statistic. This figure isn't all that surprising given that on average about 38 percent of eligible voters bother to vote. So what does that mean to you or me sitting here on a college campus watching Al Gore and George W. Bush fight tooth and nail for the presidency of the United States?

Chris Collins

Well it means a lot. For one thing, if three in five people aged 18 to 24 voted, we would be able to make or break the current presidential election. Think about that. Let's say you feel strongly about getting rid of the death penalty, you could choose the presidential candidate who would work towards that end. Or perhaps you want fewer gun control restrictions. If you motivate people to vote for that candidate, you will be able to get what you want out of the government.

Sound good to you?

Well actually, if you are looking at those two examples, the current mainstream candidates leave you high and dry. In fact, I bet that if you do your research (www.Issues2000.org is a pretty good place to start) you will find that neither of the two candidates that you have to choose from is exactly what you want your next president to be. Of course, one or two problems with a candidate can be overlooked, but when you find yourself looking at them both and thinking, "Which one will destroy the country at a slower rate?" then you should start questioning how you were presented with these options.

Naturally, Al Gore and George W. Bush were chosen by the primary system that has been choosing presidential candidates for the United States ever since we developed political parties. However, I think it is time that we change it.

The first obvious flaw in this year's primary race was the fact that there were fewer than a dozen people who were capable of making enough noise to be noticed by the entire country so that they could even begin a run for the presidency. In a country of 271,000,000 people, the fact that only 12 or so could get the media coverage, interest in their ideas, and monetary support required to run for the presidency is shameful.

If there was a new teaching job here at the University, I would bet that you would have more than a dozen applicants. Each applicant's resume would be reviewed by the hiring committee, and those who pass inspection would be moved on, and those who didn't would be cut from the pool, but they would all have at least had their shot.

Using our current system, the applicant pool is something akin to a thimble filled with water which is usually pretty dried up by the time the majority of the hiring committee (that is, the American people) have a chance to look at it. Simply put, we need to have more people enter the race from the beginning to avoid having candidates for whom we don't want to vote.

"...the fact that only 12 or so could get the media coverage, interest in their ideas, and monetary support required to run for the presidency is shameful."

The second major cause of the disappointing decision we need to make in the next couple of months was the early involvement of the political parties. Does anyone really believe that George W. Bush would have done as well in the primaries had he not had what is referred to as the "GOP's political machinery" behind him? Anyone want to take a guess as to why there was only one candidate trying to run against the semi-incumbent Al "I rode to fame on Bill Clinton's back" Gore? I mean, a political party's organization should be involved in promoting its candidate, but the actual choosing should rest in the hands of the people (and not in the hands of the dozen or so people who sit in the "smoke-filled" rooms, and seem to be allowed to make our decisions for us).

Lastly, people have to get involved and stay politically active. I mean, the fact that only 20 percent of college-aged people vote is a horrible percentage, as is the 38 percent of the entire population. Our government is a tool that should allow everyone to be represented in order to create laws and policies that benefit the majority of people. Of course, if a communal tool is not used by everyone in the community, then by default it is available to be abused by those who have access to it. So, get involved and make sure that your voice is one of the ones that demands better candidates in four years because either Al or George W. is going to be running for reelection and frankly, we as a nation can do a lot better.

Chris Collins is a Collegian columnist.

READ
READ
READ

We all must be blamed

On February 29th in an elementary school classroom near Flint, Michigan, a six-year-old girl named Kayla Rolland was shot and killed by one of her classmates. I heard a man on the radio say he couldn't believe that this kind of violence was occurring in children so young.

I am amazed that anyone was surprised. I am not at all trying to trivialize the significance of a six-year-old boy who is capable of murder. What happened in Michigan was a deeply disturbing and tragic event. But then so were the shootings in Colorado, Kentucky, and the rest of the country. As soon as these school shootings started happening, we started looking for someone to blame. Fingers were pointed at parents, the school system, and the media.

Karen Barstow

Irresponsible parents did not pay enough attention to their children. They didn't spend enough time with their kids. They did not teach them the difference between right and wrong. They let their children have access to firearms. The parents failed the children.

How could the school systems not know how disturbed these children were? They should have had better counseling and mentoring programs in school. They should have done more to monitor how kids treat each other. Why didn't they prevent the guns from getting into school? The school systems failed the children.

Children are constantly surrounded by violence in the media. Video games contain graphic violence. Television contains violent programming intended for children. Movies are violent. The media failed the children.

While I think that there is at least a grain of truth to all of these accusations, I suggest that we consider a revolutionary idea about whose fault this really is. We all failed the children. Not just the media or the kids' parents, but you and me. Blaming people for the violence in our society will not make it go away. It is exactly this us and them mentality of scapegoating that absolves us of personal responsibility, and prevents us from solving the problem.

Why should we expect kids to be peaceful when we are so violent? From a global to a local scale, we have grown over and over again that we accept violence as a means of problem solving. Our government uses violence. Our entertainment is violent. Try flipping through the channels without finding someone getting hit, shot, or stabbed. I bet you can't.

To prove that I am not pointing fingers at you, I will admit to being a huge hockey fan. I love hockey. When hockey gets bloody and violent, I get cheer louder. My favorite video game is "Tekken 2." Like all other fighting games, you win by killing your opponent. My friends have dubbed me a "button-pusher" because I just press the buttons as fast as I can without knowing any of the "moves" of the characters. They're just mad because the button-pushers always win. When I do win, I am obnoxiously vocal about how I kicked the other person's butt. One of my favorite songs of all time is "Murder By Numbers" by the Police. My favorite movie is True Romance, which was written by Quentin Tarantino. If you haven't seen it, I'm sure you can guess how violent it is. I am part of the problem. It is exactly this glorification of violence that we cannot afford to pass on to future generations. Our society is in love with violence.

Yes, it is tragic that a six-year-old girl died violently at the hands of another child. But why should it be any less tragic when adults kill adults? Why aren't we just as shocked and outraged when we read about war, ethnic cleansing, domestic violence, and murder? This country was violent long before its young people picked up the habit. Somehow, if the violence doesn't directly affect us, we don't think it's real. Unless we know someone who has been hurt by it or become victims of violent crime ourselves, we consider it someone else's problem. Repeated incidences of violent crimes committed by children bring the issue home for a lot more people. At the risk of oversimplifying things, children are children. It is much harder to stereotype a six-year-old along race or class lines than an adult. Children who commit murder make it more difficult for us to find someone to blame.

When President Clinton heard about Kayla Rolland's murder, he urged the nation to ask how it was possible for a six-year-old boy to have a gun and know how to use it. He encouraged the public to consider gun-control issues in the upcoming presidential elections. I think he's on the right track. We need to think about gun control when we vote for our next leader. We each need to think about the role we play in producing and accepting this violent society, and what we can do to change it. Maybe if we stop glamorizing violence and using guns to solve our problems, first-graders can learn math and science instead of murder.

Karen Barstow is a UMass student.

I'm not going to pay a lot...

All I really wanted to accomplish over Spring Break was get my car inspected and repaired while I was home in Maine. Sure, sure, all sorts of my colleagues were off lying out in exotic places like Jamaica, Cancun, and Bermuda, but not me.

No, I'm down with the simple life. I simply loaded up the car and got on the road pointed north, and went out on my way to visit mom and dad where the snow is fresh and there is still such a thing as nature (for the record, nature is officially defined by Webster as "a bunch of dense plant life and four-legged animals"). During my relatively brief stay Downeast, I figured I'd get my vehicle repaired and stickered for another year of travel to random locations that I can write about in my columns. Simple enough, right?

Seth Koenig

Of course not. You should know by now that if I'm bothering to bring it up in the newspaper, it probably wasn't an uneventful project.

How entertaining of a column would that be?

Hypothetical excerpt from an extremely boring column during which I describe an uneventful Spring Break: "This past week I got my car fixed and inspected so that I could drive around more. Neat, huh?"

That's no good at all. Anyway, back to the point, I called an old high school buddy of mine named Pat Godin, who now works at an auto repair place in Lisbon Falls (which is a town in Maine, for all of you out there who aren't bright enough to figure that out from the context), to get some advice on the issue. One of the great things about going to high school in Maine is that you will indefinitely become friends with a good handful of people who know a lot about practical and useful things, such as construction, mechanics and, well, auto repair. It is good for a guy like me to have friends like Pat because my technical expertise in a car stops at adjusting the rearview mirror.

Pat told me that, provided there were only a few minor changes that needed to be made to the car, the whole ordeal should be easy and inexpensive, and that I should be careful for places that just wanted to make a quick buck off of a less-informed person like myself. Armed with the knowledge that I was probably going to be taken for a proverbial ride, I did a preliminary check of my vehicle, and decided that, because my muffler had roughly the same tangled configuration as one's lower intestines, it had to be replaced. Beyond that, my detailed analysis turned up very little other than the fact that I had some McDonald's trash in the back seat - which, for the record, most likely would have gotten past inspection.

I then hit the road in search of a new muffler and a person willing to put it on my car. I had just gotten my tax return, and, according to George Foreman, mufflers are pathetically cheap, so I was confident that I would come out of the situation with bills to spare - important because I need money with which to buy house salads and coffee at Applebee's, where I commonly loiter.

Unfortunately, overlooking the fact that this was me looking for a muffler and not somebody with remotely good luck, I was misled in my optimism. It just so happened that, as I got the estimate of $240 by a guy at Meineke in Topsham (again a town in Maine), the muffler of my car was some sort of rare muffler that grows deep in the rainforests of Brazil and is privately harvested by Kayapo chiefs for ceremonial practices, and was, therefore, nearly impossible – and extremely expensive – to get into the United States... However, he could get me one by the following morning if I ordered right then, which he suggested I definitely do because the muffler was endangered, and I would probably never get the chance again because major fast food chains were hunting it for sport... or something reasonable like that.

"...the muffler of my car was some sort of rare muffler that grows deep in the rainforests of Brazil and is privately harvested by Kayapo chiefs for ceremonial practices..."

Now, I'm no fool. I realize that, according to federal law, anything related to an automobile, including gasoline, must be priced comparably to simply purchasing a new car – still, I found this whole song and dance about the muffler a bit ridiculous. I managed to price shop my way down to an $83 version of the thing, a discovery that means that the folks at Meineke are making an absolute killing on mufflers (George Foreman is either an idiot or a liar... based on the names he gave his children, I'd guess he's an idiot).

What have I learned from this incident? Well, I learned that, once again, I'm in the wrong business if I want to make money. Also, having sat in waiting rooms where the reading selection deviated only slightly from men's magazines, I learned that I can get abs of steel after only four seconds a day of work, and that you can tell when a woman is interested in sex by the fact that she exhales.

Seth Koenig is a Collegian columnist.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Sam Wilkinson Managing Editor Shawn Ilinitch Business Manager
Ben Alamed Web Developer Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager
Sage Brousseau Co-Advertising Production Manager Jake Lilien Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pushkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jake Lilien Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jeanie Gorlovsky Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Multicultural Affairs Editor
Mary Grein News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Adam White Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor
Joslyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Christine Connare Women's Issues Editor
Marc Menschel Finance Manager
Joshua Szymanski Distribution Manager
Katie Beith Promotions Manager
Catherine Turner International Affairs Editor
Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Murry Pappas Classified Advertising
Chris Brennan Assistant Finance Manager
Eric Faber Assistant Advertising Manager
Amy Gargania Assistant Business Manager

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Roberts takes subtle turn

Erin Brockovich
directed by Steven Soderbergh with Julia Roberts, Albert Finney
Aaron Eckhart
playing at Mountain Farms Theaters

By Adam Martignetti
Collegian Staff

Steven Soderbergh (Sex, Lies and Videotape, Out of Sight) takes the real life story of Erin Brockovich, beauty queen turned renegade lawyer, and turns it into a compelling tale of underdogs overcoming incredible odds to achieve redemption. And to play the tough, out-of-luck, sassy Brockovich, Soderberg gets America's sweetheart, the always bankable Julia Roberts.

Roberts assumes the role with a fragility and an earnestness that her typical romantic-comedy roles just don't let her show. She plays Brockovich on the brink of desperation, but tough to the point of self-destruction.

Erin Brockovich has three kids, $16 dollars in the bank, and no job. After losing a court case, she pleas with her unsuccessful lawyer to give her a job. However, Erin's fiery personality, abrupt attitude, and flashy wardrobe (you only have to see the trailer to understand that they're selling something other than the story here) don't sit well around the office. That is until Erin starts investigating a rotten real estate case.

Apparently, electric company PG&E has been secretly buying land in a small town in order to hide the fact that they've been dumping deadly chemicals in the groundwater. As Erin witnesses the plight and rampant disease in the area, the undercurrents of a major lawsuit develop.

What makes Erin Brockovich enjoyable, and in fact compelling, is the delicacy of emotion with which the victims are treated. Their stories are the center of the movie and Erin connects with each of them on a deeply personal level. She too has been oppressed by the system. She's clinging on to faint hope. She's trying to keep her family afloat on a daily basis. From that perspective, both the victims and the audience can sympathize with her. Triumph is as much dignity for her as it is justice for them.

In addition, the movie is flat-out funny. Roberts is great as the short-tempered, foul-mouthed Brockovich. She's got conviction and wicked wit. Albert Finney gives a wonderfully grizzled performance as the aging lawyer and Erin's emotional foil. Exasperation, desperation, conflagration— they all fall into Finney's comic range.

Soderbergh won't disappoint fans here either. Erin's personal life is always shot with slightly blurred colors and frequent short cuts, creating a "home video" style that suits the movie to perfection. There's a deeply intimate, almost informal style from which the audience is allowed to enter Erin's world.

The movie falters in the obligatorily short, under-developed romance that Erin has with her biker-next-door neighbor, George. Some of the lines hit like absolute bricks here.

The brief subplot gone awry is forgivable, though, as it is overshadowed by the movie's magnanimity. Julia Roberts takes on one of her career's most compelling roles in the vulnerable Brockovich and shines. Her doggedness and relentless work for her clients makes this case as important to her as it is to them. And, it's refreshing to know that anyone cares that much. America loves underdogs. When Julia Roberts plays one in a funny and moving tale, then good things are almost assured. This is a winner for sure. B

A dirty old man tries valiantly to keep his eyes from floating into Julia Roberts' sea of cleavage in Erin Brockovich.

COURTESY OF ROB MCEWAN

Gary Sinise tries valiantly to keep his eyes from floating into Tim Robbins' sea of cleavage in Mission to Mars.

Mars attacks audience's intelligence

Mission to Mars directed by Brian De Palma with Gary Sinise, Tim Robbins, Don Cheadle, Connie Nielsen playing at AMC Mountain Farms

By David Troupes
Collegian Staff

The tagline: For centuries, we've searched for the origin of life on Earth...We've been looking on the wrong planet.

My clever reversal: Last Friday night, I went looking for a good sci-fi movie...I was looking in the wrong cinema.

In the film, as in any region of art, there's a fine line between paying homage to your predecessors by applying recognized and celebrated aspects of previous works to fresh ideas, and simply plagiarizing someone else's material to compensate for a lack of originality. Mission to Mars decidedly falls into the second of those categories, shamelessly stealing elements from such excellent movies as 2001: A Space Odyssey and Apollo 13, combining them with horrible writing, tossing on some eye-candy filler, and producing what amounts to a two-hour cliché with a handful of nifty visuals.

The first ten minutes of the movie tell you all you need to know about the quality of the dialogue you'll be encountering. We meet most of the cast at a NASA backyard barbecue and find ourselves dragged from one insincere, exposition-heavy exchange to another. The characters' histories are crammed down our throats, emotionally saccharine story arcs are set in motion, and the movie makes every possible effort to let us sympathize with the people on screen. The scene's clumsiness, and the awfulness of its dialogue, however, completely sabotages that effort.

The plot has the arbitrary and jarring flow of a choose-your-own-adventure book; the astronauts face up against challenge after challenge while on their mission to rescue a stranded comrade on the Martian surface, but it quickly becomes apparent that the individual scenes are moving us toward the movie's finale in a totally pointless and haphazard manner. Along the way, director Brian De Palma manages to rip off 2001 more than once, although admittedly the film's vision of the Martian surface is pleasantly vivid.

All science fiction requires the audience to suspend a good amount of disbelief, but the level of scientific lunacy displayed in this movie exceeds all reasonable bounds, and does the already struggling plot a great disservice. At one point, we learn that the stranded astronaut has been living on the Martian surface for a year, without any packaged oxygen, by growing plants and breathing the oxygen they produce. This already hard-to-swallow explanation becomes completely ludicrous when we see that he's been keeping this garden in a flimsy tent, through which the powerful and unbreathable Martian winds are constantly blowing. I'm sorry, but two-dozen tomato plants simply don't produce that much oxygen.

If, upon arrival at the grand realization scene about the origins of humankind, you still harbor any hope that Mission to Mars might salvage itself and end with a modicum of decency, a laughable computer-generated alien being and a bucketful of cheesy lines readily and completely deflates that hope.

I find it inconceivable that so many talented people became involved in this cxanide tablet of a script, and watching the likes of Tim Robbins deliver such horrendous lines never gets any less painful as the movie progresses. On the other hand, perennial frat boy Jerry O'Connell looks right at home, the vacancy of his stare complementing perfectly the movie's insubstantial story.

Ultimately, Mission to Mars is the victim of both the screenwriter's general lack of talent, and his attachment to his own characters. He wants so gosh darn much for us to care about the cast, and spends so much time trying (unsuccessfully) to tug on our heartstrings, that the science-fiction elements of the plot go completely neglected. The movie ends at the precise moment when it might actually get interesting, leaving us, instead, with a mish-mash of tired, overused sci-fi material, and worthless characters. D-

Beauty cleans up at SAG Awards

By Ryon Benharris
Collegian Staff

On Sunday, March 12th, the Screen Actors Guild decided to do something unique and individual. They did something that had never been heard of before. They had an awards show. Okay, so maybe you're like me and have seen 12 million awards shows, but this one had some significance. Much like the Golden Globe Awards, the Screen Actors Guild Awards are simply an appetizer to the March 26th Academy Awards. Not only do they honor the top films of the year, but they also take time out to recognize what is best to watch on television as well. Since the Screen Actors Guild is an organization that benefits actors, the awards only give recognition to the acting in film or television, and not to specific movies or shows. All of the awards are based on voting done by the 97,000+ members of the Screen Actors Guild. So, much like masturbation, the Screen Actors Guild Awards is a bunch of people pleasuring themselves by admiring how great they are.

When it was time to honor greatness in television acting, it came as no surprise that "The Sopranos" cleaned up. James Gandolfini won the award for top lead actor for his role as Tony Soprano. While Edie Falco, who plays Tony's wife, took home an award for the best lead actress in a category that was highlighted by three out of the four nominees being from the HBO series. "The Sopranos" was also honored with an award for Best Ensemble Cast, which is an equivalent to a Best Drama Series Award. On the flip side, Michael J. Fox was given another Best Actor award for his role on "Spin City." The lead actor, who has gained an enormous amount of critical acclaim and support for the series, will be leaving the show at the end of the season to continue his ongoing fight against Parkinson's disease. Lisa Kudrow was given the award for Best Female Actor in a Comedy Series, and "Frasier" won the prize for Ensemble Cast.

Between the television and film sections of the award show, a lifetime achievement award was presented to film legend Sidney Poitier. The award cherished the high points in Poitier's career, and was handed to him from Academy Award winner Denzel Washington, Oscar-nominee for his lead role in The Hurricane.

The most important part of the night came when the awards for acting in film were released. It was no surprise that Angelina Jolie won the award for Best Supporting Actress for her performance in Girl, Interrupted, and she seems to be a shoe-in for the Oscar.

It was a surprise when Michael Caine, who co-starred in The Cider House Rules won the award for Best Supporting Actor, which may be an upset over Tom Cruise who is favored to win the Oscar for his role in Magnolia.

The rest of the night was dominated by American Beauty. Kevin Spacey and Annete Benning both won the awards for their lead roles in the film, and the film, which is the favorite to win the Oscar for Best Picture, took home the award for Best Ensemble Cast.

If the SAG Awards are any indication of how the Oscars will go, then it will just give the winning actors something else to brag about. I guess we'll just have to sit back, wait, and see.

The road to hell is paved with good intentions...and Johnny Depp too!

THE NINTH GATE
directed by Roman Polanski and starring Johnny Depp and Frank Langella playing in Hell

By Michael Delano
Collegian Staff

Finally a film has come along to tackle the cut-throat, thrill-a-minute lifestyle of the...bibliophile. Yes, books and the people who love and collect them are the subject of Roman Polanski's suspenseless new film The Ninth Gate. So if you've ever wanted to hear the phrase "I like books. Do you?" sound one hundred percent sexual, you've come to the right place. Unfortunately, despite a beautiful cover, this book contains nothing but empty pages.

Johnny Depp and a sills goatee join forces to play the lead character, Dean Corso, a rare book expert whose moral bankruptcy is suggested early in the film when he swindles an old copy of Don Quixote from a helpless old man, and exchanges sex with a widow for a book but has no intention of giving up anything. His mercenary nature puts him in the service of Boris Balkan (Frank Langella) a wealthy occult book collector who sends Corso on a mission to compare and authenticate his copy of The Nine Gates of The Kingdom of Shadows with two other copies located in France and Spain. Aware of the danger but slave to the almighty dollar, Corso sets off to Europe and finds (surprise) that he is in for more than he bargained for.

The locations, from beginning to end, are far more interesting than any of the characters or events. A spacious mansion in Spain, a gloomy French chateau, a hollowed underground castle; all make you wish you could just stay there and relax while the characters go on their way. Depp's character likes scotch and cigarettes, and that is about as far as the director is content to probe into his personality. And the characters that Corso meets along the way are just as forgettable. Barbara Jefford, as a baroness, vamps it up to obscene levels, while Corso's Balkan-sent watchdog (Emmanuelle Seigner) has such beautiful eyes, it's almost enough to distract you from her completely lifeless performance, almost. A notable exception is Langella's Balkan, whose ominous voice and presence effortlessly steal any scene, and his violent dispersing of a Satanic ritual is easily the high light of the film.

All other events lall by the wayside, like a laughable fight scene and the mysterious fates of the other two book owners. But if there isn't going to be anything going on, at least develop the characters in the meantime. No such luck, even though scenes in a train, plane, and car all provide ample time to get to know Corso and the girl. Instead they just stare at each other, spout pointless meaningless small talk, and wait for Depp to spark up a Lucky Strike and/or enjoy something on the rocks. The climax, like the rest of the film, is expertly shot, with beautiful colors and professional, if not overly fancy, camerawork. But by this time the viewer has absolutely no interest in the characters or what may come next, and the ending is far more of an annoying cop-out than a mysterious conclusion. This movie does for books what Big Night did for food, except in this case you wish you stayed home and read one instead. D

COURTESY OF ARTISAN ENTERTAINMENT

Frank Langella, at home, immolating himself to escape the shame of the cold realization that he was in The Ninth Gate.

COURTESY OF SCREEN ACTORS GUILD

The cast of American Beauty searches for an answer when asked if they will use the large metal awards to "break some knee-caps," as the cast of "The Sopranos" said they would.

■ gym

continued from page 10

first on floor (9.75), vault (9.80) and parallel bars (9.675), and broke the all-time UMass record on high bar (9.925).

Junior Eric Bacon finished fifth on the floor with a career-high 9.50, with McNulty trailing him closely with a 9.40. The freshmen came through for the Minutemen on pommel horse, as Hammar finished first overall with a 9.675, barely passing his teammate Brian Peterson who posted a career-high score of 9.60. And over on vault, McNulty (9.60) and Nelligan (9.40) came through for their team once again as they placed fifth and sixth respectively on the event.

With LaVallee's near-perfect high bar routine, UMass raked in a season-high 37.825 on the apparatus. But another major contributor to that score was junior Mike Alexander. The former ECAC Rookie of the Week put forth one of the best high bar performances of his college career, ranking him second overall with a career-high 9.65.

"[Alexander] has had great talent on high bar all year," said UMass head coach Roy Johnson. "Doing a lot of sets in practice has really paid off for him. His routine [on Saturday] came as no surprise."

Although the Minutemen certainly wanted to celebrate after their victory on Saturday night, their task was far from over. The top eight competitors on each event advanced to the individual event finals yesterday afternoon and UMass continued to rank among the best.

Hammar, the incredible athlete and scholar from Minnesota, who dubbed the ECAC Pommel Horse Champion after he posted a near-perfect score of 9.80. His teammate Brian Peterson finished fourth overall with a respectable 9.25. "Nutty" McNulty tumbled his way to a fifth place finish on floor (9.40), and Mike Alexander finished third overall on high bar (9.30). And it was of no surprise to anyone to see Jeff LaVallee come out on top on the parallel bars with a 9.675. LaVallee was also named the ECAC Outstanding Senior Gymnast: another award he can add to his growing collection.

Jeff LaVallee

DAN SANTELLI/COLLEGIAN

So their final task is NCAAs. The top six teams at the Qualifier will advance to the NCAA finals, and despite the competition ahead of him and his team, Johnson remains optimistic. "We're now ranked among the top twelve [teams] and now we're going to try to be in the top six," Johnson said. "This is the first time we've ever made it to Nationals as a team, and I think if we hit, we'll have a good shot."

The beasts of the east

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

After banging heads with the best of the west over break, it only seemed fitting for these water warriors to reclaim their spot as the beasts of the east.

The No. 11 Massachusetts women's water polo team (13-5) left little doubt of its dominance at this weekend's Collegiate Water Polo Association New England Division Tournament, held at UMass' own Joseph R. Rogers, Jr. Pool. The Minutewomen went undefeated in four contests on the weekend, including convincing wins over Brown, Yale and Dartmouth, and a forfeit from Mount Holyoke.

UMass' brilliance comes on the heels of a successful West Coast trip, in which the team stood toe-to-toe with some of the sport's true heavyweights.

"The level of competition dropped a little bit once we got back from California," UMass coach Dan McOsker said. "But we needed to take what we learned out there and use it, so it worked out well for us."

Saturday's tourney tip-off with Yale saw an absolute barrage of scoring offense from the Maroon and White, as nine different UMass athletes put up goals in the 16-5 romp. Newcomer Mattie Newell led the way with four tallies, upstaging senior All-American Katie Grogan's hat trick.

Freshman Rosie Baker and senior scoring machine Marci Hupp each struck paydirt twice for the Minutewomen, with Lizzy Boyle, Kelly Chassy, Anne Detloff, Sarah Newell, and Megan Perry each adding a goal to the overwhelming UMass output.

Sophomore keeper Dana Sinkwich enjoyed a sensational stint between the pipes for McOsker's crew, piling up four saves over the course of three shutout quarters. Backup Megan Thompson took over for the final frame and added a save of her own.

The Maroon and White next hit the waves against Dartmouth's Big Green, a group that had to leave the waters feeling a little blue after being pummeled, 16-0. Hupp and Newell didn't appear to have lost a stroke between the two games, as each player rung up a hat trick at the expense of the bewildered Big Green. Senior field phenom Claudia Clement also totaled three scores during the team's first shutout of the year.

The UMass goal was patrolled this time by Thompson, who turned away six Dartmouth shots to keep the Maroon and White undefeated (8-0) against the Big Green all-time.

The Minutewomen's road to tourney glory was made a little easier by Mount Holyoke, which forfeited its 4 p.m. match.

That left the Maroon and White with its biggest test of the weekend, a showdown with the Bears of Brown University. That was when McOsker's troops rose up and showed that squaring off with the nation's best has left them head-and-shoulders above their East Coast counterparts.

"I looked at Brown as a sort of measuring stick game for us," McOsker said. "We came out and looked great at the beginning, and then we just put them away."

To say that UMass "came out great" is to put it mildly, at best; the Minutewomen outscored Brown 8-1 over the game's first half en route to a 16-6 thrashing. Grogan found the Bear net seemingly at will, racking up four scores to push her weekend total to eight. Senior Laurie Edwards used her devastating delivery to net two goals for UMass, which also got two-goal evenings from Chassy, Clement, and Perry.

Sinkwich kept the Bears from clawing back into the nitelee, denying four shots. The Maroon and White now boasts a 9-4 mark all-time in action against Brown.

The team hits the pool again on Wednesday, when it again hosts Brown at Rogers Pool. The opening swim-off for that showdown is slated for 7 p.m.

How do I look for an off-campus apartment?

How do I sublet my apartment/ house for the summer?

Who is going to take over my lease?

Have questions?

The Apartment Guide

Has ANSWERS!

Issue date March 27th
Special classified section 20 cents/word taken at Collegian Newspaper Stand next to UStore

Munchie Madness 3-6PM MONDAY-FRIDAY
Double Grilled Pitas 3.99 4.00
Black Bean Dip w/chips 5.99 3.00
Nachos 6.99 3.50
1/2 PRICE!
Judie's
51 N. Pleasant Street 253-3491
http://virtual-valley.com/judies

WWW.DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM

安娥中國餐店
AMHERST CHINESE FOOD
we do not use "MSG"
253-7835 • 253-2813
62 Main Street, Amherst
VISA

DO YOU WANT A JOB THAT MATTERS?

Become an "advertising account executive." The Daily Collegian is looking for outgoing, motivated students interested in earning money while gaining experience!

Fill out an application and bring a resume to 113 Campus Center Basement, attn: Christine Cargill by March 24th.

The Index Yearbook
UMASS
ATTENTION!!!
CLASS OF 2000
ABSOLUTE LAST CHANCE FOR SENIOR PORTRAITS
MARCH 27TH-31ST
Make your appointment now by calling 1-800-OUR-YEAR or log on to www.ouryear.com
School Access #147
(You need to know the access number when you make the appointment)
Order Your 2000 Yearbook ONLY $50.00
Log on to www.walsworth.com or Call 1-800-929-1503
(Service Charge of $2.95 for orders placed by phone)
DAVOR PHOTOGRAPHY
Walsworth Publishing Company

Sigma [fly] Alpha

Just like any fraternity or sorority, Army ROTC offers teamwork, camaraderie and friendship. Plus, you'll get to do challenging stuff like this that'll help prep you for the real world. Stop by the Army ROTC department. We won't rush you.

JUMP INTO A SUMMER JOB & 2 YEAR SCHOLARSHIP
CALL THE UMASS ARMY ROTC AT 545-2321
ARMY ROTC Unlike any other college course you can take.

UMass outclassed in A-10 semifinals

Minutemen schooled by wise old John Chaney's TU Owls

By Kathleen Ralls
Collegian Staff

PHILADELPHIA — It's been four years since the Massachusetts men's basketball team chiseled its way past the second round of the Atlantic 10 Tournament. That was in 1996, when Coach John Calipari led his squadron of icons to the A-10 regular season and tournament championship, and to the NCAA Final Four. That year, Marcus Camby was conference and national player of the year, and averaged 20.5 points per game as a junior. Work in progress. The center was joined by four other players, Donta Bright (First Team), Edgar Padilla and Carmelo Travieso (Second Team), and Dana Dingle (Third Team) on the A-10 glory teams. It was clearly their year.

Temple	54
UMass	47

Ten years ago, John Chaney's Temple captured the A-10 tournament title and secured second place overall in the regular season four times and first place twice since. But the Owls failed to clinch a tournament championship victory. They did, however, qualify for the Big Dance every year.

Senior point guard Juan "Pepe" Sanchez was tabbed an A-10 First Teamer, and won the Player of the Year and the Defensive Player of the Year honors. His teammate, Mark Karcher, was one of two players in the running for league player of the year. The other being UMass' Monty Mack.

Throughout the 90s, the two produced the most furious battles in the league, not so evident by any explosion of high scoring, but evident in the degree of how much a rebound counts or a nifty assist can change the wave of the game. Or the way a switch in defense can ruin an offensive motion.

And that's precisely what the Minutemen tried to do on Friday, March 10 during the semi-finals at the First Union Spectrum. By changing the look of the defense, UMass thought it might be able to halt any sort of TU run that became too rampant to stop. In the end, Temple was too overpowering to manhandle, as UMass fell 54-47.

If anybody was going to stop the Owls in the A-10 tournament, however, it would have to be UMass, which defeated Duquesne easily in the first round by a score of 77-52 and put a stop to the Colonials of George Washington, 86-68 in the quarterfinals. For the fourth straight year, the Minutemen earned the saddle of third place in the A-10 West after going 15-4 and 9-7 in conference play. And for three straight years the Minutemen simply could not get past the second round of play.

This year, however, they gutted out a 2-1 record in the tournament and advanced to the semifinals for the first time since 1996.

"I thought we played three really good games," said UMass coach James "Bruiser" Flint. "Our effort was good and I thought we played with intelligence."

Back on Feb. 26, the Massachusetts men's basketball team succumbed to an overwhelming Temple crew, 72-54 at the Peter J. Liacouris Center. Quincy Wadley rung up 21 points despite Karcher's dismal production of three points in 27 minutes. With the Minutemen subs playing just 14 minutes, the strong Temple bench, led by Lynn Greer's 17, lashed out with 31 points. The Owls stomped on Massachusetts 75-48 at the William D. Mullins Center on Feb. 1 with Karcher opening up with 17 points inside.

This time, however, the stakes were higher and UMass wanted to take what was its last shot at a tournament team and show them what it had.

"I think people come in here with the wrong idea, they come in with the philosophy that they have to shoot threes," said Flint. "I think the whole Temple philosophy kills them all."

Temple quickly opened up with a 7-2 lead in the first three minutes as Karcher drilled a three-pointer, and Lamont Barnes and Kevin Lyde converted a pair of layups to Kitwana Rhymer's putback two. Chris Kirkland, who was quiet with just six points in the full 40 minutes, earned the assist to Rhymer and knocked down a jumper before Mack let go of a trey to make it 9-7.

Shannon Crooks took advantage of a Kirkland block and charged the other way to tie it up at nine-all. Mack called his shot and banked in a trey from the right wing for a 12-11 advantage.

Twice during the half the Minutemen designated a one-point advantage and Temple climbed to a five-point lead at 7:39 (20-15), but neither found a way to break through the other's defense as the Owls led, 27-23. Sanchez, who did not tally his first point until the waning minutes of the game on a free throw, struggled to penetrate the revolving UMass defense that included a zone trap, a full-court press and man-to-man.

Foul trouble plagued both squads in the second half as Kirkland and Crooks finished with three and Mike Babul, Rhymer and Mack both had four for UMass. Barnes and Lyde were forced to sit for a good chunk because they had racked up four and three, respectively.

"It kind of stopped my shot-blocking ability," said Rhymer.

After falling behind 32-37, the Minutemen rallied back to within one at 32-31 with 15:31 left. Yet a 5-2 run by the Owls boosted their lead back up to four with 12:23 left. After UMass had chopped the lead back down to two, Barnes responded from his rest with a basket that gave his team a six point lead with 7:25 to go.

The Owls finally figured out the slowing Minutemen defense and raised their lead to eight at 45-37 with 4:54 to go as the Minutemen, who had shot over 40 percent from the floor in the second half against GW, struggled to give their sagging offense a jumpstart. Mack finally broke through the freeze with a pull-up jumper to bring UMass within six at 46-39.

But the Owls escaped in the end as Wadley secured the win with a pull-up jumper that made it 49-39 with 1:39 to go.

"You have to win some ugly games if you are going to win a championship," said Sanchez.

Mack finished with a game-high 16 and Rhymer and Crooks had 12 and nine points, respectively. The Minutemen shot 22 percent from behind the arc and rallied for three less boards than the Owls with 24.

Lyde shot a perfect 6-for-6 from the floor for 15 points followed by Karcher's 14 and Wadley's 12 points. Temple shot a dismal 63 percent from the line, capitalizing on 15-of-23.

Despite a hard fought first round game, Chris Kirkland and Bruiser Flint were forced to watch their season slip away in NIT action against Siena.

■ hoops

continued from page 10

Mack drilled a three-pointer at the 5:47 mark to put the Minutemen back on top, 55-54, and gave a preview of a nip-and-tuck final sequence that saw the lead change hands four times in the final minute and a half of play.

With roughly nine to go, Saint freshman forward Michael Buhrman tipped in a rebound to put Siena up, 66-65.

Crooks, broken nose and all, then went for the win as time ticked away. Driving into the lane, the Minuteman guard drew contact and released a lay-up. The only whistle that was blown signified the end of UMass' season.

"It was late in the game, so I didn't think it was going to be [called] a foul or a charge, I just wanted to get in his way," Saint defender Dwayne Archbold said of the final play.

"[He] couldn't get a better look," Flint said. "He curled it into the lane, which is what we told him to do. That's his shot, he just came up short."

■ hockey

continued from page 10

on the board with a shorthanded goal three minutes into the second period.

BU 5, UMass 2

It was a period eerily reminiscent of the previous night: the game tied going into the third period and BU coming out on fire.

"Our motto has been win the third period, win the game, and we had our best period in the third, not just scoring wise but everything else that went on out there," BU head coach Jack Parker said.

"They had the home crowd and one goal can turn into two really quick," Mallen said. "I thought we slowed it down enough to try to regroup and recover, but you've got to give them credit, they came right back and got that fourth goal, it was really a back breaker."

One would think that two goals in 33 seconds would be a hard feat to top, but the Terriers did just that, scoring two in just 33 seconds to grab a 4-2 lead.

"It was real important [to get the quick goals]," Tommi Degerman said. "It seems like every game, we have to come into the third and win the game, so we're pretty familiar with the situation."

The senior captain scored his second goal of the night at the 7:15 mark of the stanza and Sabo added another at 7:48. That proved to be enough to do in the Minutemen, as they were unable to put the puck behind DiPietro in the third.

Degerman's go-ahead goal came on a great individual effort, in which he picked off an errant clearing pass in the UMass zone and slipped a shot while falling down that somehow found its way past Helanen.

"Danny [Cavanaugh] made a great play to forecheck the puck and it just came loose," Degerman said. "I pretty much just shoveled it in."

Just as the Maroon and White were gathering themselves, Sabo took advantage of a loose puck and raced in alone to beat a defenseless Helanen and push the lead to two goals.

The Terriers put home the final goal of the game with just over six minutes remaining, when Pat Aufiero scored on a rebound off a Corazzini shot from the slot.

UMass started the game off by scoring goals in both the first and second periods, but in the end BU put up five unanswered goals to move onto the semifinal round in the Hockey East Tournament.

Darcy King got the Minutemen on the board when he scored his seventh goal of the season late in the first period to give the Maroon and White a 1-0 lead heading into the first intermission.

Blanchard added to the lead early in the second, when he scored a scorching wrist shot that beat DiPietro under his right arm.

No sooner did the Minutemen obtain the two-goal advantage than the Terriers struck back with a vengeance. Baker broke in alone on Helanen two minutes after the Blanchard score, beating the junior on a shot through the five hole to cut the UMass lead to 2-1.

With the crowd into the game for the first time, Degerman capitalized on a Minuteman turnover to knot the game at 2-2. Aufiero stole a clearing pass and fed Chris Heron. Heron, with his head up, found a streaking Degerman in the slot and made a great shift on Helanen for the tying goal.

The Maroon and White had a chance to regain the lead midway through the second period when junior assistant captain Jeff Turner had a clean breakaway on DiPietro. Turner skated in by himself from center ice, but was unable to beat DiPietro, as the freshman made a great sliding save to keep the game even.

"They've got one of their best guys going on the goaltender and he makes a big save, it jacks us up," Parker said. "But more than jack us up, it kind of deflates the other club a little bit."

The pair of losses ended the season for the Minutemen. Their final record was 11-20-5 (5-15-4 HE). With the two losses, UMass has still not won a quarterfinal game in the Hockey East Tournament since they joined the league in 1995.

DO YOU NEED YOUR WISDOM TEETH REMOVED?

If so, patients are being enrolled for a wisdom teeth research study. Your wisdom teeth can be extracted by a Board Certified Oral Surgeon. Financial compensation will be provided for your opinion on a research pain medication.

For more information call:
SCIREX Corporation at (860) 285-0569
Outside Windsor call toll free 1-888-285-0569
SCIREX

Spring Supplements Are Here

The Spring Supplement of the Student Telephone Directory had been delivered to the Campus Center Concourse. A limited number are also available at the Visitors Center and the second floor lobby of Whitmore. There is no direct distribution of this limited edition (5,000 copies available).
University Directories

■ Minutewomen

continued from page 10

The low-scoring affair briefly picked up the pace after the intermission. Harvard stepped back out front with a tally by Megan Austin before the Minutewomen went on another offensive spurt.

Pavlick and Gorski beat the Crimson goaltender at the 24 and 21-minute marks, respectively, to elbow the home team to a one-point advantage. Later in the period, nearing the final ten minutes, Ingraffea and Minaker upped the lead to three, 6-3.

"Defensively, we played well, but offensively, we didn't step up to the challenge," Barnes said. "We got out to a lead, but couldn't maintain it."

Harvard then scored four unanswered goals, the game-winner coming with 1:12 showing on the clock as Lizzy Frisbee put her second shot past Nardi to finish off the heart-breaker.

Pavlick will lead the squad into Durham, NH, on Tuesday with three total goals as the Minutewomen try to get back on the winning track against New Hampshire, who they edged in an 8-6 shootout last season.

"Steph played great," Barnes said. "Steph did so much through the midfield, she really stepped up offensively today – and defensively. That's how she'd been playing the last couple of days in practice and it showed."

RUTGERS
NEW BRUNSWICK
SUMMER SESSION 2000

Registration begins Feb 28
MAY 30-JULY 6
JUNE 26-AUGUST 3
JULY 10-AUGUST 16
Three six-week sessions
A variety of 3, 4 and 8 week courses
Undergraduate/Graduate courses
Day, Evening and Saturday A.M. classes available
For a 2000 Summer Session Catalog, including registration procedures and form, phone (732)932-7565. Outside the 732 area code call 1-800-HI RUTGERS or 1-888-4RU SUMMER, or e-mail your request to: catalog@rci.rutgers.edu
Courses also available at Freehold Colonial Campus Route 9 South and Brookdale Community College Lincroft
RUTGERS
Division of Summer Session
191 College Ave New Brunswick, NJ 08901-8546
web site: http://summersession.rutgers.edu

Summer
UMASS Boston
A great university in a great city
Summer at UMass Boston means
- Four- and six-week sessions, beginning May 30, July 5, and July 17
- Morning, afternoon, and evening classes
- Travel-to-learn programs
- Quality education at an affordable cost
UMASS BOSTON
To learn more, visit www.conted.umb.edu or call 617.287.6000

Collegian Sports The REAL March Mayhem

■ Minutemen

continued from page 10

both sides of the ball in the first half, only allowing the Minutemen to net five goals despite giving up the game's first goal at 14:15 of the first quarter on a John Madigan tally.

After the Madigan goal Brendan Hall was outstanding in the net as he turned aside 14 Minuteman shots in the first 30 minutes and finished the game with 22 saves.

In the end, it was the experience of the UMass squad that allowed for them to take control of the game and maintain it from the opening faceoff of the second half.

The Catamounts came into Amherst with a roster that had 18 freshman on it, and the elder Minutemen kept relentless pressure on for much of the game in and in the end it was enough to outlast the younger Vermont squad.

Navy 6, UMass 3

In a torrential downpour on the campus of Rutgers University, the No. 14 Minutemen dropped a heartbreaker to the No. 11 Midshipmen for their first loss in the newly formed ECAC conference.

Junior goaltender Chris Campolettano made 15 saves, but his effort was not enough to gain the Minutemen the win. The 15 saves is the second best effort of his career, behind a 16 save effort that he had against Hofstra University last season.

With the score knotted at three at the end of the first half Navy came out and scored three more goals while not allowing UMass to add to their game total.

Brett Duthie had the game-winning goal in the third quarter for Navy.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Cheap rent! Summer sublet with lease option starting June 1st. On bus route, 10 minutes from campus. 2 bedroom, 1 bath. $575/mo. Includes hot water. Call 259-2919.

Sublet my apartment. 2 bedroom for 6/1-9/1. On bus route. Call 253-9047.

Apply now for best locations. Amherst Center 1,2 and 3 bedroom apartments. Gas heat, hardwood floor. April showings for June and September. Lincoln Real Estate. No fees charged. 253-7879.

Apply now for best locations. 3 bedroom condos. Gas heat, hardwood floors, bright heated basement with study and laundry area. 1/2 mile to campus, on bus route. April showings for June and September. Lincoln Real Estate. No fees charged. 253-7879.

AUTO FOR SALE

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center. 545-1995.

EMPLOYMENT

Make a Difference AMERICORPS.ORG Joining AmeriCorps is a great way to get experience, take on new responsibilities and know the satisfaction of building a community. In exchange for a year of community service in the area sof public safety, education, human needs and the environment, AmeriCorps members receive an education award ($4725), a monthly stipend and health coverage.

$Fundraiser$ Open to student groups and organizations. Earn $5 per MC app. We supply all materials at no cost. Call for info or visit our website. 1-800-932-0528 ext 65 www.ocmconcepts.com

EMPLOYMENT

Summer Camp Staff. Coed overnight camp in southern Maine seeks staff: Girls/Boys Unit Heads (21+); Camping Director (21+); swim, waterski and boating/sailing instructors; arts & crafts, photography, low ropes, athletics, theater, camping, newspaper, general counselors and office personnel. For information contact: Ava Goldman, Director, JCC Camp Kingswood, 333 Nahanton St, Newton, MA 02459, (617)244-5124 or email: info@kingswood.org

Summer Employment; Outdoors. Weight loss/sports camp looking for energetic people to lead campers in a fun filled summer. Located in West Stockbridge, MA. in the heart of the Berkshires. Call for more information. Toll Free 877-FIT-CAMP. email marc@camp-kingsmont.com

EMPLOYMENT

Camp Canadensis, Pocono Mountains, PA. Premier residential coed summer camp. We are looking for energetic, qualified and caring staff to teach all general athletics, gymnastics, hockey, tennis, mountain bikes, golf, motorcycles, outdoor adventure, ropes, archery, drama, video, photography, fishing, WSI, waterfront activities, arts and crafts, cooking and much more! Excellent facilities and great salary! 6/21/00-8/18/00. Call (800)832-8228 or apply on-line: www.canadensis.com

Delivery persons wanted. Apply at D.P. Dough, downtown Amherst.

Movers: Local moving company is hiring individuals for moving positions. Flexibility and good attitudes are a must. Start at $8.00 per hour. Raise commensurate with performance. Call 584-4746.

EMPLOYMENT

Fall 200 Internships with the Student Legal Service Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field, work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary- training provided. Contact the Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

3 Job Opportunities on Nantucket Island, MA beginning May. A.) Office manager with good typing, computer and telephone skills. B.) Office assistant, errand runner, mother's helper, household help. C.) Auction gallary assistant: furniture porter, display, delivery. Salary and housing. Drivers liscence required. (508)228-3942 or send reume: P.O. Box 2607 Nantucket, MA 02548.

EMPLOYMENT

UAHC Crane Lake and Eisner Camps, Reform Jewish coeducational Camps located in the Berkshires of Massachusetts, seek qualified, dedicated counselors and specialists, including Waterfront, Athletics, Arts. Good salary, r&b included, travel assistance. Crane Lake Camp: Contact Brad Gerstle, 800-227-2660 ILUVCAMP@aol.com; www.cranelake-camp.com. Eisner Camp: Contact Louis Bordman, 212-650-4130 EISNERGUY@aol.com; www.eisner-camp.org

HEALTH & BEAUTY

Art of Living, United Nations recognized workshop in over 100 countries, now in Amherst. yoga, maditation and kriya to energise and release stress. 17 March to 22 March. Call Durgesh 549-5551.

MISCELLANEOUS

Million dollar game shows? Forget 'em! Bring your basketball brain to Shoot, Score and Win a million! at www.sixdegrees.com for tons of chances to win cash and prizes.

What do basketball tournament games, cash and prizes, and you have in common? Look for Shoot, Score and Win a Million! at sixdegrees.com to find out.

Get paid to lose weight and inches. All natural, doctor reccommended. 1-800-397-7715.

ROOM FOR RENT

Room in nice house. Bus route, washer, dryer. $350+ 548-7039.

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

STEREO EQUIPMENT

Boston Acoustic sub/sat series. Six 8" speakers with two 16" subwoofers. Also central channel speaker. $800 value for $300. Like brand new. Need money 586-0534.

TRAVEL

Be flexible...Save $$$. Europe $159(o/w + taxes). CHEAP FARES WORLDWIDE!! Mexico/Caribbean $199 (r/t + taxes) Call; 800-326-2009 www.4cheapair.com

Study Spanish. Internships in Guatemala. College Credit. www.casaxelaju.com (512)416-6991.

ROOM FOR RENT

House wanted: 3-4 bedroom house very close to campus. Wanted for rent starting 6/1. Please call Lia @ 2536378 w/any information.

Welcome Back!!

Place your ads here in The Collegian today!!

Call 545-3500

Five College Community Calendar

TUESDAY, MAR 21

Concert – A concert celebrating the 100th anniversary of composer John Duke's birth will be held at 12:30 p.m. in Sweeney Concert Hall, Sage Hall at Smith College.

Lecture – A lecture entitled "John Duke: A Perspective at Century's End" will be held at 5 p.m. in Earle Recital Hall, Sage Hall at Smith College.

Meeting – The UMass Ballroom Dance Club will meet at 8:30 p.m. in Totman 101. All are welcome.

Workshop – There will be a workshop on contraception and safer sex at 7 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services. Men and women are welcome.

NOTICES

Community – The UMass Police Department would like to invite female students and staff to partake in a women's self-defense course. The class requires a 14-hour commitment and runs from 6-9:30 p.m. each night. Registration is from 7:30-9 p.m. on March 24 and 25 at the UM police station and is first-come, first served. Classes for men are available upon request.

Community – Spring 2000 final examination schedules will be available beginning March 9. Copies will be delivered to students in residence halls, and will be available to off-campus students in the registrar's office. The schedule will be available on the web beginning March 1.

Community – Mass Appeal, the newest co-ed a cappella group at UMass, is looking for students to arrange music. Email Erica at massappeal@mailcity.com for more information.

Help – From Feb. 15-April 15 on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays from 5-8 p.m. students volunteers from the School of Management will assist non-resident aliens with the preparation of their Federal and State income tax returns. Call 545-5660 for more information.

Scholarships – The STEMTEC/NSF Teaching scholars program is offering scholarships to students who are interested in exploring a career in K-12 math or science teaching. Students do not need to be enrolled in a certificate program to apply. Applications are due by April 1. Contact Johanna at 545-0626 for more information.

Support – A grief support group is available to all students who have experienced the death of someone they love. The groups are free, small and confidential, and meet on Wednesday and Thursday evenings. Telephone pre-screening is required for enrollment. Call 577-5316 if interested.

Support – AL-ANON and ALATEEN are offering local meetings for those affected by someone else's drinking problem. Call 253-5261 for meeting times and locations.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

BOOKBUCKS From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks,* you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

Ustore CAMPUS CENTER Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

MONDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MARCH 20, 2000

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Antiques Roadshow		American Experience		American Experience "John Brown's Holy War" (In Stereo)
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	King	Grapevine	Raymond	Becker	Family Law "Playing God"		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	King	Grapevine	Raymond	Becker	Family Law "Playing God"		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	"A Tale of Two Bunnies" (2000, Comedy-Drama)		Martha Black		Peter Jennings Reporting		News	Nightline
WLVI		Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends	Nanny	7th Heaven (R) (In Stereo)		Buffy the Vampire Slayer		News		Friends	Nanny
WHDH		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Freaks and Geeks (In Stereo)		Twenty One (In Stereo)		Third Watch "Ohio" (In Stereo)	News		Tonight Show
WTXX	6	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Blind Date	Real TV (R)	Moesha	Partners	Grown Ups	Malcolm-Eddie	News	Real TV (R)	Blind Date	Change-Heart
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Freaks and Geeks (In Stereo)		Twenty One (In Stereo)		Third Watch "Ohio" (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Simpsons	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends	70s Show	Titus	Ally McBeal "Prime Suspect"		News		Friends	Frasier
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Freaks and Geeks (In Stereo)		Twenty One (In Stereo)		Third Watch "Ohio" (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	6	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Austin McDonald In Concert		Great Performances: My Favorite Broadway-Ladies				Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	28	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	"A Tale of Two Bunnies" (2000, Comedy-Drama)		Martha Black		Peter Jennings Reporting		News	Nightline
WSBK		Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	Moesha	Partners	Grown Ups	Malcolm-Eddie	Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		Med Abl. Tou	Judge Marilyn
WTBS		Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	NBA Basketball: Los Angeles Lakers at Miami Heat. (Live)					NBA Basketball	Boston Celtics at Phoenix Suns
A&E		L.A. Law "The Accidental Juror"	Law & Order "Discord"			Biography "Mackenzie Phillips"		Investigative Reports		City Confidential (R)		Law & Order "Blood Is Thicker"
CNN	23	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour	Crossfire		World Today		Larry King Live		Newsstand		Sports	Moneyline (R)
COM	39	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Exes "Paris Burton's Day Off" (1998, Comedy)	Matthew Broderick, Bill Sara.				Strangers	Upright	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC		Your New House (R)		Wild Discovery: Sharks		On the Inside "Diamonds"		Ultimate Guide "Human Body"		How Biased Are You?		Murder in Texas: Hate on Trial
ESPN		Sportscenter		College Basketball: NIT Second Round — Teams TBA				Women's College Basketball: NCAA Tourn. Second Round				Sportscenter
LIFE		Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait "Sally Field"		Exes "A Cry for Help: The Tracey Thurman Story" (1989, Drama)				"Cities Unheard: The Donna Yaklich Story" (1994,		Jackyn Smith
MTV		MTV Jams	Romeo Must	Spyrlgrs	Spyrlgrs Breaks	TRL Wanna	TRL (R) (In Stereo)		Road Rules	Make Video	Undressed	Romeo Must
NICK		All That	Catdog	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Thornberrys	Thornberrys	Brady Bunch	Bev. Hillbillies	All in Family	Jeffersons	I Love Lucy	Bewitched
SCIFI		Sliders "The Chasm" (In Stereo)	Outer Limits "Trial by Fire"			Outer Limits (In Stereo)		Outer Limits (In Stereo)		Outer Limits "Inconstant Moon"		Poltergeist: The Legacy
TLC	26	Home Again	Home Again	Tarnished Shield		Paramedics "Desert Jacqpot"		Paramedics (R)		Paramedics "It's the Peppa"		Paramedics "Desert Jacqpot"
TNT		In the Heat of the Night		ER "Point of Origin" (In Stereo)		WCW Monday Nitro (In Stereo Live)				era's "Stakeout" (1988, Drama)		Chuck Norris, Jonathan Brandis.
USA		Baywatch "Buried" (In Stereo)		JAG "The Adversaries"		Walker, Texas Ranger "Tibs"		WWF Raw		WWF War Zone		Pemculub.com (In Stereo)
HBO		(5:30) era's "White Mighty" (1965)	Mikhail Baryshnikov, 1975			Exes "Against the Wall" (1994, Drama)	Kelly MacGillis, Nick			Real Sports		Paradise Lost 2: Revelations
MAX		(5:00) era's "Braveheart" (1995, Drama)	Mel Gibson, Sof			era's "Shorts" (1998, Drama) Shonrol Brooks, W				Exes "Love at Last" (1999, Romance) Sam		Tilly"
SHOW		Exes "Just Write" (1997, Comedy)	Sheridan Penn, (In Stereo)	PCU (1		(4:5 "Kelly Reno" (1995, Comedy) Vinni Vaughn, Sc						Hoop Life

Nona By Anna Faktorovich

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Over the Hedge By Fry Lewis

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Room 207 By Kyle Thompson

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

Horoscopes

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – The slower way is no doubt the better way today; you are in no position – nor in any state of mind – to be doing things in a rushed fashion.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – Let yourself be ruled by your basic instincts today. Now is no time to keep passion in your pocket.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – You're sure to get in a fight or two today if you insist on taking criticism personally. Remember: it's all in the point of view.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – You'll be in the mood today, and the opportunity for exploring a fantasy or two is just around the corner. You can surprise someone today.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – Make it a point to ask questions today; the answers may not please you at first, but in the end you'll be able to work with incoming information.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Now is no time to be inflexible, particularly with a loved one. Remember, he or she has chosen to share your life – so you must share!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – The odds may be against you today, but you have what it takes to come through with flying colors. Now is not the time to share intimate secrets.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – There is room for some fun and games today, but only after you've addressed a pressing family issue. When all is said and done, harmony reigns.

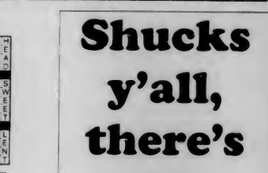
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – Trouble lurks around the next corner, and is bound to strike should you cast your eyes away from your primary goal even for a moment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – You may benefit from taking a different path from the one you originally selected. Today, improvisation can yield surprising results.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Your approach will be more direct than usual today, which is certainly saying a lot! Some may actually find you abrasive – temporarily.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – It is going to be difficult for you to find another to take your place today – not because no one is willing, but because no one is able.

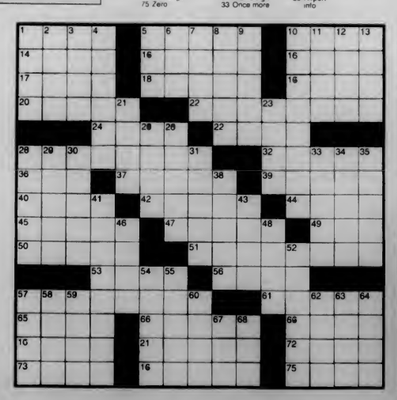
Quote of the Day



"Hey guys, my Indian name is 'Flowering Vagina'!"

–Kevin "the clutz" Santos

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED



ACROSS
1 Spotted animal
5 Extreme
10 Gutted
14 Territory
15 Sounded like Elise
16 Pledge
17 Pub missile
18 Teacher's charge
19 "Potent" start
20 Beer mug
22 Where to buy M&M's
24 "Sorry"
27 King's address
28 Minimize
32 Legerdemain
36 Psyche component
37 Jazz pianist Blake
39 Poe's first name
40 "Newsweek" rival
42 Spankle
44 Reasonable
45 — up the score tee
47 Santa's co-workers
49 It's charged!
50 Extend Life
51 Intensified
53 Cartoonist Goldberg
56 Lose traction
57 Broken-off part
61 Jeweled headdress
65 Hindu princess
66 Call to mind
69 Dross
70 Seabird
71 Hale-Bopp, for one
72 "Garfield" canine
73 Orange pekoe and Earl Grey
74 Dogtake scavenger
75 Zero

DOWN
1 Crazes
2 What the suspicious smell
3 Used to be
4 "— one — under God"
5 Ref.'s kin
6 Gymnast Mary — Retton
7 Pinnacles
8 Birdie parts
9 Ike's opponent
10 Library items
11 Ewe's offspring
12 Famous volcano
13 Buzzing sound
21 "Nothin' doin'" Manitoba tribe
23 Stopper
26 Valuable fur
28 Block
29 Pointed arch
30 Ladies
31 Traffic sign
33 Once more
34 River craft
35 Drift
38 Roof overhangs
41 Power sources
43 Earth inhabitants?
46 Used the pool
48 Type of curl
52 Light-bulb inventor
54 Nut-producing tree
55 Diplomat
57 Worry
58 Cooked just slightly
59 "— Karenina"
60 Heavy volume
62 Actor Ray
63 Drizzle
64 Film scriptwriter James
67 Barbie's boyfriend
68 Airport info

Shucks y'all, there's no menu today... (but we can always hope for fried fat back).

Night Editor: Vanessa Walker
Photo Technician: Kara Stokes
Copy Editor: Samantha Penner
Production Supervisor: Jeanette Santero
Production Staff: Katie Rose, Seth Koenig, Melaine Thomas

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of sports.

Page 10 — The Massachusetts Daily Collegian — Monday, March 20, 2000

UMass hoops finally hits the wall

Team's NIT stint short lived

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

ALBANY, NY – As the ball dropped harmlessly to the hardwood of the Pepsi Arena as time ran out, the 1999-2000 Massachusetts men's basketball team finally had to stop playing.

After prolonging their year a number of times in the final month of the regular season, the Minutemen came up one basket short of advancing to the second round of the National Invitational Tournament, losing to Siena College, 66-65.

Siena	66
UMass	65

With two victories in the Atlantic 10 tournament, before dropping a decision to eventual conference champ Temple, UMass had upped its victory total to 17. That would turn out to be enough to earn the team the right to face off against the Saints on Thursday in Albany, a squad that went 23-8 this season but was relegated to NIT competition because of a loss to Iona in the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference title game, 84-80.

The Minutemen (17-16) looked like they were going to cheat the end of the season again. With the boisterous, near-capacity crowd at the Pepsi Arena drowning out on-court communication, Siena (24-8) used two three-pointers to jump out to a 10-3 lead. Massachusetts took until the 6:39 mark to claw its way to a 20-19 advantage, its first of the game since guard Monty Mack opened the scoring with a shot from beyond the arc.

"They came out on fire in the first half. They hit a couple of bombs right off the bat," UMass coach Bruiser Flint said.

Two Mack free throws put the Minutemen up by one – a lead they didn't relinquish until the second half. Massachusetts enjoyed the upside of a 32-27 margin at halftime.

The Saints, led primarily by guard Marcus Faison, their leading scorer for each of the past three seasons, capitalized on the temporary losses of both UMass guards, Mack and Shannon Crooks, to retake the lead. Crooks left the game with 2:06 to go before the break after taking a shot to the nose, and came back with 12:15 showing in the final period. Mack subsequently had a brief visit with the trainer after ending up underneath a pile of aggressive Siena rebounders chasing a loose ball.

Still, Mack, who led the team with 20 points, and Crooks, who took the final shot, continued to play big roles.

Turn to HOOPS, page 7

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

The scowl says it all: Shannon Crooks' final shot against Siena simply would not lall, and so UMass did, 66-65.

UMass off to Iowa, NCAAs

By Gary Mendese
Collegian Staff

Iowa City, here we come.

Once again, the Massachusetts men's gymnastics team made a permanent mark in UMass gymnastics history, as it completely dominated the ECAC Championships on Saturday leading the Minutemen to their second consecutive win. The 2000 ECAC Champions now advance to the NCAA National Qualifier, which is to be held at the University of Iowa on March 30.

With nailed routines on virtually every event, UMass said good night to archrival Temple University with a final season-high mark of 224.20 to the Owls' 220.65. But judging from the way the Minutemen performed just a week ago, this season high was very predicable to say the least.

Last week, the No. 14 Minutemen traveled to West Point where they took on Army and No. 13 Illinois-Chicago. To UIC's dismay, UMass walked all over the Flames with a 222.775 to 220.700 victory. Determined to prove that they belonged at NCAAs this year, the Maroon and White put forth their best effort, and it certainly paid off, as they painfully extinguished the No. 13 team.

Starting UMass on a good note, junior Clayton Kent posted a season-high 9.40 on the floor exercise, placing him fourth overall. And just two rotations later, Kent had the best routine for the Minutemen on the still rings, which gave him a third-place finishing 9.35. Senior Jeff LaVallee, who sat out of the all-around for the meet, won the gold on the pommel horse with a 9.75, barely trailed by freshman Justin Hammar who posted a 9.65.

Over on the vault, junior Bryan McNulty snagged the first place spot with a high mark of 9.625, while freshman Brent Nelligan took the silver with a career-high 9.50. And on high bar, Connecticut native Andy Leis took first overall with a 9.550.

While their final team score wasn't very high last week defeating UIC showed the world that they deserved to go to NCAAs and gave them the confidence they needed to reclaim the title as ECAC Champions. The only obstacle they had was Temple University. And on Saturday night, UMass walked all over the little Owls and sent them back to Pennsylvania with nothing in their hands except wads of tear-filled Kleenex.

Led by LaVallee, UMass cleaned house. LaVallee placed first in the all-around competition with a season-high score of 58.10, beating out Temple's Mike Moran by over a point and a half (56.50). The Olympic hopeful placed

Turn to GYM, page 6

Third period curse: UMass loses two to BU

By Bryan Smith
Collegian Staff

BOSTON – It was a season in Hockey East that was wide open. From top to bottom, teams were battling it out for playoff position. The Massachusetts hockey team grabbed the final playoff spot, holding off Lowell, but by capturing the eight spot its task at hand would be a matchup with regular season champion Boston University.

As if playing the No. 1 seed was not enough, the Minutemen would be forced to do so at Walter Brown Arena, the home of the Terriers, a place that they had not dropped a game all season.

BU finished its home season undefeated and ended the UMass season with two impressive wins. The Minutemen dropped the first game of the best-of-three series by a 4-2 margin, and subsequently were sent packing with a 5-2 loss the following night.

BU 4, UMass 2

Just as the Terriers had done all season in the third period, they came out with a lot of bark. But unlike their effort in the first two frames, they were able to finish with the bite on this night.

With the score tied at one apiece heading into the third period, the Terriers wanted to avoid dropping the first game of a best-of-three series (something that they had done in 1998 when Merrimack defeated BU in another No. 1/No. 8 series). The Warriors went on to win that series, but the Terriers, with those memories in the back of their minds, came up with three goals to take the opening game this year.

BU scored two goals in the opening 35 seconds of the third period and never looked back. Carl Corazzini grabbed a 2-1 lead at the 17 second mark of the period with a power play goal and Jack Baker added another tally 18 seconds later to give the Terriers a 3-1 advantage.

Spotting BU the two early goals did not make the Minutemen roll over and play dead. UMass battled, as it had done all season against the Terriers, and brought the game to within a goal only moments later.

Senior assistant captain Jeff Blanchard scored to make the game 3-2, but BU responded by adding another goal midway through the period on a John Sabo score.

Despite allowing four goals, junior goaltender Markus Helanen made 38 saves and kept the Minutemen in the game for much of the contest. Although the Maroon and White scored two goals on the night, the offense was nonexistent for most of the game; UMass mustered a meager 15 shots on freshman goaltender Rick DiPietro.

"It can be a funny night for the other goalie, too," UMass head coach Joe Mallen said. "DiPietro played well, but with that low number of shots on goal you're just hoping that he's going to be caught napping on a night like that."

BU took a 1-0 lead at the 4:05 mark of the first period when Baker scored the first of his two goals on the evening. The score remained that way until Joey Culgin got UMass

Turn to HOCKEY, page 7

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

BU freshman John Sabo nets the final goal in the Minutemen's 4-2 loss in Game 1 of the Hockey East quarterfinals at Walter Brown Aena.

Golden revenge for UM

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

Heading into a shootout, it's a good idea to pack plenty of ammo. Especially when you've got sweet revenge in your sights.

The No. 11 Massachusetts women's water polo team (13-5) fired on all cylinders as it captured second place at last week's Davis shootout in Davis, CA. The Maroon and White blew away Santa Clara 6-1 and No. 17 Indiana 8-2 in tourney-opening action, then dropped a 9-7 squeaker to Loyola Marymount before gunning down the host Aggies, 6-4.

"The focus of our trip was to go out there and play well," UMass coach Dan McOsker said. "We know we can play at the level of those teams, it was just a matter of us wanting it enough."

Umass' win over UC-Davis provided a double dose of payback for McOsker's troops, who had lost a 6-2 contest to the Aggies the previous Friday and needed no reminding of their first round loss to Davis in last year's Nationals.

Golden State native Amy Black proved to be UMass' most effective weapon against Davis, as the Fremont product rifled home a pair of goals. The team's depth proved to be the difference in the contest, though, as four different Minutewomen – Claudia Clement, Megan Perry, Sarah Newell, and Kelly Chassy – each found the back of the Davis net.

Offense was also the focal point of the showdown with Loyola Marymount, as UMass enjoyed a seven-goal assault led by senior All-American Katie Grogan's hat trick. Guam import Clement provided a double shot of scoring punch as well for the Minutewomen, along with goals from Perry and Chassy.

The Maroon and White's domination of Santa Clara turned into a personal showcase for Grogan, who netted four goals to lead the UMass onslaught. Clement again provided the ultimate scoring complement to Grogan, while another Newell – freshman Mattie – also paid dividends for McOsker's marauders with a goal. Second-year goalkeeper Dana Sinkwich, also a California original, racked up five saves over the course of the win.

"Dana really carried the team defensively, throughout the trip," McOsker said. "She played fantastic in every game."

Sophomore sensation Anne Detloff provided the fireworks in UMass' rout of ranked Indiana, rocking the Hoosiers with five goals. Fellow second-year standout Perry was once again a part of the Minutewomen's supporting cast of scoring, as were freshmen Black and Rosie Baker.

UMass improved to 2-0 all-time versus Indiana, including an 8-3 win earlier this year.

Next up for the Maroon and White was a detour through San Jose, where the No. 5 Spartans would provide the toughest of the trip's competition. UMass played a brilliant first half and left the pool in a 0-0 halftime lock, but ended up on the short end of a 5-2 final.

The Minutewomen concluded their West Coast swing with a trip to Stockton, CA, where they downed No. 16 Pacific by a final score of 4-3. Chassy ended up playing the hero against the Tigers, rocketing home the game-winning goal (her second score of the contest) with 4:35 remaining in the fourth quarter.

Stat sheet mainstays Grogan and Clement again chipped in with one score apiece, and Sinkwich's three saves were enough to keep Pacific at bay.

UMass lacrosse squads net mixed results over Spring Break slate

By Bryan Smith
Collegian Staff

UMass 14, Vermont 6

It was a must win game for the No. 17 Massachusetts men's lacrosse team in a non-league matchup with Vermont. The Minutemen rose to the challenge and left Richard F. Garber Field with an impressive 14-6 victory over the Catamounts.

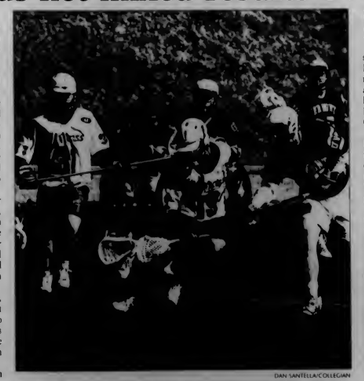
UMass	14
Vermont	6

The difference in the game was a nine-goal second half, an output that was unable to be overcome by the visitors. UMass came out storming in the second half. Marc Morley scored the first goal of the second half 43 seconds in to push the lead UMass lead to 6-3. After the Morley goal, the Maroon and White netted three more before Vermont was able to put another one up on the scoreboard. Mike Janowicz, Jeremy Gurki, and Rich Kunkel's goals made the score 9-3.

"Vermont cared about the game more than us in the first half," head coach Greg Canella said. "They out ground balled us, they out hustled us, their goalie outsaved us. I said [in the locker room] 'You guys have to care, it's up to you, you have 30 minutes to do it.'"

The second half explosion kept the young Vermont squad at bay and in the end proved too much for them to handle.

Balanced scoring was the key for the Minutemen squad as 11 different players tallied at least one goal. UMass was led by Kunkel who finished the game with three goals to go along with an assist. With his four points on the day the junior attacker brought his point total to ten on the young season (7 goals, 3 assists).



Navy	6
UMass	3

Not to be outdone was fellow junior attacker Kevin Dell, who left the field with a goal and three assists. The four points moved Dell into a tie for second place on the team with eight points (4 goals, 4 assists).

"Kevin is one of our best players, obviously," Canella said. "He's not starting now, but he likes that role to come off the bench. Part of his game is quickness and he brings that out on the field. We consider him a starter even though he doesn't start the game."

Vermont played a solid game on

Turn to MINUTEMEN, page 7

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

Freshman Kevin Leveille and junior Jason Jennings, two Minutemen who are key role players for UMass, get involved in the pursuit of a ground ball.

UMass lacrosse squads net mixed results over Spring Break slate

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

Despite strong efforts in the season's two opening games, the Massachusetts women's lacrosse team must fight its way out of an 0-2 hole after losing heartbreakers to Harvard, 7-6, and No. 17 Cornell, 10-6.

Harvard	7
UMass	6

Facing the Top 20 Big Red in Ithaca, NY, the Minutewomen fell behind 7-0 by halftime. The powerful Cornell squad was fueled by hat tricks by Jamiee Reynolds and Lori Wohlschlegel in their eventual ten goals, but UMass went down kicking.

Approximately 12 minutes into the final period, junior Fay Naber put a Noelle Gorski pass into the Red net. Naber struck again later, using an assist by Rachel Ingraffea to diminish the lead to just five, 7-2.

Cornell	10
UMass	6

Down 8-2, the Minutewomen heated up again. Seniors Stephanie Pavlick, Rebecca Minaker, and Melissa Miele each whipped unassisted scores by Cornell netminder Carrie Giancola, whose nine saves were outdone by UMass keeper Jen Nardi's 15.

Still, Massachusetts was unable to finish off the comeback, allowing the Big Red to wrestle its way back out to a five-point advantage, 10-5. Cornell was able to keep the Minutewomen at arm's length from then on out, with only Gorski breaking through the opposing defenses, finishing off the scoring at 10-6.

UMass could only muster six in its opening game at Garber Field in the freezing rain as well. The Harvard Crimson, which had been dealt game one losses by the Maroon and White in each of the previous two years, outscored the defensive-minded Minutewomen, 7-6.

"It was sloppy weather," UMass coach Phil Barnes said. "It was rain, it was hail, it was ice. It's not your typical playing conditions, but it's no reason not to [play well]."

A third of the Massachusetts scoring came off the stick of Pavlick, who netted two goals after the Crimson broke out to a 2-0 lead to start the game. Pavlick and freshman standout Lydia Robinson each pitched in a score to even things out, leaving the score tied at two at halftime.

Turn to MINUTEWOMEN, page 7

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Volume CVI Issue 51 — Tuesday, March 21, 2000

SGA, Howe clarify signature count

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

As the result of a counting error in the nomination papers made by the Student Government Association (SGA) Election Commission, President Jeff Howe ended up being one nomination signature short of potentially being allowed to appear on the ballot for re-election as SGA President.

However, after review, the commission rejected the charge stating that it had been their error by the Elections Commission and that Howe shouldn't be dismissed from the electoral process. Howe is joined by Seth Avakian, who is running for trustee. Opposing the two are the pairs Jim Eltringham and Asif Sayani, and Phil Zetye and Andy Foley.

The decision was made by the Election Commissioners and Chancellor of Election Jeremy Rouille, who stated that candidates are only required to get 250 signatures. According to the SGA Constitution, the bi-laws of the electoral process state that the Election Commission is required to label the number of signatures up to 250.

Rouille admitted that a copying error caused the numbering to be counted incorrectly, and said that Howe received signatures up to the 250 mark, thinking that he had gotten the required number.

"We're here to make sure things go right and they should trust us if we say something," Rouille said. "We said that line was 250 and it wasn't. It was not their fault. It was us unintentionally misleading."

Rouille said that they didn't perceive of their error until well into the afternoon of the day in which the nomination papers were due. He stated that the error was brought before him by the Republican Club and then was passed on to two of the presidential candidates. He stated that Howe was not informed.

"The Republican Club were the ones who noticed it and told me about it, so they took care of it," Rouille said. "They told me later on; [candidates] Zetye and Foley figured it out on their own and I couldn't get a hold of Jeff [Howe] until it was too late."

Rouille stated that when the mistake was brought to his attention, it was too late to notify Howe, who was attending a meeting at the time. Two SGA members sought to receive more signatures for Howe within the hour that was remaining before nomination forms had to be handed in.

Rebecca Weiner, a junior communications major was the last student to sign Howe's nomination form.

"I was in the SGA Resource Room and someone asked me if I would sign the nomination form because they needed a couple more signatures," Weiner said. "It wasn't the person who was running."

Presidential and Trustee Election Candidate Debates will take place tonight at 7:30 p.m. on the campus television station UVC Channel 19

Jeff Howe – President
Seth Avakian – Trustee

Jim Eltringham – President
Asif Sayani – Trustee

Phil Zetye – President
Andy Foley – Trustee

Voting will be Thursday and Friday from 11 a.m.- 2 p.m. and 4-7 p.m. at the Dining Commons and Campus Center Concourse

Coverage of all candidates will be included in Thursday's edition of the Collegian.

Meanwhile, Howe stated he was not at fault for coming up short of nomination signatures. According to him, he got the required number according to the nomination form, and even with the error, he should not be held responsible or thrown out of the election.

"I got over the amount they had designated to be 250 just to be safe so that I had a little bit of insurance in case some of my signatures weren't valid," Howe said. "I didn't double check it because it is the job of the Election Commission to provide a spreadsheet that is adequate in mind with what the constitution and bi-laws state."

Howe had been absent from the past two Senate meetings and allegations had been made that he was not doing his job and as a result, failed to get the required number of signatures.

"That's absolutely false," Howe said. "In addition to trying to be a candidate, I'm also the president of the university so I have a job to do and part of my job is to respond to campus needs. Half the time we had some serious issues going on campus that needed to be dealt with prior to me going out and getting these 250 signatures."

According to Howe, he received the extra signatures that he believed would place him over the 250 mark, but even with those, he said he ended up still being short 18 signatures.

"I went above and beyond the number of 250 based on what was put forward to me," Howe said. "As far as I knew when I was handing in my nomination papers, I was handing in papers that had the represented 250 and an additional 10 to 15 signatures for insurance. I couldn't have followed the directions closer to the way they were written."

Rouille agreed with Howe, stating that he should not be held responsible for coming up short of the required number of signatures. According to Rouille, all nomination forms had been numbered incorrectly. However, Howe was the only one of the six candidates applying for the president and trustee position to come up short of signatures as a result of the error.

Howe stated that this is his third year applying for an office and he is aware of the required procedure and only went as far as was required of him in getting the 250 signatures. He said some candidates go far beyond what was required because they use the nomination papers as a campaigning tool.

"Other candidates use nomination papers as a campaigning tool and at the time, I did not think that was necessary and appropriate," Howe said. "I got what I was required to get to appear on the ballot."

According to Howe, even with such small errors, the nomination and election process has always been fair and accurate. He stated that two years ago, the Election Commissioner, not Rouille at the time, was less than responsible and the election had to be thrown out. In addition, three candidates were removed from the ballot for allegedly stealing money and using improper campaigning tools.

Since Rouille has assumed office, there have been three successful SGA Senate and President and Trustee elections, Howe said.

Rouille said that under no circumstances since he's assumed the position does he feel that the Election Commission itself has ever mishandled the election process. In regards to the numbering error, he said it was his fault for not double-checking.

According to Rouille, once the Commission ruled that Howe was eligible to run, it was final, but stated that the argument could be appealed to the Student Judiciary if a student were to disagree with the Commission's course of action. Under this circumstance, another ruling would be made as to whether Howe would be allowed to assume Presidential office if elected.

Rouille stated that for now, Howe will be on the ballot this week and will not be held responsible for coming up one signature short.

"Before we even looked at any of them [nomination papers], we said that as long as they reached the 250 mark, we'd count it as 250 because of our misleading," Rouille said. "It just so happened that Jeff was the only one [to be misled]."

I'm Dizzy already

Janis Deagle, junior biotech major, sits astride Dizzy before their Advanced riding class yesterday at Hadley Farm.

Pig cloning successful

By Rick Weiss
Washington Post

The announcement last week that scientists had created the world's first litter of cloned pigs marked a milestone in the century-long quest to use animals as a source of organs for transplantation into humans.

But significant technical hurdles will have to be cleared if pigs are to solve the chronic organ shortage that allows tens of thousands of patients to die on waiting lists every year.

Scientists trying to overcome those difficulties are focusing on pigs because pig organs are about the right size to fit inside people, and because porcine physiology is reasonably similar to human physiology. That means a pig kidney, for example, can probably do for a person everything a human kidney is designed to do.

But that doesn't mean those organs are welcome in the human body. Most animal organs are subject to an intense rejection reaction mounted by the recipient's immune system. To make matters worse, that reaction is actually a series of attacks, each involving a different biological weapon and each having to be countered individually if an animal organ is to survive inside its new host.

"There are all kinds of molecular roadblocks," said Harvard immunologist Fritz Bach, an expert in cross-species, or "xeno," transplants. Even if the initial rejection reaction is overcome, Bach said, delayed and chronic rejection reactions will remain to be tackled. "It may be quite a problem," he said.

The first challenge is the "hyperacute" rejection reaction – a horribly rapid and intense response that can leave a transplanted organ black, bloated and dead within minutes.

Legal plan attracts many workers

By Albert B. Crenshaw
Washington Post

It was a quiet year in the tax precincts of Capitol Hill as Congress, after two years of heavy tinkering, decided to give taxpayers a breather.

The lawmakers did target some people, such as everyone who wants to sell a small business on the installment plan, forcing them to pay tax on all the sales proceeds in one year despite not actually receiving the money. But beyond that they made only modest revisions in the tax laws for 1999.

As a result, returns this year will look a lot like last year's, which will make things a bit easier for taxpayers and preparers alike.

There were some changes, though, and you should be alert for them. Many are beneficial, if you qualify, and overlooking them is simply money out of your pocket and into the government's.

Among them:

The home office deduction. It's "back in play again," said Bruce Wertheim of the New York office of KPMG, the big accounting firm. After a lengthy legal battle in the early 1990s, in which the IRS lost in the lower courts but ultimately prevailed in the Supreme Court, the rules on home office deductions were sharply tightened. Now Congress has overridden the high court, and effective for 1999 taxpayers are allowed to deduct a home office if they do substantial administrative or managerial work there, even though the actual income-producing part of their work takes place elsewhere.

And a home office continues to be deductible, of course, if it is your principal place of business, or you meet clients there.

But remember, Wertheim said, the part of your home used for business doesn't qualify for the $250,000 ($500,000 for a couple) capital gains exclusion on sale of a principal residence.

The child-care credit. A couple of years ago, Congress built into the law a credit for families with children under 17. That credit was $400 per child for 1998. For 1999, it rose to $500.

Self-employment. People who

Turn to LEGAL, page 2

BRIAN RODRICK/COLLEGIAN

Why isn't everyday St. Patrick's Day?

Former Mayor Ray Flynn and his companion pauses for a photo opportunity with UMass students Matt Mertz, Mike Murphy, Daren Poles and Tammy McNamara in South Boston on Sunday.

Amphibians begin annual migration

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

Residents of Massachusetts may be in for a surprise one rainy night in the upcoming weeks when millions of both salamanders and frogs will slither out of hiding and travel across the state.

According to Scott Jackson, a wildlife biologist in the department of natural resources conservation and extension educator for UMass Extension cites the reason for the migration as the beginning of the amphibian breeding season. The amphibian species will soon emerge from their underground boroughs and begin their annual migration to the wetlands.

Jackson commented in a previous interview with the press: "Forty degrees and pouring rain isn't what most people think is a good night to go out but it suits salamanders and some frogs just fine," he said.

He went on to explain that the animals move in the dark and in the rain to avoid predators and to keep from drying out. He also commented that the steads rain helps to signal to the amphibians that the vernal pools will be filled enough with water to accommodate breeding.

The pools themselves are small bodies of water that are often mistaken for overgrown mud puddles. These pools, which typically disappear later in the springtime, are sometimes found in wooded areas, open fields and even in suburban neighborhoods. The amphibians themselves prefer the vernal pools to other bodies of water for safety issues and use these vernal pools to prevent other fish from attacking.

"The amphibians like to go to the breeding areas early in the season, usually in March, because the earlier they breed, the longer their young have to grow before the pool dries up," Jackson explained.

Once the breeding season begins the pools will hold from a few dozen to several hundred salamanders and handfuls of many thousand wood frogs. Larger pools may contain 5,000 salamanders and hundreds of thousands of frogs. Typically male amphibians will migrate first followed by the females.

The salamanders planning to migrate in Massachusetts are primarily three types of amphibians. The first a spotted salamander is the most typically seen in the area. The other two, the Jefferson and the blue-spotted, are listed as species of special concern or threatened species in Massachusetts. Wood frogs, the most cold-adapted amphibian in the area, will also be following similar routes for migration.

Jackson advised those that were interested in studying the amphibians to handle them with care and to return them to their homes in the vernal pool after about three days.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 43 LOW: 31	HIGH: 49 LOW: 36	HIGH: 63 LOW: 36

SOURCE: CNN.COM

ED/OP PAGE 4
Something to think about — Collegian columnist Laura Siciliano tells a little about her feelings on some subjects... so stop staring! Check out the Ed/Op page inside!

ARTS PAGE 5
Can't judge a band by its name... — The Suicide Machines have tossed their hat into the ring of radio-friendly pop rockers, and we have the review. Also, take a look at our slightly belated box office report. Arts: water twice daily for optimum growth.

SPORTS PAGE 8
A Tale of two coaches — Big changes are coming for the head one of UMass major sports programs, while one will stay put. We have the facts, just the facts, ma'am, on the Collegian Sports page.

Arts & Living 5
Comics 7
Classifieds 6
Editorial 3
News 2
Sports 8
Jewish Affairs 4

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

Police Log

Accidents
Mar. 9
A rear collision at a crosswalk was reported in lot #34.
An unknown vehicle reportedly struck a parked car in lot #12.

Mar. 11
UMass police assisted Hadley police in an accident on Stadium Drive.

Arrests
Mar. 9
Christopher I. Vaitsos, 21, of Guilford Conn. was arrested in the Hasbrouck Laboratory and charged with possession of a class A substance, possession of a class B substance with intent to distribute and possession of a class D substance with intent to distribute.
Kyle A. Sllaurent, 21, of Brimfield was arrested in the Lederle Research Low rise for an outstanding warrant.
Frankie T. Davoli, 20, of Marlborough was arrested and charged with trespassing.

Mar. 10
Chawon Lee, 20, of Charlotte, NC was arrested in Cashin dorm for an outstanding warrant.

Mar. 13
Mert Kara, 23, of Amherst was arrested in Dickinson Hall for an outstanding warrant.

Mar. 16
Russell Mattiner, 27, of Amherst was arrested in Lot M3 and charged with operating a vehicle with a suspended license, driving a vehicle without an inspection sticker and for an outstanding warrant.

Larceny
Mar. 9
A cell phone was reported stolen from the Campus Center.
An incident of shoplifting was reported at the Franklin Munchy Store.
Mar. 10
An individual was observed stealing food from the Worcester DC.
A license plate was reported stolen from a vehicle in lot #49.

Vandalism
Mar. 15
Damage to a vehicle was reported in lot #12.

Misc.
Mar. 14
Police were called in to check on the well being of a duck from the campus pond.

Did you know that the Daily Collegian is funded solely on advertising revenue?

DO YOU WANT A JOB THAT MATTERS?

become an "advertising account executive." The Daily Collegian is looking for outgoing, motivated students interested in earning money while gaining experience!

Fill out an application and bring a resume to 113 Campus Center Basement, attn: Christine Carroll by March 24th.

■ legal

continued from page 1

work for themselves and buy health insurance can deduct 60 percent of the premium, up from 45 percent a year earlier.

Student loans. The Tax Reform Act of 1986 deemed student loans to be personal interest and therefore not deductible. In recent years, however, Congress has been restoring at least some of the deduction, and for 1999 taxpayers are allowed to deduct up to $1,500 in interest.

Capital gains. If the only capital gain you have to report is a distribution from a mutual fund, you may be able to enter it directly on line 13 of your Form 1040, rather than filling out the relatively complicated Schedule D. This is a nice simplification that many small investors will find helpful.

There are also the usual pitfalls – or traps for the unwary, as tax professionals like to call them.

One that Vienna, Va., CPA Arthur Auerbach points to is reporting of stock-trading profits. The date for deciding when a gain is recognized for tax purposes is the trade date, not the settlement date, he noted, and Dec. 31, 1999, was a trading day.

Thus taxpayers who sold shares on Dec. 31 – or any day in late December – and made money must report the gain in 1999 even though the settlement did not take place until January 2000.

KPMG's Wertheim added that the same is true for takeovers and mergers. The date for determining when a gain is recognized is the date the deal closed, so if a deal closed Dec. 31, taxable profits are income for 1999.

Wertheim recalled a startled and unhappy client with a large win on a takeover deal. The client thought, since he didn't get he money until January, that it would be included in his 2000 income. And because he didn't plan for it he might be out of whack on his estimated taxes as well.

Day traders also should be aware of the wash-sale rules if they have a number of buy and sell transactions in the same stock. Losses are not deductible if you sold a security and within 30 days before or after that date bought the same stock. Gains are taxable, however.

Another hazard is the creeping alternative minimum tax. The AMT was originally aimed at the rich, to make sure they paid at least some tax. But its formulas have not been adjusted for inflation and it can now hit some upper-middle-income families. Simply stated, under the AMT taxpayers are required to calculate their taxes the normal way and then recalculate them using a different rate and adding back in certain tax "preferences" such as personal exemptions and deductions for state and local taxes.

THE COLLEGIAN

Plan Ahead For Next Year...

Excellent Location... ½ Mile From UMass
Spacious Apartments - 1, 2 and 3 Bedroom Townhouse
All Rents Include Heat, Hot Water and Cooking Gas

PUFFTON VILLAGE

Office Hours: 8 am to 4:30 pm Monday - Friday
(413) 549-0145

Sophomores – Juniors – Freshmen

US Resident 3.5 GPA Want to study abroad
Come to the ONSA
Scholarship Information Session
When: Wednesday, March 22
7:30-9:00 pm
Where: Campus Center 101

You are invited to attend the upcoming Office of National Scholarship Advisement (ONSA) information session to learn more about national, competitive scholarships.

Many of these scholarships require students to begin preparing for the application process well in advance of fall deadlines, so take the opportunity to get information now.

If you are unable to attend the information session but would still like to learn more about national, competitive scholarships, please feel free to contact the ONSA office by e-mail at onsa@acad.umass.edu or by phone at 577-2610.

Fulbright Marshall Rhodes
NSEP Glamour USA Today

Scholarships – Fellowships

How do I look for an off-campus apartment?

How do I sublet my apartment/ house for the summer?

Who is going to take over my lease?

Have questions?
The Apartment Guide
We have ANSWERS!

Issue date March 27th
Special classified section 20 cents/word taken at Collegian Newspaper Stand next to UStore

The Index Yearbook
UMASS
ATTENTION!!!
CLASS OF 2000
ABSOLUTE LAST CHANCE FOR SENIOR PORTRAITS
MARCH 27TH-31ST
Make your appointment now by calling 1-800-OUR-YEAR or log on to www.ouryear.com
School Access #147
(You need to know the access number when you make the appointment)

Order Your 2000 Yearbook
ONLY $50.00
Log on to www.walsworth.com or Call 1-800-929-1503
(Service Charge of $2.95 for orders placed by phone)

DAVOR PHOTOGRAPHY
Walsworth Publishing Company

Campus Summer Job
Full-time
Visitors Center

The Robsham Visitors Center has an opening for one full-time undergraduate student to serve as a "Student Greeter and Information Specialist." Period of employment is from May 30 through September 1 - weekdays, 9:00 am - 4:30 pm. Applicants must be in good academic standing and have completed at least two semesters at the University. Other prerequisites include, but are not limited to, ability to relate and communicate easily and effectively, knowledge of the campus - facilities, services and programs. Pay rate range $7.00-8.00, depending on experience. Car desirable. Interview required. Applications available at Visitors Center. For further information call Jan Helgerson at 545-0306.

Our Opinion
Voter turnout troubling

Student Government Association elections are just two days away, something that is simultaneously exciting and extremely troubling.

The upcoming elections are exciting in that students are once again given the chance to choose the leaders that will represent on the UMass campus, in the Commonwealth and, possibly, throughout the nation. Elected students will bear a huge responsibility to represent the students of this campus in an attempt to do well by those same students.

But at the same time, the SGA will have a hard time gauging what students want if students don't vote, a problem that reflects poorly on both the campus and the SGA itself. Obviously, it reflects poorly on the student body who will be described as apathetic and uncaring about their student leadership, negative statements to be sure, but considering the time-frame of the upcoming elections, Is it really any surprise that so few students will probably vote?

Students will have been campaigning by the first day of the elections, Thursday, for only five days. Five days.

This is totally unacceptable, especially when the five days are separated by nine days of Spring Break and that so few students are on campus the Friday before Spring Break.

Can any students honestly be expected to make an informed decision with only five days of campaigning? Can candidates be expected to introduce themselves to the campus with only five days of campaigning?

They absolutely cannot, and as a result, low voter turnout will again be an issue for the SGA to deal with, and while It will always be somewhat of an issue, as low voter turnout always is, the SGA should really plan their elections better in an attempt to encourage higher student turnout. One possible, and quite obvious, solution is to simply increase the amount of time for campaigning from five days to some fixed increment of time.

For example, two weeks of campaigning prior to elections, giving candidates a chance to talk to buildings, Registered Student Organizations and other interested individuals would allow for candidates to be more immediately visible and would allow for a more in-depth debate on issues that matter to students.

As it stands, the only real debate on any issue will occur tonight on UVC-19, an event that will bring all candidates together but that has gone, unfortunately, without hype from any campus circles, thus meaning that the students who will tune in will probably already be planning to vote and will already know who they plan to vote for. Media events like televised debates should bring students to the polls who weren't planning on voting, rather than just encouraging students to vote for candidates that they had already chosen.

Hopefully, whichever candidate wins the Thursday and Friday elections will seriously examine such low voter turnout in an attempt to find solutions. If not a longer amount of campaigning, the SGA must quickly address why voter turnout is so abominably low every year.

An effective government is made all the more powerful when it can maintain that It represents a high number of students. Unfortunately, that goal is only achieved after students turn out to vote.

UMass involvement with sweatshops must end now

We can be choking of thirst and they don't let us go drink water." Comments like this, from a female apparel worker in Honduras, are compelling students, professors and recently administrators to say no to UMass' possible involvement in the business of sweatshops.

In China, Mexico, El Salvador, Dominican Republic, Guatemala, Honduras, and Haiti, workers in maquilas (or sweatshops) sew American clothing for 14 to 33 cents an hour, working 12 or more hours a day, six to seven days a week.

For some, their job is to sew "UMASS" on to sweatpants and tee shirts. In the mean time, our school makes about $350,000 a year in royalties, and from licensing its logo to the apparel companies who produce our clothing. The companies gain a huge market share of college students, while the new, for-profit University Store enjoys its cut.

But Rosa Martinez goes to bed hungry. She only takes home about $1 a day, not even enough to buy a can of soup. By nightfall, she has performed 1500 operations on Gap shirts that will each sell for $20 in the US. The total labor cost for one shirt? Twelve cents.

And the human cost? Ninety-five percent of people working in sweatshops are young women, most of whom have a 6th grade education at best. At sixteen they are the most valuable, as they are considered to be at the peak of their eye-hand coordination. The apparel makers (subcontractors who make clothing for Nike, Gap, etc.) boast in their advertisements of their young workers' "industriousness," making statements like, "You can hire her for just 33 cents an hour."

The late Jorge Sierra, a labor rights activist, put it this way, "For a 15-year-old girl, who is just beginning to feel life, to fall into a maquila is to fall into a deep, dark well. She must cease to be a person. She must become a cog in the wheel, which is only important to the degree that it makes the machine of the maquila function. The process of human advancement is closed off."

What do some of the workers say? "Since this morning, I have not eaten. I have nothing to feed my family," said one Disney worker in Haiti.

"My children don't eat," said another. "I live on credit. The quota they give us [at work] is hard to make. When I go home I collapse. We are like the living dead."

"When they yell at you, they also hit," said a Honduran worker. Another added, "They gave me birth control pills. They say it's for malaria. But it's a lie. They don't leave until you take them...in front of the supervisors."

Many employers force their female workers to take birth control pills to prevent them from leaving due to pregnancy. The employers don't want to pay maternity leave, and they don't want any slowing of production that might imperil their relationships with the US companies. But what if the women refuse the pills anyway, or the pills don't work?

"If they do become pregnant," said a 15-year-old worker, "they give them a shot to abort the baby. They make her buy the injection [and they] kill the baby inside."

So what can we do back at UMass? Spread the word. Check out www.nlcnet.org, the site of the National Labor Committee, and come to a meeting of the UMass Students Against Sweatshops. They meet every Wednesday at 6 in the Draper Hall library. This group formed in September and is pushing quickly and valiantly toward a sweat-free UMass.

You may have heard on the radio recently that the administration is forming a committee to explore the idea of hiring a sweatshop monitor. This is an independent group that goes around the "Third World" and inspects clothing factories — it then sends back recommendations to its client (UMass) as to whether or not each factory is a sweatshop. We then decide if we want to do business with that apparel company.

But a word of caution: while the administration deserves credit for addressing the issue, it must do the right thing and hire the right kind of monitor. The Fair Labor Association (FLA) is the most popular but also the most compromised. It was created, in part, by the companies in question! After a closer look at the FLA, one can see that it will have little or no impact on the spread of sweatshop abuse.

Therefore, our school must join the Workers' Rights Consortium (WRC). The WRC is a truly independent monitor to whom we can trust to produce fair and unbiased reports of working conditions in the factories that make UMass apparel.

Finally, It is crucial that ALL members of our campus community have an equal say in both the selection of a monitor and the analysis of its reports. The administration is setting up a "committee." This is unnecessary posturing, since the UMass Students Against Sweatshops have already been enthusiastically researching the subject. It would be unwise and unfair if this administrative committee gets full power over sweatshop decisions.

"I'd like to send a message to the American people," said one Haitian worker. "If the Americans can't give a living wage to us, the Haitian workers, then they shouldn't wear the clothes. That would be better for us."

I don't know about you, but I don't want these clothes on my body or on my campus, and I certainly don't want them on my conscience.

Aaron Johnson is a UMass graduate student.

Aaron Johnson

Just some thoughts about life. . .

Some thoughts...

When gas allegedly reaches $2 a gallon this summer, what is going to happen? Are we going to stop driving? Doubtful. Are there going to be lines at the gas pumps like there were in the late 70s? Maybe. Or is the U.S. going to go at war to get some control over the prices like they have done before?

How can our University morally, consciously, with any degree of integrity spend millions on a computer software program when students do not have enough classes, housing, and the Consumer Studies department is being eliminated?

The University is launching a very strong recycling campaign. There is a sign across from my room that says that if we recycled all of the paper that is thrown away in one semester, we could save 1,400,000 gallons of oil. Is that enough oil to make the gas prices go down? Why did the University start recently issuing three part paychecks, creating an extra piece of paper? Wouldn't it be easier to recycle if we just used less paper?

Laura Siciliano

Does anyone else notice that the Housing Cable network has an awful lot of "channels" that never show any television shows? As much as I like to know about Spring Break closing procedures, do I really need to see it on 5 channels?

No one that I know has ever eaten all of their D.C. meals... everyone usually has at least 50 meals left over. Wouldn't it be nice if the dining halls gave us a partial credit for the leftover meals for the next semester? I know that they say that they can't do that because they cook enough food every meal in case everyone comes to eat, but does anyone really believe that they 10,000 pieces of chicken fried steak sitting out back, waiting for us... I don't think so!

Wednesday, March 8, was Ash Wednesday. This is one of the oldest religious holidays ever, and yet every year, people look at me like I am a freak when I walk around with the ashes on my forehead. Maybe it looks a little strange, but didn't their parents teach them not to stare at people?

Speaking of church, it really disturbs me when I go to church and the people in front of me or beside me can't sit still. Last time, there were three people chewing gum, swearing, and distracting the little box sitting in front of them. If you can't sit still for 45 minutes in church, how can you sit through an hour and 15 minute lecture on Tuesdays and Thursdays?

There is a new phenomenon in voting. Instead of choosing a candidate or writing one in, you can simply vote: "None of the Above." You have no choice and no one gets your vote. My question is, what is the point? It seems as though no one particularly likes any candidate for public office; however, you need to vote for someone. Don't waste your expensive gas going to the polls if you are not going to vote.

Finally, for all of you Massachusetts' public high school alumni, the world of school as we knew it has apparently ended. The MCAS tests mean that teachers are now expected to teach "to the test," because if students do not pass, they do not graduate. Teachers, apparently, feel like they have no control over their curriculum, and creativity is disappearing from lesson plans. The problems facing public education in Massachusetts are at a very frightening stage. Massachusetts' elementary, middle, and high school students are facing a system that wants them to memorize as many facts, dates, numbers, and formulas as possible in order to pass a highly criticized and controversial test.

> "Wednesday, March 8, was Ash Wednesday. This is one of the oldest religious holidays ever, and yet every year, people look at me like I am a freak when I walk around with the ashes on my forehead."

Learning is no longer the primary goal. In Massachusetts' higher education, a lack of emphasis on academics is resulting in departmental budget cuts, the ending of library journal subscriptions, no hiring of new faculty, and the elimination of entire majors. The government and leadership of Massachusetts needs to emphasize learning for all ages and levels; testing does not assure that students are going to graduate high school educated, and expensive technology systems do not make academics any stronger here at UMass.

Laura Siciliano is a Collegian columnist.

The Ed/Op department is always on the lookout for letters and columns from UMass students. Submissions should be between 800 and 1000 words, typed and saved on a disk, and dropped off at the Collegian office in the Campus Center basement. Questions? Call Alexis, Gary or Rob at 545-4794... or face the wrath!

Your Opinion
Budget cuts

This letter is in regards to the budget forum on March 7, held by Chancellor David K. Scott. I walked in with the only concept about the budget cuts being my personal inconvenient struggle to get enough classes, and knowing that only next year it would be more difficult. The purpose of a university is to give students the education they need to survive, if not be successful in the real world. It is not the purpose to fund an administration that keeps telling us that there is not enough money coming from the state to fund our classes. The budget cuts don't seem to just center around an underfunding from the state government of ten million dollars or the allocation of money in scholarship and financial aid programs, but rather in the priorities set forth by this administration.

In order to recover from the lower funding given by the state and the allocation of money for personal projects of new information technology, infrastructure, management information systems, administration redesign, and more, Chancellor Scott has been proceeding with one part of the five-year Strategic Actions Plan, the Early Retirement Program, which allows profesors to retire early and hire back only fifty percent of their base salary. That basically downsizes the university's faculty. Since the plan went into effect in 1994, 465 professors have opted for early retirement and 225 have not been replaced. According to Chancellor Scott at the forum, these cuts are necessary to get UMass out of the budget deficit; I believe the value in technology is to assist people in learning, not replace them.

What Chancellor Scott also mentioned which was more absurd is that budget cuts have not been looked into for the administration department, and, as one student at the forum stated, in the past two weeks some administrators have received a five thousand dollar raise (my tuition for the whole semester). In regards to this accusation, it was replied that the administration department needs to be competitive with the rest of the educational institutions, but in my opinion that is still a gross amount of money. With that in mind, how can it be justified to take money away from the Spanish department (a twenty-five percent cut) when already 600 students cannot find space in the overcrowded classes. In my understanding, a university's purpose is to enhance the knowledge of its students through education, but how can that be possible in the upcoming years when we will have more administrators in Whitmore than professors to teach classes?

Yet, my greatest disgust at attending this forum doesn't come from the justification of abusive allocation of university funds, but from the reality that in a lecture hall (that holds five hundred people, the forum was only half full and only a few hands were from undergrads. This is my education and your education, and if we don't make ourselves heard and stand up against the downsizing of faculty we simply will not be obtaining that education. Do you want to take classes in five hundred person lectures instead of in a classroom interacting with your professor, TA and fellow students?

Jennifer Murray
Orchard Hill

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Sam Wilkinson Managing Editor Shawn Ilinitch Business Manager
Ben Alamed Web Developer Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager
Sage Brousseau Co-Advertising Production Manager Jake Lilien Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pushkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jake Lilien Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jeanie Gorlovsky Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Multicultural Affairs Editor
Mary Grein News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Adam White Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor

Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Christine Connare Women's Issues Editor
Marc Menichel Finance Manager
Joshua Szymanski Distribution Manager
Katie Beith Promotions Manager
Catherine Turner International Affairs Editor
Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Chris Brennan Assistant Finance Manager
Eric Faber Assistant Advertising Manager
Amy Garganta Assistant Business Manager

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Jewish Affairs

Alternative Spring Break: An interfaith trip South

It all ended on Sunday night when four Alternative Spring Break groups returned to Amherst after an intense ten-day service learning experience. Offered in collaboration between the Inter-Religious Project and the Anthropology department, the Alternative Spring Break facilitated the travel of over forty students to four destinations in North Carolina, South Carolina and Alabama.

Along with ten other people, I was a part of the trip to Alabama. The ten-day journey proved overwhelming, with experiences that have yet to be contemplated.

There was work: restoration of an African American church destroyed by the fire of arson in 1995. The church and its members were welcoming hosts to our group of eleven students from different religious and cultural backgrounds, who never questioned the purpose of helping that particular Pentecostal church with whose teachings none identified. The purpose was once wrongly prescribed to our interfaith group by an outsider – a guest Evangelical pastor from Michigan. Without meeting any one of us, he preached directly at us that we were doing the work of God. Yet, I thought of my trip to the South as an opportunity to learn from its people (for whatever reason), and not to follow any divine calling.

There were little children from after school programs in the low-income neighborhoods of Birmingham. They flocked to us and never wanted to stop playing with us on the playground as the numerous drug dealers watched. We were asked to teach those children about our home countries and states, yet it was they who were there to give us a lesson – a lesson, that giving back rides and coloring with crayons may be just as important as academics.

There were friendships: Eleven of us merged into a family, sharing our experiences as well as a floor in an unheated church to sleep on. Due to the weather conditions, neither gas nor hot water was available, yet this calamity brought us even closer. There were no assigned chores – cooperation and respect reigned.

There was a homeless shelter that has served 1.5 million meals in the past fifteen years. Serving dinner to its fifty guests, I wished that I had more time and courage to involve myself into more conversations. It felt secure to be surrounded by the bubble of "service," rather than attempt to learn. It seemed almost naive to expect any particular response from the homeless people, and all responses – whether grateful or angry – had to be taken for what they were worth, with all expectations being left aside.

There was a visit to the Southern Poverty Law Center – an organization that keeps track of the hate groups across America. It was a place where a parallel between the experiences of blacks and Jews struck me. It was important for my own Jewish-hess to perceive that both groups are often the targets of hate ideologies and that both groups are often equated in the face of hate crimes. It was the Southern Poverty Law Center in Montgomery that identified Buford O'Neal Furrow Jr. as a person responsible for the shooting at the Jewish Community Center in Los Angeles last summer. There was religion: Signs like "Go to church or the devil will get you" were on the sides of the highways; a group of white high school kids from the North visiting in order to get ready for proselytizing in the community next summer, a white bible study pedagogue teaching a group of black kindergarten age children that obedience is the most important aspect of living. Yet, there was also religion as a unifying force for the community. There was spirituality – spirituality of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and Rev. Fred Shuttlesworth – the spirituality as the sole driving force behind the Civil Rights movement, born in the Southern churches and expanded to the historic importance of great magnitude.

And, at the end of the trip, there was Washington, D.C. To me, visiting the nation's capital at the end of the journey to the South was an experience of a culminating intensity. Walking around the monuments of Washington, I could not help but think that I have just experienced an America so different from the America of the White House, Jefferson Memorial and the Capitol Hill. My mind kept recalling the images of Alabama State Capitol building with a statue of Jefferson Davis in front of it; at the base of the sculpture were the names of eleven states that seceded from the Union in 1861. Standing across from the White House, I remembered the First White House of the Confederacy, carefully preserved as a museum and open to public in Montgomery. Walking up the steps of Lincoln Memorial where Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. spoke of his dream of equality and freedom, the image of a monument glorifying the Southern Army with Confederate flags flying high, stood vivid in my mind.

The trip lived up to the advice of its last year's participants who suggested to leave all expectations behind. The image of America that has crawled into my mind was quite unexpected, confused and oddly shaped. It was an impression of a country that has set out for freedom it was not capable or willing to guarantee outright, a country that advanced significantly since the time of its foundation, and a nation that still has a long way to go towards its vision of equality and justice. This was an image of America that could not have been formed through pure academics. It was an image of America that had to be experienced, even for a ten-day period.

Sasha Senderovich is a Collegian correspondent.

Sasha Senderovich

Jewish students attend forum on public policy

By Robbie Medwed
Collegian Correspondent

The Charlotte and Jack J. Spitzer Hillel Forum on Public Policy was held in Baltimore, Maryland, Feb. 27-29. Students came from all around the country, including schools as far away as University of California, San Diego and even a few students from Russia. Six students from the University of Massachusetts attended: Shira Hutt, Daniella Ben-Simon, Rachel Slomovitz, Jonathan Goldman, Michelle Veyvoda and Robbie Medwed.

The forum gave students a chance to learn from people who had not only been in their place just a few years before, but who had also become very successful in the world. Participants were given the opportunity to attend numerous seminars on a variety of topics, ranging from the upcoming election and the candidates' views on Israel, to ways of combating Holocaust revisionist groups.

Perhaps one of the most moving speakers was Kweisi Mfume, the president and chief executive officer of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP). "I enjoyed listening to Mr. Mfume tell about his ideas on racial equality, and I found much of what he said very relevant, even in this day and age," said participant Jonathan Goldman.

Also informative and inspiring was the keynote address of the Glenn and Darcy Weiner Lectureship on Public Policy by Adam Werbach. Werbach is the youngest person to be elected president of the Sierra Club at 25 years old. He is currently involved with many environmental issues groups and organizations, including producing his own television show.

Werbach talked about his experiences as the youngest president of the Sierra Club, including his meeting with the President of the United States just after he was elected.

"The morning after I was elected I got a call from someone saying they were from the White House. I almost hung up on them. Then they had me fly to Washington D.C. to meet with the President about my agenda. I was scared beyond belief, because I had no agenda!"

One of the other highlights of the conference was the joint meeting with the Jewish Council for Public Affairs' Plenum 2000. At the plenum, the members of the Jewish Council for Public Affairs (JCPA) discussed their action plans for the upcoming year, as well as voting on many motions regarding their official position on many controversial issues.

Participants at the Spitzer Forum had the chance to talk to the adult members of the JCPA to network, as well as to hear important advice. "It was fun being able to talk to people who I could use as resources when I got back home. I learned a lot from them, and I am glad that I got the chance to talk to them," said Shira Hutt.

One of the most memorable events of the conference was the Capitol Hill Lobby Day. Participants were once again given an invaluable opportunity. This time, every congressional district that was represented came together to lobby their congressman or senator. Many people were excited at the chance to talk to their lawmaker.

One participant, Michelle Veyvoda remarks, "It was great to talk to the person who makes the laws governing my area. It made me feel more confident in our government, too, because I know that they really do care about the little people."

Perhaps the greatest aspect of the conference was the new friendships that were made. "I loved walking around the Inner Harbor in Baltimore one night with a group of people I had just met. We hung out together the entire night! I still keep in touch with them, too," recalls Rachel Slomovitz.

BECKY REDDICK / COLLEGIAN

Avi Wolf, a member of UMass Jewish community.

"Oy vey" and influences of the Yiddish language

By Daniela Hornikker
Collegian Correspondent

"Oy vey, I don't know what to say... I am so flabkempt" It is absolutely mind boggling to experience the infiltration of the Yiddish language within American society. Yiddish words such as schlep, schmack, meshugeneh, yenta and many others have graced the television screens on shows such as Friends, The Nanny and Seinfeld. We have created a culture submerged in Yinglish – the perforation of the Yiddish language intermixed with the English language. Yiddish is used, in some cases, with absolute ignorance; people are sometimes unaware of the origins of the words they use so freely.

A language nearly a thousand years old, Yiddish has survived the Inquisition, Crusades, World Wars and a myriad of other calamities. The age-old language is Germanic in origin, written using Hebrew characters. Yiddish permeated every aspect of the Eastern European Jewish life – both secular and religious. From writing prose to poetry, from theater to music, Yiddish was the life force that surged through Eastern Europe.

Yet this once celebrated language seems (to some) to be reaching the end of its vitality. Holocaust survivors, the last generation of native Yiddish speakers, are not getting any younger. The main concern with the younger generation is how we (as Ashkenazi Jews) are going to preserve and protect our dynasty of Yiddish culture and heritage.

The YIVO Institute collects and categorizes many pieces Yiddish memorabilia, from old children's books to letters written by famous Yiddish writers. The National Yiddish Book Center in Amherst, Massachusetts located on the Hampshire College campus, collects and displays Yiddish books, mostly acquired as a donation to The Book Center. Many of the books, almost a hundred years old in age, are entering the last days of their existence, falling apart due to decay, water damage and neglectful handling. The Book Center has taken on the task of digitizing every book in the Book Center's library, so the joys of Yiddish literature will be secured for a lifetime.

The great work of Sholem Aleichem's – Tevye the Milkman – is recognized in our culture with the popular play and movie Fiddler on the Roof. We identify with the character of Tevye as the representative of the typical working-class man, struggling to support his family in the shtetls (villages) of Eastern Europe.

The beauty within the Yiddish culture is endless. The magnificent poetry created, fantastic stories passed down from generation to generation, the folklore and most of all, the language that produced this intellectual explosion. It is important not only for Jews, but also for anyone who believes in cultural preservation, to support the livelihood of Yiddish culture and literature.

Avi Wolf: a man who never misses a pitch

By Dan Yagudin
Collegian Correspondent

An arpeggiated E flat.

This is what Avi Wolf hears when a door slams shut.

Be they doors slamming, fire alarms going off, (did you know that the Grayson fire alarm goes from an E natural, over the range of two octaves, to an E flat?) or certain bodily functions being performed, if it makes a noise, Avi Wolf can pitch it. And he is rarely wrong.

Music has always played a large role in the life of this post-graduate student, who is completing his Music Education degree with a major instrument in piano and a minor in voice. Having graduated with a BA in history last year, "the man with a perfect pitch," as he was nicknamed by his hall mates, believes that the ability to do music is innate. "Everyone has the natural ability to perform music," says Wolf. "It's just a matter of finding the most comfortable situation in which to start [one's] musical journey."

Wolf's musical journey began at the age of five, when he started singing and playing piano by ear. He has since built his musical repertoire to include nine semesters in the UMass Chamber Choir, four semesters in Madrigal Singers, and a semester of opera workshop. When outside the bounds of the Fine Arts Center, where he spends most of his day pursuing his music education, he spends countless hours singing just about anywhere. One of his favorite places to sing is the men's bathroom on second floor of Grayson, where he says the acoustics is rather favorable. Singing in his strong tenor voice, Wolf often draws crowds from inside and outside the bathroom who join in the singing. He also has a tendency to draw the RA on rounds who many times ends the impromptu singing sessions with a note that quiet hours have long since been in effect.

Wolf's founding of a Jewish a cappella group on campus proved a perfect synthesis of his love for music and his strong Jewish faith. Wolf's Jewish background started at home, where he was raised as a modern Orthodox. What followed has been a lifetime of religious activity, including six years of being a lifeguard in a Jewish overnight camp, participation in religious services, and, as noted, the founding of a Jewish a cappella group on campus, Kolot. Wolf's integration of music and religion came naturally, and he once noted that songs help him practice Judaism with his heart. If you sit next to Wolf during services you will most likely hear him harmonize to many of the tunes, using one of the "voices in his head" – a term he gives to the many harmonies his musical training has enabled him to "hear" in a melody. As if to suggest that bathroom sessions and a cappella groups are not enough, impromptu gatherings take place on many nights in Wolf's room where a few individuals congregate to sing Jewish songs under his instruction.

The UMass environment has also given Wolf a more worldly approach to religion. In learning to be a modern Jew in today's world, he has found the UMass campus to be a welcoming place to gain a more multi-faceted perspective on religion. Oscillating between the Orthodox services at the Chabad and their more liberal counterparts at the Hillel House, was one way to gain that perspective. During his five-year stay at UMass, Wolf has seen a dramatic rise in the involvement of the community with religion. He remembers how, when he joined, the calendar of activities at the Hillel House was done on a semester-by-semester basis. The number of activities has since increased so that now the calendar is published monthly.

His objective history aside, to really get to know Wolf you have to know his moral character. His talents may be numerous, his religious observance exemplary, but what makes Avi Wolf shine is a single phrase that he has followed all his life: "My family has taught me to always go to bed at night having done nothing which is not answerable to God."

Pope's visit sparks debate for Muslims and Jews

By Lee Hockstader
Associated Press

When Pope John Paul II celebrates Mass in Bethlehem's Manger Square next Wednesday, steps from the grotto where Jesus was born, the pageantry and drama of a pontiff in the Holy Land will thrill Christians around the world – at least until 11:45 a.m.

At precisely that hour, scarcely halfway through the pope's scheduled three-hour Mass, the muezzin of the Omar bin Khattab Mosque, which stands adjacent to the pope's purpose-built stage, invariably begins his midday call to prayer over the minaret's powerful loudspeakers.

"The call to prayer is always made. It cannot be postponed," said Sheik Suleiman Aweidah, the mosque's bearded, elfin muezzin. "I think the pope is a tolerant man, so I'd expect him just to wait for a few minutes until we're done."

It is unclear whether the pope will finish the Mass early, pause for the Muslims' eight-minute prayer or (least likely) try to outshout the muezzin. What does seem likely is that the muezzin's insistence on his call to prayer- pope or no pope – is the least of the diplomatic, historical and political booby-traps John Paul II will negotiate in his six-day trip to Israel, the Palestinian territories and Jordan starting Monday.

In a region where practically everyone's ear is fine-tuned for insults, the pope's pilgrimage is the occasion for frayed tempers, testy pronouncements and rising indignation among Jews and Muslims. No matter how gingerly he treads among the region's conflicting territorial, religious and national claims, the pope will risk stepping on someone's toes. And the pontiff's diplomatic skills will be acutely tested by Israelis' and Palestinians' competing efforts to co-opt his support.

This week, in a survey of gathering discontent attending the pope's visit, an Israeli newspaper published a large photograph of the pope on its front page with the headline, "Welcome to Hell."

Some religious Jews are demanding that the pope remove his crucifix when he goes to the Jerusalem's Western Wall, the holiest site in Judaism. Others are offended that the Star of David will be removed from the pope's on-call ambulance – although the Vatican asks that national insignias be removed from such vehicles wherever the pope goes. A few have even protested the Vatican's refusal of Israel's offer of emergency blood plasma for the Holy Father (the pope brings his own back-up supply).

Black and Jewish judges to discuss issues of racism

By Robbie Medwed
Collegian Correspondent

On Thursday, March 30, the Jewish Student Union will present "Blacks and Jews in Conversation." The groundbreaking program is cosponsored by the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith and the Judaic and Near Eastern Studies department, and will be held at 7:30 pm at the Hillel House

The program brings two New York State judges to college campuses across the country. One judge is African-American and the other judge is Jewish. The judges will be discussing issues such as racism and anti-Semitism as well as what students can do to combat and deal with the issues.

The program was started nine years ago in response to riots between Hasidic Lubavitcher Jews and Blacks in the section of Crown Heights in Brooklyn. The riots began after a fatal accident in which a Hasidic man's car accidentally spun out of control and hit two African-American children playing on the sidewalk, one of whom was killed.

The witness pulled the man out of his car injuring him so badly that the ambulance that was sent for the children decided to take him instead. The incident intensified the tensions between the Crown Heights residents. Violence continued for three days after the event, including the stabbing of a religious man by an angry mob of African-American teenagers and adults.

After the police stepped in, the New York court system let residents come to the court to talk out the problems, with the judges acting as the mediators.

Soon after, the judges approached Jeffrey Ross, director of campus affairs and higher education for the Anti-Defamation League. Ross, who is also the moderator for the discussion, helped them to bring the program out of the Manhattan area an into college campuses around the country. The program has now expanded to nearly 80 judges participating, and has traveled to schools such as Ithaca College, Rutgers, Brandeis and Yale.

The program will begin with opening remarks by the two judges, after which the floor will be opened to students with questions. "I am looking forward to talking with the judges, as well as hearing what they have to say. Perhaps they can help us make our own campus even more diverse and accepting," said Leah Weiss, vice president in charge of membership for the Jewish Student Union.

At a previous discussion at Ithaca College, when asked what one could do, Milton Tingling, the African-American judge of the current pair responded, "Stop looking for something to gather around, and just do something. If ten people show up, you know what? You made a difference. Don't worry about the people that did not show, cherish the ones that did. It starts from there and then it grows."

Hillel calendar of events

March 21, 7 p.m. at Craft Center/Student Union
Jewish Art: learn to make Jewish art – mezuzah, seder plates, matzah or challah covers or whatever your heart desires. $2.

March 23, 7 p.m. at Hillel House
Judaic Mosaic: "Women, Art and Identity." Did you know there is a feminist aspect of Purim? Join us in our celebration as we make Purim masks with our special guest Judith Stauber (visiting artist).

March 24, 6 p.m. at Hillel House
Join us for Shabbat as members of the Jewish Women's Collective take leadership roles in the service dedicated to Women's Awareness Month. Special guest will be Judith Stauber, Director of Community Programs at Cornell University Hillel.

March 26, 12:30 p.m. at Hillel House
Latke-Hamantashen Debate. Come ready to listen and decide for yourself as four distinguished UMass faculty and staff members battle it out. Will it be the Latke or Hamantash that will be held in high esteem this year?

March 27, 7:30 p.m. at Hillel House
Israeli Dancing. Come and learn a few simple steps of Israeli dancing. No talent necessary, just be prepared to have fun.

March 28, 7:30 p.m. at Hillel House
Bet Café – Israeli Style. Gather at Hillel to share stories about Israel and get an update on current events. Bring your photos! Snacks included, of course.

Arts & Living

Your Guide to all that's going on in the Pioneer Valley

Weekend box office ruled by Brockovich

By Adam Martignetti
Collegian Staff

A day late, but not a dollar short.

Julia Roberts ruled this past weekend's box office as Erin Brockovich easily replaced Mission to Mars as the number one film in America. America's Sweetheart landed her second biggest opening ever behind last summer's Runaway Bride which opened to $35 million on July 30) as Brockovich debuted with an impressive $28.2 million for the Friday-Sunday period. That figure is the second largest March opening ever behind only Jim Carrey's Liar Liar, which made $31.4 million during the same weekend three years ago. In addition, Brockovich's strong $9905 per-screen average on 2847 screens was the best of any film in this week's top ten.

The aforementioned science-fiction flick did manage to hold onto to second place despite an atrocious 52 percent week-to-week drop. Mission to Mars lost more than half its business on the way to a $10.9 million weekend. The loss doesn't bode well for the critically panned film, which opened on a March record 3060 screens last weekend.

Newcomer and typical teen fare, Final Destination surprised most people by posting a strong third place finish. The horror/mystery mix with a cast of relative no-names averaged $3943 on 2587 screens for a $10.2 million total. The film capitalized on the lack of films aimed at the lucrative teen demographic. The film's relatively strong opening bodes well for Here on Earth and Whatever It Takes (opening next week) as well as The Skulls (opening in two weeks).

My Dog Skip continued to impress in only its second week-end of "wide" release. The film dropped a Sixth Sense-esque eight percent from last weekend. The $5.5 million weekend brought its cumulative total (including about eight weeks of playing in a limited number of markets) to $21.8 million.

Johnny Depp faired slightly better than the ill-fated Mars team, but not much better. Roman Polanski's The Ninth Gate fell 47 percent from its opening weekend for a $3.5 million weekend. The movie with "no end" has collected slightly more than $12 million in ten days of release.

The Bruce Willis and Matthew Perry comedy. The Whole Nine Yards, finished its first month of release on a positive box office note. Its $3.2 million weekend brought its cumulative total over $50 million. The well-received comedy posted a strong 3.2 multiplier for its four weeks.

Fellow Oscar contenders maintained their one/two punch at the box office. American Beauty narrowly edged The Cider Rules at the box office in much the same way that its eight nominations narrowly edged Rules' seven. Beauty finally and rightfully passed the $100 million mark this weekend as its $2.9 million Friday-Sunday gross brought its cumulative to $102.7 million. Likewise, The Cider House Rules continues to pad its box office intake. The $2.4 million weekend brought its gross to $45.7 million also incidentally helping its Oscar chances. (Annie Hall has the lowest box office total of any Best Picture winner in the last 27 years with $35 million).

Snow Day and fellow family fare The Tigger Movie clung onto the final two places in the top ten over the weekend. The films collected $2.2 million and $1.9 million respectively in likely both their final top ten appearance.

COURTESY SHANE HARVEY

Ali Larter stars in Final Destination, the newest teen thriller and surprising box office contender.

Suicide Machines bring pop/punk

By Ryan Benharris
Collegian Staff

Suicide Machines
Suicide Machines
Hollywood Records

There's nothing like nice happy music. Of course, there's nothing happier than suicide. Actually I think the last thing that you'd expect from a band with the name The Suicide Machines would be something pleasant, but the truth is that their self titled, third release is the feel-good album of the year. Using a sound that was clearly influenced by the recent huge success of punk rockers Blink-182, The Suicide Machines are trying to cash in on a new sound that they admit was a stretch for them to develop.

In a recent interview with Real Detroit magazine, Dan Lukacinsky, a member of the four-man band explains that the sound of the new album is "More on the pop side in comparison to the last two. All the records have had the punk/ska thing happening. The second one had more of the thrash/hard rock sound on it. This one's more pop, but it's still us."

Though the sound of the album is extremely influenced by pop music it has no desire to simply roll over on its back and submit to a sell out culture. Even if the first time you hear the album's first single, "Sometimes I Don't Mind" sandwiched between "I Want You Back" by N'Sync and "American Pie" by Madonna on your favorite teenage crap music radio station, you still can't deny the hard rock element that is clearly present. The album is original and very much a personal triumph for the band.

The Suicide Machines consist of lead singer Jason Navarro, with Dan Lukacinsky on guitar, Royce Nunley playing bass and Ryan Vandeberghe banging away on the drums. The bands previous two albums, 1996's Destruction by Definition and 1998's Battle Hymns, have brought them moderate success and some critical acclaim. The band proves that with the new album they can clearly adapt to a changing desire in the genre of rock music that the public demands.

The first single from the album, "Sometimes I Don't Mind," is a funny and happy tribute to Royce Nunley's dog. He claims that idea to sing about his dog Chewy was because "He was sick one day, so I wrote him a song to make him feel better." As preposterous as it sounds, this is the reason that music should be made. To make people, animals, plants, whatever you want, feel good. The song is a nice change from the morbid grunge rock that dictated the past ten years, and has a very catchy tune. The song actually sounds a lot like much of the music from Blink-182's hit, Enema of the State.

The rest of the album obviously has influences in high places. The band admits that the short, but meaningful "I Hate Everything" is a direct response to the hype that has been circulating around mega-superstars Limp Bizkit. Without knowing that you were listening to The Suicide Machines, you would think that the song was actually created by Fred Durst and crew.

Much of the album is short and to the point. The longest track on the album is two minutes and 59 seconds. All of it has a mix of hard rock, punk and ska with a dash of pop culture blended together to create a sound that should be appealing to rock fans everywhere. Songs such as "Permanent Holiday" and "No Sale" are excellent examples of how the band can keep a steady pace of fast music that is designed to make people happy.

The third, self-titled release from The Suicide Machines is a must have for any fan of Blink 182. It is simply much better than anything that Blink 182 has done to this date. It will soon be impossible to overlook The Suicide Machines, they are ready to seriously hit the big time. B+

Police dramas dominating primetime TV

By Howard Rosenberg
Los Angeles Times

Cops... and more cops.

Just what television needs – more of New York's finest. Yet only good can come from adding to a 50-year glut when the newcomers mainly gleam, as do "The Beat" on UPN and "Battery Park" on NBC.

Arriving today, "The Beat" returns to prime time Barry Levinson and Tom Fontana, creators of HBO's dark, gritty "Oz," and, more famously, heroic "Homicide: Life on the Street," the recently extinguished plume of brightness that gave NBC one of the elite cop shows in TV history.

Reinforcing that link is a coming cameo on "The Beat" with Richard Belzer as nomadic "Homicide" wit, Detective John Munch, who hangs around the second episode just long enough to deposit his quota of caustic wisecracks, and then his work is done.

Targeting UPN's youthful audience, the drama and its uniforms on Manhattan's Lower East Side are presently several floors beneath the emeritus penthouse of "Homicide" in this tower of TV cops. Despite a labored machine opening and some other script flaws, though, this visually stylish series – imagine MTV doing "Adam 12" – is a taste that takes only about half an episode to acquire.

Creator Gary David Goldberg ("Spin City," "Brooklyn Bridge") has his new comedy "Battery Park," feeling right – that means funny and smartly written – from the moment it leaves the chute on NBC Thursday.

Much like ABC's late, great "Barney Miller," the humor takes place mostly in the squad room, where unnurturing, insensitive, self-serving Capt. Madeleine Dunleavy (Elizabeth Perkins) aspires to be mayor. That means she will stop at nothing, however twisted, to keep down her precinct's homicide stats.

The premiere also introduces affable Lt. Ben Hardin (Justin Louis) as heading an ensemble of marginal detectives (ably played by Jacqueline Obradors, Bokeem Woodbine, Frank Grillo, Robert Mailhouse and Jay Paulson).

Hardin's soaring libido Thursday has him ogling the daughter of a Mafia chief, a relationship that proceeds even more amusingly in the second episode when he comes under the leering eye of an unfriendly internal affairs officer. That episode features another weirdly funny match when Detective Carl Zernial (Paulson) encounters his former high school English teacher, now a madam, as she and her hookers are booked.

Him: "So what have you been up to?"

Her: "Well, I started my own business."

Him: "Well... how is that going?"

"Battery Park" can be faulted for attaching the usual Italian names to mobsters. Even in a send-up, that well of gratuitous stereotypes should be plugged. Yet the comedy here is anything but "The Sopranos" lite or neo-"Barney Miller," much of its success resulting from Perkins' easy, unmannered way with her likeably nasty character. Although comedy begins with writing, Perkins doesn't need much of a line to be funny, whether spinning sarcasm or lamenting being "up to my ears in hookers."

"The Beat" protagonists, young officers Zane Marinelli (Mark Ruffalo) and Mike Dorigan (Derek Cecil), are up to theirs in banter, a steady Muzak of chatter leading to arguments over such trivia as word definitions or whether that little thing over an "i" is a dot or "twiddle."

Who can possibly care about that or much anything else they jabber about in their patrol car between crimes? Or tolerate for long Marinelli's criminally deranged girlfriend, Beatrice (Heather Burns), whom he pretty much tolerates through the first four episodes even though her behavior marks her as a danger to him and the rest of society. And just how is she able to walk right into the police locker room Tuesday and join Marinelli in the shower for some serious smooching?

More arresting is Dorigan's relationship with his fiancee Elizabeth (Poppy Montgomery), a medical resident. More so still, and exceeding gimmickry, are the dual styles of shooting that alternate between film and tape, and the madcap camera angles that at times seem to be showing New York through the eyes of a drunk in the gutter. It's "Homicide" on caffeine. Yet despite this constant movement, Marinelli and Dorigan, in homage to realism, do not fire their weapons through the first several episodes.

Best of all, though, are the story arcs that range from Marinelli's angst-ridden childhood memories of his now-imprisoned father killing his mother to growing public protests over the death in custody of an African American suspect after he received an illegal chokehold from white cops.

This Al Sharpton moment in the making seeps into the squad room where untrusting white and black officers now peer sideways at each other beneath the bills of their service caps.

It's this unsparing vision of a city whose human-relations problems may be insoluble that lifts "The Beat" well above the ordinary and raises hopes for its future as a cop show destined to be as important as it is entertaining. But ditch Beatrice.

Graduating this spring? Want a great job?

WRNX 100.9 FM

100.9 WRNX, the Valley's Only Quality Rock, wants you to be our Traffic/Billing manager. Traffic is the computerized scheduling of commercials on the radio that we can teach you how to do. If you have solid organizational skills; excellent self-discipline; are good with PC's; enjoy things like accounting; problem solving and keeping things running efficiently, you should be at WRNX. Send us your cover letter, academic background, history of other jobs you've held (including part-time) to WRNX, Attn: marie, 98 Lower Westfield Road, Holyoke, MA 01040. You have to be willing to work hard, be on time and responsible but you'll have a great time, learn a ton, and make more than enough money to have your own place. Great music perks too! Can't wait to hear from you! WRNX (E.O.E.)

WAREHOUSE JOB FAIR
PART-TIME WAREHOUSE SELECTORS
- Weekend Schedules
- $12.25/hr
- Part-time extended to full-time during school break

Come Visit Us On Campus
Thursday, March 23
UMass Campus Center
113 Campus Center Lobby
10am-2pm

Come in to fill out an application.

C&S WHOLESALE GROCERS, INC.

Coming Soon... The Apartment Guide
March 27th
Your Classified section place

UMass Student Legal Services Office
CALL TODAY
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
545-1995

BUCCI
HAIRCUTS $10.

Spring Supplements Are Here
The Spring Supplement of the Student Telephone Directory had been delivered to the Campus Center Concourse. A limited number are also available at the Visitors Center and the second floor lobby of Whitmore. There is no direct distribution of this limited edition (5,000 copies available).
University Directories

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Cheap rent! Summer sublet with lease option starting June 1st. On bus route, 10 minutes from campus. 2 bedroom, 1 bath. $575/mo. Includes hot water. Call 259-2919.

Sublet my apartment. 2 bedroom for 6/1-9/1. On bus route. Call 253-9047.

Apply now for best locations. Amherst Center 1,2 and 3 bedroom apartments. Gas heat, hardwood floor. April showings for June and September. Lincoln Real Estate. No fees charged. 253-7879.

Apply now for best locations. 3 bedroom condos. Gas heat, hardwood floors, bright heated basement with study and laundry area. 1/2 mile to campus, on bus route. April showings for June and September. Lincoln Real Estate. No fees charged. 253-7879.

EMPLOYMENT

Make a Difference AMERICORPS.ORG Joining AmeriCorps is a great way to get experience, take on new responsibilities and know the satisfaction of building a community. In exchange for a year of community service in the area sof public safety, education, human needs and the environment, AmeriCorps members receive an education award ($4725), a monthly stipend and health coverage.

Fall 200 Internships with the Student Legal Service Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field, work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary- training provided. Contact the Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

EMPLOYMENT

3 Job Opportunities on Nantucket Island, MA beginning May. A.) Office manager with good typing, computer and telephone skills. B.) Office assistant, errand runner, mother's helper, household help. C.) Auction gallary assistant: furniture porter, display, delivery. Salary and housing. Drivers liscence required. (508)228-3942 or send reume: P.O. Box 2607 Nantucket, MA 02548.

Movers: Local moving company is hiring individuals for moving positions. Flexibility and good attitudes are a must. Start at $8.00 per hour. Raise commensurate with performance. Call 584-4746.

Delivery persons wanted. Apply at D.P. Dough, downtown Amherst.

EMPLOYMENT

UAHC Crane Lake and Eisner Camps, Reform Jewish coeducational Camps located in the Berkshires of Massachusetts, seek qualified, dedicated counselors and specialists, including Waterfront, Athletics, Arts. Good salary, r&b included, travel assistance. Crane Lake Camp: Contact Brad Gerstle, 800-227-2660 ILUVCAMP@aol.com; www.cranelake-camp.com. Eisner Camp: Contact Louis Bordman, 212-650-4130 EISNERGUY@aol.com; www.eisner-camp.org

HEALTH & BEAUTY

Art of Living. United Nations recognized workshop in over 100 countries, now in Amherst. yoga, maditation and kriya to energise and release stress. 17 March to 22 March. Call Durgesh 549-5551.

MISCELLANEOUS

Million dollar game shows? Forget 'em! Bring your basketball brain to Shoot, Score and Win a million! at www.sixdegrees.com for tons of chances to win cash and prizes.

What do basketball tournament games, cash and prizes, and you have in common? Look for Shoot, Score and Win a Million! at sixdegrees.com to find out.

Get paid to lose weight and inches. All natural, doctor reccommended. 1-800-397-7715.

ROOM FOR RENT

Room in nice house. Bus route, washer, dryer. $350+ 548-7039.

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

STEREO EQUIPMENT

Boston Acoustic sub/sat series. Six 8" speakers with two 16" subwoofers. Also central channel speaker. $800 value for $300. Like brand new. Need money 586 0534.

TRAVEL

Study Spanish. Internships in Guatemala. College Credit. www.casaxelaju.com (512)416-6991.

WANTED TO RENT

House wanted: 3-4 bedroom house very close to campus. Wanted for rent starting 6/1. Please call Lia @ 2536378 w/any information.

There is plenty of room to get your ads placed in The Collegian Classifieds but hurry and do it TODAY because the space fills quickly!!

Call us here at 545-3500 now!!

You can't find an apartment on ebay?

Think about it.

Need to sublet your apartment? Selling your car? Hiring? Have some strange announcement you need to make to the world?

Let the Collegian classifieds be your friend.

Five College Community Calendar

TUESDAY, MAR. 21

Community – The SGA debates will be airing live tonight at 7:30 p.m. on UVC-TV 19.

Concert – A concert celebrating the 100th anniversary of composer John Duke's birth will be held at 12:30 p.m. in Sweeney Concert Hall, Sage Hall at Smith College. Lecture – A lecture entitled "John Duke: A Retrospective at Century's End" will be held at 3 p.m. in Earle Recital Hall, Sage Hall at Smith College.

Meeting – The UMass Ballroom Dance Club will meet at 8:30 p.m. in Totman 101. All are welcome.

Workshop – There will be a workshop on contraception and safer sex at 7 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services. Men and women are welcome.

WEDNESDAY, MAR. 22

Community – Tuesday's SGA debates will be airing today at 3:30 p.m. on UVC-TV 19.

Speech – Algirdas Patackas, Lithunian Parliament member and Professor of History and Ethnology, will speak on "The Situation in Chechnya" from 4-6 p.m. in Machmer W-23. For more information call 545-0043.

NOTICES

Community – The UMass Police Departmenti would like to invite female students and staff to partake in a women's self-defense course. The class requires a 14-hour commitment and runs from 6-9:30 p.m. each night. Registration is from 7:30-9 p.m. on March 24 and 25 at the UM police station and is first-come, first served. Classes for men are available upon request.

Community – Mass Appeal, the newest coed a cappella group at UMass, is looking for students to arrange music. Email Erica at massappeal@mailcity.com for more information.

Help – From Feb. 15-April 13 on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays from 5-8 p.m. student volunteers from the School of Management will assist non-resident aliens with the preparation of their Federal and State income tax returns. Call 545-5060 for more information.

Scholarships – The STEMTEC/NSF Teaching scholars program is offering scholarships to students who are interested in exploring a career in K-12 math or science teaching. Students do not need to be enrolled in a certificate program to apply. Applications are due by April 1. Contact Johanna at 545-0626 for more information.

Support – A grief support group is available to all students who have experienced the death of someone they love. The groups are free, small and confidential, and meet on Wednesday and Thursday evenings. Telephone pre-screening is required for enrollment. Call 577-5316 if interested.

Support – AL-ANON and ALATEEN are offering local meetings for those affected by someone else's drinking problem. Call 253-5261 for meeting times and locations.

PSAs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an PSI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

BOOKBUCKS From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks, you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

Ustore CAMPUS CENTER Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

HSCN Hearing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board		21	Good to Good
3	CBS/3	Hartford	22	NBC/22 Springfield
4	CBS/4	Boston	23	CNN Headline News
5	ABC/5	Boston	24	CNN
6	PBS/57	Springfield	25	CNN Fn
7	HSCN	Movie Ch.	26	CNN SI
8	UPN/20	Hartford	27	TBS
9	Weather Channel		28	BET
10	NBC/30 New Britain		29	College TV Network
11	Fox/61	Hartford	30	Univision
12	PBS/24	Hartford	31	Comedy Central
13	WCCH & HSCN		32	Cartoon Network
14	International		33	TV Land
15	UMass Academic TV		34	C-Span
16	ZDTV (Tentative)		35	ZDTV (Tentative)
17	WB/New Haven		36	Bloomberg Financial Network
18	Sundance		37	History Channel
19	The Learning Channel		38	HSCN Programming
20	UVC-TV19
20	ABC/40 Springfield

TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MARCH 21, 2000

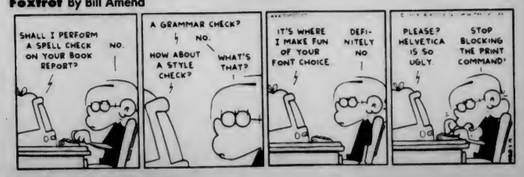
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (N		World of National Geographic		Nova (Decodes) (In Stereo)		Frontline Hunter, Be Loser		Sports Heroes	Late Night With
WFSB	3	News (N	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	JAG "Contraptious Words" (N		60 Minutes II (In Stereo) (N		Judging Amy Human Touch		News (N	Late Show With
WBZ	4	News (N	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	JAG "Contraptious Words" (N		60 Minutes II (In Stereo) (N		Judging Amy Human Touch		News (N	Nightline (N
WGVB	5	News (N	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle (N	Who Wants to Be a Millionaire		Dharma-Greg	Sports Night	NYPD Blue (In Stereo) (PA) (N		News (N	Nanny (N
WLVI	6	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends (N	Nanny (N	Buffy the Vampire Slayer (N		Angel "Somewhere Solid" (N) (N		News (N		News (N	Tonight Show
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune Jeopardy! (N		3rd Rock-Sun	God, Devil	Will & Grace	Just Shoot Me	Dateline (In Stereo) (N		Blind Date	Change-Heart
WTXX	8	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Blind Date	Real TV (R) (N	Secret Agent Man (In Stereo)		The Beat (N		News		Real TV (R) (N	Tonight Show
WVIT	9	News	NBC News	Extra (N	Ent. Tonight	3rd Rock-Sun	God, Devil	Will & Grace	Just Shoot Me	Dateline (In Stereo) (N		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Simpsons (N	Frasier (N	Seinfeld (N	Friends (N	The Show	Family Guy (N	Party of Five (Getting There (N		News		News (N	Tonight Show
WWLP	22	News (N	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune Jeopardy! (N		3rd Rock-Sun	God, Devil	Will & Grace	Just Shoot Me	Dateline (In Stereo) (N		Charlie Rose (In Stereo) (N	Late Night With
WGBY	6	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (N		Who Wants to Be a Millionaire		Dharma-Greg	Sports Night	NYPD Blue (In Stereo) (PA (N		News (N	Nightline (N
WGGB	40	News (N	ABC News	Seinfeld (N	Frasier (N	Secret Agent Man (In Stereo)		The Beat (N		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo) (N		Mad Abt. You	Judge Mathis
WSBK		Judge Judy (N	Judge Judy (N	Seinfeld (N	Frasier (N	Survivor: Australian Outback (N				Wildlife Adventures (N		"Fatal Error" (1999)
WTBS		Roseanne (N	Roseanne (N	Frasier (N	Fresh Prince	Biography: Johnny Cash		Investigative Reports (N		Love Chronicles (R) (N		Law & Order (N
ABE		C.A. Late "Bonton Bound"		Law & Order "Secret" (N		World Today (N		Larry King Live (N		Newsstand (N		Sports	Moneyline (N
CNN	33	Worldview (N	Moneyline Newshour (N		Crossfire (N	Larry King Live (N		Whose Line? (N	Whose Line? (N	Whose Line? (N	Com. Presents	Daily Show	Stein's Money
COM	35	Saturday Night Live (N		Daily Show (R) (N	Stein's Money	Whose Line? (N	Whose Line? (N	The Presidents (N		New Detectives (R)		FBI Files "Dave Mafia" (R)	On the Inside The Firestorm
DISC		Your New House (R)		Wild Discovery "Wild Style" (R)		On the Inside The Presidents		New Detectives (R)		College Basketball: NIT Second Round – Teams TBA		Sportscenter (N
ESPN	34	Sportscenter (N		College Basketball: NIT Second Round – Teams TBA				College Basketball: NIT Second Round – Teams TBA				Sportscenter (N
LIFE		Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		(CC) "A Woman Scorned: The Betty Broderick Story" (1992)				Tom Green (R) Tom Green	Lycroit	Undressed	Making Video
MTV		MTV Jams	Beat Bulls	Pantsmiths	Blame Game	TRL (N (In Stereo)				Rocket Power Rocket Power	Brady Bunch Bev. Hillbillies	All in Family Jeffersons (N	I Love Lucy Bewitched
NICK		All That	Catalog	Hey Arnold! (N Rugrats (N		Xena: Warrior Princess (N				Xena: Warrior Princess (N		Xena: Warrior Princess (N	Pothergeist: The Legacy (N
SCIFI		Sliders "Roads Taken" (N		Xena: Warrior Princess (N		Trauma: Life in the ER (N				Race for the Prize			Trauma: Life in the ER (N
TLC	36	Home Again	Home Again	Turning Point (N		NBA Basketball: New York Knicks at Indiana Pacers. (In Stereo Live) (N						NBA Basketball	Pistons at SuperSonics
TNT		In the Heat of the Night (N		ER "Piles of Spring" (In Stereo)		Walker, Texas Ranger (N				Ent.? (No Film" (1985, Drama) Tom Cruise, Gene Hackman. (In Stereo) (N
USA		Baywatch "Ho Water" (N		JAG "Second Sight" (In Stereo)		Walker, Texas Ranger (N				Ent.? (No Film" (1985, Drama) John Cusack, W (N		Sopranos Bust-Out" (R) (N
HBO		Real Sports (N	"Outbreak" (1995, Action) Dustin Hoffman, Rene Russo. (N			Happily Ever (Rt. El Dorado (CC) (N "Planning On" (1998, Comedy) John Cusack, W (N
MAX		2:15) "Titanic" (N	"Under Siege" (1992) Steven Seagal. (N			Happily Ever (N "Precipice X2Ki" (1992) Lane Lanford, W (N "Stalker Gold" (CC) (N "You've Got Mail" (1998, Comedy) Tom Hanks, Ry (N
SHOW		CC) "Catch Me If You Can" (1988, Drama) Mark Lattanzi, Ry				CC) "Ringmaster" (1998) Jerry Springer, W (N				CC) "The Opposite of Sex" (1998, Comedy) Christina Ricci, W (N		2:00) "Cop

Dilbert By Scott Adams

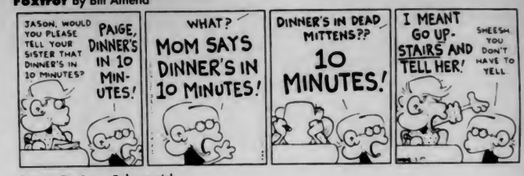


Robotman By Jim Meddick

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley



Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Nona By Anna Faktorovich

Horoscopes

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – If it's more honest communication you want, you may have it today – but you had better be sure you're ready to hear what others have to say.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – Remember today that your relationships, be they friendships or intimacies, are never easy. Today, you must be willing to work harder than usual.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – Someone is likely to go out of his or her way for you today – and you must be willing to express your gratitude and return the favor.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – Take care you don't become too possessive – or too defensive – while working closely on a pet project. Know when to accept advice and criticism.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – You may find yourself singing the praises of someone who, only yesterday, was your polar opposite. Indeed, the tide is turning at this time.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – You must be ready and willing to practice what you preach today. It is unacceptable to ask others to do what you're unwilling to do.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – You will enjoy your day more if you balance impulse with planning; improvisation can only get you so far at this time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – Keep your strong personality under wraps for a time today and try not to dominate situations, conversations, or relationships.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – You may be caught between two conflicting stories today. It will be up to you to set the record straight – now and in the days to come.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – You may find yourself wondering where you are today – and your professional standing may come under some scrutiny as a result.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – You'll be eager to take advantage of any and all opportunities to socialize today, rather than putting your nose to the grindstone.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – You're in no mood to let someone else tell you what to do today, and if anyone tries, it's almost certain to result in fireworks.

Quote of the Day

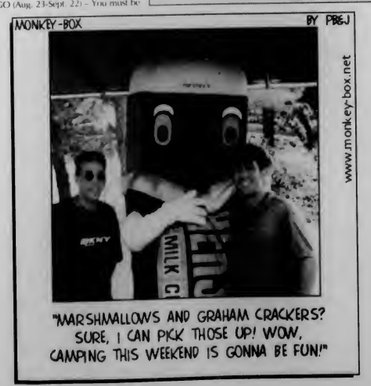
"Facing the press is more difficult than bathing a leper."

–Mother Teresa

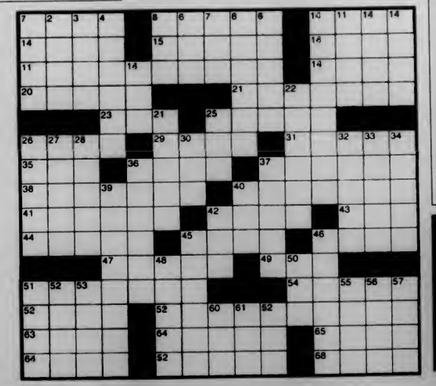
We are always looking for student comics

If you have a comic you d like to run bring it to room 113 in the Campus Center basement

ACROSS



1 Sash horse
5 Large home
10 Enormous
14 Pie a la —
15 Add e.g.
16 Lotion ingredient
17 Troublesome time
19 Tom or Jerry
20 Bean or Weiles
21 Yes-men
23 Not strict
25 — loafer
26 Like a rock
29 Goddess of discord
31 Giraffe's cousin
35 "Do — say"
36 Pesky insect
37 Ate to lose
38 Seafood item
40 Of eyes and ears
41 Magic —
42 Cousin's mother
43 Zip
44 Attempts
45 Myth
46 Find a buyer
47 Some curves
49 — humbug!
51 Persevere
54 Toy airplane material
58 Water in Mexico
59 Causes of bumpy rides
63 Pepper's mate
64 Jury
65 Basketball Slaughter
66 Shade provider
67 List of candidates
68 Cut



DOWN

1 Pulpit
2 Leo's shout
3 Totals
4 "Lone Ranger"
5 Me to Miss Piggy
6 IRS month
7 Actor Beatty
8 Gives a speech
9 Symmetric fabric
10 Short beards
11 Jai —
12 Not all
13 Quilters' pegs
18 Anecdotal collection
22 Consecutive
24 Inert gas
25 Horace plane
26 Hedged bookmakings
27 Wide tie
28 Cowboy's rope
30 Shoot the breeze
32 Make amends
33 Danger
34 Shipboard romance
36 Lustrous
37 Star in Cygnus
39 Fee
40 Bring legal action
42 Pacino and Green
45 Pleasant
48 Quivers
49 Dove and Ivory
50 Eats at
51 Director's concern
52 Seaweed product
53 Wear the crown
55 Singer Horne
56 Put away
57 Org.
60 Sentimental stuff
61 Favorite
62 Bullring shout

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

F	A	W	N		U	L	T	R	A		B	L	E	W
A	R	E	A		M	O	O	E	D		D	A	T	H
D	A	R	E		D	E	V	I	L		D	O	W	N
S	T	E	T		S	N	A	C	K	B	A	R
			O	O	P	S			R	E
D	O	W	N		L	A	Y		E	N	A	C	T
E	G	O		R	U	B	I	E		E	D	G	A	R
T	I	M	E		E	A	S	E		A	S	A	N	E
E	V	E	N			E	L	V	E	S		O	N
R	E	N	E	W			E	E	P	E	N	E	D
			R	U	B	I		S	A	T
P	R	A	G	M	E	N	T			T	I	A	R	A
R	A	N		E	V	I	L		S	L	A	D
E	R	N	E		C	O	M	E	T		O	D	I	E
T	E	A	S		H	Y	E	N	A		N	O	N	E

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-3626 for more information.

Lunch

Chicken Quesadilla

American Chop Suey

Black Bean Quesadilla (vegetarian)

Vegan Black Bean Quesadilla (Berkshire and Worcester only)

MAPLE SUGAR FESTIVAL!!!!

Dinner

Chef's Choice

Roast Pork

Casablanca Stew (vegan) (Berkshire, Hampshire and Worcester only)

Monterey Bake (vegetarian) (Berkshire, Franklin and Worcester only)

Today's Staff

Night Editor — Ken McDonald
Photo Technician — Becky Reddick
Copy Editor — Melissa Hammel
Production Supervisor — Seth Koenig
Production Staff — Lisa Metcalf, Arek Sekan

Two UM coaches, two different fates

Original HE ties gone as Mallen loses job

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

No one said that Joe Mallen was going to have an easy time in resurrecting the Massachusetts hockey program.

Seven years ago, the former assistant coach at Boston College was tabbed by the school to restore a team that had been non-existent since 1979. Mallen's difficult task – comprise a roster of players that would have to be capable of performing at the Division I level, specifically in the tough Hockey East conference.

Since the Minutemen joined the league for the 1984-85 season, the Bay State native has guided his team to do just that, as they have qualified for the league playoffs in five of the past six seasons. However, UMass has not finished closer than nine games under .500 during that time. As a result, the decision was made last Friday that the University will not renew Mallen's contract when it expires this May.

"We appreciate Coach Mallen's contributions in restoring our ice hockey program after 14 years," said UMass athletic director Bob Marcum in a press release. "At the same time, based on the facilities and resources we have available, we feel it is necessary to make a change to take the program to the next level."

During his seven-year tenure in Amherst, Mallen posted a record of 77-144-18. A handful of those wins though, were against top five teams such as Boston College, New Hampshire and Maine. Included in that bunch was a 5-1 win over the Eagles on Feb. 26 in Chestnut Hill.

Following the final game of this season, a 5-2 loss to Boston University in the Hockey East quarterfinals on Mar. 11, Mallen spoke of the possibility that his contract would not be renewed. Six days later, the decision was handed down by the school.

"I've given it everything that I've had for seven years... It's been a tough task, there's no question about it," Mallen said. "There's just some nights when I think that we do everything right and we just can't find that one goal, but there's also been a lot of rewarding nights."

For now, an interview committee will be formed in order to find a successor to Mallen.

"Coach Mallen took on a difficult job, building a program from scratch and competing in one of the toughest leagues in the country," said UMass chancellor David K. Scott in a press release. "He, his staff and his players have conducted themselves with class and dignity. His players have performed well in the classroom, and I believe the hockey program as a whole has represented the University admirably. The University is grateful for his contributions."

Although the Minutemen are without a coach at the moment, they will lose only four seniors to graduation this spring. The bulk of the returning players are soon-to-be juniors and seniors with a great deal of experience.

Mallen did mention that he wanted to remain at UMass if his contract was renewed.

"I'm a professional. I've been doing this for 20 years, and from my standpoint now, I've got great options if things don't go my way," Mallen said. "But I want to finish what I started."

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Hockey coach Joe Mallen, who was UMass' first ever coach at the Division I level, will be replaced.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Bruiser Flint will have many more interviews at the Mullins Center as he will return to lead the Minutemen next year.

Flint will still control UMass despite critics

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

The speculation is finally over with and the Massachusetts men's basketball team's ship will move on with its captain.

A three-hour meeting brought head coach James "Bruiser" Flint, athletic director Bob Marcum and Chancellor David Scott to a conclusion that it was in the university's best interest to hang onto the four-year coach for another season. With attendance floundering Marcum decided that Flint was would be the guy to draw them back, with his personality.

"Bruiser, Chancellor Scott and I met [Sunday] to conclude our evaluation of the season and talk about the direction of the program," Marcum said. "It was a very positive meeting and I think we all left feeling very excited about the prospects of the 2000-01 season."

After months with the proverbial axe flailing over his head, coach Bruiser has been given the green light for another season, this after a 17-16 campaign which saw the Minutemen fall in the first round of postseason for the third time following UMass' 1996 Final Four appearance, the last year before Flint took over the reins. In his stint, the St. Joe's grad has compiled a 71-56 record, which includes two NCAA Tournament appearances and a trip to this year's NIT.

Rumors began surfacing last year after the Minutemen suffered their first losing season in over 10 years. With the disdain came sagging attendance figures, a half-full Mullins Center putting a damper on the university's athletic cash cows. The lackluster play was largely blamed on the team's personality and communication on the court, a tremendous improvement seen this season after 17 wins and a third-place finish in the Atlantic 10 East.

The Minutemen lose three seniors, including co-captains Mike Babul and Chris Kirkland. With Monty Mack returning and a pair of impact freshmen, many believe the glory days will return after a slight hiatus. In addition, Shannon Crooks will have a year under his belt leading Flint's offensive crusade.

"I had a very good meeting with Bob and the Chancellor," said Flint. "We talked about the expectation level of our program, and what I expect for next season. I think we have a great nucleus coming back and some very good recruits. I really believe we have an excellent chance of competing for the Atlantic 10 championship and going to the NCAA Tournament next year."

"There are many factors that go into deciding what is a successful program. All of these issues have been discussed and reviewed. The basketball program at UMass projects a positive image, and that is a tribute to Coach Flint, his players and his staff," the Chancellor said. "His players are graduating and performing well academically, and we are seeing progress on the basketball court as well. We have high hopes and great expectations for this program, and I am pleased to have Coach Flint leading the charge."

Baseball ends Spring Break on streak

By Eric Soderstrom
Collegian Staff

Eight days.

Seven games.

That was the scenario for the University of Massachusetts baseball team as they headed into spring break. And coming off three losses to national powerhouse, University of Florida, it wasn't going to be easy.

The result of the week, pretty good. In baseball terminology 4-for-7, or a .571 batting average.

On Friday, March 10, the Maroon and White walked into a three-game weekend battle in Tampa against the University of South Florida. The Minutemen took a four run lead in the top of the second inning with the help of sophomore Aaron Senez's base clearing two-run triple to right-center field. The knock scored senior Kevin O'Connell and junior Gavin Clark who both reached on singles. The UMass offense would then falter and never regain composure. South Florida went up 5-4 in the bottom of the sixth inning and would not look back. With the 8-4 loss to the Bulls the Minutemen dropped their fourth game in a row.

In the second of three games, South Florida first baseman Daniel Boyd launched a solo home run off of off of UMass starter Travis Veracka in the bottom of the first inning, unlocking the door for the next five Bull runs that would be scored over the first four innings. UMass was able to pull within two at 6-4 in the bottom of the fifth, but that would be it for the Minutemen. USF right fielder Mike Barclay lost one over the left field wall in the eighth to drive in three runs and lead the Bulls to a 9-4 win. With the victory, USF improved to 10-9 on the season, while the Minutemen dropped its fifth straight.

USF finished off the sweep of the Minutemen in Tampa when Barclay provided further heroics with his two-double in the first inning, giving the Bulls a 3-0 lead. The Minutemen would score two runs in the sixth, and one in the seventh and eight innings, falling extremely short in South Florida's 10-4 victory. It was UMass' sixth straight loss.

Things began to brighten up for the Minutemen and head coach Mike Stone last Monday in Bradenton, Florida with a 4-0 shutout victory over Canisius. With UM's first win of the season, Coach Stone also got career win No. 400. Junior David Loonie and senior Todd Samolewicz united for the seven-hit shutout. Loonie secured the victory allowing two hits through five innings with a solid four strikeouts and no walks.

Sophomore Jesse Santos guided the Minutemen to their second consecutive win with a nine inning, ten-strikeout dismantling of LaSalle. With the 5-3 victory UMass improved to 2-6 on the season.

After the Minutemen's only day off of the week, Minuteman sophomore Brian Hourigan pitched five innings in relief of starter Veracka, allowing just three hits and fanning seven to earn the win in an 8-5 victory over La Salle. Down two runs going into the fourth inning, the Minutemen were able to survive a 15 minute rain delay and bind the game at four-all. UM scored two runs on four singles in the inning. O'Connell, Senez, and Clark led off the inning with three straight singles. UM extended the lead to 6-4 in the top of the sixth inning and would not look back.

UM finished its sweep of the Explorers as junior Nick Skirkanich threw his second career complete game striking out a career-high 13 and allowing only one run in a 9-1 destruction of La Salle. The Minutemen upped their record to 4-6 with the win and lengthened their winning streak to four.

The Minutemen will look to extend their win streak to five as they take the field today at home on the Earl Lorden field against Quinnipiac at 3 p.m.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

UMass baseball coach Mike Stone has his Minutemen rolling after a slow start.

Brackets lay in limbo as NCAA Tourney rolls on

By Chris Dufresne
Los Angeles Times

This isn't Bracketville, it's Nutsville.

For Arizona, Stanford, Temple, Cincinnati, it's now officially Louisville.

Duke? It squeezed past Kansas and raced out of Winston-Salem, N.C., in a Coup de ville. And to think it started so innocently Thursday, when the lone upset was was No. 10 Gonzaga over No. 7 Louisville, which really was about as much of an upset as Gore over Bradley.

Friday was the harbinger: No. 11 Pepperdine over No. 6 Indiana, No. 10 Seton Hall over No. 7 Oregon.

Saturday, the balls came tumblin' down: No. 6 Purdue over No. 3 Oklahoma, No. 6 UCLA over No. 3 Maryland, No. 10 Gonzaga over No. 2 St. John's and No. 8 Wisconsin over No. 1 Arizona.

Sunday?

Sunday, we all tossed our brackets in the shredder. Hope you weren't sitting in a hall when Seton Hall upended No. 2 Temple, No. 8 North Carolina put a heel to No. 1 Stanford and No. 7 Tulsa drilled No. 2 Cincinnati.

"Ridiculous, totally ridiculous," Cincinnati Coach Bob Huggins screamed last week of the NCAA selection committee's decision to penalize the Bearcats in wake of star center Kenyon Martin's injury. "We may be the first team in history to be No. 1 in the RPI and not get a No. 1 seed."

"Stupendous, totally stupendous," is our reaction to the committee's decision now that Tulsa toppled Kenyon-less Cincinnati.

Softball improves on bad start with eight wins in Fla.

By Jesse Greenspan
Collegian Staff

For spring break, most of the students that attend the University of Massachusetts went home, sat in front of their televisions and watched college basketball, all week. The softball team, however, had a far more hectic vacation in which it traveled down to Florida to play 15 games in 10 days.

The week started out in relatively good fashion at the Speedline Invitational at the University of South Florida. There the Minutewomen picked up their second, third, and fourth wins of the year against the likes of Georgia Southern, Penn State and North Carolina. They also dropped games to South Florida, Mississippi State and Florida, but the Maroon and White did succeed in improving their devastating 1-9 record up to that point.

Against Georgia Southern, freshman Kaila Holtz propelled UMass to a 7-0 victory by pitching her way to her first career win. She scattered five hits through seven innings of work and struck out five while walking one.

The next day, UMass rebounded from a 4-2 loss the night before at the hands of South Florida, by winning a 2-1 pitcher's duel against Penn State. This time Jen Hadley picked up her first win of the season by going the distance and dropping the Nittany Lions to 2-2 on the year.

Later, on the second day of the Invitational, the Minutewomen defeated the North Carolina Tar Heels 3-2, before losing to Mississippi State 4-1 and bowing out to Florida 4-3 on the tournament's third and final day. Against Florida, the Maroon and White mounted a furious late inning rally that almost sent the game into extra innings.

From the University of South Florida, UMass traveled to Tampa, FL in order to play the University of Illinois-Chicago in a doubleheader. The Minutewomen ended up taking the first game 4-2 against the nation's 19th ranked team behind Holtz's third stellar pitching performance in a row. Illinois-Chicago took the second game 7-5.

At this point, the UMass women finally received a few days off, but before they had a chance to frolic in the Florida sun for too long, they were off to the University of Florida State in order to compete in the Tallahassee Democratic Lady Seminole Invite.

The tournament started off well for the Minutewomen, as they defeated Georgia Southern 2-0 behind the arm of their newly found ace, Holtz. Not to be outdone was Hadley, who pitched UMass to a 2-0 win over Furman later on in the day. The Maroon and White made a valiant effort in an attempt to sweep their triple-header, but they ended up falling to Florida A&M 9-5 in the nightcap. Carrie Jeffries got shelled in the loss, and dropped to 1-6 on the season. She still has yet to find the stuff that allowed her to go 12-5 last year.

This was not to be a tournament for the weak-hearted because the very next day the softball team competed in another triple-header. In the first game they were blanked by the Wolverines of Michigan 3-0, despite the fact that nearly every player in the starting lineup reached base at least once. Holtz could not continue her winning ways even though she did end up striking out eight.

In the second game, UMass sent the University of Northern Iowa packing with a convincing 6-3 victory. Hadley went the distance for the win, and the lineup managed to pound out 10 hits.

Next up for the Minutewomen was Georgia Southern, a team that they had already defeated twice earlier in the year. Jeffries reverted to last season's form and mowed down the Georgia Southern batters with such precision that she came within two batters of a perfect game. Ashley Bakken and Anna Percy both contributed to the 8-0 win by reaching base every time they stepped to the plate.

After all was said and done, UMass returned from Florida with a 9-16 record overall. The Minutewomen went 8-7 on the road trip, and showed some signs that they will be a team to reckon when they play their next game at home against the Princeton Tigers.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Nikki Faessler is one of the Minutewomen that has had a strong start.

Cancellation may affect women's lax

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

In their quest to right the proverbial ship after a pair of close losses to start the season, the Massachusetts women's lacrosse team is stuck waiting.

Anxious to erase the memory of two six-goal offensive performances against Harvard and Cornell, the Minutewomen had their sights set on the New Hampshire Wildcats today. Unfortunately, due to the playing field conditions in Durham, NH, that game will be postponed until March 28.

This means that instead of going for their first win against 0-2 UNH, UMass will have to try against national superpower Syracuse in Amherst on Saturday.

The Wildcats, statistically, are a low-scoring team, like the Minutewomen. New Hampshire offered six and seven goal showings to begin their season, but unlike the Minutewomen, UNH's points are easily traced to one major source: senior co-captain Stephanie Keefe. The standout tallied four goals and an assist in New Hampshire's 18-6 season-opening loss at Dartmouth, and tacked on another score in their 16-7 game two defeat at the hands of Vanderbilt.

Syracuse, comparably, looks right away to two captains to lead the charge on offense. Junior Katrina Hahle is the Orangewomen's top returning scorer, having hit the opposing net 17 times last season to go along with 20 assists. Senior Lauren Brady, a Massachusetts native, whipped in 20 goals and five assists a season ago. The Orange has compiled a deceivingly poor 1-3 record so far this year; the losses coming to No. 1 Maryland, No. 3 Virginia and No. 7 Georgetown. UMass could only muster two points in an 11-2 blowout against Syracuse at the Carrier Dome last season.

On the other hand, Massachusetts has an extra week to work with to smooth out the kinks that plagued their two losses. While scoring has come with difficulty so far this term, the Minutewomen defense has been strong. In the second half of their 10-6 loss at Cornell, the Maroon and White held the No. 17 Big Red to only three points.

"The past two days of practice have been extremely beneficial, and we have to keep practicing that way," UMass coach Phil Barnes said, conceding that, "Not having a game this week makes it a long week."

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

New England's Largest college daily

Volume CVI Issue 55 | Wednesday, March 22, 2000

SGA ELECTION 2000

SGA elections gain momentum

Issues Debated

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

Candidates for both student trustee and the president of the Student Government Association faced off in a debate last night regarding campus wide issues.

The political hopefuls, trustee aspirant Seth Avakian and his presidential running mate Jeff Howe, trustee hopeful Asif Sayani and partner Jim Eldringham, and Andy Foley and with presidential candidate Phil Zetye, discussed a wide range of issues. The contenders touched upon concerns regarding campus wide safety, future plans for the proposed campus-wide budget cuts and issues regarding minority representation in the student government arena.

The debate opened with statements from all competitors for the position of trustee and included a brief statement about plans for the future of both the position and for the campus.

Current Trustee Avakian explained to the audience that he has worked for the students during the past year and hopes to continue to work for them in the future. He said that some of the issues he had addressed during his tenure as trustee were the incidents of sexual assault on campus and the impending issue of parental notification for drinking violations to campus policy.

"One of the first issues that came up that we did not expect was parental notification," he said. "You [students] are adults. I don't think that is right."

Foley, emphasized the need for environmental protection, social freedom, the necessity for a fight against privatization and the need for increased diversity in the campus community. He advocated that the trustee take an active role in the lives of the students and listens to their opinions.

"The reason why I am running for trustee of UMass is because I want to change things," he said. "I want to make UMass a more diverse place."

Another issue addressed as important in the eye of the student trustee is the issue of safety. Sayani explained that student safety on campus is a primary issue.

"I believe that safety is a vital issue," he explained. "We need to make sure that every student at UMass is safe and secure."

The issue of safety and the period of increased violence on campus last semester were a major topic. Avakian spoke out regarding the need for better paid and better trained security personnel in every building on campus.

"We want to see better pay and better trained student security," he said.

He also advocated that men to do their part towards increasing safety on campus by discussing and actively taking a role in the overall safety on campus. His comments were also echoed in sentiments expressed by Foley regarding the issue of safety on campus.

"We need to teach men that they have a responsibility for this issue," he said.

Also brought up was the issue of the need for more escort vans and the increased security in every building. Sayani commented that many students spend a great deal of time waiting for security vans and that the number of vehicles needed to be increased to better serve the students.

"We should keep focusing on getting more escort vans...we should keep focusing on getting more call boxes through OIT," he said. "A lot of times students cannot find the security vans in places that they should be on campus."

The candidates addressed the issue of increased communication between students and the government. Avakian explained that he was running for re-election because he felt that he was currently in mid-stride towards accomplishing what could be done on campus.

"I spend my life working for the students," he said. "The only reason why I am running for the position is because we feel that we are hitting our stride."

Sayani explained that if he were elected to the position that he would re-open the lines of communication between students and elected officials.

"As a trustee I will be one of the 19 on the board of trustees. I want to make sure that the trustee is actually in touch with the students," he said. "I see the fact that I can get in touch with the students and fully communicate the needs of the students as positive."

The presidential candidates also addressed issues on campus that were pertinent to students now. One of the major issues that was commented upon was the poor voter turnout that was taking place on campus and what could be done to fix it.

Candidate Zeyte commented that more issues needed to be discussed in an attempt to better inform students and encourage them to get more involved on campus.

"I think that within the student government, the issue needs to be addressed," he said. "If you ask me it is pathetic, I would like to see more programs that open students' eyes to social inequality."

Other candidates expressed concern about the lack of interest by the entire student body in the elections as a whole.

"People vote for things that matter to them," Eldringham said. "Maybe the message just isn't there."

Another hot issue that was proposed concerned budget cuts that are going to take place on the campus. Although all candidates agreed that the cuts were detrimental to the education of the students and that they should not take place, all differed on their approach to the issue.

Zeyte commented that the issue was not that of faculty against student in the case of high faculty salaries but more of a case of a lack of overall funds.

"It is not an either/or situation," he said. "The priority is not in students and not in faculty."

Howe disagreed, commenting that students should be the number one priority of the SGA.

"Let me say, I am fully on the side of the students," he said. "This is a compromise, we need to find a middle ground that suits everyone, but students must come first."

Voting will be held on Thursday and Friday from 11 – 2 p.m. and 4-7 p.m. at the Dining Commons and the Campus Center Concourse.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Asif Sayani speaks out at last night's SGA debates, which were highlighted by discussions surrounding budget and safety issues.

Spring politics in bloom

"Amy Pellegrino, a Commuter Senator and chair of the SGA's Ways and Means's Committee said that at the March 8 meeting, she and others were sitting in the back, listening to debates and, when other senators finished, she and others would whisper. "and that's why I'm running for."

"This is student government," Campbell said. "And even if it only is student government, it's still government. Like anywhere else, it's hard to get two people to agree on pizza toppings around here, much less an issue."

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

Embroiled in debate over various issues at their last Wednesday meeting, some members of the Student Government Association grumbled under their breath that "spring politics" was in the air.

Described off the record by various members of the SGA as increased attention and debate on SGA issues when campus elections are about to be held, various members of the SGA had different views on the subject, some suggesting that "spring politics" led to better debate. Others suggested that it watered down debate and at least one senator maintained that there was no such thing as "spring politics."

Amy Pellegrino, a Commuter Senator and chair of the SGA's Ways and Mean's Committee said that at the March 8 meeting, she and others were sitting in the back, listening to debates and, when other senators finished, she and others would whisper, "and that's why I'm running for."

"You can just tell when people are being sincere looking for the extra vote or quote in The Daily Collegian," Pellegrino said. "You can tell when they're trying to put forward a platform, whether it be for president and trustee or speaker and associate speaker elections or the cabinet elections."

Speaker of the Senate Mikale Billard agreed, saying that while people don't change their positions, they do set themselves up for runs at certain offices.

"People attempt to make themselves well-known," Billard said.

SGA Trustee Seth Avakian added to Billard's contention, saying "there is some level of grandstanding that goes on among senators opposing legislation because it is being proposed by opposition." He suggested that, simply because opposition candidates or their supporters made proposals, suddenly debate will increase as election time drew near.

"Politically, they're doing what they think is smart, but it ends up, if anything, creating frivolous debate," Avakian said. "It's just politics really."

Central Area Senator at Large Ken Campbell agreed, especially when it came to issues of politics and the atmosphere that surrounds them within the SGA.

"The atmosphere makes everything much more fun, much more like the real deal on this campus," Campbell said referencing recent national elections. "We had McCain and Bush duking it out in New England, everything they said was paid attention to. Everything is then paid attention to here. It makes it more fun."

Campbell elaborated to say that in the weeks before nominations, it becomes to clear to those within the SGA who is going to run for various offices. He explained that Senate meetings are very small parts of what the SGA does, saying that they were the organization's weekly public appearance, but that the meeting is only a small part of all the politics that go on with the SGA, although it is the place where they are most visible.

"Some people have always been debaters," Campbell said. "Seth [Avakian] and Jeff [Howe], Asif [Sayani], Phil Zetye, they've always been debaters, people that were speaking whether they're liked or disliked."

While Campbell agreed that, to a certain extent, people debate more because election time is near, he added that Howe, Sayani or Zetye will talk if something comes up, regardless of when during the semester it does. But for Campbell, election time means not only increased debate, but a whole different atmosphere.

He said during election time, it was a different atmosphere. He said that people are more careful of what they say, wary of those on different campaign staffs. He said that people watch each other carefully, and that things stated in casual conversation are analyzed, as are campaign posters and other campaign statements.

Pellegrino agreed, saying that there was a definite feeling that everyone gets "antsy" and that "people read into things a little bit more. It's funny."

Commuter Senator Zachary Spillman didn't comment on any humor, instead saying that the whole idea of "spring politics" is ridiculous to him.

"Senators represent students as senators and speak their minds," he said. "If people are suggesting that others in the SGA are being vocal now simply because of the campaigns is ludicrous. However, even Spillman conceded that it was possible that active supporters of candidates might let their support influence their political decisions. Pellegrino agreed, saying that spring-time debate could get somewhat heated as a result of politics.

"If someone debates a lot, I don't want to say they're overreacting, but something that normally wouldn't

Turn to POLITICS page 2

UMass police add two more campus assaults

By Daniel Ruetenik
Collegian Correspondent

After two sexual assaults and one physical assault in a three-week span last semester, UMass students were again the victims of attacks. In the past four days, two separate incidents of rape were reported to the University of Amherst Police Department.

The first assault was originally reported early in the morning last Friday, Feb. 4 to UMass police as an assault and battery charge. Over the weekend, police upgraded the charge to an acquaintance rape.

Spokesman for the UMass Police Department Jim Lyons said the individual accused of the rape is not in custody but "under investigation." He stated that it "wasn't clear yet" where the rape had taken place, but only that it was in a dorm in Southwest.

According to the police they received a sexual evidence kit yesterday morning. A sexual evidence kit is used to prove whether or not there was contact between two people either sexually or physically. The results were not available at press time.

A second incident also took place in Southwest. A report issued by the UMPD said that police had received a report in reference to a rape at approximately 1 a.m. on Sunday, February 6. The incident allegedly occurred at approximately 1 a.m. when an unknown male assaulted a female student in an elevator at Washington Tower as it traveled to an upper floor.

At this time the victim has not been able to provide a description of the assailant. Police are investigating the situation and they ask that anyone with any information regarding this incident should call the campus police.

Lyons said he was "not aware of any" previous incidents involving the elevators in the high rises.

According to Lyons, there is "no connection" between these incidents and last semester's assaults.

Last semester in November there were three assaults reported in proximity to the campus pond that heightened awareness on campus safety.

A security update issued by Chancellor Scott on Jan. 22 recommended that students "do not walk in unlit areas, carry your shriek alarms, travel with friends, know who you are letting into your residence hall or apartment building, and be aware of your surroundings."

On Nov. 2, 1999 a female student reported being raped at 5:30 p.m. On Nov. 9, 1999 a female student reported being raped in the bushes near the Metawampee Lawn at 2:30 p.m. and on Nov. 14, 1999 a female student reported being pepper-sprayed by three individuals who then punched her before she was able to escape.

A fourth assault was reported in which a female student claimed she had been slashed by an attacker with a knife in a parking lot near where a student rally was taking place to protest campus violence. She admitted later to faking the incident.

Last semester, as a result of the assaults, security was increased in the area, with a regular security patrol around the pond and student patrols as well. An emergency call box was placed near where several of the incidents had taken place and personal shriek alarms were issued to students.

Any students who are the victims of rape or sexual assaults can either dial 911 for emergency services or the Everywoman's Center 24-hour Rape Crisis Hotline at (413) 545-0800.

Several campus organizations are still offering a reward for any information leading to the arrest and prosecution of those responsible for the last semester's assaults.

Police

Roundup

TERESA CANINO-RIVERA/COLLEGIAN

Upside down

Five-year-old Coleman Lee hangs from his father's back while smiling at the camera.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 54 LOW: 36	HIGH: 62 LOW: 34	HIGH: 64 LOW: 38

SOURCE CNN.COM

Wild and Crazy Guys

OK, so not everyone gets tan over Spring Break. See how Dana and his pals enjoyed their break on today's Ed/Op page

PAGE 4

Bloody Wednesday

We sat down with metal-rapper Type O negative recently; check out what they had to say about their new album and the Beatles inside. Arts: Julia Roberts is all good.

PAGE 6

No Joker

Collegian sports columnist Michael Kobylanski takes a look at the Hockey East Tournament and its awards. Get involved on page 12.

PAGE 12

Arts & Living 6
Comics 11
Crossword 11
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 12

ON THE INTERNET

www.dailycollegian.com

Computer crime rising

By Charles Piller
Los Angeles Times

SAN FRANCISCO – Financial losses attributed to computer crime in the United States probably doubled to $10 billion in the last year, in part because of the surging popularity of the Internet, according to the Computer Security Institute.

Malicious hacking, online corporate espionage and other computer crimes launched over the Internet are taking a rising financial toll at 643 major corporations and public agencies, according to a survey to be released today by Computer Security Institute, a San Francisco-based research group.

Those surveyed estimated their computer crime losses at $266 million in 1999 – more than double a year earlier.

Turn to CRIME, page 3

politics

continued from page 1

get them all fired up suddenly reaches new found importance," Pellegrino said.

Grayson senator Asif Sayani said that the atmosphere within the senate begins to change when senators take sides in the elections.

"There is a tendency of senators to be more vocal depending on what side they represent," Sayani said, who also added that "motions during election time are usually more powerful, more likely to create conflict and then senators choose to speak up because the motions might directly affect the quality of life for a senator's constituents. The debate seems more heated, but that's a result of the motions themselves."

Billard said that he hoped senators wouldn't put forward motions simply for personal political gain, and said that he though that motions stayed fairly controversial throughout the academic year. He added that he still, at their very base, sees senators fighting for the betterment of all students on the UMass campus.

For Campbell, he is simply enjoying the political environment, but questions those that say the SGA is too political, be it during the springtime or the rest of the year.

"This is student government," Campbell said. " And even if it only is student government it's still government. Like anywhere else, it's hard to get two people to agree on pizza toppings around here, much less an issue.

TERESA CANINO-RIVERA/COLLEGIAN

Change will do you good

Stanley Durnakowsky spends the entire afternoon picking up signs for a petition in favor of a mayor for Amherst.

Spring Supplements Are Here

The Spring Supplement of the Student Telephone Directory had been delivered to the Campus Center Concourse. A limited number are also available at the Visitors Center and the second floor lobby of Whitmore. There is no direct distribution of this limited edition (5,000 copies available).

University Directories

Castaway Lounge
Proudly Presents
Monday April 3
Amateur Night
1st Place $200
2nd Place $100
3rd Place $50
Rt. 5 & 10 Whately, MA (413) 665-8733

A forum on...
What's the Difference?
CHRISTIANITY & PAGANISM
Speakers representing the respective religions will present the tenants of each belief system and then the audience will be encouraged to ask questions.
Thursday March 23rd @ 7:30-8:30
Campus Center Room 917

Do you have a legal problem?
We specialize in civil and criminal litigation, including university disciplinary actions.
FIERST & PUCCI LLP
64 Gothic Street
Northampton, MA 01060
cjk@ent-atty.com
413-584-8067

Coming Soon...
The Apartment Guide
...on March 27th
Special Classified section place one at Hampton Newsstand next to UStore
Issue March 23rd.

Great Reasons to use UHS Eye Care Services
1 A great place to get contacts lenses.
2 Free sample start-up contact lens solutions
3 Savings on routine eye exams for students at UMass.
4 Same day replacement of disposable contact lenses, in many cases.
5 FREE eyeglass adjustments and one year warranty on frames.
Frederick H.Bloom, O.D. Director, UHS Eye Care Services
University Health Services
For appointments or questions, Call 577-5244

Sands
Join us and work @ the speed of change.
Sands Brothers is a different kind of New York Stock Exchange firm. We work as financial advisors to many of America's new-breed of high tech innovators. We offer the high-performance-investment guidance they seek, along with outstanding trade execution and portfolio management.
We are seeking individuals with the ability to succeed in financial sales. You will work in an energy charged atmosphere surrounded by performance-driven professionals and supported by market intelligence and research. You will help executives in dynamic high-tech organizations pursue their goal of turning company options and stock to diversified balanced portfolios.
You don't need to be a stock market expert because we will train you, using our proven techniques. You do need an unrelenting work ethic, a mind for numbers, the sensibility to advise highly successful clients, and ability to communicate the exciting potential of innovative companies.
We currently have opportunities at Sands Brothers offices in Midtown Manhattan (New York City) and the financial district of San Francisco.
ALL APPLICANTS
ALL MAJORS WELCOME!!
INTERVIEWS ARE BEING HELD MARCH 28, 2000
ISENBERG SCHOOL OF MANAGEMENT
UNDERGRADUATE PLACEMENT OFFICE
Janice Degilos, Assistant to the Director
Telephone (413) 545-5603 E-Mail: jdegilus@som.umass.edu
Fax (413) 545-3858 CHECK OUT OUR WEBSITE @ http://www.som.umass.edu

UMASS The Index Yearbook
ATTENTION!!!
CLASS OF 2000
ABSOLUTE LAST CHANCE FOR SENIOR PORTRAITS
MARCH 27TH-31ST
Make your appointment now by calling 1-800-OUR-YEAR or log on to www.ouryear.com
School Access #147
(You need to know the access number when you make the appointment)
Order Your 2000 Yearbook ONLY $50.00
Log on to www.walsworth.com or Call 1-800-929-1503
(Service Charge of $2.95 for orders placed by phone)
DAVOR PHOTOGRAPHY
Walsworth Publishing Company

TERESA CANINO-RIVERA/COLLEGIAN

How much does it cost?

A UMass student eyes her choice of food at the register while others wait in line behind her at People's Market.

crime

continued from page 2

Based on that survey, Richard Power, CSI's editorial director, estimates the total losses attributable to computer crime in the United States is upwards of $10 billion annually – largely from financial fraud and theft of proprietary information.

Experts note that as the Internet boom continues, along with email, Web surfing and e-commerce, so does computer crime.

And a recent spate of cybercrimes – notably a wave of hacking episodes that temporarily blocked access to Yahoo, eBay and other leading Web sites in February – has boosted public awareness of the problem.

The average person now realizes that "this particular computer crime had an influence on my life," said Jeff Schiller, network administrator for the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and a leading security expert.

In the CSI survey, 59 percent of respondents identified computer attacks initiated from the Internet, compared to 38 percent who detected crimes initiated from internal company computers.

Although most of those surveyed reported only a handful of Internet attacks per business last year, experts say these attacks happen all time. That's because computer hackers have developed automated software that probe possible targets – computers connected to a public network – for vulnerabilities.

FEATURED ITEMS THIS WEEK

This week
Charles River Nylon Wind Jacket
Was $54.99
$39.99
Available in navy or maroon

Charles River Nylon Wind Pants
Was $39.99
$24.99
Available in navy or maroon

Collegiate Casuals
UMass Clothing for Everyone
M-Th 8:30-6 Fri. 8:30-5
Sat. 11 to 4
(413) 545 - 2619
The University Ustore
Not like a mall... Better.

WEDNESDAY NIGHTS AT
fun.food.spirits
THE PUB
DRINK SPECIALS
24 Oz Bud Line Cans $3.75
24 Oz Miller Line Cans $3.75
DRINK SPECIALS
20 Oz Miller Line Drafts $1.99
16 Oz Rum & Coke $1.99
BRING YOUR FRIENDS
KAROAKE IS
"BACK!!!!"
10 - 1 AM

STUDENT EMPLOYEES
W·A·N·T·E·D
Summer Conference Housing is looking for YOU!
How about a summer job that is here on the UMASS campus and lets you meet new people everyday?
JOBS
How about working with a department that will host over 9,000 people on the UMASS campus this summer?
February 22- March 31, 2000 applications for Summer Conference Housing positions will be available in the University Conference Services Office, 918 Campus Center.
Completed applications are due by April 7, 2000.

1:10 p.m. finding a great job.
While you're doing your thing, we're doing ours. Matching you to great jobs with hundreds of top employers - 24/7.
Log on to www.jobdirect.com/cash for a chance to win $500 today!
JobDirect.com
Where students and employers click!

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Our Opinion

Court smokes FDA

According to the Associated Press, the United States Supreme Court ruled yesterday by a slim 5-4 margin that the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) cannot regulate tobacco products. The decision undermines the Administration's 1996 issuing of sweeping regulations for cigarettes and smokeless tobacco, and seriously hurts President Bill Clinton's effort to hinder youth smoking.

One winner in the whole ordeal is, of course, the tobacco industry, which now has a viable legal defense after having been hit with seven civil lawsuits seeking reparation for smoking-related illnesses.

Another group of winners is all of those who own stock in Philip Morris Cos. Inc., the world's largest cigarette maker, among others, whose prices shot up on Wall Street with the announcement.

Legally, the FDA is the major loser in the decision. The Administration's regulations were set up to restrict the sale of tobacco products to minors and to limit advertising by tobacco companies, citing that roughly one million children and adolescents begin to smoke each year. Of those, nearly 350,000 will die prematurely from a tobacco-related disease.

Admirably, Clinton has always been a major opponent of the tobacco industry, supporting the FDA's regulations and now urging Congress to step up and pass legislation that would re-regulate the industry.

Vice President and 2000 Presidential hopeful Al Gore is using the issue to challenge Republican counterpart George W. Bush and the predominantly Republican Congress to show independence from the tobacco industry, perhaps hoping that a weakness to lobbyists will become clear to the voters come fall.

The Daily Collegian believes that the five Supreme Court members who supported the tobacco industry, Sandra Day O'Connor, Anthony Kennedy, Clarence Thomas, Antonin Scalia and Chief Justice William Rehnquist, have made a big mistake, and hopes that, regardless of the election year implications, Congress moves to correct this error.

Quite simply, tobacco products kill more people in the United States every year than AIDS, car accidents, alcohol, homicides, illegal drugs, fires and suicides combined. Needless to say, there are laws and regulations, sometimes extremely strict ones, which apply to each of the above causes of death. We hate puts cigarettes and smokeless tobacco above the law, the Collegian is not sure.

Granted, the FDA is not involved in all of the above causes of death, and that is ultimately the difference in the Supreme Court's eyes. Still, something that claims the life of 400,000 people a year cannot be ignored. Simply put, if a person was to kill one-one hundred thousandth of that many, that person would face the harshest penalty allowed in the state in which it happened.

While the Collegian is not in favor of a government that smothers its citizens with an iron fist, regulating anything it feels like for any reason that it desires, we do feel that one reason we have a government in to do its best to protect the populace from sweeping dangers – whether those be foreign military attacks, contagious viruses or, in this case, addictive drugs like tobacco.

The Collegian urges Congress, with admittedly little influence, to pass legislation that re-regulates the tobacco industry.

So, are you better off now?

With all the excitement regarding the forthcoming elections, a familiar political mantra comes to mind: are you better off than you were four years ago? It is a valid question for any candidate running for public office to ask. What is implied is simple: are you happy with the performance of your current political leader, or do you want a new one? Furthermore, there is a notion – also valid – that our political leaders are indeed accountable for their actions and their policies.

Surely, the election system was designed by the Founders of our great country as a simple check on the ambition and power of our elected officials, and thus, it has evolved along with the political dynamics of our country to become what it is today. If you are unhappy with the direction things are going, vote for someone other than the person in office. It is a simple system that allows our politicians to ultimately be responsible to their constituents. Do what is best for us or you're out.

This system is tested year-in and year-out on various levels of our government. Take Governor Cellucci for example. Since he is the governor of the fine Commonwealth of Massachusetts, he is responsible for establishing an agenda and carrying it out. What he is most known for are his pushes to add a runway to Logan Airport, his gross mishandling of the State's money regarding the Big Dig, and his desire to lower taxes. The last two issues apply to us specifically as members of the University of Massachusetts community. We are a state-funded institution, and any money that goes to us first goes through Cellucci's hands.

Here at UMass, accountability is much less a part of the political picture than it will be for Governor Cellucci in two years when we will be asked to vote for him again. For one, our Board of Trustees as well as President Bulger and Chancellor Scott are not elected officials. They are not accountable to the students, the faculty, or the surrounding community; these officials are responsible to the State Board of Education, and indirectly, Governor Paul Cellucci himself.

Mark Griffin

There is another important administrative group on campus: the Student Government Association. As a student-run group, the SGA is responsible for roughly $1.8 million that is allotted where it deems necessary throughout campus. Take a moment and say it with me: one point eight million dollars. Senators for certain residential areas on and off-campus, as is the case in our state and federal governments, are responsible to those who elected them into office. Everyone who argues and votes on measures to be passed and monies to be allotted is accountable to those who voted for them.

There are two exceptions to this rule. The students who voted for the President and Trustee of the Student Government Association do NOT hold them accountable for their actions. Since they are usually juniors and seniors, they have no reason to be accountable to UMass students. By the time their term ends, they will graduate and disappear into the real world.

But this year is different. This year, our President and Trustee, Jeff Howe and Seth Avakian respectively, have decided to run for reelection. By breaking precedent and running again, they have given me and each and every one of you the right to ask a simple question.

Are you better off today than you were one year ago?

Are you better off now that two majors have been cut from our University? Are you pleased that more cuts are coming, and you are not being informed? Are you better off because ONE POINT EIGHT MILLION DOLLARS of your money has been pissed away into student groups that do nothing while ALANA, the Hillel House, ASA, GLBT groups and Women's groups scrape to get every penny they can from Jeff Howe and Seth Avakian to put on activities for YOU? Are you better off because our SGA president has defended the mess and irresponsibility that is Parking Services in an open forum?

Are you safer today, after a flurry of attacks in BROAD DAYLIGHT on our campus, when Jeff Howe and Seth Avakian took the side of Administration, asking us to become more aware of ourselves and our environment, asking us to live in fear? Are you better off because your leaders, Jeff Howe and Seth Avakian, defended the UMass Police Department and the safety measures taken on this campus, while more result? Still, they ask more of us, without giving anything but rhetoric of themselves.

In 1998, when acting Governor Paul Cellucci ran for the Governor, analysts reported that although a large amount of voters between the ages of 18-25 were supporters of the Democratic candidate Scott Harshbarger, Cellucci still won, because many of us did not vote. And our University has suffered from budget cuts and downsizing as a result.

Last year, when Jeff Howe and Seth Avakian ran for President and Trustee of SGA respectively, less than 20 percent of UMass students voted. We have the chance to put democracy in motion, and truly evaluate our candidates. So I ask you a simple question: are you better off today than you were a year ago.

Mark Griffin is a UMass student.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Sam Wilkinson Managing Editor Shawn Ilinitch Business Manager
Ben Alamed Web Developer Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager
Sage Brousseau Co-Advertising Production Manager Jake Lilien Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor Joslyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor Christine Connare Women's Issues Editor
Alexis Pushkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor Marc Menschel Finance Manager
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor Joshua Szymanski Distribution Manager
Jake Lilien Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Katie Beith Promotions Manager
Jeanie Gorlovsky Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Catherine Turner International Affairs Editor
Sasha Senderovich Jewish Affairs Editor Samantha Poulen Assistant to the Managing Editor
Mariele Scherzinger Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Mary Grein News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Kara Stokes Photography Editor Chris Brennan Assistant Finance Manager
Adam White Co-Sports Editor Eric Faber Assistant Advertising Manager
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor Amy Garganta Assistant Business Manager

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

World Bank/IMF, all about Colonialism

This April, a crowd of activists will attempt to disrupt an annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank to draw attention to the activities of these organizations. "Why should I care?" I can hear people asking. For two good reasons: a practical one and an ethical one. The practical reason is that ultimately, capitalist globalization serves virtually nobody's interest. It concentrates an enormous amount of power in fewer and fewer hands, meaning eventually almost everyone will be left out of decision-making. It also contributes to the destruction of the earth, of societies and of individual human lives. The ethical reason is that the IMF's actions are wrong in many of the same ways colonialism is wrong. If we reject colonialism as unethical, saying it goes against our values of democracy, sovereignty and freedom, we have to reject the IMF for the same reasons.

The World Bank and IMF are two enormous international organizations whose stated purposes include economic development, promotion of monetary stability and a number of other purposes relating to the stability of the international economy. In reality, these organizations have become tools by which the United States shapes the economies of the poorer nations in its own interests – to the detriment of the countries being manipulated. This has made possible a world in which huge amounts of money are transferred from the poor to the rich, in a historical continuation of colonialism – the economic subordination of the global South to the North.

A general pattern of colonialism operated for most of Western Europe's 500 years of rule over the world, and it went like this: one of the great military powers of Europe would conquer a faraway land and set about structuring the conquered country's economy to suit the needs of the conqueror's economy. Typically this meant heavy emphasis on export crops, and later on, extracting mineral resources for export to industrial countries. If the conquered country was industrially competitive with the conquering power – as India was, for instance, when it was conquered by Britain – its industries were destroyed, and its population was put to work farming or mining. Since industrial countries are much wealthier than those which grow crops or dig metal out of the ground for sale in richer countries, the conqueror needed to setup a system whereby the locals would not try to industrialize themselves, which meant administering the country and having a military presence for backup, in case the natives tried to throw the colonizers out.

Uri Strauss

In the 1940s through 1960s, most of the world managed to break free of this system. At the time, there was a lot of concern among the rulers of rich countries, like the United States, that the newly independent countries would start pursuing industrial development on their own, and feed their natural resources into their own economies, which would compete for buyers with the economies of the West. One of the main goals of America's foreign policy since World War II has been preventing the Third World from achieving independent development. This goal was successfully accomplished. Apart from a few countries in East Asia, which managed to industrialize in spite of America's best efforts, Third World countries today must produce exports to keep their economies going.

They have not been successful in developing their own industries and climbing out of poverty. The U.S. managed to bring about this situation by a combination of economic warfare, direct military intervention, and – probably most importantly – international organizations like the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank. These organizations are the instruments of a new kind of colonialism, in which the economies of the South are dictated by American-dominated organizations, even though their political systems may be independent.

In the 1940s and early 1950s, the IMF and World Bank actually did get involved with economic development and currency stabilization, and played a role in Europe's recovery from the devastation of the Second World War. Since the seventies, however, the activities of these organizations have changed from promoting development to discouraging it. In 1971, Richard Nixon de-linked the American dollar from the value of gold, which made a stable currency effectively impossible. This loss of stability has been worsened by advancements in telecommunications, which has made currency trading much easier and faster. The global economic crisis of 1997-98, which was triggered by a panic selling of South Asian currencies is one result.

Also in the seventies, the World Bank began demanding "structural adjustments" in return for loans to the Third World. These involved, among other things, lowering barriers to imports, removing restrictions on foreign investment, eliminating subsidies to local industries, cutting social programs and wages, devaluing the currency and emphasizing production for exports rather than local consumption. These measures led to a social and economic disaster that forced countries to seek emergency loans from the IMF. In return for the emergency loans, the IMF demanded even more drastic adjustments. That's how countries were forced to restructure their economies away from development and towards the colony model. To top it all off, the economies of the world's poorest countries were so damaged by these reforms that they have been unable to pay off their debts, which has added the injury of large yearly interest payments to the insult of being unable to decide their own domestic policies.

Why did the World Bank and IMF insist on these restructurings? Because the U.S. was getting edgy about the advances made by the Third World. Through the sixties and seventies, Third World countries pursued policies of keeping industries local, involving the state in supporting local industries, and placing high tariffs on imports. In addition, many countries that exported mineral resources began to copy the successful cartel of oil-producing OPEC nations and charging higher prices for their products. The U.S., whose industries rely crucially on foreign raw materials, felt threatened by these developments and used diplomatic manipulation to maneuver the IMF and World Bank into imposing these structural adjustments. As a result of these policies, that shape of the global economy is very much to the satisfaction of the U.S., and not at all to the satisfaction of most of the world's population.

This April 16th, thousands of demonstrators, including a contingent from UMass and the five colleges, will gather in Washington, D.C. to demonstrate against the World Bank and IMF. It is the next step in the battle of citizens against totalitarian corporate globalization, in which small groups of citizens have recently won some astonishing. David vs. Goliath-type victories, like the defeat of the Multilateral Agreement on Investment in 1998 and the defeat of the World Trade Organization's Millennium Round last November. When it comes to corporate globalization, we always have the choice of submitting to it or resisting it. If human values like democracy are to survive, we must choose to resist it.

Uri Strauss is a UMass student.

My trip to Canada

You see everyone walking around with those golden-brown tans, some with braids and beads in their hair, and the other ever-constant reminders of the kick-ass time they just had at some tropical paradise during Spring Break? Well, I have to admit that I, too, have been walking around campus with a little color in my cheeks... only my cheeks aren't straight out of a Hawaiian Tropic commercial. My cheeks are red, flat-out rosy even, but not because I had one too many daiquiris by the pool in Cancun. It's because I'm still feeling the effects of the flu that I caught while I spent the past weekend at the poor college man's favorite Spring Break destination: Montreal, Quebec.

Now, no matter how many people cock their heads and say, "Hey, you're supposed to go somewhere warm for Spring Break," I maintain that Montreal is a pretty hot spot for the college guy who can't float that airfare to paradise.

Dana Oppedisano

Provided you can get some schmuck to make the 4-5 hour drive from Boston, your only transportation costs will be on filling up the gas tank and grabbing an ample supply of snacks for the ride. This will cost you a hell of a lot less than a flight up to Montreal, and really, five hours in a car is not that bad. Plus, you'll get to see all sorts of beautiful scenery... or so I thought. If you have seen one tree, you've seen them all, and no offense to the lovely people of Vermont who go to this school, I'm sure you have wonderful moose up there and the maple syrup buckets will take your breath away in springtime, but I couldn't get out of your state fast enough.

Once we did finally arrive at the Canadian border, we had our first, of fortunately only a few, unpleasant experiences with our neighbors to the north. Apparently, my friends and I look like pretty suspicious characters, and our whole "vacation in Montreal" story just had too many holes, so they stopped us for interrogation and basic "ball-busting" at the customs desk. We listened to five beauties from New York recite movie quotes for over an hour, occasionally stopping to say, "Get comfy guys, this'll take a while," before we were finally given permission to continue on our way.

Call me an ignorant American, but the last thing I expected to see when we finally did make it into Canada was miles upon miles of cornfields. I had never seen a cornfield before in my life, and since it couldn't possibly top the running water and road signs that made Vermont so breathtaking, I just took a nap until we got to the city. Also, I don't know how the hell long it takes to go 87 kilometers, so I decided to be patient.

Once we did finally get to Montreal and settled ourselves in the hotel, I got the chance to really check out the place for the first time. The place is basically a world of sin for a guy who's under 21 like myself, a place that offers all of the pleasures that we guys have sought and dreamt about since high school. Here, I'm still a year away from a lot of what makes Montreal such a popular spot for Americans, but there, I'm just another tourist looking for booze and women. Well, that's not all, but it's a big part of it. For one thing, the fact that the entire city (or at least the good parts) are placed conveniently on one long stretch that is known as St. Catherine Street, makes the place virtually impossible to get lost in. If you don't want to walk, cabbies are everywhere, all dedicated to getting you where you want to go as fast as they can. These guys push 70 mph on crowded city streets, and if my head wasn't spinning when I got in the cab, it sure was afterwards.

Of course, Montreal has its share of spots that the die-hard "I want to see the city" tourist can be more than happy with. There are cathedrals, casinos, malls and theaters: all defining Montreal as one of North America's most refined and extravagant cities. Needless to say, we saw absolutely none of that. We stopped at bars, pubs, taverns, holes-in-the-wall, strip clubs, go-go bars, porn shops, peep shows, dance clubs, and, well, you get the idea. Basically, it wasn't a family-oriented trip, and we loved every minute of it. It really gave us the opportunity to get to know the Canadian people as well, who of course, are forced to live amidst the pains in the ass that are we Americans.

Now, we've all heard about how Canadians supposedly detest Americans and all that we stand for, and while I can't say that what I saw of them would support that, I would say that we gave them plenty of reason to feel that way. My friends and I, especially when we were drunk, found the French language to be extremely amusing, and we weren't shy about telling the natives just how superior our nation is. At one point, my friends and I started a rendition of the National Anthem over a 140-oz. pitcher of Molson Ex at Peel Pub, and I can't tell you how sick I am of hearing that "Blame Canada" song from the South Park movie. One thing I still can't get over is the fact that Canadians manage to remain friendly, even when you are being the most ignorant, drunken slop version of yourself that you can possibly muster. They still smile and say "bon jour" – a quality that my friends and I found very surprising and hospitable.

I also managed to check out the Montreal Canadiens 3-2 victory over the Carolina Hurricanes at the Molson Centre on Saturday night, an idea that my friend and I came up with while shouting at some Canadian at some pub during the Bruins game that same afternoon. I have to give those people credit, they are damn passionate about the game of hockey. The arena, which only opened in 1996, has 21,000 plus seats, and you can bet that every single one of those seats is filled come game time. The building itself is gorgeous, and there isn't a bad seat in the house.

I know, cause I managed to see the game just fine, despite the nosebleed from high altitude... that is, when I was actually looking. My friend and I were seated in a section of the balcony known as the Molson Ex Zone, which is painted all red, packed with every brand of Molson beer known to man, and is the all-out party section of the building. Every single person sitting in this section is going all-out, the whole game, screaming at the top of their lungs, and get this: the place actually employs gorgeous, big-breasted women to dress in skin-tight, painted-on Molson half-shirts and bounce around for the whole game. The place was unreal, and a special "merci" goes out to my new Canadian boy Marco for continuously buying me and my friend rounds, just for occasionally shouting "Go Habs Go!"

Basically, I loved the place, even though I'm still recovering my voice and my bank account took a serious hit. Now I have to go back to being underage, where I can fight for my country but I can't buy a beer, and where my hockey team is still six points out of the Eastern Conference Playoffs. Honestly, I'm still glad I made the trip now, because once I actually turn 21, the place probably won't be all that special anymore. Of course, they did have a pretty cool Planet Hollywood. Oh well, au revoir until next time.

Dana Oppedisano is a Collegian columnist.

GLBT Issues

Griffin and Ouellett speak out on role of schools in GLBT issues

By Jeanie Gorlovsky
Collegian Staff

On Thursday, March 9, two UMass educators presented a lecture entitled "Making Schools Safe for LGBT Students: A Look at What Schools Are Doing." The two lecturers were Pat Griffin, a professor of Social Justice Education, and Matt Ouellett, Griffin's former student and the Associate Director of the UMass Center for Teaching. Griffin and Ouellett presented their argument with words as well as a computer slide presentation illustrating their main points. They also asked for audience participation throughout their lecture.

At first, Griffin and Ouellett presented four recommendations that had been made by the Massachusetts Department of Education to high schools in the state for making schools safer for GLBT students. These recommendations were to develop a policy protecting lesbian and gay students from harassment, to have staff training in violence and suicide prevention, to start support groups for lesbian and gay students and to have available school-based counseling from gay and lesbian students and their parents. They commented that these recommendations "enable youth to maintain their position in the status quo... without shifting the infrastructure of the school system." However, although these recommendations are not completely effective, Griffin and Ouellett did point out that Massachusetts is the only state in the United States that has the state government's support for addressing the needs of queer students.

Griffin and Ouellett made a large timeline on the chalkboard that stretched from the 1940s to present day. They asked the audience for input on how school environments were for GLBT students during the time they went to high school. One audience member commented, "I went to high school in the '40s and I was a fag (gay) friend who killed himself." Most of the audience members who went to high school from the 1950s to the 1970s commented that there were no visible GLBT students in their schools. During this time, there was also a lot of concern about possibly gay teachers and what effect they might have on students. In the 1970s, Anita Bryant led the "Save Our Children" campaign against the "threat" of gay teachers in Florida. At this time, the burgeoning feminist movement was also looked at suspiciously because of allegations that all feminists were lesbians.

In the 1980s, school environments slowly began to be more friendly toward GLBT students. In 1985, the New York public school system and the Herrick Martin Institute formed a separate high school called the Harvey Milk School to address the needs of GLBT students. Most importantly, in 1989 a study of teen suicide by the Department of Health and Human Services found that gay and lesbian youth are more than 30 percent likely to commit suicide than straight youth. As the researchers explain, the statistics "were used as a platform for the safe schools program."

The second half of Griffin and Ouellett's presentation focused on the research study that they are currently doing. The study is looking at how schools in Western Massachusetts are responding to the Department of Education recommendations. The two researchers picked eight schools in Massachusetts who had been participating in Safe Schools Activities for at least three years. They are looking at various aspects of these schools to find out how GLBT-friendly they are, including school organization and the conduction of surveys and interviews of students and staff.

So far, they have found that principals are very influential in determining the attitude toward GLBT students at their schools. They say that having the Department of Education recommendations gives administrators courage to have Gay/Straight Alliances in their schools. Since the Department of Education also gives a grant of $2,500 per year to Gay/Straight Alliances in the state, low-funded schools are also able to have these groups. Currently, Griffin and Ouellett are trying to continue their research, but have run into some difficulties with it because of a lack of funding. They are hoping to expand their study to include a bigger sample of schools.

CAITLIN WINCHESTER/COLLEGIAN

Noted transgendered author/actor/activist Kate Bornstein.

Performer/activist Kate Bornstein lectures, acts

By Jeanie Gorlovsky
Collegian Staff

The first week of March, the acclaimed transgender activist Kate Bornstein came to the UMass area to participate in a variety of events. Bornstein's first event, on March 2nd, was part of the LGBT Student Lecture Series run by the Stonewall Center. Bornstein presented a lecture called "Where's the Sex: An Exploration of the Desexualization of LBGT Culture and the Resexualization of Queer Culture." The lecture was very well-attended and many of the audience members could not even fit into the lecture room in the Campus Center.

Bornstein spent a lot of time at "Y2Genders: Dispelling the Myth of a Binary System," a conference about transgendered issues which took place at Smith College from March 2nd to March 4th. She spoke at a dialogue entitled "Crossing Lines: An Interactive Discussion on Sexuality, Feminism and Gender" with Karen Bullock-Jordan on March 2th. She also gave the keynote address, "Ya' Say Ya' Want a Revolution," for the conference.

In addition to her lectures, Bornstein also did a performance piece with her partner, sex educator Barbara Carrellas, at Booker Auditorium on Saturday, March 4th. This "edutainment" piece was called "Too Tall Blondes Do Sex, Death, and Gender." In the show, through a variety of slam poetry pieces, stories, and skits, Bornstein and Carellas discussed many issues having to do with the transgendered community. One of the most interesting parts of the performance was when the two performers handed out a "Queer Quiz" to test the "queerness" of the audience members.

Bornstein is very well known in the transgender community as someone who has worked many years to promote understanding of transgender issues in both the straight and gay communities. In addition to being a lecturer and a performance artist, she is also the author of two texts entitled Gender Outlaw and My Gender Workbook.

Advocate cartoon takes anti-gay laws to a whole new level

This week's issue of The Valley Advocate features a cartoon [which strangely has no title or author] picturing two men standing against a gray background. The first man says to the other, "I can't believe you voted for that rancid ban on gay marriage! Don't you know that no state currently allows gay marriage? Don't you know that this empty law exists only as a symbolic signal to gays that straights hate them? Don't you know that exactly this kind of petty harassment formed the content of the Nuremberg Laws of 1936? Don't you know that the Nuremberg Laws were the first step toward the Holocaust?" The final panel features the first man in a prison's uniform and the second man dressed as a Nazi commander who holds a gun to the prisoner's head while saying "Yeah, I know that." In the background, a wire fence and a sign that says "ACHTUNG" are shown. The message of this cartoon, I think, is pretty obvious: opposing same-sex marriage is the moral equivalent of killing six million Jews.

The presence of this cartoon in an otherwise respectable publication like The Advocate leads me to one conclusion: we have lost our minds. Are gays really so self-righteous that we've determined that anyone who disagrees with us is a Nazi?

Before I continue further, let me clarify two things. First, I am fully supportive of the goals of the gay rights movement, as evidenced by the other column I've written on this page. But while I enjoy poking fun at the people who make it their life's work to pass anti-gay laws, I would never stoop to the level of accusing them of genocide. Second, I have no idea whether or not the author of the comic strip is a homosexual. This column is not only directed towards the gay community, but to anyone who has joined the gay rights movement.

Recently, gay rights groups fought to persuade Internet-filtering companies to block the Family Research Council's web page on the grounds that their site constituted hate speech. While I certainly don't agree with the Family Research Council, it's ridiculous to claim that the messages on their page [such as, "The Bible clearly states that homosexuality is wrong"] are on the same level as the rhetoric of the Ku Klux Klan. Whether we like it or not, most religions are justified in saying that homosexuality is incompatible with their scriptures, and we're not going to get anywhere by blindly screaming, "Bigot!" at their fellow-ers. Priests are being forced to choose between defying thousands of years of religious teachings or being called fascists.

There are many reasons why Americans oppose gay rights. While some may simply hate homosexuals, most are perfectly normal people not full of hate who oppose homosexuality on religious grounds, or believe that gays are asking for "special" rights. What could possibly be achieved by denouncing these people, as though they were all present-at-Matthew Shepherd's funeral holding "God Hates Fags" signs? We're only pushing ourselves further toward the left, where it will be easy for the Public to dismiss us [correctly] as extremists.

This isn't to say that this sort of name-calling doesn't exist on all sides of the political spectrum. The religious right has been extremely successful in portraying all gays as nympho-maniacal pedophiles, and both supporters and detractors of race-based affirmative action have been referring to their opponents as "racists" at every possible opportunity. The difference between the gay rights movement and these groups, however, is that our entire platform is based on "tolerance," a value that we seem to have completely forgotten.

It is an unfortunate fact of our lives that gays will always be held to a different standard than straights. Unlike those in the majority, we have to convince America that we deserve equality, just as racial minorities and women successfully did years ago. How even more unfortunate, though, that our current method of achieving equality is to insist that the average straight person is a gay-bashing Nazi bigot.

Jake Lilien is a Collegian columnist.

Nine anti-gay tactics sure to scare voters

In the spirit of fairness, I have decided to aid the opponents of GLBT rights in their long and glorious struggle to ban same-sex marriage, discharge gays from the militars and defeat anti-discrimination laws. As an observer of political debates, I have learned the extremely effective tactics used by conservatives to frighten voters. I have decided to re-print them here in the hope that they may be of some use.

Lesson 1: Homosexuality is a "lifestyle." By bombarding the public with the phrase "homosexual lifestyle" rather than, say, "sexual orientation," you will be able to convince your listeners that homosexuality is something someone chooses, as if it were a hobby. Never mind that no one in their right mind would choose to be gay in a world such as ours. If we're lucky, people will realize that homosexuals [being the confused, wretched creatures we know them to be] are incapable of making decisions that we might deem "rational."

Lesson 2: Homosexuality is unnatural. True, homosexuality has been witnessed in every animal species ever observed, as well as in every culture, but no one has to know that, do they? Mr. and Mrs. America MUST think that homosexuals act not out of a normal human desire, but rather some bizarre urges acquired during years of sexual abuse. After all, the majority of people are attracted to people of the opposite sex, so it stands to reason that homosexuality is sick. It's outside the norm!

Lesson 3: Separation of Church and State Does Not Exist. For hundreds of years, liberals have been whining that it's wrong for people to push their religious views on others. Nonsense! Certainly, if the Founding Fathers knew just how loathsome these homosexuals are, they would have deleted that "establishment of religion" clause from the First Amendment. In the meantime, it's best just to pretend that it isn't there.

Lesson 4: They are after our children! Homosexuality, as it is well known, is a learned characteristic. Certainly no woman would go out and have sex with another woman if it were not for some other homosexual who introduced her to the lifestyle. To put it simply, gays recruit. And who do they go after? Young children, of course. By inserting a pro-homosexual curriculum in public schools, children as young as five years-old are being taught that "breeders blow."

Lesson 5: Civil rights for gays are special rights. Why? I don't know! It doesn't matter! All the public needs to hear is "special rights" and they'll immediately be against whatever's being proposed. Protection from discrimination? A special right! Serving in the military? A special right! Domestic partnerships that give gays second-class marriages? Special rights! Hell, if we tried, we could be probably convince America that breathing is a special right.

Lesson 6: Civil rights laws for homosexuals go far beyond any other civil rights laws ever written. Sure, a law that reads, "It shall not be legal for any employer to discriminate against an employee on the basis of their sexual orientation" may seem harmless enough, but it's not. Do you realize that this sort of law would give gays the right to rape small children? It would!

Lesson 7: Conservatives are discriminated against more than any other group in the history of the world. After all, as our friend Jerry Falwell puts it, "We have to send our children to public schools, where they are taught that evolution is scientific fact." All gays have to worry about are pesky hate crimes.

Lesson 8: The gay lobby is massive, and poised to take control of every legislative body in the country. Yes, it's true that conservative Christian groups have more than twice as much money as gay rights groups, but . . . but . . . next lesson!

Lesson 9: Pat Robertson and Gary Bauer are the moral equivalents of our founding fathers. Self-explanatory.

Jake Lilien is a Collegian columnist.

CAITLIN WINCHESTER/COLLEGIAN

Warren Ouellett, Associate Director of the UMass Center For Teaching.

UM hosts ACT conference

By Dave Lambert
Collegian Correspondent

Did you know that Western/Central Massachusetts is home to over thirty colleges and universities? Few people realize just how large the student population is in this part of the state. Up until now, there has been little communication between local campus LBGT groups, representing a large untapped resource in the fight against heterosexism and other forms of oppression. Community groups here at UMass are trying to change this.

On Saturday, April 15, 2000 UMass will host the First Annual Western/Central Massachusetts Governor's Commission on Gay and Lesbian Youth Safe Colleges Conference. Entitled Action for Campus Transformation (ACT), the conference is a free one-day event for LBGT/ally campus community members from the western and central parts of the state. The ACT Conference represents an opportunity for campus groups to meet together and make new contacts, learn new skills and find out what other campus groups are doing to make their schools safer and more accepting of LBGT people.

The conference will feature workshops on various elements of activism including campus safety, formation and upkeep of campus groups, and the place of college groups in the wider scope of LBGT movements. Speakers include Judith Sloan, who will present "The Sloan Ranger," and a keynote address by Betty DeGeneres, a spokeswoman for the Human Rights Campaign and Pulitzer Prize nominee for her book Love, Ellen: A Mother/Daughter Journey. A free lunch will also be provided, and the UMass Pride Alliance hosts post-conference pool. Again, registration for the ACT Conference is free, and can be done via the Internet at http://www.umass.edu/stonewall/conference.htm

Ask not what the ACT Conference can do for you. Although the Stonewall Center and LBGT Leadership class have been hard at work planning this conference, there are still plents of opportunities to get involved. We are currently putting together a conference 'zine of student writing and artwork; we encourage submissions from anyone with relevant material. Also, we are seeking people age 18-24 who have experienced homophobia or anti-gay discrimination on a college campus to give public testimony about their experience at the ACT Conference. For more information, contact Idit Klein at the Stonewall Center, 545-4824 or send mail to idit@educ.umass.edu.

Calendar of Events

Thursday, March 23
Monique Noell, a doctoral candidate in Clinical Psychology at UMass, is presenting a lecture in the Stonewall Center's LGBT Studies Lecture Series. The presentation, entitled "The Ripple Effect of a Hate Crime: The Psychological Impact of the Shepard Murder," will take place at 12:30 p.m. in room 903 of the Campus Center.

The Stonewall Center is presenting the Quintisentially Queer Café, a five-college queer showcase of talents, which will include music and poetry performances. The Café will take place at 7:30 p.m. in the UMass Graduate Lounge in the Campus Center.

Tuesday, March 28
The Pride Alliance, the UMass GLBT Student Organization, is meeting in room 165-69 of the Campus Center at 7 p.m.

Thursday, March 30
Dr. Richard Pleak, Director of Education in Child and Adolescent Psychiatry at the Long Island Jewish Medical Center, is presenting a lecture in the Stonewall Center's LGBT Studies Lecture Series. The presentation, entitled "Working with Gender Atypical Youth: Issues of Diagnosis, Treatment and Ethics," will take place at 12:30 p.m. In room 903 of the Campus Center.

Tuesday, April 4
The Pride Alliance, the UMass GLBT Student Organization, is meeting in room 917 of the Campus Center at 7 p.m.

The GLBT page needs writers! Call 545-1762 and ask for Jake or Jeannie!

Hickey on a new album, covers and metal

O Negative talks

By Tim Dolan
Collegian Correspondent

As the February air melts the few inches of snow outside my building, I wait inside on my floor in anticipation of a phone call. Kenny Hickey, guitarist and backup vocalist for the Brooklyn-based goth-metal band, Type O Negative, is about to call. Nervously rocking to and fro, I have the liner notes to the new Type O album, World Coming Down, laid out before me. I run through the questions I have prepared and make some last minute corrections. Suddenly the phone rings. Jamie Roberts of the band label, Roadrunner, was the one who dialed my number. "Tim? I have Kenny here, are you ready?" I nonchalantly affirmed that I was, and Hickey greeted me.

His voice is deep and came in somewhat quiet over the phone. He lacked the strong Brooklyn accent that I had been expecting. I told him of how it was great to speak with him, to which he answered with a curious tone: "Why?" After telling him of my appreciation for his music and how exciting it was to talk to the creator, he responded with, "Well, I'm afraid I might disappoint you." This self-deprecating humor is often used by the band on its albums and artwork. October Rust (1996) not only ends with frontman Peter Steele saying, "That's it; that's all we have. I hope it wasn't too disappointing," but has the phrase "Functionless art is simply tolerated vandalism – we are the vandals" in the liner notes. Hickey's use of it brought me comfort, not only as an icebreaker, but as proof that I was in fact talking to the man who performs on these albums I've been listening to.

Type O Negative is touring with label-mates Coal Chamber at the moment, and they recently performed at Boston's Avalon Ballroom. The interview focused on this tour and the aforementioned World Coming Down, the album it promotes.

"At a street level [fan response] is great... Radio is not so good to be honest with you, and the industry is iffy about it... We realize that anything we put out will counter the trend," Hickey says of the new album. The disc is made up of epic, guitar-heavy, melodic songs and was released amidst a rap-metal revolution. The first single, "Everything Dies," could only be heard on heavy music radio stations that don't necessarily cater to the mainstream. And even there it was very seldom played.

"We are always apprehensive when we release a new album. We constantly overcriticize ourselves," said Hickey. But he and the band are proud of the new release. He said, "It's just heart and imagination. I worked my ass off for eight months."

Type O covers some songs on their albums and onstage which aren't normally associated with a metal band; songs like Neil Young's "Cinnamon Girl," and Seals and Crofts' "Summer Breeze." World Coming Down is no exception to this. "Day Tripper," "If I Needed Someone" and "I Want You (She's So Heavy)," all by the Beatles, are combined into medley form at the end of the album. I asked it, by these unorthodox covers, the band was paying homage to their heroes and trying to expose younger listeners to this music.

COURTESY CAMILLA SJÖSTROM

We recently sat down with Type O Negative frontman, Kenny Higgins, just so you wouldn't have to.

"No, not necessarily," Hickey said. "Well, the Beatles, yes, that was paying homage. In twelve years we've never touched the Beatles, we thought it was about time. We've been influenced by them from production down. I think [the "Day Tripper" medley] is definitely the best cover we have done."

Peter Steele is credited for writing most of Type O's material as well as co-producing it. I asked as to whether the band is a democracy and how the writing process works. He let out a sound that was not so much a sigh as an exhale that was amplified by the phone receiver. He said, "No, it's not really a democracy. It's a group effort[sic]. Peter had the blueprint for October Rust, and there was not much room for change. This album was more spontaneous than any other Type O album, it grew as we went along. But the core of all the songs was Peter, and he wrote all the lyrics."

I asked him of the music trends around, more specifically the rap-metal movement. "It's metal, man, except everybody playing has dreadlocks. I'm not into it, personally, but I understand it. I listened to bad metal when I was a kid." He speaks of the monotony of the music, something Type O is unfamiliar with. "I like something that changes keys. I want to hear something interesting that satisfies that interest."

Fumbling around my papers and feeling unprofessional, I introduced the question I was so desperately trying to find. The question regarded some short stories that Hickey has written. The name of this collection is "Sex Is Dead." I asked if these stories were factual, to which he replied, "It's autobiographical – it's the truth, man." The stories explain quite graphically Hickey's problem with amphetamines. "I wrote all that after the fact. I was real close to being on the street. I wrote [the first chapter,] 'Stairway' a year and a half after it happened."

As my time was winding down, I asked a two-part question, "What can we expect on this upcoming tour," and "What does the future hold for Type O Negative?"

Regarding the tour he said, "I never know what to expect. We're gonna set up the snow machines from the October Rust tour again. I thought it was a cool effect. I don't know why we took it off for the last tour."

And for Type O's future? "I try not to think about the future, because if I do, I won't sleep at night. This industry is very volatile, especially for a band like us. The farthest I look into the future is two weeks into this tour. I hope this tour lasts at least two weeks..."

Raft provides literary haven

By S.A. Vignola
Collegian Correspondent

The Stone Raft
By José Saramago
Harcourt Brace and Company
$13.00 (paperback)

The Iberian Peninsula (that's Portugal and Spain) has split apart from continental Europe and begun a voyage on the Atlantic Ocean. The peninsula literally cracked and separated from Europe and began traveling due west. There were no earthquakes or volcanoes, no explosions or cataclysmic devastations to explain the event, just a crack that began and spread through the Pyrenees Mountains and surrounding landscape leaving not one, but two mountain ranges: one on the Iberian island and the other in France.

Out of the mayhem and chaos on the island, come five people. Each miraculously drawn to each other by events as intriguing and magical as the traveling island itself. Each character experienced an inexplicable oddity that for one reason or another drew them to another character. For example, a flock of starlings follows one of them for the first half of the book while another feels the ground rumbling constantly. Though the characters are as dumbfounded as the scientists who question them, inevitably the five meet and begin learning about themselves and world through and within each other.

Reading The Stone Raft did several things for me. It demonstrated the quality of works needed for someone to be awarded the Nobel Prize for Literature (as this author did in 1998). The style of prose is not merely brilliant or magnificent, it is genius. I might add, so genius in fact that on more then one occasion I felt as if the book had picked me up and thrown me across the room. Any professors or literary buffs reading this review who are familiar with Saramago's work are probably chuckling to themselves right now thinking, "Scott might as well have read James Joyce, that poor jerk." Well believe me, at times it felt like I was (both reading Joyce and a poor jerk).

Now for the average member of the UMass student-try, I don't want to be discouraging. However, if you really want to read and get something out of this book, it must be more then a beach book. It must be an undertaking. In other words, you can get a lot out of this book if you are willing to put forth the effort.

One note of caution before you run to the nearest bookstore to pick up a copy: This book will-blow-you-away. When I finished it, I wasn't left with a "new outlook on life" or a "mind expanding revelation on Human nature," though I probably should've been. What I was left with was a feeling that someone had opened the curtain to the meaning of life for a moment and for all it's worth, it went right over my

Turn to RAFT, page 7

Destination crash lands

By Wes Wrightson
Collegian Staff

Final Destination
Directed by James Wong
with Devon Sawa, Ali Larter, Kerr Smith
Playing at Mountain Farms Theaters

With a no-name mediocre cast, one would expect that a film like Final Destination to falter horribly at the hands of the critics and the box office alike. That would be what one might expect. To tell the truth, that's what I expected. I was wrong. I liked the film. Being standard teenage horror fare (in the same grouping as such films like The Faculty and I Know What You Did Last Summer), it actually made me jump at certain key scenes.

The film, starring Devon Sawa (Idle Hands and Wild America) concerns a group of high school students on their way for a calm Spring Break in France. The main character, Kevin, beings to have premonitions at the beginning of the movie about the plane he and his friends are flying on; he believes that it is going to blow up. One thing leads to another, and Kevin and six others narrowly escape their own demises they watch their plane go down in front of their eyes.

The long and short of the film is that while Kevin and his six friends cheat their own deaths, a plan has already been enacted to ensure that they don't cheat death one more time. Being the almighty lead character, Kevin must figure out the plan of each person's death in order of their seating arrangements on the plane, and through some not-so-subtle clues provided by the Grim Reaper himself.

The scenes of carnage are, surprisingly, not that predictable. They are, however, grisly. Sean William Scott (Steve Stifler in American Pie) gets a nasty "headache" in one of the movie's greatest death scenes. His character seems like a toned-down replica of the one he played in American Pie, and he is seemingly always falling off of the bike that he rides through the film. I would have to say that choosing Ali Larter as the romantic interest of Devon Sawa was pretty wise. They both play off of each other well, even though the depth of their characters is paper-thin. Especially paper-thin is the character, Carter, played by Kerr Smith (of "Dawson's Creek" fame). In Final Destination, Smith plays a muscle-bulging temper raging jock. Seriously folks, he must have told his agent to try to finagle him a role that is the complete opposite of the sensitive homosexual he plays on TV.

COURTESY NEW LINE

Ali Larter, Devon Sawa and Kerr Smith narrowly avoid disaster in the surprising Final Destination.

The movie is directed by James Wong of TV's The X-Files episodes. He does what he can with the shallow characters and the predictable dialogue. The plot is inventive and creative; something we as an audience haven't seen as of yet. The soundtrack is also pretty cool, as the character Carter gets all of the cool songs to play in his car that he seems to be perpetually driving.

The timing of a film like this is terrible. It's coming out the same time as all of these other teen horror/slasher/whodunit movies are. If Final Destination had been released four or five years ago, it definitely would fared better than it is currently doing – floundering in a sea of mediocrity like the plane crashing into the sea in the film its self. B

■ Raft

continued from page 6

head.

Nevertheless, Saramago keeps the reader well grounded by making the surreal events as realistic as anything else natural and normal. Saramago describes government and population's reaction to the inexplicable events masterfully enough that I never questioned the reality to his fiction – a prime example of his expertise over the art of writing prose.

I will concede that my feeble intelligence was not enough to grasp some of The Stone Raft's finer points; however, I do realize that this is a masterpiece. The author's writing style is amazingly fluid despite his blatant negligence to most of the grammatical rules I've come to know and live by. One example is that despite the novel's excellent use of dialogue there is not a single set of quotes within the entire novel. At first this only added to my confusion, but by the end of the novel I couldn't imagine it any other way.

The Stone Raft is a novel of both fantasy and reality. It takes you on a journey much like its characters who have even less of a clue then you do. Although I may not have recognized every sub-theme that Saramago wanted me to, I did appreciate its superb writing style and ability to portray this whimsical fantasy as a stark reality. This book should be praised, if for no other reason, because it shows that with genius truly anything is possible, even an island then sails the high seas.

If you would like me to review a book in the Collegian's weekly review, or have any other questions or comments, email me at mescott@ma.com.

www.dailycollegian.com

THE LALLY SCHOOL
AT RENSSELAER
Management and technology.
Application and innovation.

GET THE JUMP
On The New Economy
The Lally School at Rensselaer.
Business savvy for a world gone digital.
The MBA@Rensselaer

why not change the world?™
Rensselaer
http://lallyschool.rpi.edu 518.276.6586

www.bu.edu/summerterm
Summer Term 2000
Boston University
617/353-6000
Session 1: May 23–July 1
Session 2: July 5–August 12
Twelve-Week Session: May 23–August 12
An equal opportunity, affirmative action institution
BOSTON UNIVERSITY

How do I look for an off-campus apartment?
How do I sublet my apartment/ house for the summer?
Who is going to take over my lease?
have questions?
The Apartment Guide
Issue date March 27th
Special classified section 20 cents/word taken at Collegian Newspaper Stand next to UStore

THE MONKEY BAR & GRILLE
WEDNESDAY NIGHT is LADIES NIGHT
FEATURING FREE PRIZES AND GIFT CERTIFICATES FROM Zanna, Ultimate Fitness, Oasis Body Wraps, The Monkey Bar,
Styles by Deborah, Aesthetics Skin + Body Care, and Pinocchio's
THIS WEEK WE ARE GIVING AWAY TWO TICKETS TO THE SOLD OUT RED HOT CHILI PEPPERS SHOW COURTESY OF THE MULLINS CENTER
ALSO FREE WEEKEND NO COVER PASS TO ALL LADIES AND AS USUAL ALL THE JAMZ SPUN BY DJ FOOZ
63 NORTH PLEASANT STREET 259-1600

Did you know that the Daily Collegian
DO YOU WANT A JOB THAT MATTERS?
Become an "advertising
Collegian is looking for interested in earning
Fill out an application
Center Basement,

What are you going to do this Summer?
Get a job
Earn extra credits
Go to the beach
Enjoy small classes
Hang out
Take interesting courses
Thinking about taking a course you've never had time for? Want to graduate sooner? Eager to experience the intellectual energy of small classes?
Why not do it all this summer? Register by May 1 and receive a discount on our affordable tuition.
Session I June 5 - July 7
Session II July 10 - August 11
For more information call 781-736-3424 or fax 781-736-8124. E-mail us at summerschool@brandeis.edu or check out the web at: brandeis.edu/sumsch.
Brandeis University
Waltham, Massachusetts

Sophomores – Juniors – Freshmen
US Resident 3.5 GPA Want to study abroad
Come to the ONSA
Scholarship Information Session
When: Wednesday, March 22
7:30-9:00 pm
Where: Campus Center 101
You are invited to attend the upcoming Office of National Scholarship Advisement (ONSA) information session to learn more about national, competitive scholarships.
Many of these scholarships require students to begin preparing for the application process well in advance of fall deadlines, so take the opportunity to get information now.
If you are unable to attend the information session but would still like to learn more about national, competitive scholarships, please feel free to contact the ONSA office by e-mail at onsa@acad.umass.edu or by phone at 577-2610.
Fulbright Marshall Rhodes
NSEP Glamour USA Today
Scholarships – Fellowships

Best! 1999 UMASS
By The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Plan Ahead For Next Year...
Excellent Location... ½ Mile From UMass
Spacious Apartments - 1, 2 and 3 Bedroom Townhouse
All Rents Include Heat, Hot Water and Cooking Gas
PUFFTON VILLAGE II
Office Hours: 8 am to 4:30 pm Monday - Friday
(413) 549-0145

all underclassmen, please look away. this is an announcement exclusively for seniors

Pssst...

(class of 2000 only)

the secret to becoming an eGrad
is just around the corner. keep reading

MDC
www.DailyCollegian.com

and soon you'll know how to get the right start in the real world.

prospect

continued from page 12

ken rules of team hierarchy –

rookies are to be seen and not heard. Eckstein and his fellow wide-eyed newcomers may adorn the same uniforms and habituate to the same locker room as Nomar, Pedro, and gang, but there is a definite line that is not to be crossed. The first rule of respect? Do not speak until spoken to.

"It's funny because Jason Varitek went to Lake Brantley High (which is near Eckstein's native Sanford, Fla.)," the rookie said, "I hadn't said two words to him and the other day we were sitting on the bus, and another guy said to Jason, 'Do you know this guy lived 15 minutes away from you and hasn't said one word to you yet?'

"And I said, 'I didn't know if I wanted to bug you or not.'" Eckstein laughed. "You don't know how the veterans are going to take it. I talk to Brian Daubach. Carl Everett is a real good guy. I got the opportunity to work with Nomar a little bit with double plays. It depends on who it is."

Despite the team pecking order, Eckstein feels that the recent years of success for the Red Sox are a result of tremendous clubhouse chemistry.

"It starts with [manager] Jimy Williams," Eckstein said. "He talks about going out there and playing hard, and when you get a group of guys together that play hard, it creates good bonds. In certain situations, you can pull together, and you end up coming up a winner."

Sitting in the hotel lobby as the clock ticks toward 10 p.m., Eckstein looks drained. After the day's exhibition game, the rookie attended a banquet where the 1999 Trenton Thunder team was honored as Minor League Team-of-the-Year by Baseball America. The banquet ran late and Eckstein, along with half the squad, must travel to Sarasota, Fla. the next day.

As Wilton Veras traipsed through the lobby on the way to shoot some pool, he stopped to ask Eckstein what he'd be doing later that night. "I'm going to bed," Eckstein said, as Veras teased him. "It's past my bedtime!"

As he prepared to head up to his hotel room for a good night's res Eckstein's face was a study in exhau tion and contentment. He accepts th daily grind of the big leagues witho complaint, because the rewards, by fa overshadow the drawbacks. He realize that he is living out a childhood fantas that spans generation after generation he is one of the privileged few tha makes a career out of playing profes sional baseball.

hockey

continued from page 12

Albany, NY. The Black Bears earned the No. 1 seed, receiving a first-round bye and awaiting the winner of the Colgate/Michigan game.

The Terriers ended up with the No. 3 seed in the East and will take on St. Cloud State on Saturday. The seeding came as a bit of a surprise considering the fact that BU cruised to the HE regular season title; however, a convincing win by the Black Bears over the Beantown school in the HE tournament semifinals last weekend propelled Maine over the Terriers in the rankings.

Should the Terriers defeat St. Cloud on Saturday, they will take on St. Lawrence on Sunday.

Boston College and UNH were shipped out West this weekend, where they will play in Minneapolis, MN. The Eagles, who earned the No. 4 seed, will take on Michigan State, the winners of the Central Collegiate Hockey Association tournament.

The Wildcats earned the No. 3 ranking out West and will take on an upstart Niagara program this weekend. The Purple Eagles won the regular season and conference tournament titles in the newly formed College Hockey America League, but it was wins over national powers such as BU, RPI and Princeton that helped the upstate New York school sneak into the tournament. Niagara has 29 wins on the season, second in the country in that department behind Wisconsin.

Two teams from each regional will advance to the Frozen Four in Providence, RI on April 6 and 8.

Four HE players with a chance at the Hobey

Once again, Hockey East was well represented when the 10 finalists were announced for this year's Hobey Baker Award, given to the top college hockey player in the nation. Boston College led the way with three players on the team – Farkas, Mottau and Brian Gionta, while UNH was accounted for by junior goaltender Ty Conklin.

Conklin and Mottau split Hockey East Player of the Year honors this season. The former of the pair won 20 games on the season, and also posted a 2.53 goals against average and a .907 save percentage. The latter scored four goals and added 31 assists for the Eagles this year.

Farkas led the league in scoring with 53 points and netted three hat tricks during the season. Gionta, the only returning finalist from last year, was second in the nation with 29 goals.

Also selected as finalists were forwards Mike Comrie (Michigan), Shawn Horcoff (Michigan State), Andy McDonald (Colgate), Jeff Panzer (North Dakota), Steve Reinprecht (Wisconsin) and RPI goaltender Joel Laing. The winner will be announced on April 7 in Providence, RI at the Frozen Four.

NCAA tourney clubs rule HE awards

The four teams who are set to open play in the NCAA tournament this weekend took home the majority of the honors when the conference awards were handed out last week.

In addition to Mottau and Conklin being award Co-Player of the Year honors, the former also earned the award as the league's best defensive defenseman.

BU goalie Rick DiPietro won the Rookie of the Year award, while UNH forward John Sadowski was the league's best defensive forward.

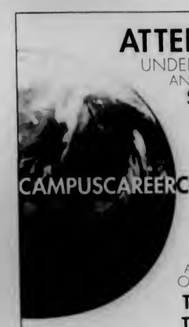
BU coach Jack Parker also won the Coach-of-the-Year award, while Larose won the league's sportsmanship award.

Conklin, Mottau, Gionta, Farkas, Larose and BU defenseman Chris Dyment earned first team All-Hockey East laurels, while DiPietro, Allen, Bellefuille, Pat Aufiero of BU, and UNH forwards Mike Souza and Darren Haydar comprised the second team.

The All-Rookie team was made up of DiPietro, Ron Hainsey of UMass-Lowell, Freddie Meyer and Brian Collins of BU, Anthony Aquino of Merrimack, BC's Krys Kolanos and Peter Fregoe of Providence.

Michael Kabylanski is a Collegian columnist.

COURTESY BOSTON COLLEGE MEDIA RELATIONS



Boston College defenseman Mike Mottau had his Eagle teammates soaring after being named the Hockey East Co-Player of the Year.

Bartenders Have More Spirit!

Why not be a bartender?
• Only professional school in Western MA
• Hands-on training in real bar/club setting
• National certification in alcohol awareness
• Lifetime refresher • ID Card • Resume
• Special UMass student discount
• Conveniently located in West Springfield
Call TODAY! (413) 747-9888

ATTENTION
UNDERGRADUATE AND GRADUATE STUDENTS WORLDWIDE

CAMPUSCAREERCENTER.COM

PURSUE JOB
AND INTERNSHIP OPPORTUNITIES THAT SPAN
THE GLOBE

CampusCareerCenter.com
The world's largest campus job fair

STUDENT TRAVEL
Degrees of Freedom

Special Student Airfares
Great Travel Products
Adventure Holidays
Beds on a Budget
Travel Insurance
Eurail Passes
Contiki Tours
Student ID's
800-777-0112
STA TRAVEL
WE'VE BEEN THERE.
www.statravel.com

EAST HEAVEN HOT TUBS
Best Place For A Hot Tub
$10 OFF WITH THIS AD
413-586-6843 • 33 West St. Northampton
www.eastheaven.com

Council Travel
The journey is the reward....
Give your family & friends the gift of travel
Gift certificates, passport photos, airport transfers, tours, language programs, work exchanges, ISIC backpacks, rolling duffels, & all sorts of gear, guidebooks, railpasses, tickets, accommodations and more.
44 Main Street
Amherst MA
413-256-1261

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENT

Klub Kai is booking formals and Graduation Parties for May 2000. Call Cheng @ 586-2774 after 4:30 pm. Buffet Packages available.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

1 Bedroom Summer Sublet with option to lease on bus route. 1 mile from campus 549-1859.

1 Bedroom Apartment Colonial Village on bus line. $465.00/ month. Available 6/1. 256-3237.

Cheap rent! Summer sublet with lease option starting June 1st. On bus route, 10 minutes from campus. 2 bedroom, 1 bath. $575/mo. Includes hot water. Call 259-2919.

Sublet my apartment. 2 bedroom for 6/1-9/1. On bus route. Call 253-9047.

Apply now for best locations. Amherst Center 1,2 and 3 bedroom apartments. Gas heat, hardwood floor. April showings for June and September. Lincoln Real Estate. No fees charged. 253-7879.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Apply now for best locations. 3 bedroom condos. Gas heat, hardwood floors, bright heated basement with study and laundry area. 1/2 mile to campus, on bus route. April showings for June and September. Lincoln Real Estate. No fees charged. 253-7879.

EMPLOYMENT

$ Fundraisers $ Open to student groups and organizations. Earn $5 per MC app. We supply all materials at no cost. Call for info or visit our website 1-800-932-0528 ext. 65 www.ocmconcepts.com

$$$ SUMMER CASH $$$ Student Business Mngmt./ Sales Position with National Firm. Pays $10- $12 + Commission. Available to Soph, Jr and Sr only. For info go to http://www.jablon.com

Bank on getting a tan this summer working outside with other students! Earn up to $9.00- $13.00/hr. Various positions available. For information or to apply on-line see our website at : http://www.university-painters.com

Delivery persons wanted. Apply at D.P. Dough, downtown Amherst.

EMPLOYMENT

CAMP CANADENSIS, Pocono Mountains, PA. Premier residential coed summer camp. We are looking for an energetic, qualified and caring staff to teach all general athletics, gymnastics, hockey, tennis, mountain bikes, golf, motorcycles, outdoor adventure, ropes, archery, drama, video, photography, fishing, WSI, waterfront activities, arts and crafts, cooking and much more ! Excelent facilities and great salary! 6/21/00 - 8/18/00. Call (800) 832-8228 or apply online: www.canadensis.com

Earn $1200-2000 this month part time and a new computer ! Will Train. For details 888-342-3267 code 45

Make a Difference AMERICORPS.ORG Joining AmeriCorps is a great way to get experience, take on new responsibilities and know the satisfaction of building a community. In exchange for a year of community service in the area sof public safety, education, human needs and the environment, AmeriCorps members receive an education award ($4725), a monthly stipend and health coverage.

EMPLOYMENT

Survey Personal Needed for PVTA ridership Study- the Pioneer Valley Planning Commission (PVPC) will be conducting a ridership survey of all PVTA routes May 1 through May 14. Surveyors will be paid $9.50 to $10.50/ hour to distribute/ collect survey forms, answer questions, and collect ridership information. All shifts are available. Applications will be accepted until April 14, 2000. Applications can be downloaded at www.pvpc.org/pvpc/jobs.html or call 413-781-6045 or apply in person at PVPC, 26 Central St. West Springfield Ma 01089. PVPC is an EOE/ AA employer.

Bilingual Tutors/ Translators for part-time paid assistance during the school day to students speaking Amharic, Chinese, Cape Verde/ Portuguese, Japanese, Korean, Mongolian, Tibetan, Urdu, Vietnamese. Contact: ESL/ Bilingual Office at 413-549-9857. Amherst-Pelham Schools. An Equal Opportunity Employer / Affirmative Action Employer.

EMPLOYMENT

Summer Help Wanted Local corrugated Manufacturer Looking for summer help for 2nd and 3rd shift. Good Pay 1.25 an hour. Call Scott Parsons 413-582-3844

Earn $530 Weekly distributing phone cards. No experience necessary full/part-time. Call 1-800-831-6717.

Fall 200 Internships with the Student Legal Service Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field, work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary- training provided. Contact the Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

3 Job Opportunities on Nantucket Island, MA beginning May. A.) Office manager with good typing, computer and telephone skills. B.) Office assistant, errand runner, mother's helper, household help. C.) Auction gallary assistant: furniture porter, display, delivery. Salary and housing. Drivers license required. (508)228-3942 or send reume: P.O. Box 2607 Nantucket, MA 02548.

EMPLOYMENT

Movers: Local moving company is hiring individuals for moving positions. Flexibility and good attitudes are a must. Start at $8.00 per hour. Raise commensurate with performance. Call 584-4746.

UAHC Crane Lake and Eisner Camps, Reform Jewish co-educational Camps located in the Berkshires of Massachusetts, seek qualified, dedicated counselors and specialists, including Waterfront, Athletics, Arts. Good salary, r&b included, travel assistance. Crane Lake Camp: Contact Brad Gerstle, 800-227-2660 ILUVCAMP@aol.com; www.cranelake-camp.com. Eisner Camp: Contact Louis Bordman, 212-650-4130 EISNERGUY@aol.com; www.eisnercamp.org

HOUSE FOR RENT

Rent 7 Room House or single rooms. In Sunderland on bus route. Available June 1st. Call Steve 413-221-5840

INSTRUCTION

Private Boxing Lessons w/ retired pro Djata Bumpus in Amherst. Call 413-256-0364

MISCELLANEOUS

Modeling & Acting Have you always dreamed of being a model or actor but don't know where or how to get started? New faces MIETOUR is coming to your area soon. For more info call 1-877-MIE-TOUR.

Million dollar game shows? Forget 'em! Bring your basketball brain to Shoot, Score and Win a million! at www.sixdegrees.com for tons of chances to win cash and prizes.

What do basketball tournament games, cash and prizes, and you have in common? Look for Shoot, Score and Win a Million! at sixdegrees.com to find out.

Get paid to lose weight and inches. All natural, doctor reccommended. 1-800-397-7715.

ROOM FOR RENT

Room in nice house. Bus route, washer, dryer. $350+ 548-7039.

SERVICES

Know your rights Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find Out! Contact Student Legal Services Office , 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

STEREO EQUIPMENT

Boston Acoustic sub/sat series. Six 8" speakers with two 16" sub-woofers. Also central channel speaker. $800 value for $300. Like brand new. Need money 586-0534.

TICKETS

Elton John Seats Section 1 Floor 6. Available 88-441-5634

TRAVEL

Study Spanish. Internships in Guatemala. College Credit. www.casaxelaju.com (512)416-6991.

WANTED TO RENT

House wanted: 3-4 bedroom house very close to campus. Wanted for rent starting 6/1. Please call Lia @ 2536378 w/any information.

GENERAL STORE DELI & BAKERY
Quality help wanted for spring, summer & fall 2000. FT/PT-all shifts. Availability through vacations & long weekends preferred. Kitchen skills and customer service a plus. Apply in person Cushman Village General Store, Deli & Bakery. 591 Pine St., Amherst, MA 01002 (5 minute drive North from Amherst Center.)

Five College Community Calendar

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 22

Community – Tuesday's SGA debates will be airing today at 3:30 p.m. on UVC-TV 19.

Lecture – Monique Noell will present a lecture entitled "The Ripple Effect of a Hate Crime: The Psychological Impact of the Shepard Murder" at 12:30 p.m. in room 903 of the Campus Center.

Lecture – Composer Tania Leon will present a lecture on her work at 4:30 p.m. in Earle Recital Hall, Sage Hall at Smith College.

Workshop – There will be a workshop on contraception and safer sex at 5 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services. Men and women are welcome.

THURSDAY, MARCH 23

Community – Tuesday's SGA debates will be airing today at 3:30 p.m. on UVC-TV 19.

Lecture – Algirdas Patackas, Lithuanian Parliament member and Professor of History and Ethnology, will speak on "The Situation in Chechnya" from 4-6 p.m. in Machmer W-25. For more information call 545-0043.

NOTICES

Community – The UMass Police Department would like to invite female students and staff to partake in a women's self-defense course. The class requires a 14-hour commitment and runs from 6-9:30 p.m. each night. Registration is from 7:30-9 p.m. on March 24 and 25 at the UM police station and is first-come, first served. Classes for men are available upon request.

Community – Mass Appeal, the newest co-ed a cappella group at UMass, is looking for students to arrange music. Email Erica at massappeal@mailcity.com for more information.

Help – From Feb. 15-April 15 on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays from 5-8 p.m. student volunteers from the School of Management will assist non-resident students with the preparation of their Federal and State income tax returns. Call 545-5600 for more information.

Scholarships – The STEMTEC/NSF Teaching scholars program is offering scholarships to students who are interested in exploring a career in K-12 math or science teaching. Students do not need to be enrolled in a certificate program to apply. Applications are due by April 1. Contact Johanna at 545-0026 for more information.

Support – A grief support group is available to all students who have experienced the death of someone they love. The groups are free, small and confidential, and meet on Wednesday and Thursday evenings. Telephone pre-screening is required for enrollment. Call 577-5316 if interested.

Support – AL-ANON and ALA TEEN are offering local meetings for those affected by someone else's drinking problem. Call 253-5261 for meeting times and locations.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

BOOKBUCKS From Bookworks
Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks, you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!
*See Store for Terms and Conditions
University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

Ustore CAMPUS CENTER
Just another way that WE GIVE 100%
We give all of our profits to support University Programs

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MARCH 22, 2000

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Metropolitan Opera Presents "Der Rosenkavalier" (R) (In Stereo)							Egg
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	March Magic	★★★ "Star Wars" (1977, Science Fiction) Mark Hamill, Carrie Fisher.					News
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	City of Angels (In Stereo)	Frasier (In Stereo)	"Primal Fear" (1996, Suspense) Richard Gere, Laura Linney.				News	Nightline
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Two Guys-Girl	Then Came Drew Carey	Spin City	20/20			News	Nightline
WLVI	6	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends	Nanny	Dawson's Creek (In Stereo)		Roswell "Blood Brother" (R)	News			Friends	Nanny
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Dateline (In Stereo)		West Wing (In Stereo)	Law & Order (In Stereo)			News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Blind Date	Real TV (R)	7 Days "The Cuban Missile		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)	Law & Order (In Stereo)			News	Tonight Show
WVIT	9	News	NBC News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Dateline (In Stereo)		West Wing (In Stereo)	News			Friends	Frasier
WTIC	11	Simpsons	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Get Real "The Distance"	Law & Order (In Stereo)			News	Tonight Show
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Dateline (In Stereo)		West Wing (In Stereo)				Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGBY	57	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Members' Choice						News	Nightline
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Two Guys-Girl	Then Came	Drew Carey	Spin City	20/20		Med Abt. You	Judge Mathis
WSBK	38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	7 Days "The Cuban Missile		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		Star Trek: Voyager "Elogium"		Ripley's Believe It or Not! (R)
WTBS	46	Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Ripley's Believe It or Not!		WCW Thunder		WCW Thunder		Law & Order "Stalker"
A&E	41	L.A. Law "Leave It to Geezer"		Law & Order "Star Struck"		Biography: Vanna		Investigative Reports		American Justice		Sports	Moneyline
CNN	43	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		Newsstand		Daily Show	Frank DeCaro
COM	36	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Awards	★★ "Airheads" (1994, Comedy) Brendan Fraser, Steve Buscemi.				South Park	Man Show	On the Inside	Figure Skating
DISC	49	Your New House (R)		Wild Discovery: Snngs, Fangs		On the Inside "Figure Skating"		Raising the Mammoth (R)				Sportscenter
ESPN	45	Sportscenter		College Basketball: NIT Quarterfinal – Teams to Be Announced.				College Basketball: NIT Quarterfinal – Teams to Be Announced.				Sportscenter
LIFE	42	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		"The Conviction of Kitty Dodds" (1993, Drama) Veronica Hamel.			Lyricist	True Life	Diary	Undressed	Loveline
MTV	39	MTV Jams	Beat Suite	Undercover	Grind All Over	Tom Green (R)	TRL (R) (In Stereo)			Switched	Love Lucy	Jeffersons	Happy Days
NICK	44	All That	Catdog	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Sponge	Sponge	Brady Bunch	Bev. Hillbillies	Switched	Love Lucy	Jeffersons	Happy Days
SCIFI	48	Sliders "Revelations"		Crypt Tales	Crypt Tales	Crypt Tales	Crypt Tales	Crypt Tales	Crypt Tales	Crypt Tales	Crypt Tales	Poltergeist: The Legacy
TLC	53	Home Again	Home Again	Solving Murder Kansas City		Extreme Machines (R)		Secrets of Forensic Science		Medical Detect	Medical Detect	Extreme Machines (R)
TNT	47	In the Heat of the Night		ER "Power" (In Stereo)		"Murder Most Likely" (1999, Drama) Paul Gross.				"Twisted Deceit" (1996, Drama) Melissa Joan Hart.
USA	52	Baywatch "Leo's Last Chance"		LAPD "Wilderness of Mirrors"		Walker, Texas Ranger		★★½ "The Usual Suspects" (1995, Suspense) Stephen Baldwin.		Players		Texas Ranger
HBO	50	(5:45) ★★ "Message in a Bottle" (1999) Kevin Costner. "PG-13"				Real Sports (R)		Sopranos "Bust-Out" (R)		Oz "The Tip" (R) (In Stereo)		★★ "True Crime" (1999) "R"
MAX	51	★★★ "Three Men and a Baby" (1987, Comedy) Tom Selleck. "PG"				★★ "Great Expectations" (1998, Drama) Ethan Hawke. "R"				"Children of the Corn III: Urban Harvest" (1995)		Passion Cove
SHOW	54	(5:30) ★★ "Seven Years in Tibet" (1997, Drama) Brad Pitt. "PG-13"				"The Inspectors" (1998) Lou Gossett Jr.		Movie News		"The Inspectors 2: A Shred of Evidence" (2000)		Beggars

HSCN 2 Hosting Service Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	21	Gavel to Gavel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	22	CNN/ 22 Springfield
4	CBS/4 Boston	23	CNN Headline News
5	ABC/5 Boston	24	CNN
6	PBS/57 Springfield	25	CNN Fn
8	HSCN (Movie Ch.)	26	CNN 5
9	UPN/20 Hartford	27	TBS
10	Weather Channel	28	BET
11	NBC/30 New Britain	29	College TV Network
12	Fox/61 Hartford	30	Comedy Central
13	PBS/24 Hartford	31	Discovery Channel Network
14	WOCH & HSCN	32	TV Land
15	International	33	C-Span
16	UMass Academic TV	34	ESPN (Tentative)
17	WB/ New Haven	35	Bloomberg Financial Network
18	Sundance	37	History Channel
19	The Learning Channel	38	HSCN Programming
20	UVC-TV19
20	ABC/40 Springfield

Balderdash By Tim Dwyer

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Spunk By Mike LaRiccia

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

Horoscopes

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – Your interests are developing again, and you may discover that your tastes span a broader range than ever before. Explore with a friend!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – Your most complicated endeavors are likely to be relatively trouble-free today, while routine affairs may take on unusual importance.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – A good friend may hold the key to unknown passions – and today may be the day to unlock the door and explore what lies over the threshold.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – Be considerate and sympathetic today toward someone close to you who has been going through a lot. Today is the day to see with another's eyes.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – If you're feeling unresponsive to another's needs today, you must be honest and up front – or you'll surely be misunderstood.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Pay attention to recent dreams; they are likely to point the way for you today – and in the days to come. You're more in touch than you think.

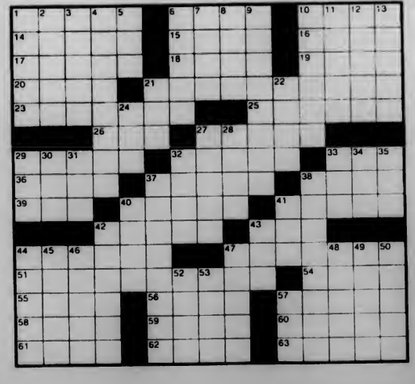
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – Take care you don't try to shirk your responsibilities today; it is essential that you be willing to face the music.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – You may not be compatible with one who is supposed to be working side-by-side with you. Don't hesitate to go your own separate ways for a while.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – You will have to be clever today to keep others looking in your direction, for there is much of interest out there besides you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – A policy change affecting routine daily affairs cannot be avoided today, so you must be prepared to make adjustments to suit management.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – It will be important for you to give someone close to you the respect and homage he or she deserves today. Be open and sincere at all times.



PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – Remain level-headed today and you may find yourself in a long-sought position of greater authority tomorrow. Surprises come in bundles at this time.

Quote of the Day

"Now yous can't leave"

–Sonny, from A Bronx tale

ACROSS
1 Scarlett's surname
6 Had bills
10 Cardinal: e g
14 Majestic
15 Lose color
16 Hodgepodge
17 Nonsensical
18 Lace or ribbons
19 Small quarrel
20 Oklahoma city
21 Spouse
23 Wool fat
25 Soft leathers
26 Guy
27 Goof
29 Soothes
32 Field mice
33 Beam
36 Approve
37 Closes tightly
38 Reside
39 Implore
40 "Aida," for one
41 Person
42 Disparaging remarks
43 "STICKS — NICK PIX" 1935 "Variety" headline
44 Volcano part
47 Well-liked
51 Oral history media
54 Singer McEntire
55 Wooden shoe
56 Writer Dinesen
57 Istahness
58 Semester
59 Infamous liddler
60 — ho!
61 Brainstorm
62 Entrance
63 Canadian doctor of note

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

ACETIC HID MOLT
RAVISH AVE AMIE
ELAPSE LIE DIME
PURPLEMARTIN
MARIE LES MISTY
ICON MAY ROOD
DRAGNET LOU CAM
GEM UTE OWN AGO
ESS CAD WESTSUIT
ELL NED ISLE
SABLE BUS KNEE
CRED TRING
AGEE YON VALISE
NUTS ROC EVENER
TEST ODE SEDATE

3/29/00 © 2000 United Feature Syndicate

DOWN
1 Bay window
2 Hair tint
3 Once more
4 By chance
5 Tavern fare
6 Many times
7 Toad feature
8 Correct a manuscript
9 Estates to lawyers
10 Annoy
11 Greek epic
12 Hunter's weapon
13 Tips one's hat
21 Corn holder
22 Regrets
24 — Vegas
27 Razorbacks
28 Earthenware jar
29 Tennis shot
30 Guitarlike instrument
31 Trail behind
32 Swerve
33 Border
34 Gardner of lomdom
35 Desire
37 Gushing (out)
38 Fur coats
40 Bread spread
41 Stylish
42 Mark of disgrace
43 Negative votes
44 Saguaros
45 Governed
46 Worship
47 Black tea
48 Kind of pad
49 Superior
50 Not as common
52 On the briny
53 Portion
57 Greek letter

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Santa Fe Chicken Sandwich

Old Fashioned Beef Stew

Beans and Rice (vegan)

Tofu Pot Pie (vegan) (Berkshire & Worcester only)

DINNER

Roast Turkey Dinner

Fried Shrimp

Tofu & Potato Ravioli (vegan) (Berkshire & Worcester only)

Ratatouille (vegan)

Night Editor: Kathleen Rolfs
Photo Technician: Teresa Canino-Rivera
Copy Editor: Sam Wilkinson
Production Supervisor: Joylyn Lombard
Production Staff: Melanie Thomas, Roberto Delgado

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of sports.

Wild finish at Lorden for baseball team

UMass wins as errant pitch plates deciding run in ninth

By Eric Soderstrom
Collegian Staff

The game was tied in the bottom of the ninth. Bases loaded. One out.

Just as the sky overhead began to darken, Quinnipiac pitcher Pat Lynch fired a wild pitch over the head of Chris Morgan that crashed into the backstop.

It proved to be fatal for the Braves as the Massachusetts baseball team escaped with a 5-4 victory when Minuteman pinch runner Connell Clark scored the winning run from third base yesterday at Earl Lorden Field.

Quinnipiac	4
UMass	5

With the win, UMass recorded its fifth straight victory and went to 5-6 on the season while Quinnipiac dropped to 2-5.

"We executed right there at the end with the bunt by Mike Kulak and with Jeff Altieri stepping up and pinch hitting," coach Mike Stone said. "He's had good at bats, every single at bat this year."

UMass sophomore catcher Chris Morgan made his best move of the season by standing still. He was at bat during the game-winning wild pitch in yesterday's 5-4 win.

Taking the field at the top of the ninth inning, UMass led 4-3. When the Minutemen came up to bat in the bottom of the inning, the game was knotted at 4-4.

First up for the UMass in the decisive inning was pinch hitter Jeff Altieri who singled. After a walk by senior Shaun Skeffington, sophomore Mike Kulak laid down a sacrifice hunt that advanced both Skeffington and Altieri. Lynch proceeded to intentionally walk junior Nick Gorneault, which loaded the bases and set the scene for his wild delivers to Morgan.

Paul Washenko

All Morgan had to do was stand still at the plate as the ball sailed above him.

Although happy about the win, Stone wasn't exactly moved by the finale.

"I didn't really enjoy the game much because I felt we should have scored more runs and had more offense going, on defense," Stone said. "We gave them extra outs ... it was just a struggle, kind of an uphill battle all day long."

Despite collecting only one hit, UMass first baseman Kevin O'Connell was the offensive star of the afternoon, driving in a total of three runs – each in a different at bat.

Quiet through the first three innings, the Minutemen failed to produce a hit off of Braves starting pitcher Scott Stoecklin. The first run of the game came at the top of the fourth inning, when UMass' starter Brian Hourigan's curveball hit the dirt and rolled past Morgan allowing Zangari an easy score from third.

Kevin O'Connell

After two straight walks by Hourigan, the Minutemen turned a double play to escape potential disaster.

With his team trailing 2-1 at the top of the fifth inning, Braves' sophomore Charles D'Elia led off with a single. Quinnipiac's Joe Boccaccio tapped a bloop single over Skeffington that drove in two runs and gave the Braves the lead at 3-2. But the inning should have been over for the Minutemen, who botched a double play before the hit.

Freshman Paul Washenko provided some strong relief work for the Minutemen. He replaced Hourigan, the UMass starter, on the mound at the top of the sixth inning. Washenko sent the side packing with three straight strikeouts during his three-inning appearance.

"When P.J. came in we got some momentum going on defense," Stone said. "And that carried over to offense, he threw a lot of strikes and kept us in the ballgame."

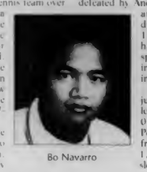
Washenko took control once again at the top of the seventh and fanned the last two batters of the inning, stranding a hitter whom he walked in four pitches.

Only a first-year pitcher though, Washenko didn't cruise the entire time.

He hit his first batter on the foot, but when the umpire decided that the hitter had made no effort to avoid the interference and called him back from his trot down the first base line.

Washenko found himself in some trouble at the top of the eighth giving up a single that was followed by a sacrifice bunt. After a routine ground out and a strong throw by Seed from third, Washenko walked two Braves in a row. Stone labored out and back from the mound, but decided to stick with Washenko.

His decision proved correct when Washenko fanned the next batter. Despite three strong innings, Washenko was pulled in the ninth after hitting another batter and putting the game-tying run on base.



The Minutemen will take the field at home again tomorrow at 3 p.m., as they face the Holy Cross Crusaders who will be traveling from Worcester.

Barry topples Minutemen

Second season unkind to reeling men's tennis squad

By Jen Cormier
Collegian Staff

The onslaught continued for the Massachusetts men's tennis team over spring break when a trip to the Sunshine State provided more doom and gloom for the beleaguered squad. After dropping three dual matches in Florida, the team now stands at 2-5 for the spring campaign and 7-7 for the year.

Bo Navarro

On March 13, the Minutemen travelled to Miami Shores, Fla. where they fell to Barry University, 6-2.

In No. 1 singles, sophomore Steve Prisco was unable to build on the momentum he had acquired the previous week, when he won three dual matches in a row. Prisco lost in straight sets to Christian Meyer, 6-2, 6-4.

Senior co-captains Bo Navarro and Parsa Samii met similar fates at the Nos. 2 and No. 3 slots, respectively. Navarro lost to Christian Witt, 6-1, 6-1, which brings his spring dual match record to a dreadful 1-5. Samii was defeated by Andre Soulier, 6-1, 6-2, and now has spring dual match record of 1-4. Both captains have struggled this spring due to lingering injuries and overbearing opponents.

In the No. 4 slot, junior Fabien Rahanal lost to Erik Holube, 6-0, 6-4, while Barry's Perry Baker dominated freshman Will Shaw 6-1, 6-1, in the No. 5 slot.

It was in No. 6 singles that the Marunon and White clinched their only singles victory of the day. Sophomore Todd Champeau overwhelmed Stephen Trussell in straight sets, 6-2, 6-0.

In doubles action, the tandem of Prisco and Navarro were trounced 8-1, while Champeau and senior Marco Casesa also suffered a loss, 8-4. Samii and Shaw paired for the lone doubles victory of the afternoon, surpassing Erik Holubec and Samir M'Bioka by a score of 8-3.

The next day, the Minutemen travelled to Lynn University, where they were handed a resounding 7-0 defeat. A lone doubles victory came at the No. 2 slot, where Samii and Shaw defeated Justin O'Bront and Martin Carenko, 8-5.

Parsa Samii

On March 16, the squad made the trek to Boca Raton, Fla., where the Minutemen suffered their third and final loss of the week to Lamar University by a score of 6-1.

In No. 1 singles, Prisco lost to Emanuel Sjoblom, 6-3, 6-2. Rahanal fell to Nebojsa Murisic in the No. 2 slot, 6-0, 6-1.

Navarro lost a tight match to Chris Chapman, 4-6, 7-5, 6-4, in No. 3 singles.

Shaw, who played in the No. 4 slot, was the only Minuteman who was able to contribute to his team, defeating Hornis Tharakan, 6-2, 6-4. The win was Shaw's first singles victory since he returned from his rotator cuff injury.

Champeau was able to nab a set from Lamar's Brady Mazzola, but came up short, 6-4, 3-6, 6-2, in the No. 5 slot. Junior Bill Greener rounded out singles action with a straight set loss.

In doubles action, Samii and Shaw completed a spring break trifecta, nabbing their third No. 2 doubles victory of the week as they defeated Chapman and Tharakan, 8-5. The Prisco-Navarro and Champeau-Casesa tandems did not fare as well.

Next up for the Minutemen is a trip to Temple on April 1, when they will meet their first Atlantic 10 opponent of the spring.

Water polo gears up for hunting trip

Minutewomen set their sights on Brown Bears

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

It is a little-known scientific fact that due to their short front legs, bears cannot run very effectively down hills. Luckily for the Bears of Brown University, their water polo war with host Massachusetts tonight will more than likely be an uphill battle.

The No. 11 Minutewomen (13-5) made short work of Brown a mere five days ago, when UMass rode a four-goal showcase from senior All-American Katie Grogan to a 16-6 romp over the visiting Bears. Eight different Maroon and White players scored over the course of the rout, and the UMass defense held coach Todd Clapper's Brown squad (5-5) to only 10 shots on goal.

"Our defense has been fantastic," said UMass skipper Dan McOsker. "We're now looking to turn that into better transitions, and more fast break goals."

Not that the team has suffered from a shortage of offensive fireworks thus far. Already the most respected (or just plain feared) scorer on the East Coast, Grogan has kicked her game into overdrive this season, netting 37 goals on .507 shooting over 59 quarters of play. And opposing defenses that have keyed on the California native have been subsequently burned by scoring machines Claudia Clement and Kelly Chassy, who have combined for 41 goals and 10 assists to help the squad stay undefeated (4-0) in Collegiate Water Polo Association league play.

"Our depth is greater now than it has ever been," McOsker said. "We've been able to go pretty deep into our bench, even in the biggest games."

Water polo domination starts in goal, however, and the Maroon and White has been blessed with one of the game's most exciting young keepers in sophomore Dana Sinkwich. The Ontario, Calif. original has piled up a jaw-dropping 109 saves over the course of the team's first 18 contests, using her 5-foot-6 frame to transform the UMass net into a virtual brick wall.

"Our defense hasn't made too many mistakes this year," McOsker said. "But when they have, Dana has been there to bail them out."

Tonight's melee at Joseph R. Rogers, Jr. Pool will commence with a 7 p.m. swim-off.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Senior All-America Katie Grogan is leading the Minutewomen in scoring this season with 37 goals through 18 games.

Maine grabs top East spot after tourney title

BOSTON – In all of the excitement following Maine's thrilling 2-1 victory over Boston College in the Hockey East tournament finals on Saturday night, you might almost tend to forget that both teams will still be in action this weekend in the NCAA tournament.

Although Niko Dimitrakos propelled the Black Bears to the tournament title by scoring the game-winning goal with 2:5 seconds remaining in regulation, the Eagles received an at-large bid into the field of 16 thanks to a 26-11-1 mark during the season.

Saturday night's contest was arguably the best game in the nation this season. For the first 40 minutes, BC goaltender Scott Clemmensen and Maine netminder Matt Yeats took center stage, keeping the contest scoreless heading into the final minutes.

Michael Kobylanski's Hockey East

That's not to say that there weren't plenty of chances for both teams. Yeats got a little help from the pipe off a shot by Jeff Farkas early in the second period, while Clemmensen was pelted with 22 shots through the first two frames.

"I thought that Scott was on top of his game. It could have been 3-0 or 4-0 after the first period," BC hockey coach Jerry York said. "You have to give credit to Yeats too, though. He did a fine job also. The exhibition of goaltending on both sides was what kept the game at 0-0 for so long."

Maine finally broke the scoring drought 3:11 into the final frame on a goal by captain Cory Larose. Although the Eagles had chances to knot the game, Yeats continued to come up with the big save time and time again. For all intents and purposes, the Black Bears had found their ticket to the NCAAs.

However, after a BC timeout with 43 seconds left, the Eagles played a little tic-tac-toe in netting the tying goal. Blake Bellefuille won a draw in the left circle, sliding the puck back to Mike Mottau at the left point. Mottau then threaded a pass to fellow blueliner Bobby Allen in the high slot, who fired a shot past Yeats to tie the game at 1-1.

Not to be outdone, Maine notched the game-winning goal in the waning seconds of regulation – at a time when it seemed like the affair was going to require an extra session.

Larose won a key draw with nine seconds left and shuffled the disc back to Dimitrakos. The Somerville native then worked his way along the leftwing boards before cutting across the crease – thanks to a takedown by Larose on Mottau – and beat Clemmensen between the legs to send the Maine faithful into a state of frenzy.

"It was a great game between two great teams," Maine hockey coach Shawn Walsh said. "This is a magic moment for college hockey. The Frozen Four is going to have a tough time of topping this baby."

Maine placed four players – Yeats, Larose, Dimitrakos and Robert Ek – on the all-tournament team, while BC also had two in Mottau and Bellefuille. Dimitrakos named tournament MVP following his game-winner in the finals.

Hockey East makes presence felt in NCAAs

In addition to the aforementioned clubs from Boston College and Maine, Boston University and New Hampshire also made their way into the NCAA tournament. BU earned an automatic bid by virtue of winning the regular season title, while UNH received an at-large bid.

Hockey East had the most teams in the tournament from one conference. The Western Collegiate Hockey Association was next with three (Wisconsin, North Dakota and St. Cloud State).

BU and Maine will remain in the East this weekend for the NCAA regional at Pepsi Arena in

Turn to HOCKEY, page 9

Assistant Barbee quits Flint staff to join coach Calipari

By Aaron Saykin
Collegian Staff

For the second straight year, a Massachusetts men's hoop assistant has resigned his post to seek greener pastures.

Last year assistant John Robic departed to become a head coach, and yesterday Tony Barbee, a former UMass player, resigned from head coach Bruiser Flint's staff, the athletic department reports.

Barbee has accepted a position that will reunite him with his former coach, John Calipari, at the University of Memphis. Calipari was head coach at UMass for eight seasons from 1988 until 1996, when Flint succeeded him.

Barbee's recent tenure with the Minutemen lasted only one season. His first time around, he served as an assistant under Flint for the 1996-97 and 1997-98 seasons. In the one season between his stints with Flint, Barbee served as an assistant at Wyoming.

One of the most prolific players in Minuteman history, Barbee joins Calipari, who has not coached college basketball since he left UMass in 1996. Calipari has spent the last four seasons in the NBA as both an assistant and a head coach.

No replacement has been named for Barbee, nor could he, Flint or athletic director Bob Marcum be reached before press time.

Red Sox prospect Eckstein adjusts

By Jen Cormier
Collegian Staff

FORT MYERS, Fla. – With the giddy visage of a child on Christmas morning, David Eckstein relaxed in his team's hotel lobby, marvelling at the fact that he is a member of the Boston Red Sox. The 25-year-old second baseman is one of a handful of rookies who is savoring his first taste of the big leagues this spring – fulfilling nearly every young boy's backyard dream.

"Ever since I was growing up, I always wanted to play baseball," Eckstein said, crediting his older brother as his first hardball hero. "I always wanted to follow my brother, and I always wanted to be around him when he played baseball. That was how I really started playing."

Eckstein has come a long way from the little towheaded kid who trailed his brother around the streets of Sanford, Fla. in search of pickup games. This year, the Red Sox placed Eckstein on their 40-man major-league roster, which granted him an automatic invitation to spring training. However, his road to pro ball has not been an easy one.

After graduating from Seminole High School in 1993, Eckstein's baseball future looked dire. No colleges were interested in recruiting the slight-framed infielder, who today stands at only 5-feet-8. Not willing to abandon his hardball aspirations, Eckstein landed a spot on the University of Florida's baseball team as a walk-on.

It wasn't until 1997 that Eckstein made the leap from obscurity to modest fame. While Eckstein still remained a relatively unfamiliar name in scouting circles, the Red Sox nabbed him in the 19th round of the draft. He was shipped off to the Single-A Lowell Spinners, where he hit .301 and got his first taste of the fervor and passion of Boston hardball worshippers.

"The following in Lowell...everybody was so unbelievable," Eckstein said. "We sold out every single night. Playing there, I definitely learned that Boston fans are very passionate about their baseball, and just from the letters I received, I can tell they want to win."

It was in 1998 that Eckstein began to make his tear through the Sox farm system. He hit .306 with 58 RBI for Single-A Sarasota, garnering Player-of-the-Year honors.

Last year, Eckstein hit .313 in the leadoff spot with 52 RBI for the Double-A Trenton Thunder powerhouse that included Wilton Veras and Steve Lomasney. Eckstein scored a franchise-high 109 runs and was selected to play in the Double-A All-Star Game.

The amicable rookie's trek up the minor league ladder gained him recognition as one of the Sox' hottest prospects in 2000 – and earned Eckstein his first trip to major league training camp.

Still, life in the big leagues can be gruelling for a rookie. While Eckstein will play with the Sox throughout the exhibition season, he likely will suit up for the Triple-A Pawtucket Red Sox when the regular season starts. His chances of being called up are slim, since the Sox already have a set hierarchy at second base – Jose Offerman, Jeff Frye, and up-and-comer Donnie Sadler.

Rookies must endure the downsides of pro ball – living out of a suitcase and rarely receiving a day off – without a hefty paycheck to ease the pain. Eckstein may share a parking lot with Pedro Martinez' Mercedes and Nomar Garciaparra Jaguar, but that doesn't mean he can afford his own luxury set of wheels. Often times, rookies can't even afford to buy a decent suit.

"It's tough, with what you make in the minor leagues," Eckstein said. "When Wilton Veras made it to the big leagues, I know Pedro hooked him up with clothes. When Steve Lomasney got called up, Mike Stanley bought him a suit. Veteran players do take the rookies under their wings and they do help them out."

Although the Sox do have this makeshift big brother system in place, the squad also follows one of the unspo-

Turn to PROSPECT, page 9

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Volume CVI Issue 70 Thursday, March 23, 2000

SGA elections today; candidates explain platforms

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

Jeff Howe
Seth Avakian

In today's election, Jeff Howe will seek an unprecedented second term as the Student Government Association President. Seth Avakian will seek a second term as SGA Trustee, and could be the first person to serve two terms since the early nineties.

Both feel that it is their experience that people should consider when voting.

"We've presented unequaled leadership qualities, we've come through on promises, we've followed through, we've accomplished things on our agenda that we were told we'd never be able to do," Howe said, adding that adding new cable stations, giving students access to the Course and Teacher Evaluation Guide and putting an ATM in Southwest were some of those successes.

Avakian added that another advantage to their shared experience is that they have established relationships with the on-campus administration and the Board of Trustees.

"We know how things work, who to talk to, if you ask administration or any employee on this campus, they'll say that they have better relationships with the current SGA than they've had in a long time," Avakian said. "Our accomplishments reflect our character and our ambition."

Should Howe win, he plans on immediately addressing the proposed cutting of two majors and Spanish teaching assistant positions, as well as advocating against the placement of security cameras in dorm lobbies, which he described as a violation of student rights.

"We need to take an approach that will educate students about how negatively such actions that would necessitate security cameras affect this campus," Howe said. "We don't need to invade students' homes to do this."

Howe added that he also wants to examine planning for the spring concert, saying that aggressive organization would help to "bring in well known talent to our campus."

Avakian plans to continue initiatives that he started this year, including the initiation of a constructive dialog about men's violence against women and "what men on this campus can do to foster a community where women feel safe and comfortable."

He also plans on continuing to advocate for the continued tuition freeze for in-state UMass students because such a freeze makes education "affordable for all residents of Massach-usetts and will keep us in line in our missions as a land grant institution."

But after a year as the top of the SGA administration, both realize that there are limiting factors to their leadership.

"Our days are not long enough. The campus administration deals with the student body through a large administration. Our resources are spread very thinly, and that makes it hard to maintain a life outside of the SGA," Howe said. Avakian added that his biggest problem has always been reminding UMass administration what it is like to be a student.

"It's something we have to hammer into their heads," Avakian said.

With voting beginning today, both Howe and Avakian said that the campaign has gone well.

"All of the candidates are nice people, respectable individuals, but when it comes to ideas and a vision, Seth and I are hands down the most experienced and best prepared for the job."

Seth described the election as a "welcome pat on the back for us" saying that he has gone door-to-door asking for votes, and has received a "very positive reaction from the campus."

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

Jim Eltringham
Asif Sayani

Jim Eltringham, who pursued but lost the Student Government Association presidency last year, and Asif Sayani, who is running for Trustee, both feel that they possess the leadership skills "lacking right now in the SGA."

"Asif and I are running because there is a disturbing trend In Student Government that has lasted long before most people were enrolled in this school; results are not seen by the student body," Eltringham said. "The SGA has great ideas, but they'll always get vetoed by the administration."

Eltringham feels that by working on an administrative level and working with students, interests can be brought together to "deliver on campaign promises."

"We want options there for dining services, we want academic integrity, we want alcohol and parking regulations to remain student friendly," Eltringham said.

Sayani, for his part, said that he has been at UMass for two and a half years and has participated across campus in various capacities.

"I can fully represent student views and opinions to a larger higher governing body," Sayani said.

Eltringham hopes to focus, if he wins, on academic integrity.

"A professor told me that I'd die in 40-50 years and that what we learned at UMass would determine our lives for the next years," Eltringham said. "If we want to remain a competitive university and 'Provide Excellence Within Your Reach' like on the commercials, we need to focus on academic integrity."

Asif wants to ensure that academics remain the top priority of UMass. "I want us to be making sure we stay on top. I want us to elaborate on the issue, to increase the lines of communication between academic departments and the administration because everybody needs first hand info, not random information that is unclear," Sayani said. He also said that he wants to focus on meal plan options.

"We want to increase our meal plan options and make student businesses one of the options available," Sayani commented. Finally, he mentioned that he wants the library to be open 24 hours a day during finals week, so that everybody can get study space, thus ensuring that nobody is lost in the mix.

Both feel there are some slight hindrances to their office; for Eltringham, time is a major factor.

"It's a job, you're paid for it, you carry out responsibilities, but at the same time while you're doing all-nighters and 60-hour work weeks, you're taking classes and possibly having a job on the side to make ends meet," Eltringham said.

Sayani felt that attempting to convince 18 other trustees as to why UMass should be properly funded and positively represented with student issues put forward in the best light would be his most difficult charge.

"I'm open to addressing any student body concerns, but if nobody participates, I'm left to be as strong as the student body makes me feel," Sayani said.

As far as the past week's election, both Eltringham and Sayani felt that campaigning had gone well.

"Everyone out there are good people that I've worked with. I've enjoyed it, and whatever the outcome, I hope our difference in opinion won't get in the way of our attempts to work together," Eltringham said.

Sayani commented that the election process, to his pleasure, has remained fair

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

Phil Zetye
Andy Foley

Phil Zetye, who is running for the presidency of the Student Government Association, and Andy Foley, who is seeking the SGA Trusteeship, both feel that they should be supported based on their ideas.

"Why should people vote for me? Because I will seriously address issues that have been neglected in the past by SGA, like diversity, like environmental and social ethics, like educational accessibility, quality and affordability," Zetye said. "I have ideas, motivation and experience, including organizing the larges environmental education program at the University and having had my work voted most productive."

Foley echoed Zetye's environmental and social statements and added that he has a commitment to his values, stating that he wouldn't go back on what he's said.

"I feel my issues aren't being addressed by other candidates, yet they are important to all students," Foles said.

Zetye's main focus includes UMass admissions policies and recruitment, as well as his interest in environmental and social justice.

"Those things have a definite place on this campus, as does access educational accessibility. 60 percent of kids in Springfield are below the poverty line, but do they deserve education? I think so. I also support quality of life issues," Zetye said, explaining that he wants to see allocations of student funds changed so money is used "more wisely."

Foley plans on addressing budget cuts in an attempt to ensure that money is spent on academics and not administration.

"I also want to preserve the last piece of wilderness on the UMass campus," Foley said, and added that he, like Zetye, wants to focus on the quality of student life, including parking services and student dissatisfaction with that group.

Zetye's outlook on the SGA presidency is that there are no limitations for student leaders.

"There are funding issues, trying to get publicity, but there's a student body that wants to support UMass, and because of that, the only limitations in any certain SGA office are set by the individual," Zetye said. "The system works, so I don't really see there being any huge limitations at UMass, only huge potential."

Foley feels that the SGA would accomplish more if it was taken seriously.

"Not enough students are involved, even in voting," Foley said, and added that "there's no good reason why that sort of thing can't be overcome with the right leadership."

Both candidates described the election as an opportunity for students to elect leaders that will represent them, as well as ideas that have been neglected in the past.

"I'm really hoping people will come out and make a clear statement that they want diversity addresses, that they want environmental and social justice addressed, that they want education to be available and accessible because I'll be honest," Zetye said. "If I could win by promising cable television to everybody, I wouldn't want to do this. I want people to vote for issues."

Foley hopes that, at the end of next year, he can discuss improved education and diversity at UMass "rather than an ATM machine or cable television."

"There are greater things that we can be doing."

Local community mixed on today's election

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

Students at the University of Massachusetts have mixed feelings about the upcoming Student Government Association elections for President and Trustee.

Running for the Presidential seat are Jeff Howe for re-election and candidates Jim Eltringham and Phil Zetye, while the candidates in the race for Trustee are Seth Avakian for re-election and Asif Sayani and Andy Foley.

Freshman communications major Julie Power remains undecided primarily due to a lack of knowledge in regards to the candidates and their positions.

"I have no idea who I'm voting for because I don't know anything about the elections," Power said. "I know about the [nationwide] presidential elections with the UMass Vote 2000 show because I work on that, but other than that, I don't know who I'm voting for."

Others, like freshman undecided major Danielle Youngblood, said they are voting for the candidate that makes the biggest impression on them. She said a certain candidate came to her dorm yesterday and she said she thought it was really admirable.

"He answered all my questions and I felt very informed," Youngblood said. "I'm the constituent, so you have to reach out to me for my vote and I felt that was very honorable what he did."

Some students like freshmen biology major Nafeesah Eambreelle have a particular candidate in mind. She said some candidates run on a platform of goals that is unrealistic, at least in terms of achievability.

"What they're proposing are things that they can't accomplish," Eambreelle said. "I think I'm going to vote for Asif Sayani because I know that when he puts his mind to something that he can do great things. Things that aren't like, 'oh, yeah, I'm going to the moon,' which just isn't going to happen."

Senior math and astronomy major Michael Pfeiffer said he also has certain candidates that he likes and some candidates whose views he doesn't agree with.

"I'm not going to vote for the guy that has all these high standards of getting MTV," Pfeiffer said. "I don't want to vote for him also because his poster said he wanted to do things which I think aren't reasonable to do and he sort of seems like he has high goals. He doesn't seem very down to earth and I want someone who can understand what he can accomplish and what he can do and not set his goals too high and not accomplish them."

Junior physics major Justin Finn said he wasn't aware that an election was taking place. However, he said there were other issues, such as dorm surveillance, that he feels are more important.

"We're in college and we're here to learn and study and if someone's going to carry alcohol to their room, then I don't think it matters enough," Finn said. "I don't think it's reasonable to people who have to live there and know that someone's watching them all the time."

Voting will be held on Thursday and Friday from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. and 4-7 p.m. at the Dining Commons and the Campus Center.

Three questions on SGA ballot

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

Three referendum questions will be featured on the upcoming Presidential and Trustee ballots, giving students an opportunity to vote on issues ranging from surveillance cameras in residence halls to the effectiveness of the New Student's Program.

The referendum questions were brought before the Student Government Election Commission by President Jeff Howe, to be featured on the upcoming election ballots.

The questions ask students whether they support surveillance cameras in residence halls, how effective they feel the New Student's Program is in preparing students for their first year at the University and whether or not they would be more likely to vote if the SGA elections were online.

Chancellor David K. Scott brought the issue of surveillance cameras before the SGA in response to the assaults that took place last semester on campus. Scott stated in a release that most campus violence occurs as a result of alcohol. By monitoring the amount of alcohol brought into the residence halls, Scott stated that the University would help prevent incidents of violence.

However, Howe said that he feels this is in violation of students' privacy and rights.

"I think the idea of someone sitting behind a television monitor watching what's going on in a dorm is reminiscent of jail, and I don't think anybody needs to feel like they're being watched in their home," Howe said. "I think it's intrusive. It violates students' rights to privacy."

Some students such as freshman biology major Nafeesah Eambreelle said that they are opposed to surveillance cameras being installed in residence halls.

"I think it's violating someone else's privacy," Eambreelle said. "I think that we already have RA's, we already have security there... I don't think cameras are necessary."

Other students like sopho-

Turn to REF, page 2

Court indicts three in rapes

By Daniel Ruetenik
Collegian Staff

Three men were indicted by a Hampshire County Grand Jury on Tuesday of last week on charges of raping a minor on the University of Massachusetts campus, and UMass Police executed a search warrant on a student's room seizing illegal drugs, paraphernalia and cash. As a result of the second action, UMass student Christopher Vaiuso, 22, was arrested and charged with multiple drug possession and distribution charges.

The men were indicted for rape in two incidents involving the same female that occurred on February 24th and 26th in two separate locations. The rapes allegedly took place at an undisclosed Amherst address and in a UMass Dormitory.

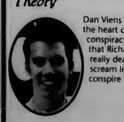
The incidents were originally reported to the Amherst Police Department on March 1st and were referred to the University of Massachusetts Police Department because the second incident allegedly took place on UMass property, in Kennedy Dorm.

Police in both departments were originally unsure of where the assaults had taken place.

According to UMPD spokesman, the investigation was not conducted by the UMPD police department nor the Amherst PD, but rather the Hampshire County's District Attorney's office.

The exact age of the victim and whether or not she is a student at UMass is not available. Lyons said the victim was under the age of 16, but "I can't really give any information in regard to the victim. We wouldn't release that kind of information anyway, if and when it went to trial."

The information was unavailable as to the age, descriptions and addresses of the assailants.

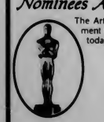


Lyons also said that the names of the assailants

Turn to COP, page 2

EXTENDED FORECAST

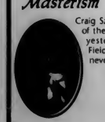
Thursday	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 61 LOW: 32	HIGH: 65 LOW: 37	HIGH: 60 LOW: 40



Grand Conspiracy Theory

Dan Viens strikes deep into the heart of a nation-wide conspiracy to discover that Richard Nixon isn't really dead. Prepare to scream in terror as you conspire to read Ed/Op.

PAGE 4



And The Nominees Are!

The Arts and Living department talks about Oscar's on today's Arts cover.

PAGE 5

Szado Masterism

Craig Szado made quick work of the Holy Cross Crusaders yesterday at Earl Lorden Field. Collegian sports: we never miss the cutoff man.

PAGE 12

Arts & Living 5
Comics 11
Crossword 11
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 12

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

SGA and GSS clash over funding

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

At a meeting that some thought would go quickly because of today's election, last night the Student Government Association crashed a Graduate Student Senate meeting, passed six motions and witnessed one senator removed from its meeting.

Before all of that occurred, the group listened to a presentation from the Interim Dean of the Commonwealth College, Linda Nolan. Answering questions submitted to her prior to the meeting, Nolan was peppered with additional questions during her presentation. She answered inquires about advising, the lack of honors classes and the disproportionate numbers of female and minority students within the Commonwealth College.

When pressed on enrollment issues by SGA President Jeff Howe, who asked Nolan to expand on the numbers of enrolled students and what that number translates to in the honors program, Nolan responded that she could get the information for him.

"Would you care to speculate on those numbers?" Howe said.

"I wouldn't speculate," Nolan said.

Student Trustee Seth Waklan then pointed out that, of the 388 students in this year's honors freshman class, seven were Latino, two were African-American and none were Native American.

"Yes," Nolan responded.

"Didn't you just tell Jeff Howe that you didn't have those numbers?" Waklan asked.

After continued give and take between Senators, Nolan and Director of Housing Services Mike Gilbert, Nolan left the meeting, saying that she thought everything went well.

"I have no problems with students or the SGA on tonight's environment," Nolan said.

(l to r) Michael Gilbert, The Director of Housing, and Linda Nolan, Director of Commonwealth College, speak during the SGA meeting last night.

Then, as Gilbert was finishing comments, the SGA chamber began to empty as students went down the hall to a GSS meeting in progress. With most members of the SGA surrounding the square table of the GSS, President John Zibble said that the GSS could no longer afford to fund the Student Legal Services Organization at the level they had been.

"Their budget continually gets bigger while ours remains the same," Zibble said.

Chuck DiMare, director of the SLSO office, pointed out that when graduate students use SLSO, their cases usually take longer to process and are more involved, but Bruce Fowler, the director of the Student Union Gallery, said that the GSS should force them to handle the situation.

"We should cut equally and let them deal with the consequences, and to be honest, I resent the fact that the both of them are even here," Fowler said. The "other" one was Tom Coish, an SLSO Staff Attorney, who said that the SGA and GSS need to work together in finding solutions.

"The worst thing we could have is a graduate and undergraduate battle because then, everybody loses," Coish said.

The GSS later passed its budget, which included the funding cut, 15 votes for, two against and one abstention. SGA senators in the office booed and hissed, while others, after seeing pizza boxes at the meeting, said that the GSS was eating with the SLSO budget. Back at the SGA meeting, Speaker Mikale Billard spoke about the vote.

"It takes a lot to make me angry, and right now, I'm angry. They have the audacity to cut $35,000 in funding from one of the most important student services on campus, if they want to do that, fine, they're idiots," Billard said to cheers from Senators. "If they tried to come into our meeting, they'd stand on chairs, call everyone a racist and try to fight the world. They're clowns. I hope they hear every damn word I say because they can all go to hell."

GSS Senators voted 15 in favor, two against and one abstain to pass the budget.

Billard continued, saying that the GSS "makes me sick. You all give me an ulcer, but they burst it. They bitch everyday and I'm warning myself for saying that, but I'm sick of their complaining, but you know what? Fuck them."

He later explained that the GSS vote was doing nothing but punishing graduate and undergraduate students. Billard also said that he was worried a lawyer at the SLSO would have to be laid off or have their hours of work scaled back because of the GSS vote.

Students clapped at his final statement. The issue was later revisited in the meeting as SGA Ways and Means Committee Chair Amy Pellegrino put forward a motion, co-authored by Senator Mark Boniface, which called for the SLSO to change its representation practices.

The SGA and GSS, in 1994, agreed to fund the SLSO based on student percentage on campus; 75 percent of the SLSO budget would come from the SGA, and 25 percent would come from the GSS. Those numbers were decided on because 75 percent of students are undergraduate and 25 percent of students are graduate. The motion would require a proportional system, where if the GSS only funded 12 percent of the organization, graduate students would receive 12 percent of the available representation.

"We can't be asked to pick up the entire damn budget," Pellegrino said. "We can't increase the funding to pick up the graduate slack. Either they pick it up or the GSS suffers. The solution is only fair."

She described the new system as a "quota system."

"I'm not covering their butt. They're doing a great disservice to their constituents, but ours shouldn't suffer as a result," Pellegrino said.

Senator Phil Zetye asked what the SGA would gain by passing the motion, to which Pellegrino responded, "If the GSS refuses to pay, they should not receive full service. They can't pass their budget problems on to us, they will be forced to realize that this is what they paid for."

Senator Zachary Spilman then suggested that an amendment be added to the motion that would, if possible, force the SLSO not to represent graduate students at all while the SGA would refuse all GSS funding and pay for the service themselves.

"We finance, we give them direction, we can't be soft on this. We can cut them off, which is why I'm saying we should refuse GSS money all together and fund from our reserves. They should get no representation. We don't have to deal with them. We have to take care of ourselves, and they can just deal with it. We should take a hard-line approach, so the SLSO will only represent undergraduate students if only undergraduate students pay for it."

When Senator Aaron Saunders pointed out that it was Student Legal Services, not "Undergraduate Student Legal Services," Spilman replied that "for 10 years, they've stolen from us, and now we have the hard-line to take."

Pellegrino said that she would not "bankrupt our budget to satisfy Zach's ego. We can't afford this."

Spilman said that the SGA had the money, but his motion to add the amendment to Pellegrino's motion failed on a voice vote after minimal debate. Spilman was later removed from the meeting after Billard warned him for speaking out of turn.

"He was out of order many times during the meeting, and I felt it was necessary. He was disturbing order of the Senate, so I asked him to leave," Billard said.

The senate then passed five more motions before adjourning for the evening.

■ ref

continued from page 1

more psychology major Tim Santos said they agree with the idea, stating that security in residence halls is a huge concern.

"Right now, the security they have is really a joke and anyone can get through it," Santos said. "I think the security reason outweighs whatever you would be doing in the lobby that you wouldn't want to get caught for. At least you should go to your room, you don't go to the lobby."

Chancellor of Elections Jeremy Rouille stated that depending on the outcome of the vote, the SGA would support the majority of the students whether they are for or against surveillance cameras in residence halls.

The second referendum question is focused on the effectiveness of the New Student's Program in preparing first-year students for college. The New Student's Program is a summer orientation program in which entering freshmen are introduced to the University, sign up for classes and are advised by faculty and students within their department. Howe said he was aware of the necessity for this question as a result of his experience in the program.

"I had a terrible time at the New Student's Program and almost every student I have spoken with has said the New Student's Program didn't prepare them for UMass," Howe said. "A lot of students didn't want to come here anymore after attending the New Student's Program. There's a lot of great counselors there that have a lot of energy and great ideas, but the system is outdated and is not up to standards for what we need today."

In addition, freshman students aren't receiving the advising that they need in the program and students in the science majors are being advised by advisors from other majors, with little or no experience in the science major.

"The New Student's Program, which is supposed to orient students to college life, acts in a way that's no way indicative of anything that actually occurs on the college campus," Howe said. "It's structured, but it doesn't give the students a real view of the way university life's going to be and that's what it should serve the purpose of."

The last referendum, which would allow students to vote online during the election, would increase the number of students that become involved with student government, Howe stated.

"The vast majority of the students on this campus use the Internet on a regular basis and if students were able to utilize the Internet and vote through the Internet through some safe and secure way, and increase the number of people that get involved with student government, all we could serve to do is better represent our students that way," Howe said.

■ cop

continued from page 1

would not be available until later in the proceedings.

An indicting proceeding does not decide a defendant's guilt or innocence. The purpose of in indictment is to decide whether or not there is enough information to press charges.

The assailants will be arraigned sometime this week. An arraignment is a proceeding before a judge in which the defendants are given an opportunity to plead guilty or not guilty and the charges are formally read.

At approximately 6:20 p.m. on March 9, Detectives from the UMPD executed a search warrant issued by the Northampton District Court. The warrant allowed UMass Police to enter into a student's room in McNamara Dormitory based on information gathered by the UMass police department.

Lyons said that any sort of undercover operation used to investigate Vaiuso would not be public information unless it is brought into evidence in the trial.

The UMPD was accompanied by officers from the Massachusetts State Police Department and the Amherst Police, all possessing significant expertise in such maneuvers.

Lyons said, "Typically when this kind of thing happens there are people who are specifically trained in this sort of operation that cooperate with us."

Upon entering the room, officers discovered undisclosed amounts of LSD, optium, marijuana, cash and paraphernalia.

Lyons said the paraphernalia was comprised of "scales and other things."

UMPD subsequently arrested Vaiuso, the occupant of the room, in the Hasbrouck Laboratory and charged him with possession of a class A substance, possession of a class B substance with intent to distribute and possession of a class D substance with intent to distribute.

Vaiuso is a junior in the Stockbridge School of Agriculture majoring in Horticulture.

Special Interest Residential Programs
Open Houses

Come to an open house and decide if SIRP living is right for you!

Special Interest Residential Programs enable you to live with a group of students who share an aspect of your cultural identity, your lifestyle preferences, ethnic background, or academic interests, commitment to leadership, academics and community. Come to an open house and find out all you need to know. Open houses will be held:

Asian/Asian American Student Program
Designed for Asian/Asian American Students, and for others interested in Far Eastern Cultures
Wednesday, March 29
Dwight Basement
6-8 PM

Harambee African Heritage Program
A program of celebration and study of African history and culture
Thursday, March 23
Coolidge 22nd Floor
7-9 PM

Kanonhsesne: Native American Student Program
For Native American Students and others interested in Native cultures
Wednesday, April 5
Chadbourne Basement
7-9 PM

Lewis International House
For international students and U.S. students who are interested in international living
Wednesday, March 29
Lewis 1st Floor Lounge
7-9 PM

Nuance Multicultural Program
For Asian, African American, Latino/a, Native American, Multi-Racial, and Caucasian students interested in multiculturalism
Monday, March 27th
Various Lounges. Details in Lobby
7:30-9:30 PM

Thatcher Language Program
Intensive study of French, Spanish, German, Japanese, Italian and/or Chinese
Wednesday, March 29
Thatcher Basement
7-9 PM

Wellness Program at Cashin
Students must be committed to an alcohol- and drug-free lifestyle
Saturday, March 4
Cashin Main Lounge
10 AM - 1 PM

Wellness Program at Field
Students must be committed to an alcohol- and drug-free lifestyle
Saturday, April 1
Field Lobby
1-3 PM

2 in 20 Program
A program for gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgender people and allies
Wednesday, March 29
Mary Lyon Basement
8-10 PM

Wellness Program at Gorman
Students must be committed to an alcohol- and drug-free lifestyle
Monday, March 27th
Gorman Lobby
7:30-9:30 PM

Wellness Program at Greenough
Students must be committed to an alcohol- and drug-free lifestyle
Wednesday, March 29
Greenough Basement
7-9 PM

Live in a community that values and appreciates you for who you are!

Welcome Back!!
Welcome Back!!
You still have half the semester left to find an incredible summer co-op/internship!
Take the first step! Attend a Welcome Session!
Offered Ev...

Mondays
1:30 - 2:30 pm	305 Holdsw...
2 - 3 pm	107 SOM B...
3 - 4 pm	103 South...
Tuesdays
3:35 - 4:35 pm	220 Mar...
4 - 5 pm	106 SOM...
Wednesdays
3 - 4 pm	327 ELAB
Thursdays
3 - 4 pm	103 South College
Fridays
1:30 - 2:30 pm	114 Stockbridge Hall

CHECK OUT THESE HOT OPPORTUNITIES!!

Genzym Corp: Summer Co-op, seeking BIO, BUS, CHE, CHEM, COMM, COMP SCI, FIN, MICRO BIO and MKTG majors
K & M Electronics : 6 month co-op, seeking EE majors
National Science Foundation :Summer co-op, seeking ACCT, BUS, FIN and MGMT majors
NYC Parks and Recreation Dept : Summer co-op, seeking ENVS, FORS, LAND, NRST and WILD majors
Sikorsky Aircraft : Summer or 6-month co-op, seeking CE, CSE, COMP SCI, EE, MATH and ME majors
Whole Brain Communcations: Summer co-op, seeking MKTG majors
Yankee Candle: Summer co-ops, seeking MKTG, ME, COMP SCI, CSE and ACCT majors

For more information, call the Field Experience office @ 545-6265
www-oea.acad.umass.edu

Mexican Woman killed at San Diego/ Mexico Border

By Ken Ellingwood
Los Angeles Times

SAN DIEGO – Law enforcement authorities were looking into a report Wednesday that an undocumented Mexican migrant was shot and wounded by unknown assailants on the U.S. side while crossing with a group in rural east San Diego County.

The woman, identified by Mexica consular officials as Elsa Maria Santos Dominguez, turned up in Mexico and was being treated in a Tecate hospital for a gunshot wound to the arm.

The Mexican Consulate in San Diego asked county authorities for a "careful investigation." A spokesman for the San Diego County Sheriff's Department said the shooting was reported about 10:20 p.m. Monday by a U.S. Border Patrol agent. The agent told a sheriff's dispatcher that shots were reported fired after 13 migrants traversing near the community of Boulevard encountered a group of unidentified men gathered around a Ford Bronco, said sheriff's spokesman Ron Reina.

Reina said a deputy who went to the scene found no witnesses or vehicle. Santos, identified in Mexican news reports as a 34-year-old Chiapas native, was found near the border in Mexico by Mexican authorities. She told reporters her group was being led by immigrant smugglers and was to be picked up at Interstate Highway 8. She said two men, who appeared to be drinking, fired at the group. It was unclear whether anyone else was injured.

Reina said crimes against migrants in San Diego's back country are reported sporadically.

"It might not always be a shooting, but there's a variety of crime," he said.

Migrants crossing illegally are often reluctant to report assaults, robberies and other crimes on the U.S. side to police for fear of being deported. The rural region has witnessed an increase in illegal crossings as U.S. government border enforcement has tightened in San Diego.

All staff meeting
April 3rd at 4pm
BE THERE

Hostage holdout ends in hail of bullets

By Raja Mishra and Raymond McCaffrey
The Washington Post

The four-day standoff in Baltimore County between police and a man accused of four murders ended suddenly late Tuesday night as police entered a row house and fatally shot Joseph C. Palczynski. All three of the hostages he had been holding were reported safe.

The swift conclusion to the excruciating siege began about 10:20 p.m. when one of the hostages, Lynn Whitehead, jumped from a window of the first-floor apartment in the East Point neighborhood where she lived and had been held for almost 100 hours, according to a Baltimore County police spokesman.

Bradley McCord, her boyfriend, who had also been held, next came from the building, and police then entered through living room windows. They shot Palczynski and rescued the third hostage Bradley McCord, the son of Whitehead and McCord, who had celebrated his 12th birthday on Saturday, while being held.

Police said the hostages initiated the escape, and the decision to send in a swat team was made out of concern for the boy, who remained sleeping on the kitchen floor.

Friends and relatives of the hostages showed up quickly and began hugging police. "They're out," one shouted.

Palczynski had been heavily armed when he broke in on Friday night, and had fired shots earlier in the siege.

"All three of the hostages are safe," a police spokeswoman said around 11 p.m.

She said it was her understanding that Palczynski had fired no shots as the police made their sudden entry into the house on Lange Street, in a neighborhood where normal life had been disrupted for days. Tuesday night's events brought a sudden conclusion to a standoff that was close to its 100th hour, and had riveted the attention of a vast audience across the nation.

But little information was immediately available Tuesday night about what had gone on inside the row house since the standoff began. However, police said Palczynski had insisted once again Tuesday that the hostages would be released only when Tracy Whitehead, his former girlfriend, joined him inside.

On Saturday and Sunday Palczynski had fired shots to underscore his anger or demands, but no shots were fired Tuesday from the row house in the East Point neighborhood of eastern Baltimore County.

"Everything is murky. We don't have a clear picture on what is going on inside that house," police spokesman Bill Toohey said at a late-afternoon briefing. Earlier the spokesman said, "We are hampered by the fact that our information is coming from him."

Broken off on Monday evening, negotiations resumed by telephone at 9 a.m. Tuesday in what had become one of the country's longest hostage dramas. Police sources said that Palczynski remained adamant that the hostages would be freed only in exchange for his former girlfriend, a swap police ruled out because they feared for her life.

"It seems that he'd rather kill her than see her with somebody else," a police source said.

Palczynski, 31, a sometime electrician who has spent much of his adult life in prison or mental hospitals, allegedly kidnapped Tracy Whitehead, 22, on March 7, four days after she ended their two-year relationship. He allegedly killed three people who tried to thwart the abduction, and a fourth person the next day as he attempted to steal a car.

Whitehead managed to escape and Palczynski fled, eluding a huge police manhunt and finally surfacing at the Lange Street residence, which Lynn Whitehead apparently rents with McCord.

Gordon Tyler, who lives across the street in a similar row house, said the dwellings have five rooms, counting the bathroom, and that the living room is so small "four adults would be crowded in one." Tyler said his three children play basketball with Bradley. "He's a pretty tough kid," he said.

Dr Frederick Bilom of the UMass eye care center examines the eyes of third-year Political Science Graduate Student Johanna Delp.

FEATURED ITEMS THIS WEEK

This week
Charles River Nylon Wind Jacket
Was $54.99
$39.99
Available in navy or maroon

Charles River Nylon Wind Pants
Was $39.99
$24.99
Available in navy or maroon

COLLEGIATE Casuals
UMass Clothing for Everyone
M-Th 8:30-6 Fri. 8:30-5
Sat. 11 to 4
(413) 545 - 2619

THE University Store
Not like a mall... Better.

UMASS The Index Yearbook
ATTENTION!!!
CLASS OF 2000
ABSOLUTE LAST CHANCE FOR SENIOR PORTRAITS
MARCH 27TH-31ST
Make your appointment now by calling 1-800-OUR-YEAR or log on to www.ouryear.com
School Access #147
(You need to know the access number when you make the appointment)

Order Your 2000 Yearbook
ONLY $50.00
Log on to www.walsworth.com or
Call 1-800-929-1503
(Service Charge of $2.95 for orders placed by phone)

DAVOR PHOTOGRAPHY
Walsworth Publishing Company

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Our Opinion
Time to vote

It's time to do something.

Yes, you've had a long day. You just want to go into your local Dining Common with your friends, grab whatever the day's food might be, head back to your dorm room, and relax. You don't want to take any time out of your schedule to do deal with those people sitting at the little folding table by the door.

You should probably think again.

Elections for President, Trustee and local area governments are being held today and tomorrow. These two days will decide who is in charge of the Student Government Association, the representative body for the students of UMass. These two days will choose the people who will be integral in distributing the well-over a million dollars allocated to student groups. They will elect the leaders who will be in charge of representing your interests. These two days will be, to use the editorial art of understatement, important.

Will it be Avakian and Howe? Sayani and Eltringham? Foley and Zetye? That is where you come in. You've seen the posters around campus. You may have been to the debates. You may have seen the coverage right here in the Collegian. Perhaps you know one of the candidates personally, have had a class with them, attended SGA meetings where they have made their opinions know. The personalities and platforms of the candidates, the hard facts of this election have been made available to you. Now is the time to apply that information.

The simple fact is that it is very easy to participate in these elections. Are you on the mean plan? The polls are open from 11-2 and 4-7 in every DC on campus. Stop and take the few minutes to fill out the ballot when you go have your lunch or dinner. The food isn't going anywhere – you've got plenty of time to decide the future of your student representation on this campus before you go eat. Are you not on the meal plan? Voting will also be held during those hours in the Campus Center Concourse. Stop by between your classes, grab some coffee from the Bluewall, grab a Collegian from the stack, and above all make a movement toward the election table and vote. It doesn't take all that much effort.

After this Friday it will all be over. The ballots will be done, counted, and a winner announced. The voice of the students will have been heard. No, wait, just a minute, let's fix that... the voice of the students who voted will have been heard. They will have chosen a President, Trustee and local area governments to suit their needs, represent their interests, and run the campus in a way that they deem acceptable.

Will you be included among those who have made a difference on this campus? Perhaps. No one can force you to do anything, but this system is in place for a reason – to give you a voice. It's your decision to exercise it.

We at the Collegian believe that it is the responsibility of every student at the University of Massachusetts to vote in the SGA and area government elections. Make yourself heard.

Nixon, 'The Man' behind 'The Conspiracy'

Conspiracies are out there. Granted they may not be as far fetched and involved as the ones in The X-Files or Conspiracy Theory, but they are out there. I don't think that anyone would deny the fact that each day we are being deceived in some way. Whether it is by phone companies, UMass or our government, we are absolutely being deceived purposely by different groups of people on a daily basis. One goal that I had set for myself as I was entering college was to expose a conspiracy. Up until now I had not done so. However, I believe that some recent research has yielded the exact results I was looking for.

The news: Each day millions of people tune into the networks or read a newspaper or log onto the Internet in order to get the news. What is news? Who decides what is news? The answer to the latter is some rich executive atop a building in New York City. For a while back in the day all of the very important executives realized how important it was to control the mood of the citizens of the United States. They felt that by controlling Joe America's mood they could have them in a constant state of consumerism and loyalty to The Man. Among other methods they tried dropping mind controlling drugs from the sky and putting subliminal suggestions on the radio and in movie houses. However, the powerful executives soon realized that the best way to control Americans' moods were through the information (news) that was passed on to the public.

The Powers That Be back then decided that by tampering with the news they could control the attitudes and habits of the American public. They did this in two waves. The first wave consisted of inserting minor uplifting news stories that were fabrications written by some of Hollywood's most famous screenwriters. This lasted for about fifteen years. The second consisted of screenwriters undertaking much larger tasks. In order to offset any good news that was out there they would write scripts for huge stories such as wars and political scandals.

Dan Viens

I will start by explaining the first wave. This first wave was called Operation Insert Tiny Happiness. The vast majority of this took place during the years preceding and leading up to and including the Vietnam War. The Man felt that if all people heard about was war then they would become depressed and not want to spend money. They felt that the best thing to do would be to raise people's spirits by making up a plethora of fake human-interest stories. If you go back in the news broadcasts of the Vietnam War days you will see that there was an all-time high percentage of fire fighters saving cute little kitties from trees and little kids calling 911 when their parents had heart attacks.

These things maybe happened one or two times a year, but no more than that. Any time one of these events was reported on it was usually fake. If there was film to "prove" it then all the viewers were seeing was actors on a soundstage. This is similar to what happened in the movie Wag The Dog.

Wave one worked for a while. However, The Man felt that far too many people were becoming hippies as a direct result of the happy human-interest stories. This is what inspired wave two's inception.

The executives in charge were afraid that if they kept up with all the cute little kitty stories then all U.S. citizens would feel that everything in their country was so hunky-dory that they needn't contribute anything to society. The Man decided to start creating major depressing news stories. Almost every political event since Richard Nixon's first election has been a hoax. Watergate was faked; in fact, Nixon was never forced from office. He is actually still our President as we speak. Each of the Presidents since then, and all they have supposedly done, has been staged for our "benefit."

There isn't really a government. There are around seven guys who just sit around controlling the U.S. public and make money off of us. When you buy tickets to a Red Sox game they get the money. If you take your girlfriend to dinner, they get the money. Same result if you buy a Hershey's chocolate bar or buy a pair of Nikes.

Only on rare occasions do we get a glimpse into the real world. One example is Seinfeld. Those people weren't actors. They were just real people in a documentary that lasted eight years. The only view we have of the world that we are living in is The Simpsons. Matt Gruening is paid directly by the elite group that controls us day in and day out. They all have a running bet to see if anyone will figure it out.

The world we live in is actually quite different from the world we see around us. I don't know much, but there are some things I can clue you in on. The ruler of our country is still Nixon as I said before. He is really old, but he has been vaccinated against every cause of death including old age. This science has been around for years, but The Man doesn't feel the general public could handle it. The last team to win a World Series that wasn't staged was the 1986 Boston Red Sox. However, right after the sixth game was over The Man decided that things would be better for the country as a whole if the Mets won. So they went back and had the ball go through Bill Buckner's legs and the rest is history. The U.S. isn't shaped at all the way it looks on maps. It is shaped more like Italy, but faster. The Man felt that if Americans saw this we would all become obese. This would definitely not be good for society. The last thing I know for sure is that the Backstreet Boys and N'Sync are all on death row. The Man forces them to go through this humiliation until the day they throw the switches on their electric chair. You may think that they are making a lot of money, but when they go offstage they are forced into cages where they sleep in their own waste.

If all of this news makes you uneasy then I am sorry to have to be the one to break it to you. Now the choice is yours. You can either go on letting The Man control you or you can make change and vote against Nixon. I wouldn't mind seeing the boy bands die though.

Dan Viens is a Collegian columnist.

Daily Collegian Ed/Op... it's your voice! Use it!

Mum's the word on defining cool

Did you ever wonder about what kind of parent you might turn out to be someday? It was so easy to define cool and not cool when you were younger because you didn't understand the repercussions. I thought, 'Of course I will let my kids watch racy, sex-filled TV shows like Three's Company and Dynasty.' It would be OK with me if they wanted to ride their bike on a busy road, I'm sure that they would be good enough to stay on the blue glittered banana boat seat (like mine) and not get run over.

But it gets a little trickier to define a "cool" parent from a young adult standpoint. Maybe you wished they had pushed you a little harder in school or forced you hit the ice for an extra hour so that one day you might be on an Olympic podium. Or maybe you think yours are perfect and you are too as a result.

Kathleen Ralls

Maybe the fact that Drew Barrymore's mom hit the bottle too hard with her preteen daughter and let her stay out all night would not be considered one of her finer moments in hindsight. But I bet Drew thought she was cool then. I think it's worth discussing.

This all came up the other night as some friends and I discussed what kinds of topics are legal to talk about with each of our mothers. We decided that some had simply given up on finding out the inside dish and evolved to coolness by not trying to be cool anymore. Others are still reading YM between the covers of Good Housekeeping in a last-ditch effort to understand and relate to their kids.

I come from the "Don't ask, don't tell" school of parenting. We just don't talk about certain topics such as dating and other social issues. I never ran home and told her who I had a crush on in elementary school. Or in middle school. Or in high school. We're just not the gossiping type. It didn't hurt that she was a teacher at my middle school and knew who were the "good" and "bad" kids and whom I hung out with.

Some parents, however, love to know these kinds of details about their children. 'Just who were their kids out with?' and 'What were they doing?' are questions that form a rotary of thoughts in their heads. One friend's mother loved to pelt me with 20 questions in high school about her daughter's goings on. Adding her patent extra syllable in my name, she used to ask, "So, Kath-a-leen, do you think she'll get asked to the prom?" She knew she would never get a straight answer from her daughter but apparently I served as a reliable source during those trying years.

For us, matters of the heart are untouchable. I know next to nothing about my mother's social life before my father, except that she dated a Green Beret once. I don't know how the relationship went or what he looked like without his green hat. I guess I never will.

One friend's mom is one of those "playing it cool" sorts. She once lit up a cigarette on the stove in front of my friend to prove that anybody could smoke and that she was "cool" enough to do it too. Of course, she had never smoked a day in her life and wasn't exactly as smooth as the Marlboro Man once she inhaled.

She's offered to buy condoms for her youngest son in high school and accepts the fact that the only virgin in her home is her beloved cat. This loving Irish-Catholic mother, and I mean that in the most genuine way, agrees whole-heartedly with the idea of her daughter moving across the country with a 29-year-old man whom she met in an Amsterdam bar just so her daughter will understand that she is "with it."

Aside from appreciating her efforts deep inside, this kind of mother is the type to take you bra shopping before you have to ask her, and before you even need one, just so you will fit in during gym. She's open to the most intimate of talks and won't fly off the handle if you mention the "S" word. This kind of mother probably won't concentrate on buying all of your "school clothes" at Sears and Health-Tex. She understands just how important image shaping can be in those early stages. The mention of drugs and alcohol does not usually make her flinch, but this kind of mother also worries most because of her investigative attributes.

Others, like my mother, still likes to refer to dating as "going," and SATs as "college boards," like what they were called thirty years ago. She thinks shady neighbors across the street throw "pot parties" on weekends and doesn't think a bra is necessary until you need one. For some of us, however, need is eventually outweighed by want.

For me, I take solace in knowing that my mother will never again come knocking on my classroom door with my lunch.

Kathleen Ralls is a Collegian columnist.

Your Opinion
The woes of parking

To the Editors:

I would like to address the issue of parking here at UMass. First off, I don't have a problem with parking in the Yellow Lot by the Mullins Center (even though it is far away), since that is the sticker I paid for. However, if I am willing to pay the extra money for a purple sticker to park in the Purple Lot much closer to me, I should be able to get that.

When I inquired about getting a purple sticker I was told that I was number 1018 on the waiting list for those wanting one. It seems that if there are that many people wanting a purple sticker, there should be another lot made. Another point I would like to add has to do with the Red Lots in front of the dorms. It seems to me that if there are empty spots in front of the dorms. They should be filled by those that have red stickers and if they cannot be filled, they should be made into Purple Lots that the students can use. It's hard to imagine that faculty parks in front of my dorm in Central when there are other lots much closer to classrooms. It just seems like a lot of wasted space. I think that parking permits need to be redistributed and decisions be made as to where students and faculty park. This decision should be based on the demand for faculty spaces and for student spaces.

Erika Haubrich
Central

To the Editors:

The parking meters here at UMass needs to undergo a slight change. This past December, my mother and grandmother came to visit me. We went out for a while, and as we neared the campus we decided to pay a visit to the University Store.

We decided to take a walk, so we parked in a metered lot next to the Mullins Center instead of the parking garage. We put a quarter into the meter, and a digital number '1.8' appeared in a small box. We thought this to be an odd number, and unanimously decided that it meant we had one hour and eight minutes on the meter. Not intending to be gone for an hour, we put no more change in the meter and proceeded to the Campus Center.

We arrived back at the lot less than an hour later. As we arrived, we noticed a ten-dollar parking ticket in the windshield of the car. Allegedly, our time had expired. But upon checking the meter, we noticed that we still had a few more minutes left.

My mother contested the ticket, and was recently informed that she did not have to pay. Parking Services, however, told her that '1.8' stood for eighteen minutes. This is absurd. Everyone we asked also thought that 1.8 would stand for one hour and eight minutes – even the person my mother initially spoke with at Parking Services agreed.

This system has to change somehow as it is confusing for anyone who does not work for Parking Services to figure out.

Kathleen A. MacDonald

To the Editors:

I would like to address the issue of towing on campus. Recently my car was towed due to the fact that I forgot to bring my car back to the Yellow Lot one night. I know that it was my fault, but everyone makes mistakes and college students can't afford this. I can handle a $25 ticket as a reminder not to park there and as punishment if you do, but $95 is a kit of money for college students to pay for such a simple mistake. Luckily, I had the money so I could get my car back the same day, but many students don't have this kind of money lying around. I'm not trying to say that we shouldn't pay or that we shouldn't be punished, but a smaller penalty would teach students the same lesson. Probably no changes will be made because of this, so everyone should follow the parking rules, whether we agree with them or not, and stop giving the school and towing companies our money. So start paying attention to where you are parking and learn from my mistake: Be careful where you park!

Heather Haubrich
Central

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Sam Wilkinson Acting Editor-in-Chief Sam Wilkinson Managing Editor Shawn Ilinitch Business Manager
Ben Alamed Web Developer Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager
Sage Brousseau Co-Advertising Production Manager Jake Lilien Senior Diversity Editor

David Troupes Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pashkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jake Lilien Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jeanie Gorlovsky Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sasha Senderovich Jewish Affairs Editor
Marisele Scherzinger Multicultural Affairs Editor
Adam Martignetti News Editor
Melissa Hammel News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Princess
Adam White Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor
Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Christine Connare Women's Issues Editor
Marc Menschel Finance Manager
Joshua Szymanski Distribution Manager
Katie Beith Promotions Manager
Catherine Turner International Affairs Editor
Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Chris Brennan Assistant Finance Manager
Eric Faber Assistant Advertising Manager
Amy Gargania Assistant Business Manager
Stress Driving Force

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Arts & Living

Your Guide to all that's going on in the Pioneer Valley

And the nominees are.....

BEST PICTURE
AMERICAN BEAUTY
THE CIDER HOUSE RULES
THE GREEN MILE
THE INSIDER
THE SIXTH SENSE

DIRECTING
Sam Mendes, AMERICAN BEAUTY
Spike Jonez, BEING JOHN MALKOVICH
Lasse Hallström, THE CIDER HOUSE RULES
Micahel Mann, THE INSIDER
M. Night Shyamalan, THE SIXTH SENSE

ACTOR IN A SUPPORTING ROLE
Michael Caine
Tom Cruise
Michael Clarke Duncan
Jude Law
Haley Joel Osment

ACTRESS IN A LEADING ROLE
Annette Bening
Janet McTeer
Julianne Moore
Meryl Streep
Hilary Swank

ACTRESS IN A SUPPORTING ROLE
Toni Collette
Angelina Jolie
Catherine Keener
Samantha Morton
Chloë Sevigny

ACTOR IN A LEADING ROLE
Russell Crowe
Richard Farnsworth
Sean Penn
Kevin Spacey
Denzel Washington

SCREENPLAY - ADAPTATION
THE CIDER HOUSE RULES
ELECTION
THE GREEN MILE
THE INSIDER
THE TALENTED MR. RIPLEY

SCREENPLAY - ORIGINAL
AMERICAN BEAUTY
BEING JOHN MALKOVICH
MAGNOLIA
THE SIXTH SENSE
TOPSY TURVY

The envelope please...Our editors' picks

BEST SUPPORTING ACTRESS

Nick: I think Toni Collette should win. You really got the feeling that she was emotionally distraught, that she couldn't understand her son, didn't know what to do with him. The scene in the car, where she starts crying when her son tells her about her mother, it's like...wow.

Kristi: Yeah, she had that low-class mother thing down really well.

Dave: I'd have to go with Angelina Jolie. Toni Collette was great, but Jolie was better, I think. Very energetic, very wacky, very playing someone who was obviously far removed from herself.

Kristi: She plays that part in every movie, though.

Dave: Point taken. I've never seen Fox Fire, myself.

Adam: I saw Sixth Sense, and I don't remember being that impressed with Toni Collette. I think Jolie is going to win this one hands down.

Kristi: I think Jolie's going to win, but I think that Chloe Sevigny was excellent, and she deserves to.

Adam: So consensus is that Jolie's going to win.

ACTOR IN A SUPPORTING ROLE

Kristi: I don't think any of these roles were particularly challenging.

Dave: Everybody was saying how Jude Law did such a wonderful job of being charismatic, but I thought that he was very phony.

Adam: I thought that Tom Cruise's role in Magnolia was pretty out there. A lot of people think he's going to win, but I don't know. He was entertaining, but I didn't think he did all that great a job. I'm going with Haley Jole Osment. The Academy loves kids, and he was great in Sixth Sense; I saw him on Leno, and he's just the man, so he deserves to win.

Kristi: I think it's a lot easier to act obnoxious than to act natural, so I'm going to go with the little kid, or Michael Caine. And Caine's also an Oscar favorite.

Nick: I'd have to go with Haley. He played that role better than any other actor could have, young or old. People who watch the movie are going to remember him in this role forever; he's never going to be able to run away from this role. Look at Anna Paquin, too. She won it when she was eleven for The Piano.

Adam: Does tend to embrace the younger actors. This is definitely the toughest category, you could basically pick anyone.

Dave: I'd have to say Michael Clark Duncan. I think he was just incredibly effective as the gentile giant. He as great; I really can't say anything beyond that. He's just the man.

ACTRESS IN A LEADING ROLE

Adam: I finally saw Music of the Heart. Oh man, it was awful!

Kristi: How did that get any sort of Academy recognition?

Dave: Because it had Meryl Streep...

Kristi: I don't care, it sucked.

Adam: It was directed by Wes Craven, though!

Nick: It was out for an entire week! Wow!

Adam: Hilary Swank seems to be the popular pick.

Kristi: Swank, absolutely. Boys Don't Cry the best movie I saw this year.

Adam: Wow, that's a pretty strong recommendation.

Nick: I thought Annette Bening did a really good job in American Beauty.

Adam: If American Beauty starts to do the Oscar sweep thing, I think she has a good chance to win.

Dave: I don't think she was that good relative to American Beauty – she was fine. I have nothing against her, but her performance didn't stand out as one of the movie's strong points.

Adam: But then again, one of the strongest points was arguably the next-door neighbor, and he wasn't even nominated.

ACTOR IN A LEADING ROLE

Kristi: Russel Crowe, definitely made The Insider worthwhile, and nobody really understands what a stretch the role was for him. He's not American, or overweight, or depressed. But Kevin Spacey's good. He's a shoe in.

Nick: I think Spacey basically has it wrapped up, and I'm a big Spacey fan. I'd like to see Crowe because he got totally snubbed for L.A. Confidential, which is one of my favorite movies. But then, so did Spacey, too. I heard that Denzel Washington did a really good job, but I didn't see The Hurricane.

Adam: Washington seems to be the media's favorite this year.

Nick: But my pick is Spacey.

Dave: I thought Washington was good, but his role didn't seem that challenging, though. He was fine, but the movie itself seemed sort of shallow and insubstantial to me. It was a good movie, but it was very pat. He was a good, innocent man who as convicted of a crime he didn't commit, and he looks swell and teaching. I have to go with Spacey. He is, in my opinion, the strong point of the movie. He has such a wonderful ability to combine comedy and sincere drama in the same line. He shined.

Adam: I honestly think Crowe should win. Without him, I thought The Insider was basically nothing. He definitely carried the movie. I think the same hold true, though, that if American Beauty starts winning lots of awards, Spacey will definitely win. And he deserves it, too; he was great.

BEST ADAPTED SCREENPLAY

Dave: I'm torn between Cider House Rules and Election. They're both such wonderful movies. If I had to choose, I would say Election, because I think Cider House Rules depended less on dialogue, and more on setting and emotional plays, whereas Election was all about character development, and weird story arcs. It was very entertainingly constructed, from a story standpoint.

Nick: I agree, for the same reasons. Green Mile, too, although I didn't read the book.

Kristi: I think I liked the Talented Mr. Ripley, actually. The Talented Mr. Ripley...

Dave: Stank...

Kristi: How can you say that?

Adam: I completely disagree.

Kristi: I think Election stood well on its own; I think that with Cider House Rules, it was so obvious that you needed to read the book to care about the movie. It seemed so devoid of actual development of real conflict and real characters. But I really like the Talented Mr Ripley, so I'm going to choose that.

Adam: I completely disagree with you about Cider House Rules. I thought that the movie definitely had enough conflict and emotional investment from the audience; I can't remember seeing the first hour of a movie when I was more touched. Those kids were just great.

Kristi: Who can resist orphans?

Dave: Especially orphans named Fuzzy.

Adam: And Tobey McGuire in the man anyway. I think the Cider House Rules wins the category, because if it doesn't win best picture, it probably will win this, and Miramax has a good publicity machine behind it. It's something to consider though that The

Layout and design by Adam Martignetti

Japanese Taiko explodes

What are you doing Sunday afternoon? You're going to see the San Jose Taiko at the Fine Arts Center to experience an explosion of Japanese Drums, Dance and Music, that's what.

How many other opportunities are you going to have to witness Taiko drums, with origins in ancient Japanese customs? Priests used them to dispel evil spirits and insects from the rice fields. Peasants used them to pray for rain or celebrate the harvest. Samurai used them to frighten their enemies.

The San Jose Taiko performance visiting UMass this weekend is synaesthetic feast, aiming to please all of your senses. The vibrations and tones of the drums, the brilliant costumes and movement, and the level of energy in synchronized dance and drumming is enveloping.

Go ahead. Be engaged by the art of another culture and feel like you accomplished something.

Tickets are still available by calling the Fine Arts Center Box Office at 545-2511, but they can be purchased at the door. The performance begins at 7 p.m. in the Concert Hall.

Kristi Ceccarossi is a Collegian staff member.

COURTESY AUSAN DANCE

Japanese Taiko hits the FAC tonight a 7 p.m. Be there!

Paging Rick Rockwell, Alex

It's been just over two full years since I first started writing this column, and something dawned on me. I had this miraculous realization while I was eating lunch this week. The name of my column is "Tube Notes." Okay, so now I know what you're thinking. If you've never been affiliated with this newspaper before, you're saying to yourself: "How did this kid ever get a job as a writer? He may be the stupidest person I've ever heard of." If you're an employee of the Collegian, you're thinking, "Ugh, shut up Benharris before you make everyone down here even sorrier that we hired you." However, hear me out. The column is called "Tube Notes." I realized that in two years, I've never actually used these 90 lines of space to write a note to anyone. Therefore, I'm going to end the trend right now. It only took me two years to make the realization, but here they are. Tube Notes with Ryan Benharris.

Tube Notes with Ryan Benharris

Note to Rick Rockwell: We're laughing at you, not with you! – I was in Arizona over spring break. Being an Arts guy, I was more than eager to pick up a taste of the local flavor that is contained in the entertainment newspapers of the southwest. In one paper, Get Out, there was an advertisement for The Tempe Improv Comedy Theater. Appearing "Friday and Saturday Only!" was comedian Rockwell. Yes, you heard me right, comedian Rockwell. In case you've lived in a cave for the past few months, you know that Rockwell is the Multi-Millionaire that FOX allowed to legally buy a prostitute and call her his wife. The marriage ended quickly when they had "marital problems," and the news came out that Rockwell had a criminal record for domestic abuse. Well for some reason, Rockwell thinks he's funny. He's making his way around the country with something called "The Annulment Tour." Can you imagine what he's trying to get us to laugh about? "Hey, did I tell you about the time I beat up my girlfriend?" "Anyone wanna get married? I still got twenty bucks left. But, no fat chicks." Hey Rick! It's not funny if you make jokes about it. It's funny if we make jokes about you.

Note to Regis and Alex: Knock off the fight, we know it's fake – Have you heard about this? Alex Trebek, host of the game show where you can only win lowly thousands of dollars is apparently upset with Regis Philban and his reason for the million-dollar game show craze. Trebek called Philban "stupid" and said that the contestants on the show are not that smart either. Philban responded with saying, "If you're so smart why don't you come on the show?" Trebek has not yet responded to that. What I do know, is that Philban and ABC are currently working on a episode of Celebrity Who Wants To Be A Millionaire? I am ashamed to admit that I heard this from Rosie O'Donnell because I don't even want to admit that I've ever watched her show, but it's true. She's obsessed with Who Wants to Be a Millionaire, and likes to brag that she will be a contestant on the celebrity episode of the show. If Trebek goes on the show, there will be tons of hype surrounding it. Regis has gone on Jeopardy three times, and come in last place each time. I'm sure that this entire fight is a staged ploy to get even more people to watch Who Wants to Be a Millionaire?. Lousy greedy Disney!

Note to "Family Guy:" Kill anyone you want, but leave Katie Holmes Alone! – If you caught this week's episode of the popular FOX cartoon that seems to jump off and on the air, you'll know what I'm talking about. In this particular episode, the grim reaper hurt his foot and Peter Griffin, the lead character, had to take over his job of killing people. Death wanted to do something huge, so he ordered Peter to "Kill the kids from Dawson's Creek." I love "Family Guy," but when you even joke about putting my future wife in jeopardy, you've crossed the line. This means war, FOX!

Note to Greed: Pick Me! – Speaking of "Millionaire" shows, the selection committee from the group from the FOX game show are coming to Hartford to pick candidates to be on the show. Hey, I'm stupid. I've never passed the second question on the phone version of Who Wants to Be a Millionaire, and I've been hit on the head quite a lot in basketball games. Also, I wanted to go to the Boston casting for Survivor last fall, but then I realized that I couldn't survive in the woods for more than 15 minutes without getting hungry and killing and eating my best friend. Plus I'm uglier than a mule, and I seriously wouldn't want to force you to look at me on your television. However, I'm very selfish and greedy. Pick me!

Note to anyone who watches anything other than the Oscars this Sunday: Get some culture you ignoramus – Next to the Super Bowl, the Oscars are the most watched event on television every year. However, there are people who won't watch it because they think that the awards are for stuck up snooty yuppies. You need to do something besides watch wrestling and porn. Billy Crystal is hosting and Robin Williams is singing "Blame Canada" from South Park. Now that's entertainment!

Note to CBS: Enough with the music! – As someone who's watched over three million hours of basketball in the last fourteen days, that music that CBS plays on all of the games is going to be the death of me. Or more likely it will be the death of you, because if I hear it again, it may make me kill for sport.

Note to Party of Five: You Suck – Did anyone besides me watch "Party of Five" this week? Dear God, it's terrible. I can't even stomach basking in it's awfulness. There have been constant advertisements about how there are only six more new episodes left before it leaves the airwaves forever. That's six episodes too many. If you ask me. Unless those six episodes involve someone wearing a ghost mask chasing Neve Campbell around, and actually stabbing her to death, they will be torment to watch. Damn you suck Party of Five.

Note to Self: You're good enough, you're smart enough and dog-gone-it people like you – Okay, I'm actually not very good at anything, dumb and people tend to think of me as an unfriendly, surely bastard. Good thing there's always TV!

Did you know that the Daily Collegian is funded solely on advertising revenue?

DO YOU WANT A JOB THAT MATTERS?

become an "advertising account executive." The Daily Collegian is looking for outgoing, motivated students interested in earning money while gaining experience!

Fill out an application and bring a resume to 113 Campus Center Basement, attn: Christine Carroll by March 24th.

How do I look for an off-campus apartment?

How do I sublet my apartment/ house for the summer?

Who is going to take over my lease?

The Apartment Guide

Issue date March 27th
Special classified section 20 cents/word taken at Collegian Newspaper Stand next to UStore

$1 Sushi
Rock & Roll
10:30-1:00
Fri-Sat
Nights

KARAOKE
Sun-Thu 11:30-1:00
Fri-Sat
11:30-1:30

ICHIBAN いちばん

AUTHENIC JAPANESE AND KOREAN RESTAURANT
1 Roundhouse Plaza, Northampton, MA
(413) 585-1185
(Behind City Hall, off Main St.)

10% Student Discount with valid student ID

IT'S YOUR BODY

If your car has an accident, don't let the tow truck drag it wherever. Demand Dana! We offer a lifetime warranty on all our body shop work.

DANA BODY SHOP
968 Bridge Road, Northampton, Mass.
586-7250

STUDENT EMPLOYEES
W·A·N·T·E·D
Summer Conference Housing is looking for YOU!

How about a summer job that is here on the UMASS campus and lets you meet new people everyday?

JOBS

How about working with a department that will host over 9,000 people on the UMASS campus this summer?

February 22- March 31, 2000 applications for Summer Conference Housing positions will be available in the University Conference Services Office, 918 Campus Center.

Completed applications are due by April 7, 2000.

Trax On /Trax Off

ROLLINS BAND
Get Some Go Again
Dreamworks

The first five seconds of "Monster," the third track off of the new Rollins Band disc Get Some Go Again, tells you everything you need to know about this album. A classic headbanging riff doesn't need any introduction; it just pounds on from the first second until the last at a beautifully concise three minutes and three seconds. Solid guitar work and a flawless rhythm section (courtesy of Jim Wilson (guitar), Marcus Blake (bass) and Jason Mackenroth (drums) whom, when they aren't jamming with Henry, are "a very rocking trio called Mother Superior." And then when the man himself comes in for the chorus, singing what we already know, that he's a "monster," all is right with the world. Just straightforward rock and roll but complete with the usual bells and whistles Rollins throws in to make it interesting, namely some hilarious commentary about current trends and fads. When Wayne Kramer of the mighty MC5 arrives for the final track "Illuminator/L.A. Money Train" to lay down some predictably awesome soloing behind Rollins' rant about, among other things, the unsatisfying feeling of an Offspring record, you can't help but stop being so critical and go with the flow as you let the disc take another spin.

What's wrong with it? Not much, really. With so many cool things in Rollins' head it's a shame that so many of the songs are just generic forward moving rockers with bare bone lyrics, but at least they are good ones at that. Also, if you're not a Rollins fan or a rock fan, this won't convert a single soul; it's just preaching to the converted with a bounty of guitar solos, the occasional drum solo, and some well-crafted songs. This is no groundbreaker, but we can always make do with another solid rock record.

(Grade: B+
(Michael Delano)

THE DEADLIGHTS
The Deadlights
Elektra

With a name taken from a Stephen King novel, shadowy picture of torture instruments and scorpions and song titles like "Sweet Oblivion" and "Sado," The Deadlights would like you to believe that they are as scary as hell. They're not; hell, the new NIN is scarier than this. What we've got here is a failure to communicate! (couldn't help it, sorry) is simply another California metal band trying to make a name for itself, but unlike its contemporaries, their isn't much light at the end of this tunnel.

You can tell by the writing in the liner notes (RIP Snot, shout outs to Hed(pe) and Spineshank) that this band is in good company, so it's hard to believe their sound comes off as so bland and uninspired. It's from the dark side of the Cali scene, ruled by Coal Chamber, where substance takes a back seat to image, where the Deadlights must have sprung. Check out my piercings, say the pictures; this group has an image to sell before (or regardless) of when the music plays. "Bitter" is an opener that would make Staind proud, vocalist Duke yelling about his girlfriend, shouting "you can never forget my face" to prove he's way past her. But searching for anything as musically appealing as even Staind's "Mudshovel" is a lost cause here since everything is just background music, and many listens reveal nary a one memorable riff, solo, or even short composition. It's all background music for Duke and his voice, which is pretty evenly split between Dez-like depths and Cyclelly-sounding highs. Those highs are undoubtedly the highs of the album also, since Duke really can sing, and does occasionally, you just wish he would do it more. Another thing you wish the band would do more is slow it down, since the medium paced "Foolish Pride" and "Falling Down" both let Duke take center stage and have the disc's best lyrics, while generic pit-movers like "Junk" and "Whores" are just terrible.

Bands previously mentioned have become successful off of material as bad as this, so the future for the Deadlights will be an interesting one. There is room for improvement but it is so small it's probably not worth it, and a new direction is probably what's in order for these guys. Grade C-
(Michael Delano)

WRITE FOR ARTS

THE FINE ARTS CENTER SERIES
Masters of Work
SMITHSONIAN JAZZ MASTERWORKS ORCHESTRA

One of America's leading jazz orchestras plays Ellington, Gillespie, Goodman, Davis and more. A masterful showcase presented by a collection of jazz artists who are second to none
SATURDAY, MARCH 25, 8:00 PM CONCERT HALL
The winning band of the Second Annual High School Band Jazz Festival will perform prior to the concert at 7:15pm
Sponsored by WFCR 88.5FM

TICKETS ONLY $7.50 FOR LIVE COLLEGE STUDENTS

Duo Virtuosi
Sergio and Odair Assad guitar duo

These Brazilian-born brothers are hailed by many as the foremost duo guitar team in the world. Join them for a program that includes works by Rameau, Albeniz, Torroba, and Piazzola
"stunningly played" The Boston Globe
SUNDAY, APRIL 2, 7:30 PM BOWKER AUDITORIUM

We bring the arts home
PLEASE NOTE NEW TIME - WEEKNIGHT PERFORMANCES BEGIN AT 7:30PM
www.umass.edu/fac/spotlight
The Fine Arts Center
Call 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMASS for tickets

THE MONKEY BAR & GRILLE
This Week's Drink Specials
Sex on the Beach $2.00
Magic Hat 16 oz Draft $2.75
THE MONKEY BAR'S UNIQUE MENU FEATURES MEDITERRANEAN AND CAJUN CUISINE
NO COVER BEFORE 11PM
AFTER 10 IT'S TIME TO DANCE
Next Thursday is IBIZA NIGHT
WEDNESDAY - Ladies Night with DJ Fooz, feat. Free Prizes
THURSDAY - DJ FOOZ spins house music all night long
FRIDAY - House Hip-hop and Top 40 music spun by SATURDAY - S4B Productions DJ's Fooz Creme and Uncle
63 N. Pleasant Street 259-1600

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount 18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441 Discount
Featuring "Coors Light" $16.99 30/PK
Sam Adams Lager $9.99 12/PK
Belhaven or Murphy's $9.99 12/PK
Sierra Nevada Pale Ale $11.99 12/PK bots
Becks' Octoberfest $6.99 12/PK bots
Smirnoff 80 $10.99 1 Liter
Vodka 80 EVERYDAY PRICE! $8.99 1.75 lt
"Genny" your choice...$9.99 30/Pk
Capt. Morgan Spiced $18.99 1.75 Liter
Check Out RUSSELL'S In Door Special's
"Brewery Hill" Black & tan, Lager, Pale Ale, Raspbery $8.99 12/PK bots
"Honey Brown or Michael Sheas" $6.99 12/Pk bots
Delivery Available • OPEN 9:00AM to 11:00PM • Visa/Mastercard • All Beers Plus Deposit

What's new for Spring?
ZANNA
Check it out on www.zanna.com

THE PLACE TO GO BEFORE A GAME. THE PLACE TO GO AFTER CLASS. THE PLACE TO GO FOR TWENTY-FOUR TAPS. THE PLACE TO GO FOR WINGS. THE PLACE TO GO FOR GREAT PRICES. THE PLACE TO GO BEFORE THE MOVIES. THE PLACE TO GO AFTER THE MOVIES. THE PLACE TO GO FOR BONELESS WINGS. THE PLACE TO GO AFTER A GAME. THE PLACE TO GO FOR FOOZBALL. THE PLACE TO MEET UP WITH FRIENDS. THE PLACE TO GO FOR A KICK ASS TIME. THE PLACE TO GO FOR ALL YOU CAN EAT WINGS. THE PLACE TO GO FOR TWO DOLLAR TWENTY THREE OUNCE COORS LIGHT. THE PLACE TO GO WHEN YOU HAVE A HANGOVER. THE PLACE TO GO WHEN YOUR TRYING TO MAKE A HANGOVER. THE PLACE TO GO TO PICK UP GIRLS. THE PLACE TO GO TO BLOW OFF GUYS. THE PLACE TO GO WHEN YOU DONT FEEL LIKE GOING UPTOWN. THE PLACE TO GO FOR NACHOS. THE PLACE TO GO FOR TEQUILA. THE PLACE TO GO ON SATURDAY AFTERNOONS. THE PLACE TO GO FOR GUINNESS. THE PLACE TO GO FOR STONEY SHOTS. THE PLACE TO GO BEFORE YOU GO OUT. THE PLACE TO GO WHEN YOU GO OUT. THE PLACE TO GO AFTER YOU GO OUT. THE PLACE TO GO TO FEEL GOOD ABOUT YOURSELF. THE PLACE TO GO TO BE SEEN. THE PLACE TO GO WHEN YOUR TRYING TO FIT IN. THE PLACE TO GO TO WATCH THE GAME. THE PLACE TO GO IF YOU DON'T WANT TO BE RIPPPED OFF.
THE HANGAR Pub and Grill

oscar

continued from page 5

Insider was adapted from a magazine article that was barely even a page long.

BEST ORIGINAL SCREENPLAY

Dave: I have to go with Being John Malkovich here. I thought that was the most original, creative movie, the most refreshing idea, and the most refreshingly non-Hollywood approach to movie making I've seen in a wicked long time. I thought it was wonderfully inventive, and I really hope it wins this, because if it doesn't win this, it's not going to win anything, and it ought to win something, because it's awesome.

Kristi: I agree. Being John Malkovich was by far the most original, but, again, American Beauty's up there and that was also good and Oscar worthy.

Adam: I abhor Magnolia with a passion.

Kristi: It was good eye-candy.

Adam: It wasn't even good eye-candy. It was just absolute crap.

Nick: I have two wishes for this category. I wish I had seen Being John Malkovich, and I wish Three Kings was up there. But I would like to see Sixth Sense wind. The ending is brilliant.

Kristi: But there are so many loose ends. I like, okay, this kid's going to talk to dead people for the rest of his life, and he's only eleven?

Nick: He's helping people!

Dave: He's helping dead people! But you can't take a movie like that and try to place it in a real-world context.

Nick: Anyway, I would like to see Sixth Sense, but it's probably going to be American Beauty.

Adam: I think that movie has the most to say of any movie this year, with the possible exception of Fight Club. It definitely had the most to say about society in general. Magnolia was definitely un-Hollywood (and it was absolute crap). It was too long, it made no sense.

Kristi: It was a little obnoxious, a little self-indulgent.

Adam: Yes, thank-you.

BEST DIRECTOR

Dave: I want to say Being John Malkovich because I'm such a big fan of the movie, but I think that American Beauty's going to win. The whole style of the movie was too unforgettable.

Nick: I agree, it think it was too good of a movie for it not to win, but at the same time I hope that Sixth Sense wins.

Adam: You really liked that movie, didn't you?

Nick: I did, and more I think about it, the more I like everything about it. And if you saw Wide Awake, the director did the exact same thing with kids. He made them very strong leading actors with a very hard subject matter.

Kristi: Pedophile...

Nick: So, I think American Beauty, but I hope Sixth Sense.

Dave: It was a good movie, but it wasn't smart enough. Like, it was a really good tale, a well-told story, but that's all it was, and the same thing goes for Cider House Rules, it's a wonderful story, but I think a lot of the other movies have something more significant, more subtle, more profound to say. I have to give my preference to movies that have some sort of social agenda.

Kristi: I'll give this one to Being John Malkovich, because American Beauty will definitely get best picture.

Adam: See, but in the past seventeen years, with the exception of last year, the best picture and best director awards go to the same film, which doesn't bode well for Being John Malkovich and the Green Mile.

Adam: As much as I hate to say it, I think Sixth Sense has a pretty good shot in this category, for some reason.

Nick: Yeah!

Kristi: Pedophile...

Adam: Pedophile maybe, but to hold a movie like that together takes pretty careful considerations, and being that he wrote the screenplay also, he did a really good job. But I think either American Beauty or Cider House Rules will get best picture, and whoever gets best picture will get best director.

BEST PICTURE

Dave: I'd like to kick this category off by saying, again, that Fight Club wicked should be on this list.

Nick: Three Kings, too.

Kristi: And Being John Malkovich. I mean, Sixth Sense, honestly...

Nick: So, I think American Beauty, but I hope Sixth Sense.

Dave: If there's any category that the Sixth Sense does not deserve to be nominated in, relative to its competitors, its this one.

Adam: Yeah, there're a lot of other movies that could have been nominated. Sixth Sense. I think, surprised a lot of people.

Nick: American Beauty. I know I've been preaching Sixth Sense this whole time, but I think American Beauty has the best shot, and it's a great film, overall. Writing, directing, performances - even those performances that weren't nominated were excellent.

Kristi: Yeah, I agree. American Beauty is going to clean up, no doubt about it.

Adam: Well, The Insider's not going to win, that's for sure. The Green Mile's not going to win. I'm going with Cider House Rules in a minor upset, I suppose. I think Miramax has a really strong promo machine going, and I think they might pull it off this year. It's a great film.

Dave: Beyond the money and beyond the promo machine, which movie do you think ought to win?

Adam: I think I would probably give it to American Beauty. I don't think it's as great as people say, I think they're holding it up on some pedestal like it's one of the greatest pictures of all time, and I don't necessarily think it's that good. I like The Cider House Rules a lot, though. I'm really torn, honestly, between those two, but I'd probably give the slight edge to American Beauty. But I think Cider House Rules is going to win, in an upset.

baseball

continued from page 12

innings, walking three while striking out none. His teammates tried to rally, finally showing signs of life in the fourth, but whatever got by Szado was quickly swallowed up by the team behind him. Despite the fiery start, however, the Minutemen collected only one more hit over the remainder of the afternoon, a Senez single in the seventh.

"We have to bear down throughout the whole game," said Stone. "It's a young ball club in a lot of ways, and they need to learn how to play in competition everyday, and it's tough to do that sometimes. I think we'll be okay."

Stone and his club will be more than okay if the pitching staff as a whole can rise to the level that Szado played at on Wednesday. The southpaw notched his first win of the season by scattering three hits over six innings and striking out five. While his teammates were knocking in runs in the third, he was quietly dismantling the Holy Cross offense, sending the side down in order. He kept the Crusaders off the board until the sixth inning, when second basemen Dan Powers doubled off the lefthander and was driven home in the next at-bat by second baseman Peter Summa. He quickly recovered, and tamed the Crusaders until his exit after the sixth inning. After watching his ace battle tendonitis and go through this past fall without an arm strong enough to throw, coach Stone realizes how important Szado is to his squad.

"Szado did a nice job," Stone said. "We need him. He's legit. It was really good to see him pitch like he did, and hopefully he's going to stay healthy."

The pitcher was humble after his dominant performance.

"I just really wanted to get ahead of the hitters, because I haven't thrown in awhile," said Szado. "I just wanted to get ahead and throw strikes."

Patrick Reedy and Nick Skirkanich finished the game strongly for the Minutemen, combining for four strikeouts and allowing only one hit. Szado was quick to acknowledge his teammates' effort.

"I think they did a real good job," said Szado. "Just getting people out, that's all you have to do and we'll have no problem, and they came in and did the job."

The Minutemen will get back into action on Saturday as Yale visits Earl Lorden Field to battle UMass in an afternoon double-header.

training

continued from page 12

dugout faithful begins to disperse, and the fans file towards their seats.

Game time has arrived. But one of the events that makes spring training so unique has already come and gone. Autograph seeking in Fort Myers is an event like no other – and to those who participate, collecting the signatures is merely a small fraction of the experience.

It is a time when the true hardball aficionados can take a breather before the fast-paced intensity of Boston's regular season and mollify their winter baseball withdrawal pangs. But most importantly, it provides a forum for Red Sox Nation to engage in some good old-fashioned baseball talk in its purest and simplest form.

Jen Cormier is a Collegian columnist

NCAA

continued from page 12

No. 1 Maine and No. 2 St. Lawrence

Both teams received first round byes into the tournament and won't play until Sunday. Maine (26-7-5) has been hot as of late, winning the Hockey East tournament title last weekend. St. Lawrence (26-7-5) cruised through the ECAC, claiming both the regular season and conference tournament crowns. The Saints will also have the luxury of a favorable crowd behind them, as the New York school is also within driving distance of Albany.

West Region – Minneapolis, MN

No. 4 Boston College (26-11-1) vs. No. 5 Michigan State (27-10-4)

This game could turn out to be a high-flying affair, or a low scoring, defensive battle depending on the play of the goaltenders. Both teams have proven that they can score in the past, but the responsibility of keeping the puck out of the net will fall on the shoulders of BC goalie Scott Clemmensen and Spartans netminder Joe Blackburn.

"I thought that our team played well [in a loss to Maine in the HE finals], but now we've got to understand that we have to continue to play well and set our sights on a national championship," Boston College hockey coach Jerry York said. "We have to reset our goals now, like Maine did last year before winning the national championship."

The two teams made up half of the Frozen Four field in Anaheim a year ago, but only one club will be left standing after Friday's game. The winner advances to play No. 1 seeded Wisconsin on Saturday.

Seniors Mike Mottau and Jeff Farkas, along with junior forward Brian Gionta, lead BC. The Spartans will counter with the CCHA Player of the Year, senior center Shawn Horcoff. All four players are finalists for the Hobey Baker Award.

No. 5 New Hampshire (23-8-6) vs. No. 6 Niagara (29-7-4)

UNH gets the task of facing the surprise team of this year's tournament, Niagara. The Purple Eagles do not play in one of the four major conferences, but non-league wins over BU and RPI surely helped their cause. The winner of Friday's game will play No. 2 seeded North Dakota on Saturday.

"Niagara certainly earned it [their bid]. I think that it's great for Niagara and for college hockey in general," Wilkinson said. "They were an excellent team from start to finish and they deserved to get into the tournament."

The Wildcats have a strong offensive tandem in senior forward Mike Souza and sophomore Darren Haydar. The X-factor in this one, though, will be UNH junior goalie Ty Conklin, the Hockey East Co-Player of the Year.

Niagara has three players who scored over 40 points this season in Mike Isherwood, Mikko Sivonen and Peter DeSantis. Goaltender Greg Gardner has also been solid, but the Purple Eagles will need to prove again this weekend that they can compete with the big boys of college hockey.

No. 1 Wisconsin and No. 2 North Dakota

The top two teams in the WCHA scored over 40 points this season in Mike Isherwood, Mikko Sivonen and Peter DeSantis. Goaltender Greg Gardner has also been solid, but the claim the national title. North Dakota (28-8-5) has been playing well as of late, including a win over the Badgers in the finals of the WCHA tournament.

"I think that all of the draws are tough. It doesn't matter who you are playing," said Wisconsin hockey coach Jeff Sauer on ESPN. "We kind of expected the draw that we got."

Wisconsin is led by senior Steve Reinprecht, while UND counters with junior Jeff Panzer. The two forwards are first and second in scoring in the nation. Both teams have solid goalies in Graham Melanson and Karl Goehring and could be the most evenly matched clubs in college hockey.

Michael Kobylanski is a Collegian columnist

Mike Comrie scored 18 goals and added 33 assists in just his sophomore season for the Michigan Wolverines.

The Wildcats' title hopes will rely heavily on goaltender Ty Conklin, who was the Hockey East Co-Player of the Year, sharing the honors with BC's Mike Mottau.

ATTENTION
UNDERGRADUATE AND GRADUATE STUDENTS WORLDWIDE
CAMPUSCAREERCENTER.COM
PURSUE JOB AND INTERNSHIP OPPORTUNITIES THAT SPAN THE GLOBE
CampusCareerCenter.com
The world's largest campus job fair

A forum on...
What's the Difference?
CHRISTIANITY & PAGANISM
Speakers representing the respective religions will present the tenants of each belief system and then the audience will be encouraged to ask questions.
Thursday, March 23rd @ 7:30-8:30
Campus Center - Room 917

Council Travel
The journey is the reward...
Give your family & friends the gift of travel
Gift certificates, passport photos, airport transfers, tours, language programs, work exchanges, ISIC backpacks, rolling duffels, & all sorts of gear, guidebooks, railpasses, tickets, accommodations and more
44 Main Street
Amherst MA
413-256-1261

EAST HEAVEN HOT TUBS
Best Place For A Hot Tub
$10 OFF WITH THIS AD
413-586-6843 • 33 West St.
Northampton
www.eastheaven.com

安城中國飯店
AMHERST CHINESE FOOD
we do not use "MSG"
253-7835 – 253-2813
62 Main Street, Amherst

Coming Soon...
The Apartment Guide
...on March 27th
Special Classified section place one at Collegian Newsstand next to Utilicorp until March 23rd.

Animal Rescue League of Boston's Animal Friends Summer Camp on Cape Cod has the following counselor positions open:
*Farm Life Counselor
*Horse Care Counselor
*Ocean Ecology Counselor
* located in North Falmouth Day Camp
Employment Dates: June 1st - August 18th
Competitive salary, room@board.
For more information or to schedule an interview, Call (781) 461-8015, ext 239

Mike's Westview Cafe
Thursday Night Kicks Off Our Great Week of Specials!
This week featuring BUD Pitchers for just $4.00
- Screwdrivers $1.75
- Rum & Cokes $1.75
- Kamikaze Shots $2.00
Also Enjoy FREE appetizers on Thursday Night from 9-11 and on Friday afternoon from 4-6

Castaway Lounge
I-91 to exit 24, south on Rte. 5
Whately, Mass. (413) 665-8733
Proudly Presents.
Monday April 3
Amateur Night
1st Place $200
2nd Place $100
3rd Place $50

Apply Now for Best Locations
Apartment Rentals
Check them out: www.amherstlincolnreality.com or call
Lincoln Real Estate
253 - 7879

Best! 1999
Plan Ahead For Next Year...
Excellent Location ¼ Mile From UMass
Spacious Apartments - 1, 2 and 3 Bedroom Townhouse
All Rents Include Heat, Hot Water and Cooking Gas
PUFFTON VILLAGE
Office Hours: 8 am to 4:30 pm Monday - Friday
(413) 549-0145

!Attention UMass Students!
The deadline for applications for:
*Accounting Clerk
*Human Resources Coordinator
*Assistant Finance Manager is Today, March 23rd at 3PM
Any questions can be directed to Christine Carroll at 545-3500 or hrcolleglan@yahoo.com

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
WEEKEND FILMS - DOWNTOWN NORTHAMPTON
The Master of SUSPENSE
Daily 5:00
JAMES STEWART GRACE KELLY
NEWLY RESTORED. BACK IN THEATRES AFTER 15 YEARS.
IT ONLY TAKES ONE WITNESS TO SPOIL THE PERFECT CRIME
ALFRED HITCHCOCK'S REAR WINDOW
This Film RULES!
DAILY 7:15
...look again at the year's most honored film
8 ACADEMY AWARD NOMINATIONS
KEVIN SPACEY ANNETTE BENING
AMERICAN BEAUTY
R
DAILY 9:00 --Last Chance
3 ACADEMY AWARD NOMINATIONS
BEING JOHN MALKOVICH
ACADEMY of MUSIC Cinema House NORTHAMPTON. 584-8435

UNIVERSITY LIQUORS
(across the street from Rafters)
Jose Cuervo 750ml Gold $9.99 Silver $8.99
Red Dog & Icehouse 30 packs $10.99+dep
Sam Adams & Pete's 6pk All Varieties $5.99+dep
BBC Growlers (64oz) All Varieties $4.49+dep
Popov Vodka 750ml 80pf $6.99 100pf $8.99
Milwaukee's Best 30 packs All Varieties $9.99+dep
Lottery and Cigarettes at State Minimum or LOWER!

DO YOU NEED YOUR WISDOM TEETH REMOVED?
If so, patients are being enrolled for a wisdom tooth research study. Your wisdom tooth can be extracted by a Board Certified Oral Surgeon. Financial compensation will be provided for your opinion on a research pain medication.
For more information call: SCIREX Corporation at (860) 285-0569
Outside Windsor call toll free 1-888-285-0569
SCIREX

Players and Volunteers Needed!
Come be a part of New England's Premiere 3-on-3 Basketball Tournament!
Volunteers needed for:
Court monitor
Scorekeeper
Concessions
Promotions
Registration
Pick up your player registration and volunteer registration forms at Room 5 Curry Hicks/UMass, the Campus Center Concourse March 29 & 30, or print a form from our website at www.umass.edu/sptmgt/hargis Completed forms can be dropped off at Curry Hicks or sent to:
New Balance Hargis Hoopla
Curry Hicks Building
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003-1820
For more volunteer information or player registration forms call the New Balance Hargis Hoopla Office at 413-545-5689

ANTHONY'S
HI-NRG ADULT ENTERTAINMENT & MORE!
MARCH 26
ANTHONY'S ALL-MALE REVUE
500 New Ludlow Rd. - South Hadley, MA
CLUBline 413/532-3621
HOTline 413/538-6969
Visit Us At — www.anthonys.net

THE ASIAN DANCE AND MUSIC PROGRAM PRESENTS
SAN JOSE TAIKO
JAPANESE DRUMS, DANCE & MUSIC
SUNDAY, MARCH 26
Fine Arts Center Concert Hall, 7pm
For tickets call 1-413-545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS

GIFTS from GLASS to GOLD
starting under $20.00
Earrings by Ed Levin
silverscape designs
GOLDSMITHS GEM GALLERY
One King St., Northampton 584-3324 • M-Wed 10-6, Th-Sat 10-9, Sun 12-5
264 N. Pleasant St., Amherst 253-3324 • M-Sat 10-6, Thurs 'til 8, Sun 12-5

DELIVERY HOTLINE
549-0077
CHINESE & JAPANESE RESTAURANT
103 N. Pleasant Street
Amherst, MA 01002
(413)256-8923
256-8924
Lunch Specials Served Daily
NOW ACCEPTING OCMP!

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENT

Klub Kai is booking formals and Graduation Parties for May 2000. Call Cheng @ 586-2774 after 4:30 pm . Buffet Packages available.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Summer Sublet Needed! Rent is $750/mo and includes heat and hot water! Utilities already set up and apartment will have furniture for your use! Call us at the Boulders: 256-8012.

3 Bedrooms. Half mile from campus. Close to bus stop. 3 floors. Available June 1, 2000. Call 549-7706.

1 Bedroom Summer Sublet with option to lease on bus route. 1 mile from campus 549-1859.

1 Bedroom Apartment Colonial Village on bus line. $465.00/ month. Available 6/1 . 256-3237.

Apply now for best locations. Amherst Center 1,2 and 3 bedroom apartments. Gas heat, hardwood floor. April showings for June and September. Lincoln Real Estate. No fees charged. 253-7879.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Apply now for best locations. 3 bedroom condos. Gas heat, hardwood floors, bright heated basement with study and laundry area. 1/2 mile to campus, on bus route. April showings for June and September. Lincoln Real Estate. No fees charged. 253-7879.

EMPLOYMENT

Cruise Line entry level on board positions available, great benefits. seasonal or year-round. (941)329-6434 www.cruisecareers.com

Summer Employment. Full-time jobs available at Visitors Center. Call 545-0306 for info and app.

Leaders needed: Summer teenage bicycling trips. US, Canada, Europe. Minimum 4-week time commitment. Salary plus expenses paid. Student Hosteling Program, Ashfield Rd., Conway, MA 01341. (800)343-6132 www.biketrips.com

Seeking experienced waitstaff and kitchen help for new restaurant and bar opening downtown Amherst in April. Call Carl at (413)330-4546 or 253-4438 evenings.

EMPLOYMENT

CAMP CANADENSIS, Pocono Mountains, PA. Premier residential coed summer camp. We are looking for an energetic, qualified and caring staff to teach all general athletics, gymnastics, hockey, tennis, mountain bikes, golf, motorcycles, outdoor adventure, ropes, archery, drama, video, photography, fishing, WSI, waterfront activities, arts and crafts, cooking and much more ! Excellent facilities and great salary! 6/21/00 - 8/18/00. Call (800) 832-8228 or apply online: www.canadensis.com

Earn $1200-2000 this month part time and a new computer ! Will Train. For details 888-342-3267 code 45

Bilingual Tutors/ Translators for part-time paid assistance during the school day to students speaking Amharic, Chinese, Cape Verde/ Portuguese, Japanese, Korean, Mongolian, Tibetan, Urdu, Vietnamese. Contact: ESL/ Bilingual Office at 413-549-9857. Amherst-Pelham Schools. An Equal Opportunity Employer / Affirmative Action Employer

EMPLOYMENT

Bank on getting a tan this summer working outside with other students! Earn up to $9.00- $13.00/hr. Various positions available. For information or to apply on-line see our website at : http://www.university-painters.com

Summer Help Wanted Local corrugated Manufacturer Looking for summer help for 2nd and 3rd shift. Good Pay 1.25 an hour. Call Scott Parsons 413-582-3844

Delivery persons wanted. Apply at D.P. Dough, downtown Amherst.

Fall 200 Internships with the Student Legal Service Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field, work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary-training provided. Contact the Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

3 Job Opportunities on Nantucket Island, MA beginning May. A.) Office manager with good typing, computer and telephone skills. B.) Office assistant, errand runner, mother's helper, household help. C.) Auction gallery assistant: furniture porter, display, delivery. Salary and housing. Drivers license required. (508)228-3942 or send reume: P.O. Box 2607 Nantucket, MA 02548.

UAHC Crane Lake and Eisner Camps, Reform Jewish co-educational Camps located in the Berkshires of Massachusetts, seek qualified, dedicated counselors and specialists, including Waterfront, Athletics, Arts. Good salary, r&b included, travel assistance. Crane Lake Camp: Contact Brad Gerstle, 800-227-2660 ILUVCAMP@aol.com; www.cranelake-camp.com. Eisner Camp: Contact Louis Bordman, 212-650-4130 EISNERGUY@aol.com; www.eisnercamp.org

GENERAL STORE DELI & BAKERY

Quality help wanted for spring, summer & fall 2000. FT/PT-all shifts. Availability through vacations & long weekends preferred. Kitchen skills and customer service a plus. Apply in person. Cushman Village General Store, Deli & Bakery. 491 Pine St., Amherst, MA 01002 (5 minute drive North from Amherst Center.)

HOUSE FOR RENT

4 Bedroom 2 bath 2 car garage full kitchen. 4 min from school. Hadley 549-6465 or 549-9382.

Rent 7 Room House or single rooms. In Sunderland on bus route. Available June 1st. Call Steve 413-221-5840

INSTRUCTION

Private Boxing Lessons w/ retired pro Djata Bumpus in Amherst. Call 413-256-0364

MISCELLANEOUS

Modeling & Acting Have you always dreamed of being a model or actor but don't know where or how to get started? New faces MIETOUR is coming to your area soon. For more info call 1-877-MIE-TOUR.

Million dollar game shows? Forget 'em! Bring your basketball brain to Shoot, Score and Win a million! at www.sixdegrees.com for tons of chances to win cash and prizes.

What do basketball tournament games, cash and prizes, and you have in common? Look for Shoot, Score and Win a Million! at sixdegrees.com to find out.

MISCELLANEOUS

Get paid to lose weight and inches. All natural, doctor recommended. 1-800-397-7715.

ROOM FOR RENT

Large bright room $375/mo. across from bus in town. Available April 1st call 253-9740.

ROOMMATE WANTED

1 Room in 3 bedroom apt. in So. Amherst. $325/mo. Heat/electric included available immediately. 256-4581.

SERVICES

Rental problems? Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the conditions of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

SUMMER SUBLET

Take over my lease. 1 bedroom/2 bedroom apartment. South Point on bus line. $355.00 Available 6/1. 253-5410.

TICKETS

Chili Peppers, Foo Fighters for sale. James 549-9254.

Need two tickets for Creed April 15. sbradshaw@qurs.com.

Elton John Seats Section 1 Floor 6 . Available 888-441-5634

TRAVEL

Be flexible...Save $$$. Europe $159(o/w + taxes). CHEAP FARES WORLDWIDE!! Mexico/Caribbean $199 (r/t + taxes) Call; 800-326-2009 www.4cheapair.com

Mexico/Caribbean or Central America $229 rt. Europe $169 ow. Other worldwide destinations cheap. ONLY TERRORISTS GET YOU THERE CHEAPER! Book tickets on-line www.airtech.com or 212-219-7000.

Study Spanish. Internships in Guatemala. College Credit. www.casaxelaju.com (512)416-6991.

WANTED TO RENT

House wanted: 3-4 bedroom house very close to campus. Wanted for rent starting 6/1. Please call Lia @ 2536378 w/any information.

Five College Community Calendar

THURSDAY, MARCH 23

Community – Tuesday's SGA debates will be airing today at 3:30 p.m. on UVC-TV 19.

Lecture – Monique Snell will present a lecture entitled "The Ripple Effect of a Hate Crime: The Psychological Impact of the Shepard Murder" at 12:30 p.m. in room 905 of the Campus Center.

Lecture – Composer Tania Leon will present a lecture on her work at 4:30 p.m. in Earle Recital Hall, Sage Hall at Smith College.

Workshop – There will be a workshop on contraception and safer sex at 3 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services. Men and women are welcome.

Prayer – The Muslim Student Association is holding a Jummaa Prayer between noon and 2 p.m. in the Campus Center. Please check listing by the C.C. elevators.

FRIDAY, MARCH 24

Concert – The five-college area brings you the works of Tania Leon, a concert which will include poems and performances by numerous artists. It will take place at Smith's Sweeney Concert Hall at 8 p.m.

NOTICES

Community – The UMass Police Department would like to invite female students and staff to partake in a women's self-defense course. The class requires a 14-hour commitment and runs from 6-9:30 p.m. each night. Registration is from 7:30-9 p.m. on March 24 and 25 at the UM police station and is first-come, first served. Classes for men are available upon request.

Community – Mass Appeal, the newest a-cad-a cappella group at UMass, is looking for students to arrange music. Email Erica at massappeal@mailcity.com for more information.

Help – From Feb. 15-April 13 on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays from 5-8 p.m. student volunteers from the School of Management will assist non-resident aliens with the preparation of their Federal and State income tax returns. Call 545-5660 for more information.

Scholarships – The STEMTEC/NSF Teaching scholars program is offering scholarships to students who are interested in exploring a career in K-12 math or science teaching. Students do not need to be enrolled in a certificate program to apply. Applications are due by April 1. Contact Johanna at 545-0626 for more information.

Support – A grief support group is available to all students who have experienced the death of someone they love. The groups are free, small and confidential, and meet on Wednesday and Thursday evenings. Telephone prescreening is required for enrollment. Call 577-5316 if interested.

Support – Al-ANON and ALATEEN are offering local meetings for those affected by someone else's drinking problem. Call 253-5261 for meeting times and locations.

If's are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

BOOKBUCKS From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks, you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

UStore CAMPUS CENTER Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

HSCN 4 Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	Hartford	21	Gravel to Gravel
3	CBS/3	Springfield	22	NBC/22 Springfield
4	CBS/4	Boston	23	CNN Headline News
5	ABC/5	Boston	24	CNN
6	PBS/57	Springfield	25	CNN Fn
7	HSCN	Movie Ch.	26	CNN SI
8	UPN/20	Hartford	27	TBS
9	Weather Channel		28	BET
10	NBC/30 New Britain		29	College TV Network
11	Fox/61	Hartford	30	Univision
12	PBS/24	Hartford	31	Comedy Central
13	WOCH & HSCN		32	Cartoon Network
14	International		33	TV Land
15	UMass Academic TV		34	C-Span
16	WB/New Haven		35	ZDTV (Tentative)
17	Sundance		36	Bloomberg Financial Network
18	The Learning Channel		37	History Channel
19	UVC-TV19		38	HSCN Programming
20	ABC/40 Springfield

THURSDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MARCH 23, 2000

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (N		Brooklyn Bridge (N		Mystery! "Lady Audley's Secret" (In Stereo) (N			Being Served	Wait for God	This Old Hse.
WFSB	3	News (N	CBS News	Inside Edition	College Basketball: NCAA Tourn.					College Basketball: NCAA Tourn.
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	College Basketball: NCAA Tourn.					College Basketball: NCAA Tourn.
WCVB	5	News (N	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle (N	Whose Line?	Whose Line?	Who Wants to Be a Millionaire		You Can't Say That! Whatever	News (N	Friends (N	Nightline (N
WLVI	56	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends (N	Nanny (N	Popular (R) (In Stereo) (N		Charmed "The '70s Episode"		News	Friends (N	Nanny (N
WHDH	60	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (N	Friends (N	Daddio (N	Frasier (N	Battery Park	ER "Under Control" (In Stereo)	News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Blind Date	Real TV (R) (N	WWF Smackdown! (In Stereo) (N		News	Real TV (R) (N	ER "Under Control" (In Stereo)	Blind Date	Change-Heart
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Extra (N	Ent. Tonight	Friends (N	Daddio (N	Frasier (N	Battery Park	ER "Under Control" (In Stereo)	News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	11 Simpsons (N	Frasier (N	Seinfeld (N	Friends (N	American Comedy Awards (In Stereo) (N			News		Friends (N	Frasier (N
WWLP	22	News (N	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (N	Friends (N	Daddio (N	Frasier (N	Battery Park	ER "Under Control" (In Stereo)	News (N	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (N		This Old Hse.	Dra. on Call	Mystery! "Lady Audley's Secret" (In Stereo) (N		Jules at Eight	Charlie Rose (In Stereo) (N
WGGB	40	News (N	ABC News	Seinfeld (N	Frasier (N	Whose Line?	Whose Line?	Who Wants to Be a Millionaire		You Can't Say That! Whatever	News (N	Nightline (N
WSBK	38	Judge Judy (N	Judge Judy (N	Seinfeld (N	Frasier (N	WWF Smackdown! (In Stereo) (N				Star Trek: Voyager "Twisted"	Med Abt. You	Judge Mathis
WTBS	72	Roseanne (N	Roseanne (N	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	★★½ "The Gauntlet" (1977, Drama) Clint Eastwood, Sondra Locke.					★★½ "The Enforcer" (1976) Clint Eastwood.
A&E	45	L.A. Law		Law & Order "Switch" (N		Biography: Haley Mills.		Investigative Reports "Jovies" (N				Law & Order "Hot Pursuit" (N
CNN	24	23 Worldview (N	Moneyline Newshour (N		Crossfire (N	World Today (N		Larry King Live (N		Newsstand (N	Sports	Moneyline (R)
COM	20	Saturday Night Live (N		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	★★ "The Chase" (1994, Adventure) Charlie Sheen.					Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	69	Your New House (R)		Wild Discovery: Good, Bad		On the Inside: Zoo.		Science Mysteries (R)		Into the Unknown (R)	On the Inside: Zoo
ESPN	43	Sportscenter (N		Cheerleading		Dog Show	Figure Skating	European Championships		Baseball	Sportscenter (N
LIFE	62	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		"Fight for Justice: The Nancy Conn Story" (1995) Meric Hanner.				"Midwest Obsession" (1995, Suspense) Courtney Thorne-Smith.
MTV	53	Making-Video	Beat Suite	Glem-O-Rama Finals (R)		Making-Video	TRL (R) (In Stereo)		Tom Green (R)	Celebrity	Sensatess	Undressed	Loveline
NICK	59	All That	Catdog	Hey Arnold! (R)	Rugrats (R)	Catdog	Catdog	Brady Bunch	Bev. Hillbillies	All in Family	Jeffersons (N	I Love Lucy	Bewitched
SCIFI	66	Sliders "The Unstuck Man" (R)		★★★ "The Abyss" (1989, Science Fiction) Ed Harris, Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio.							★★★ "The Abyss" (1989, Science Fiction) Ed Harris,
TLC	67	28 Home Again	Home Again	Fugitive Son: Alex Kelly		Tornado! Hurricane! Flood! (R)				Race for the Poles (R)		Tornado! Hurricane! Flood! (R)
TNT	63	In the Heat of the Night (R)		Eff. Responsible Parties (R)		★★½ "Coal Miner's Daughter" (1980, Biography) Sissy Spacek, Tommy Lee Jones.						★★½ "The Spitfire Grill" (1996)
USA	65	Baywatch "Golden Girls" (R)		JAG "Soul Searching" (R)		Walker, Texas Ranger (R)		★★★ "Scent of a Woman" (1992, Drama) Al Pacino, Chris O'Donnell. (In Stereo) (R)
HBO	69	(5:00) ★½ "Hope Floats" (1998)		★★ "Silence" (1990, Drama) Bette Midler. (In Stereo) 'PG-13' (R)				★★ "Practical Magic" (1998) Sandra Bullock. (In Stereo) 'PG-13' (R)			Real Sex Xtra: Beat
MAX	70	(4:45) ★★½ "Wyatt Earp" (1994, Western) Kevin Costner. 'PG-13' (R)		★½ "Return of the Living Dead III" (1993) 'R'				★★ "U.S. Marshals" (1998, Suspense) Tommy Lee Jones. (In Stereo) 'PG-13' (R)
SHOW	68	★★ "Overnight Delivery" (1996, Comedy) Paul Rudd. 'PG-13' (R)		★★ "Stepmom" (1998, Drama) Julia Roberts. 'PG-13' (R)						★★½ "Star Trek: Insurrection" (1998) Patrick Stewart. 'PG' (R)

Adam and Eric By Ross Burach

Baldердash By Kevin Fagan

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

Spunk By Mike LaRiccia

Nena By Anna Faktorovich

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Dilbert By Scot Adams

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

Horoscopes

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – Someone is likely to respond to you today in equal measures of curiosity and restraint. It's up to you to make things possible.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – Take care you don't use others as stepping stones today. Be fair and straightforward in all your deals. Don't hide the truth.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – You may encounter a surprising conflict today when your own plans differ dramatically from the plans of a close friend.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – You're in the mood for anything that will heat you up – from the physically challenging to the emotionally fiery. Avoid obvious dangers such as toothless goats.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Concentrate on beginnings today – at work and at home. You can revitalize yourself and those around you; be sure your outlook remains positive.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Keep your sense of humor today. Virgo, and remember that a little teasing, while harmless, can be fun for all and educational for you. In addition, you should hang that kid in your dance class. He's ready to get naked.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – Pay attention to your appearance today, and try to participate how others will react to you in given situations. Do you know all the rules?

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – Scheduling may prove difficult today as you try to work in too many things in too restricted a span of time. Don't be so strict with yourself.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – You may have to pick up the pace today if you wish to come in ahead of schedule – and ahead of the competition.

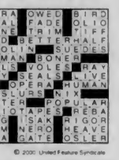
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – You may receive news of someone from your past, which inspires a great deal of admiration and envy. You may want a second chance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – You're likely to find yourself at cross-purposes today – not with anyone else, but with yourself. That dual nature is rearing its head again!

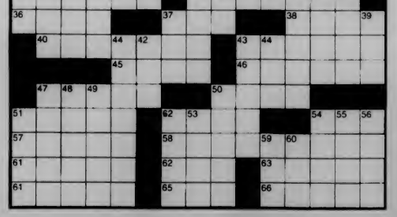
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – A special guest – whether his arrival is expected or a complete surprise – can point you in the right direction.

Quote of the Day

"Who's policing the police?"



–Gerry Golden



ACROSS
1 Flooring pieces
6 Chemist's workplace
9 Beauty's friend
14 Seize the throne
15 Concert
16 Different
17 Negotiated a deal
19 At which place?
20 Look at 21 Take a cab
22 Verdant
23 Easier said — done
25 Fuses metal
26 Cattle call, e.g.
29 Dock
31 Type of lizard?
32 Weathering, e.g.
36 Item that's often checked
37 Tooth on a wheel
38 "Sly — al Peking"
40 Ability
43 Music-buff's buy
45 City in Kansas
46 Warm and cozy
47 Moon's path
50 Con
51 Map
52 Inventor Sikorsky
54 Ooh's companion
57 Classical language
58 Unexpected winner
61 Peace goddess
62 Choose
63 Give a speech
64 Troublesome
65 Gypsy Rose —
66 Flower part

DOWN
1 Inner —
2 Bird's prelude to "old chap"
3 Bail
4 Work unit
5 Hot tub
6 Bolshevik founder
7 Ripened
8 Presage
9 Alley Rabitues
10 Ms. Merman
11 In the lead
12 Feudal peasants
13 Low card
18 Teed off
23 Lone Ranger's sidekick
24 Warm welcome
25 Court
26 RN's specialty
27 Chess piece
28 Chinese dollar
29 Cat noises
30 Assn
33 Perfect
34 Rowers' needs
35 No, to Ivan
37 Flintabous
39 Protein-rich bear
41 Singer Houston
42 Derby or pinbox
43 Long-legged bird
44 As well
47 Midwest airport
48 Prices
49 Edge
50 Strong point
51 Barrette
52 Adored one
53 Stare with the mouth open
54 What Hemlet smelled
55 Neck and Nora's dog
56 Loaf end
59 Move like a bunny
60 Mine's output

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

3-29-00 © 2000 United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Lunch

Reuben Sandwich

Pizza Casserole

Carrot-Onion Schine (vegitarian) (Berkshire & Worcestor only)

California Chili (vegan)

Dinner

Sicilian stuffed shells (vegetarian)

Apple-Ginger Pork Chops

Baked Teriyaki Tofu (vegan)

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Adam White
Photo Technician	Jaret Barr
Copy Editor	Bryan Smith
Production Supervisor	Lisa Metcalf
Production Staff	Dan McGuinness-Ross, Lovee Gorge

Hockey East takes on nation in wide-open NCAA field

Following weeks of speculation, the 12-team field for the 2000 NCAA hockey tournament was announced on Sunday afternoon.

Seven teams earned automatic bids into the tournament by virtue of either a regular season or conference tournament title. As a result, Maine, Michigan, Michigan State, Boston University, St. Lawrence, North Dakota and Wisconsin were only awaiting their opponents and site locations in the tournament.

Michael Kobylanski on College Hockey

The other five teams made their way into the field thanks to an at-large bid. Colgate, Boston College, New Hampshire, St. Cloud State and an upstart Niagara program closed out the brackets and are set to do battle with the rest of the nation's elite this weekend.

"We tried to make up the brackets so that teams from the same league wouldn't match up, especially in the first round," said Bill Wilkinson, the chairman of the NCAA's selection committee. "The way things are set up, we could have all [of the] four [major] leaguers represented at the Frozen Four. But it's also possible that Hockey East could have all four teams as well."

Two teams will advance from each regional to the Frozen Four. Providence, RI will host the national semifinals and finals during the weekend of April 6 and 8.

East Region – Albany, NY

No. 4 Colgate (24-8-2) vs. No. 5 Michigan (26-9-4)

Both teams will come into Saturday's matchup hungry for a victory following lackluster exits in the semifinals of their respective conference tournaments. The winner will move on to play No. 1 seeded Maine on Sunday.

Michigan missed an opportunity at earning of the top two seeds and a first-round bye when it fell to lowly Nebraska-Omaha in the Central Collegiate Hockey Association's post-season tournament. Colgate has played well for the majority of the season, but suffered a minor setback in a loss to Cornell in the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference tournament.

"Colgate is obviously a strong team, and we've had trouble with ECAC teams this season," said Michigan hockey coach Red Berenson in an interview with ESPN on Sunday. "We hope that the loss to Nebraska-Omaha motivates us. Things like that have happened to us before and we've bounced back. That's what we're going to have to do again this time."

This should be a close matchup between two teams with similar make-ups. Each club boasts a Hobey Baker Award finalist – the Red Raiders with forward Andy McDonald, the Wolverines with sophomore sensation Mike Comrie – but this game will likely come down to goaltending.

Colgate has one of the best netminders in the nation between the pipes in senior Shep Harder. Michigan sophomore Josh Blackburn has also played well this season, posting an 11-2-3 record.

The Red Raiders will also have a home-ice advantage of sorts since their campus in Hamilton, NY is about a two-hour drive from Albany. Nevertheless, this contest should be a battle that will be decided in the third period.

No. 3 Boston University (24-9-7) vs. No. 6 St. Cloud State (25-13-3)

The Terriers will be a hungry club when they hit the ice on Saturday to take on the Huskies, who play in the Western Collegiate Hockey Association. In their last outing in the Hockey East tournament semifinals, BU lost to Maine 4-2 – and the chance to earn the No. 1 seed in the East in the process.

"We're very happy to be in the East, staying a little closer to home," BU hockey coach Jack Parker said. "A lot of our success this year has been because of our juniors and seniors stepping up, plus our strong freshman class."

BU won the regular season title in Hockey East. St. Cloud State snuck into the draw thanks to a strong showing in its conference tournament. The Huskies have wins against national powers Wisconsin and North Dakota to their credit this year.

On paper, the Beantown school has the clear edge. They have arguably the best freshman in the nation in goaltender Rick DiPietro, plus a balanced scoring attack offensively. However, in a year where there have been lots of surprises across the nation, the Huskies might just be able to upend the Terriers and advance to Sunday's matchup against St. Lawrence.

Turn to HOCKEY, page 9

INTENSITY

Water polo butchers Brown

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

Keeping yourself afloat for the 28 minutes of relentless action that comprises a water polo match is a feat in itself. Venturing into the hostile home pool of the division powerhouse and doing it? Pure intensity.

UMass	14
Brown	2

No. 11 Massachusetts (14-5) used the opportunity of its second (and final) home game of the year to thump the Bears of Brown, 14-2, last night at Joseph R. Rogers, Jr. Pool.

"We talk about intensity all the time," UMass coach Dan McOsker said. "It's not about who we're playing; it's how we play. It doesn't even matter who the other team is."

After winning the opening swim-off, the Minutewomen took a few moments to get themselves in synch offensively. Senior All-American Katie Grogan didn't get off UMass' first shot on goal until the 5:26 mark, a slow motion push that glanced harmlessly off the left post.

Teammate Laurie Edwards atoned for the Maroon and White's offensive problems with a fantastic steal off Brown's subsequent transition, and fellow field prowler Kelly Chassy finished off the break the other way by blasting a skip shot through Brown keeper Alexa LaFaunce to open scoring.

"We had to make sure that the intensity was there from the beginning," freshman field player Lizzy Boyle said. "We know that we're a team that a lot of Eastern teams are looking to beat."

Brown wasted no time proving this, striking back behind a bullet from 2-meter Tori Barbata that UMass keeper Dana Sinkwich could only partially block.

It was at that point that the Minutewomen kicked it into high gear and seized control of the game. Co-captain Claudia Clement started the decisive run by cranking home a goal from the left wing at the 3:42 mark, and freshman Amy Black upped the ante less than two minutes later by capping another UMass transition with a breakaway score. Things didn't get any easier for Brown over the last 90 seconds of the first frame, as Clement and teammate Anne Dettloff socked home a pair of line drive shots to stake UMass to a 3-1 edge.

The Bears seemed to discover a little intensity in the opening moments of the second quarter, as 2-meter Meredith Hall powered through the UMass defense and clanked a shot off the left post. The ejection of Black at the 4:45 mark gave Brown yet another golden opportunity, and Hall this time struck paydirt to cut the home team's lead to 5-2.

The ship would be righted for UMass a mere minute later, however, as remarkable patience from Clement on a cross-pool pass set up Edwards for an easy score. The Maroon and White faithful in attendance had to know that scoring machine Grogan wouldn't stay silent for long; the California golden girl proved them right by rifling home a blur of a skip shot with 2:57 to play before halftime.

Edwards would pay Clement back for her prior assist just before halftime, looping the ball cleanly to the Guam native who proceeded to smoke LaFaunce for her third goal of the half. Thanks to the dizzying four-goal barrage put up by McOsker's crew over a mere four minutes, the Minutewomen climbed from the pool at the halftime buzzer with an 8-2 edge.

The third period proved somewhat unkind to the home crew, as UMass' play around the middle of the pool was marred by sloppy transition passing and a handful of unforced turnovers. Minutewoman Megan Perry proved that cooler heads prevail, cleaning up an errant entry pass and sneaking a shot under LaFaunce's arm to pad the Maroon and White cushion to seven goals.

Brown challenged yet again with an aggressive transition sequence, but a botched shot left the ball in Sinkwich's capable hands as her teammates broke fiercely back down toward the Bear end. The sophomore sensation threw a perfect strike over the heads of the bewildered Bears to junior field star Sarah Newell, who cranked ahead of the pack and easily beat LaFaunce for UMass' tenth tally.

There didn't appear to be much fight left in the Bears over the fourth quarter, as sloppy defense by Brown 2-meters Hall and Julie LaMont set up a pair of 4-meter penalty shots for the home team. UMass field player Megan Thompson (who also backs up Sinkwich in the net) tucked home the first of the freebies at the 3:47 mark, and first-year standout Lizzy Boyle easily converted the second only a minute later to extend UMass' lead to 10 at 12-2. Senior Marci Hupp incited a cheer from the home crowd with a monster block on Brown's Julie Williams on the Bears' only decent offensive set of the quarter. Boyle would add another goal, this one on a breakaway, with 2:09 left in the contest. Dettloff put an exclamation point on yet another transition, and the game itself, with a final goal to close out scoring at 14-2.

"Our motivation right now is another Eastern Championship. We just stayed focused and concentrated on certain things we've been working on in practice," Hupp said. "The intensity was definitely there for us tonight."

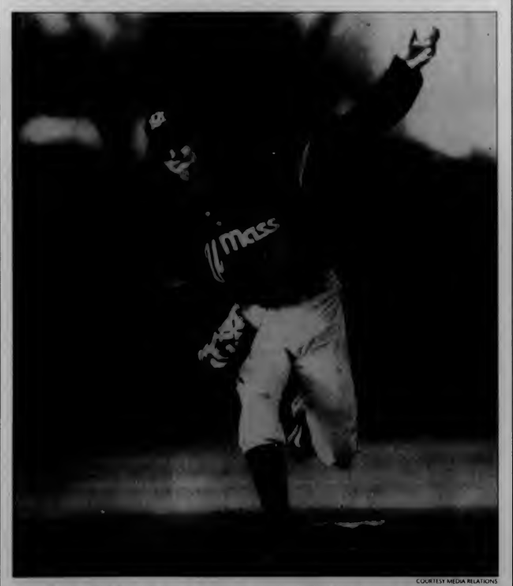
JARET BARR/ COLLEGIAN

Senior Katie Grogan shoots on goal during the first quarter of UMass' 14-2 drubbing of visiting Brown in water polo action last night. Grogan notched her team-leading 38th goal in the win.

Szado zooms by Crusaders

By Matthew Despres
Collegian Staff

What a difference a day makes.



Just 24 hours after going down to the wire with Quinnipiac College and winning on a wild pitch, the Massachusetts baseball team allowed itself some breathing room yesterday, jumping out to an early lead and riding the arm of junior pitcher Craig Szado to a 6-1 victory over the Holy Cross Crusaders. The win leveled the Minutemen's record at 6-6 and marked the team's sixth consecutive victory, a streak that began on March 14 against La Salle. Despite the relatively smooth ride UMass had against the Crusaders (4-7), head coach Mike Stone saw room for improvement in the victory.

"We played pretty well except we didn't score enough runs," Stone said. "We're going to face better teams. Six runs is okay, but I thought we should have had more."

Through the first three innings, it looked like six runs would be just the tip of the iceberg in an avalanche of UMass offense. Catcher Chris Morgan went to work quickly after centerfielder Nick Gorneault reached base on a hit batsmen. Morgan knocked a double into center with a strong swing, sending Gorneault home and putting the Minutemen up 1-0. Morgan was solid behind the plate as well, catching two runners on the base paths. After a base hit by designated hitter Kevin O'Connell, shortstop Aaron Senez stepped up with two outs and ripped a double that cleared the bases and gave UMass a 3-0 cushion.

The third inning brought more of the same for Holy Cross pitcher Ryan Kenny, who could do little to get around the persistent Minuteman offense. Left fielder Connell Clark hit a two-run homer, his first of the season, which helped stake the Minutemen to a 6-0 lead. Kenny was knocked around for eight hits in the first three

Turn to BASEBALL, Page 8

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Craig Szado yielded three hits through six innings yesterday, leading the Minutemen to their sixth straight victory, a 6-1 decision over Holy Cross.

Sun brings out players and pens in Florida

Jen Cormier on MLB Spring Training

FORT MYERS, FL – "Nomar... NOMAR!"

It is two hours before game time at City of Palms Park as a stone-faced Nomar Garciaparra trots down the dugout steps without acknowledging the fans shouting his name. The crowd that has gathered around the dugout emits a collective sigh.

Welcome to Autograph Seeking 101, spring training style.

In Fort Myers, the quest for autographs is a certified event, one that gives a unique flavor to Boston Red Sox spring training. The atmosphere is relaxed, the games don't count, the players are laid back and the fans are true hardball worshippers that have made the trek from New England. And before every game, the signature seekers congregate, transforming mundane pre-game workouts into a gathering of the most devoted and passionate members of Red Sox Nation.

The group of hopefuls is quite the eclectic bunch. There are the wide-eyed children, adorned head to toe in Sox garb, clutching fistfuls of baseball cards and pens. There are the professional autograph collectors, armed with boxes of baseballs and Sharpies. There are the old-timers, waving game programs and pens in the air, shouting out players' names with a liveliness and vigour that one would find.

After the players finish their preliminary stretches and leave the field, the autograph seekers stand at ease, knowing that it will be several minutes before their beloved Sox return for infield practice. There is a momentary lull in activity, until a bellowing middle-aged woman is heard throughout the crowd.

"Carl Everett's going to take us to the World Series," a woman proclaimed, referring to the newly acquired Sox outfielder.

The ice has been broken. Soon, everyone begins introducing himself, chatting about the Sox' chances with the blind optimism that only can be found in Fenway fanatics.

One elderly man tells the crowd that he told his grandson that he would try to get Garciaparra's autograph. "But then he told everyone at school," the man fretted sadly, "that Grampy promised he would get Nomar to sign."

Another man boasts that he has over 200 autographs, including Ted Williams. A woman clutches a poster-sized glossy photo of Fenway Park, hoping to get it autographed by the players for her father's 75th birthday. Another woman shows everyone a children's picture book about the Red Sox, explaining that she wants to get it autographed in order to auction it off and raise money for the Boys and Girls Club of Arlington.

The young boys are just beginning to grow antsy when a head pops up from the dugout. It is the legendary Johnny Pesky, who works with the Sox during spring training every year.

The crowd is galvanized as the old-timers flock to Pesky, who jumps at the chance to talk baseball with them. Parents and grandparents begin to recount tales of the estimable player to their children. Snatches of various animated conversations fill the air.

"And they named it Pesky's Pole because –"

"– played with Ted Williams in the '46 Series..."

"– and Pesky held the ball?"

No sooner does Pesky disappear back into the dugout than outfielder Trot Nixon appears. A flock of teenage girls cries in unison, "We love you Trot!" Nixon makes the rounds, scribbling furiously on outstretched programs, balls and cards. Soon, others appear and follow suit – Brian Daubach, Marty Cordova and other lesser-known players. The players are friendly and outgoing. Unfettered from the pressures of the regular season, they are eager to interact with their fans, chatting as though they were old friends.

Some of the older fans who aren't familiar with the newer players ask the children questions. It is quite the sentimental sight – the old and young swapping stories about America's timeless pastime. The Red Sox serve as a true generation linker as children rattle off Nomar's batting average and Pedro's ERA, while the older fans weave tales of hardball lore.

While the players go through their infield drills and take batting practice, the crowd's eyes follow Garciaparra as he mechanically performs his pre-game rituals. When he jogs back towards the dugout, the chorus resumes without missing a beat – "Nomar! Nomar!"

This time, the sought-after shortstop appeases the hungry fans, but signs only a small handful of autographs before returning to the field. The crowd once again deflates with a unanimous sigh of disappointment. It may be an exhibition game, but Nomar is Nomar, and he has his game face on. The fans reassure themselves that he will sign more autographs after the game.

By this time, the not-so-devoted fans have begun to trickle into the park. The PA announcer clears his throat, welcomes the growing crowds and begins to announce the starting lineup. With much reluctance, the

Turn to TRAINING, Page 8

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Volume CVI Issue 57 | Friday, March 24, 2000

SGA, GSS wage war over SLSO

Groups back different legal services funding

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

Jon Zibbell, the Executive Officer of the Graduate Student Senate, disagreed with Student Government Association contentions that the GSS was "slacking" in their responsibilities to help fund the Student Legal Services Office (SLSO).

Chairman of the SGA Ways and Means Committee Amy Pellegrino said at Wednesday night's meeting that the SGA could not "continue to increase our own funding to pick up the graduate slack," and wrote a motion that was passed by a voice vote. The motion would seek to create a quota system for SLSO, thus only allowing graduate students to get the percentage of the SLSO time that they pay for.

"We've covered them for ten years, and I'm not covering their butts anymore," Pellegrino said. And Pellegrino's anti-GSS wasn't the only negative sentiment. Jeff Howe described the usually reserved Senate Speaker Mikale Billard's anti-Graduate Student Senate diatribe as "unprecedented."

Billard said that the GSS "makes me sick," described them as "clowns," later warned himself, and then jokingly threw himself out for swearing during his statements.

The budget passed by the GSS contained a cut for the SLSO – one that would deny $35,000 of the $80,000 that the legal organization had expected.

Zibbell explained that GSS chose to fund SLSO at only $45,000 instead of the full $80,000, because previous funding for the legal organization had come at a cost of close to 34 percent of the total GSS budget.

"If [Chuck DiMare [director of Student Legal Services Organization] wants $80,000, that's one third of our present budget. Our budget is $275,000," Zibbell said. "The 75 percent of the SLSO budget that the SGA has been paying for is equivalent to fourteen percent of their total budget."

Zibbell went on to say that there is an agreement between the two organizations to fund the SLSO. He said the GSS and the SGA, every year, decide what the budget of the SLSO should be.

"People before my time got locked into funding 25 percent of the SLSO budget, so whatever we decided the budget should be, that's what we agreed to pay," Zibbell said. "But we've never been able to fully meet that 25 percent. The closest we've ever gotten is 24 percent last year."

He said that the SGA has been funding the difference, as well as their 75 percent, and that has lead to the way to the framing of the "GSS slacking."

"Amy Pellegrino and the whole SGA budget crew have framed it that way," Zibbell said. "They've never articulated that this is our 25 percent. Funding of the SLSO budget has been 34 percent of our total budget, while they're only paying 14 percent of theirs."

He said that GSS money continually remains the same because their money comes from student fees, so while the SLSO budget goes up, Zibbell said he "couldn't blame them for wanting to expand." He was miffed that by being locked into their increasing budget, the GSS would continually have to pay more to the SLSO.

Instead, Zibbell proposed that the GSS give $45,000, or 16 percent of the GSS budget, and that the SGA give the same sixteen percent of their budget, $270,000, to the SLSO. DiMare, according to Zibbell, asked for $325,000 this year, the exact amount provided in Zibbell's idea.

"They're nowhere close, percentage wise, to the amount of money that we're paying," Zibbell said. "We propose that each organization give a percentage of our budgets to the SLSO."

He added that one of the problems between the two representative bodies is the way they are viewing the funding. The SGA uses, as Zibbell put it, a consumer model, "where as we both want to use equal percentages of our budget."

Zibbell also defended the GSS against attacks that they no longer care about SLSO.

"The GSS is committed to legal services. We're going to work on other ways to get the SLSO more money so they can hire a fourth attourney," Zibbell said. "We are pro-legal services. We are asking the SGA to come up with an equal percentage, while we simultaneously begin to push for funding increases through grant writing and the UMass of the Chancellor.

However, anti-GSS sentiment remained strong amongst SGA Senators, including Central Area Senator at Large Ken Campbell, who described the GSS vote to cut back funding as something that made him sick.

"It made me physically ill. Just to watch them assume that we are a money tree and we can go and get funding from our constituents just because the graduate students won't foot the bill."

Campbell said that if the SGA did what the GSS was asking of them, funding for other SGA initiatives would be hurt, including ALANA, RSO Budgets, and the Craft Center.

"This decision is hurtful to everybody," Campbell said. "Amy's idea is really good. If they only pay a certain percentage, they only get a certain percentage."

According to Pellegrino, a motion that Zibbell could not comment on as of press time, her motion would go to the Student Advisory Committee, a group that includes five SGA members, three GSS representatives, a faculty representative and an administrator.

"That's where the SAC gets together the SGA and GSS to solve problems like this," Pellegrino said. "I think the motion will pass, and graduate students won't like it, but when a group has to confront responsibility, no one really likes to."

However, the time frame for an agreement remains. The next meeting of the SAC isn't until mid-April, so some think that it is possible that an amount as last year. He explained that the admissions department hopes to mail out all letters to potential students by April 1.

"Our goal is to bring in a class of around 3,900 students," he said. "We hope to have all of the admissions done before we send out the financial aid."

Chancellor David K. Scott also made comments during the meeting about the necessity for special attention to be paid to the University by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. He explained that rather than focusing all energy and attention towards debating the budget cuts that faculty members should appeal to the state for more funding to the University.

"We need to create a movement in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to get them [the state] to see what is at stake here," he said. "It will be slow, patient, hard work but if you build it ten at a time then you will have a movement."

A representative of the Massachusetts Society of Professors made similar comments about the issue dealing with the potential cuts. She explained that the group was advocating both for more money to be allotted to the University and for infrastructure funds to be taken out of the operating budget. She advocated that students, faculty and staff lobby the state for more funds as well.

"We will be lobbying every Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday in April as well as through May," she said. "We will be lobbying until the budget situation is resolved."

JARET BARR/ COLLEGIAN

The Graduate Student Senate voted on its annual student budget last Wednesday.

New department discussed among budget cut talks

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

The elimination of the Consumer Studies Department and the creation of a new Astronomy Department were both discussed in great detail at yesterday's faculty senate meeting.

Opposition posed by the faculty senate about the elimination of the Consumer Studies Department was discussed at the opening of the meeting.

Interim secretary of the faculty senate Joseph Larson commented that the senate had just recently received the letter from the Provost stating that the potential elimination of the department would soon be reviewed.

"We have strongly suggested that the Dean have this review document in the hands of the Provost by the 31st," he said.

Larson went on to answer questions from the faculty regarding the effectiveness of these new attempts, and to address concerns about the suggestion to close off enrollment to the major without faculty consent.

"If the department's enrollment had not been closed, then the discussions that we have entered into and will enter into would make a great deal of sense," he said. "The rules committee has formally asked the Provost to reconsider the decision."

The other departmental issue discussed during the meeting was the creation of a separate department for the Astronomy program. Currently, the program is housed under the Department of Physics and Astronomy. Some senators in attendance expressed concern about the relative cost of funding this new department in light of the fact that the Consumer Studies Department was facing threats of elimination. Physics and Astronomy Department head John Donoghue alleviated the concerns by explaining that the new department would not need any additional funding.

"I can assure you that our new budget is going to be considerably less than it was last year," he said.

Another issue that was also tackled during the meeting was the progress being made on the applications for new students for the class of 2004. Vice Chancellor of Student Affairs Javier Cevallos said that the University, to date, has received about 19,000 applications from new student, roughly the same amount as last year. He explained that the admissions department hopes to mail out all letters to potential students by April 1.

"Our goal is to bring in a class of around 3,900 students," he said. "We hope to have all of the admissions done before we send out the financial aid."

Chancellor David K. Scott also made comments during the meeting about the necessity for special attention to be paid to the University by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. He explained that rather than focusing all energy and attention towards debating the budget cuts that faculty members should appeal to the state for more funding to the University.

"We need to create a movement in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to get them [the state] to see what is at stake here," he said "It will be slow, patient, hard work but if you build it ten at a time then you will have a movement."

A representative of the Massachusetts Society of Professors made similar comments about the issue dealing with the potential cuts. She explained that the group was advocating both for more money to be allotted to the University and for infrastructure funds to be taken out of the operating budget. She advocated that students, faculty and staff lobby the state for more funds as well.

"We will be lobbying every Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday in April as well as through May," she said. "We will be lobbying until the budget situation is resolved."

New candidates enter fray

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

With the Student Government Association elections entering its second and final day, two more candidates have entered the elections. Gabriel Tavarez is running for SGA President and Malcolm Beckwith is running for Trustee.

Tavarez, a sophomore majoring in History, and Beckwith, a sophomore majoring in Economics and STPEC, both came together to run a write-in campaign after being asked by various Registered Student Organizations on campus.

"We hadn't been thinking about this earlier this year. We didn't really want to be involved," Tavarez said, while Beckwith said that "we thought there would be students who could represent all students, but it doesn't appear that way."

Beckwith said that he wanted to represent the campus and "deal with things on this campus that haven't been dealt with by the SGA."

Tavarez said "a lot of people have all the issues down in the Senate, they can say it, but they have no substance. We need a proactive senate, a senate that educates their constituents. If we made 2000 kids aware of issues on this campus, majors wouldn't be getting cut if kids were organized, if parents spoke out and kids were educated, this stuff wouldn't be happening."

Beckwith said that an educated student body would participate in if they knew what was going on.

"The administration knows only three to five percent of students vote, they don't think the SGA has campus support, so it's hard to take them seriously," Beckwith said.

Tavarez felt that he would be able to reach out to the campus community through, among other roads, RSOs.

"I know everybody, I want to get everybody involved, any time I can talk about chancellor initiatives and budget cuts, the Commonwealth College's attempt to become an elitist institution," Tavarez said. "We all do a lot of things on this campus. Wouldn't it be great to enjoy the campus instead of working all the time?"

They felt that their campaign was strong because of the RSOs that contacted them asking them to run, including HASA, AASA, ASA, the Radical Student Union, but also said that fraternities and sororities, SGA senators and the ALANA Caucus had come to them.

Beckwith wanted people in office who would try to help people, not, as he put it, waste time with little things.

"Like ATMs and MTV's that we don't have time to watch, we need people to address important issues that deal with everyday campus life," Tavarez said.

Both candidates felt that if they didn't win this year, they were going to continue to keeping doing what they have been doing on campus. They said that RSO's are important, as was communication, participation and education.

Tavarez said that the more people knew, they more they would form an opinion, and that opinions being formed might lead to campus involvement.

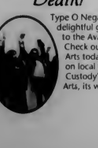
CAITLIN WINKWORTH/ COLLEGIAN

Peace

The Leverett Peace Pagoda is a popular place for relaxation and meditation.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 60 LOW: 28	HIGH: 61 LOW: 39	HIGH: 62 LOW: 36



Today in business

Find out why you will soon be spending more time on Route 9

PAGE 4

Snakes, Darkness, and Death!

Type O Negative brought a delightful goth-metal show to the Avalon this week. Check out the review in Arts today. And read up on local band Joint Custody's latest release. Arts, its what's for dinner.

PAGE 6

Little Red-Haired Girl

Rebecca Minaker hopes her Maroon and White squad can break into the win column this weekend in a collision with Syracuse.

PAGE 10

Arts & Living 6
Comics 9
Crossword 9
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 10

ON THE INTERNET

www.dailycollegian.com

Campus Perspectives

Compiled by Andrea M. Peers

Who are you going vote for in the SGA elections and why?

"I haven't actually done any research on it yet, but I heard something about the Green Party which seemed to have different views than the usual candidates."

Kristina Windt Psychology
Senior

"I think Seth and Jeff. They have done a good job so far so I figured they'll continue their good work on campus."

Lenny Joseph
Business Finance
Sophomore

"I want to vote for the underdogs. Foley looks like Spicoli from Fast Times at Ridgemont High. It's a cool movie, plus they have actually raised environmental and ethnicity issues."

Andrew Allegro Journalism
Junior

"Whoever was in favor of the six extra beers in the dorms, I think it was Jeff and Seth. I don't really know what else they are pushing for though, other than beer."

Scott Robbins
Communications
Senior

"I'm not really sure yet. I haven't really been following it at all."

Annie Lee
Nutrition
Senior

"I guess I would have to say the current SGA leaders. They did a great job of promoting awareness during the rapes on campus. I think they would be a good choice."

Leighanne Porter
Communication Disorders
Senior

Financial Aid just got easier for students

By Virginia Avedisian
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts president William M. Bulger announced on March 14 that the University had produced two new tools designed to give students and their families a greater understanding of the financial aid opportunities available to them.

Bulger unveiled the University's new financial aid web site, www.massachusetts.edu/scholarships, and a companion brochure titled "Financing Your Undergraduate Education."

Both initiatives were announced during the University's "Access for Excellence" conference, held in Lowell. The event attracted 300 high school guidance counselors.

Commenting on the initiatives Bulger said, "Student charges at the University of Massachusetts are a fraction of what they would be at comparable private institutions, thanks to the Commonwealth's support. Even so, many prospective students and their families still have financial concerns. Mindful of that, we have designed a web site and a brochure that will acquaint people with the full range of financial options."

The University's new web site will match the interests, needs and skills of students at the undergraduate and graduate levels with University scholarship opportunities. The brochure provides information to students about a wide range of need-based and merit-based financial aid options within the five campus University of Massachusetts system, and at the state and federal levels. Using a search form, those accessing the system can narrow their search by using criteria such as one particular campus, undergraduate or graduate scholarships, or search by keyword.

The announcements came just weeks after the University froze tuition and fee costs for academic year 2000-2001, making this the fifth year in a row the University has cut or frozen student charges. In-state undergraduate students will pay an average of $4,680 in tuition and mandatory fees next year.

William Wright, Director of Public Information for the Office of the President endorsed the idea saying, "This website provides a location where students can see their actual financial opportunities, considering that UMass is a 'great buy' compared to the cost of many private institutions. This makes it easier for prospective students to see the wide range of assistance that is available to them."

Wright concluded, "Recognizing that many students end up applying to UMass online, it is only reasonable to have this information available to everyone. It is definitely a plus to have the opportunity to attend UMass."

Innovative professor on law

By Virginia Avedisian
Collegian Staff

On Friday, March 24 from 12:30 to 2 p.m. in the Campus Center 162-75, Professor Frank E. Deale from the CUNY School of Law will be giving a presentation called "Social Activism and the Law: Legal Careers that Make a Difference." This presentation portrays how the law can be used for public interest purposes, and how students can pursue a successful career in the legal profession.

Deale was the Legal Director of the Center for Constitutional Rights in New York City for fourteen years before joining the faculty at CUNY (City University of New York) School of Law. The CUNY Law School prides itself on teaching students how law can serve the public interest, and is one of the most distinguished Universities in the country for social activism in law.

"Law in the Service of Human Needs" is the CUNY Law School's motto and accordingly, its goal is to teach students to be lawyers who will use their skills to serve the public interest. The school has received national recognition for its innovative curriculum, the diversity of its student body and faculty, and for its clinical program. It has also been ranked among the top ten in the country for the last six years. The school's program allows its students to fulfill their aspirations for a legal career that will express their commitment to justice, equality and fairness.

For his work on cases of public significance, Deale has won the Carol King Award of National Lawyers Guild Immigration Project, the Jack Wasserman Memorial Award from the America Immigration Lawyer Association. He has also received a Certificate of Honor from the City and County Board of Supervisors of San Francisco and a Certificate of Appreciation from the Standing Rock Sioux Tribe. In 1995, he received the Distinguished Teaching Award from the City University of New York Law School.

One student said, "We are privileged to have such a wonderful opportunity to experience and interact with such an acclaimed scholar within the law profession."

Professor Judith Holmes, the pre-law advisor for UMass, stated, "many citizens view lawyers in the sense that they are simply people that make a lot of money, work for corporations and do not have a great sense of morals themselves."

News Meeting Sunday 3pm

UMASS The Index Yearbook
ATTENTION!!!
CLASS OF 2000
ABSOLUTE LAST CHANCE
FOR SENIOR PORTRAITS
MARCH 27TH-31ST
Make your appointment now by calling
1-800-OUR-YEAR or log on to www.ouryear.com
School Access #147
(You need to know the access number when you make the appointment)
Order Your 2000 Yearbook
ONLY $50.00
Log on to www.walsworth.com or
Call 1-800-929-1503
(Service Charge of $2.95 for orders placed by phone)
DAVOR PHOTOGRAPHY
Walsworth Publishing Company

FEATURED ITEMS THIS WEEK

This week
Charles River
Nylon Wind
Jacket
Was $54.99
$39.99
Available in navy or maroon

Charles River
Nylon Wind
Pants
Was $39.99
$24.99
Available in navy or maroon

Collegiate Casuals
UMass Clothing for Everyone
M-Th 8:30-6 Fri. 8:30-5
Sat. 11 to 4
(413) 545 - 2619
The University Store
Not like a mall... Better.

Flies show mapping genome close

By Robert Lee Holtz
Los Angeles Times

Heralding a new era in the effort to understand heredity, researchers Friday will publish the full genetic inheritance of the most important laboratory tool for the study of the way genes combine to form all living things - the fruit fly.

For a century, the humble creature whose scientific name is Drosophila has been the subject of sustained scrutiny by scientists seeking to understand the unity of life. In the constricted genetic alphabet of the fly, researchers have discovered master keys of physical development and aging. In other fly genes, they have found glimmers of the anatomy of instinct and behavior.

By analyzing the complete biochemical text of the Drosophila genetic code, scientists at the University of California, Berkeley, Baylor University and other universities working with the Maryland company Celera Genomics have achieved a milestone that is a prelude to the completion of the human genome later this year, several experts said.

"This is a remarkable achievement ... because of the fruit fly's pivotal role in research, ranging from aging and cancer to learning and memory," said Dr. Francis Collins, director of the National Human Genome Research Institute, which funded some of the work.

The fruit fly is the largest and most complex animal yet to have its genes sequenced. It is also the first organism with a central nervous system to be sequenced.

The normal fruit fly has five chromosomes containing 125 million chemical "base pairs" that are the interlocking building blocks of genes. For decades, scientists have used this mite as a living test tube, deliberately breeding mutant flies to see the way genetic variations affect development and behavior.

Among the 13,600 genes that make up the instruction set for a fly, the researchers identified hundreds of genes apparently shared by almost all complex life forms, including human beings, and also discovered hundreds of new genes.

"To an extent that nobody anticipated or imagined, the mechanisms in the fly are relevant to the same processes in humans," said geneticist Thomas Kornberg at the University of California, San Francisco, who called the Drosophila genetic sequence a "Rosetta stone" for the human genome. The sequencing itself vindicated a controversial new technology that is central to the effort to analyze the estimated 140,000 genes of humankind. The technique, called shotgun sequencing, can read the complete biochemical text of gene sequences much faster than anyone would have guessed when the human genome project was first proposed more than a decade ago.

The success of the sequencing effort owes as much to advanced computing techniques as molecular biology. Using the shotgun technique, the chemical genome is broken into myriad tiny random fragments, sorted and then reassembled using proprietary computer formulas running on one of the world's largest supercomputing facilities.

"Think of trying to do a 3.2 million-piece jigsaw puzzle," said Gene Myers, Celera's vice president of informatics research who spearheaded the computer effort. "It is a daunting computation, and the human genome is 30 times that big." Using the same technique, Celera has sequenced almost 90 percent of the human genome, company executives said, and a rough draft of the entire genome may be available later this spring.

Scientists so far have determined the complete biochemical sequence of just one of the 23 human chromosomes, although researchers in recent years have identified many individual human genes. The first chromosome to be finished was sequenced by the federal genome research institute, coordinated by the National Institutes of Health.

Although the Drosophila project was a joint effort of public and private gene researchers, the collaborators have fallen out over bitter disputes about who should own the human genome data and how much of it should be freely available.

Worried that private companies may seek monopoly rights over basic genetic information, Bruce Alberts, president of the U.S. National Academy of Sciences, and Sir Aaron Klug, president of the Royal Society of London, issued a joint statement Thursday urging that "the human genome itself must be freely available to all mankind."

The Drosophila genome made public in Friday's issue of the journal Science "is so exciting because it is a prelude to having the human genome figured out," said Nobel laureate Edward Lewis, who studies fruit fly genetics.

Indeed, scientists have been surprised at how much of what they have discovered in the genes of the fruit fly is duplicated in human beings. When researchers at Berkeley and Celera compared Drosophila's genes with 289 known human disease genes, they found the fly shares 177 of them, covering a wide range of diseases.

"The fact that the majority of genes known to cause human disease have well-conserved counterparts in the fly argues that the information uncovered in Drosophila will have direct relevance to human health," said Gerald M. Rubin at Berkeley. Rubin was a senior scientist in the sequencing effort.

Richard G. Walker and his colleagues at the University of California, San Diego, for example, will announce Friday that they have discovered a Drosophila gene that, when altered, leaves the flies unable to sense and hear the world around them. The researchers said the mutant gene was a molecular clue to the sense of touch in humans and other complex organisms, as well as the ways they hear and maintain their balance.

COURTESY USA METRO

Want a ride?

This car has waited out it life in Yellow lot, a fate that might affect all our cars

EATON AMSWORTH/ COLLEGIAN

Dr. Robert M. Sapolsky gave a lecture in Wright Auditorium at Smith College yesterday entitled, "Why Zebras Don't Get Ulcers". Dr. Sapolsky is a professor of Biological Sciences at Stanford University and the author of "Why Zebras Don't Get Ulcers".

The story run on the front page of the Daily Collegian on Wednesday, March 21 entitled "UMass Police Add Two More Campus Assaults" ran by mistake after being previously run last month. The correct story ran yesterday and was entitled "Court Indicts Three in Rapes." The Collegian apologizes for the error.

MERCYhouse
A church for the next Generation
Sunday nights @ 6pm in the Jones Library just west of the Amherst town center (43 Amity St.)
WWW KNOWMERCY ORG

Sands Brothers

Join us and work @ the speed of change.

Sands Brothers is a different kind of New York Stock Exchange firm. We work as financial advisors to many of America's new-breed of high tech innovators. We offer the high-performance-investment guidance they seek, along with outstanding trade execution and portfolio management.

We are seeking individuals with the ability to succeed in financial sales. You will work in an energy charged atmosphere surrounded by performance-driven professionals and supported by market intelligence and research. You will help executives in dynamic high-tech organizations pursue their goal of turning company options and stock to diversified balanced portfolios.

You don't need to be a stock market expert because we will train you, using our proven techniques. You do need an unrelenting work ethic, a mind for numbers, the sensibility to advise highly successful clients, and ability to communicate the exciting potential of innovative companies.

We currently have opportunities at Sands Brothers offices in Midtown Manhattan (New York City) and the financial district of San Francisco.

ALL APPLICANTS
ALL MAJORS WELCOME!!
INTER... - BOARD MARCH
ISENBE... MANAGEMENT
UNDER... RECRUITMENT OFFICE
Janice ... ...ce the Director
Telep... ...E-Mail: jdagilus@so...
Fa... ...T OUR WEBSITE ...ros.com

DO YOU WANT A JOB THAT MATTERS?

B... ...n "advertising account executive." The Daily Collegian is looking for outgoing, motivated students ... in earning money while gaining experience!

Fill out an application and bring a resume to 113 Campus Center Basement attn: Christine Carroll by March 24th

ANTHONY'S
HI-NRG ADULT ENTERTAINMENT & MORE!
MARCH 26
ANTHONY'S
ALL-MALE
REVUE

Now Hiring Male Dancer Entertainers to Join Our Team!! NO EXPERIENCE NECESSARY Call Scott Today at 413 533 8080
500 New Ludlow Rd. - South Hadley, MA
CLUBline 413/532-3621
HOTline 413/538-6969
Visit Us At — www.anthonys.net

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Our Opinion
Time to vote

It's time to do something.

Yes, you've had a long day. You just want to go into your local Dining Common with your friends, grab whatever the day's food might be, head back to your dorm room, and relax. You don't want to take any time out of your schedule to do deal with those people sitting at the little folding table by the door.

You should probably think again.

Elections for President, Trustee and local area governments are ending today. Yesterday and today will decide who is in charge of the Student Government Association, the representative body for the students of UMass. These past days will choose the people who will be integral in distributing the well-over a million dollars allocated to student groups. They will elect the leaders who will be in charge of representing your interests. These two days will be, to use the editorial art of understatement, important.

Will it be Avakian and Howe? Sayani and Eltringham? Foley and Zetye? That is where you come in. You've seen the posters around campus. You may have been to the debates. You may have seen the coverage right here in the Collegian. Perhaps you know one of the candidates personally, have had a class with them, attended SGA meetings where they have made their opinions know. The personalities and platforms of the candidates, the hard facts of this election have been made available to you. Now is the time to apply that information.

The simple fact is that it is so very easy to participate in these elections. Are you on the mean plan? The polls are open from 11-2 and 4-7 in every DC on campus. Stop and take the few minutes to fill out the ballot when you go have your lunch or dinner. The food isn't going anywhere – you've got plenty of time to decide the future of your student representation on this campus before you go eat. Are you not on the meal plan? Voting will also be held during those hours in the Campus Center Concourse. Stop by between your classes, grab some coffee from the Bluewall, grab a Collegian from the stack, and above all make a movement toward the election table and vote. It doesn't take all that much effort.

After today it will all be over. The ballots will be done, counted, and a winner announced. The voice of the students will have been heard. No, wait, just a minute, let's fix that... the voice of the students who voted will have been heard. They will have chosen a President, Trustee and local area governments to suit their needs, represent their interests, and run the campus in a way that they deem acceptable.

Will you be included among those who have made a difference on this campus? Perhaps. No one can force you to do anything, but this system is in place for a reason – to give you a voice. It's your decision to exercise it.

We at the Collegian believe that it is the responsibility of every student at the University of Massachusetts to vote in the SGA and area government elections. Make yourself heard.

Millionaire lives are rich with problems

Jesse Ammerman

(U-WIRE) IOWA CITY, Iowa – It is an affliction that has swept across the nation, striking hardest in large metropolitan areas such as Seattle, New York and Los Angeles. Most disturbing about the epidemic is that while its cause has been pinpointed, there is no cure in sight.

Sudden Wealth Syndrome is in its fledgling stages, but it has run roughshod through the U.S. population. The psychologists who discovered the disease say its symptoms include senses of isolation, uncertainty and imbalance that arise soon after one receives unexpected riches.

As the bull market continues to roar, and high-tech industries breed new millionaires, this ailment has grown increasingly widespread. According to the Los Angeles Times, the number of millionaire households has risen to approximately 4.1 million. Meanwhile, the number of deca-millionaires – those with more than $10 million in assets – has seen a five-fold increase since 1983.

Earnings have also increased for big-city psychologists, who have dealt with steadily rising numbers of Sudden Wealth Syndrome victims. "It's a crisis of dislocation," said David Wellisch, a professor of psychiatry at the UCLA medical school. The disorder, Wellisch noted, springs from the difficulty of adjusting from one lifestyle to another. And what a horrific crisis that must be. As a minimum wage-earner with no assets or stocks to speak of, I can only imagine the trauma that is associated with a sudden rise to monumental wealth. Instead of figuring out how to pay the phone bill and still afford groceries as lucky college students like ourselves do, the multi-millionaire is faced with emotional struggles of epic proportions.

"According to the L.A. Times, an estimated $41 trillion to $136 trillion in inheritance money is predicted to change hands over the next 50 years, spelling certain emotional doom for many."

Sudden Wealth Syndrome is symbolized by mental crises that strike affluent individuals from the moment they wake up to the time they go to bed. Should they drive the Range Rover or the Lexus? Should they spend next week in Maui or Aruba? Expand the garage or add a diving board to the backyard pool?

Victims of the wealth-induced malady, said psychologist Stephen Goldbart, are often paralyzed with indecision and guilt. "All of a sudden, you wake up one day, and you realize you don't have to work anymore. That's when people start becoming symptomatic," Goldbart said.

Since learning of this syndrome, I have spent several sleepless nights in gut-wrenching fear of such a scenario. What if I, like so many in recent years, were to instantly see my net worth explode into the millions of dollars? The adjustment from a modest apartment and steady diet of tacos to a lavish life of mansions, yachts and hors d'oeuvres would be nearly impossible to handle.

Maybe some people will start to use this drug If it does become legalized, but the overall outcome is that police officers can concentrate on the drugs that are detrimental to people such as cocaine and heroin. With concentration on more toxic drugs, society will become better.

Paulo R. Gouveia, Jr.
Central

To the editor:

The staff of the Everywoman's Center and the staff and students of Women's Studies are writing to protest the proposed elimination of the Consumer Studies Program within the College of Food and Natural Resources. We oppose both the decision and the process by which the decision was apparently made, and request an explanation of a decision which seems on its face to be sexist and arbitrary.

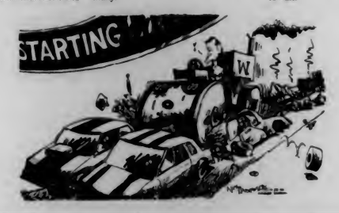
Consumer Studies has 316 student majors. Of these 98.5% are women and 15% are people of color. It also serves the wider University community well, serving nearly 3000 students from across campus in its courses. Furthermore, it is definitely not a course of study which is losing popularity; on the contrary, the number of majors has doubled in the last six years. Indeed this department, originally Home Economics, was founded in 1919 as the first program for women at the then Massachusetts Agricultural College. As the only program of its kind today in the Commonwealth, its demand remains high. Furthermore, the outstanding preparation the major gives in apparel marketing and consumer economics allows it to place it graduates in excellent positions in business and the fashion industry. In a job market where women still have difficulty securing professional positions with good career ladders, this major provides such an opportunity to its graduates. Why is such a thriving major, with excellent career opportunities, which serves predominantly women and minorities being summarily eliminated?

We are very concerned with the decision-making process which resulted in the decision to eliminate Consumer Studies. The reason given to the Department for its dismantlement is that it lacks a "critical mass" of faculty to meet its curricular obligations. But two years ago the Department had four more faculty members who, for reasons of professional advancement or retirement have left, and the Department has not been allowed to replace them. The fault for the lack of critical mass must then be laid at the door of those denying those replacements: the Dean of the College of Food and Natural Resources or the higher Administration, not the Department! To fault the Department is an example of the faculty circular logic in which a race official breaks a runner's legs and then tells her she is unqualified to run the race.

We request to know what criteria were used in the decision to close this program, especially when increasing numbers, disproportionate impact on women and minorities, the general service to students of the Commonwealth who cannot find this program elsewhere, as well as input from those directly affected all were overlooked. In addition to our request for the criteria used in the decision to eliminate Consumer Studies, we ask for a comparison of the number and gender breakdown of student majors in other departments in Food and Natural Resources. We seek to understand why the burden of budget cuts was placed so heavily on this one department rather than trimming other programs as well.

Ann Ferguson, Director of Women's Studies
Carol Wallace, Director of the Everywomen's Center

For reasons such as these, it is imperative that the effort to battle Sudden Wealth Syndrome is taken to new heights. This should not be an ailment that people talk of in hushed tones. Everybody must speak out, loudly and clearly, that the time to end SWS is now.



In order to combat the crippling disorder, people across the United States must unite and rally to protect the well-being of our nation's wealthy. Charitable foundations directed toward Sudden Wealth Syndrome should be established immediately, and the world's top scientists should combine their intellectual resources to find a cure for the disease.

Nobody should be left out of the fight. This summer would be a suitable time to launch the first annual "Wealth Aid" rock concert to benefit our nation's disillusioned deca-millionaires. Affluent rockers, one might imagine, would be receptive to the cause. "Surviving the transition to wealth," Goldbart said, depends largely on peoples' "rediscovering themselves in their new worlds."

By all means, let's lend support and help these people find their way. The fight against Sudden Wealth Syndrome is in our hands, whether they're grasping lottery tickets or not.

Jesse Ammerman is a columnist at the University of Iowa's The Daily Iowan.

All Staff Meeting
Monday
April 3

Notes From The Campus Center Basement

Samantha Poulten

Last week, Jeremy, Laura, Mike, Kat and I took one last rowdy, belligerent Spring Break journey in honor of this being our last trip together as UMass students. Here is some advice for students planning a vacation to Jamaica in the near future.

First off, when planning a Spring Break trip, never go through Inter-Campus travels if you actually want to have transportation to and from your destination, or if having a place to stay on the trip is something important to you.

While riding in taxis, make sure there are a couple of cases of Red Stripe to drink in order to prepare you for the ride of your life along the "road to Negril."

"You got to smoke the ganja..."

Make sure to do your homework before attempting to ride in the front seat of a taxi – you might have to be the defrosting system for the vehicle while drinking Red Stripe, driving on the wrong side of the road, honking the horn at every passing car and avoiding stray cows, goats and people who are stupid enough to walk on the street.

Having 20 dollars readily available is very important if you don't want the man running aside the taxi with a hemp plant the size of a small dog to run into a concrete bridge wall before giving you the plant.

"CIGARETTES, CIGARETTES..."

Naming one of your friends as a street monitor whenever walking is a major necessity in order to avoid getting run over by a few dark-glassed automobiles traveling over 70 kilometers per hour down a winding ally. We found our friend Mike to be a very responsible candidate for this position, and his hat, glow-in-the-dark outfit, and whistle are currently in the mail.

"You got to roll the ganja..."

Become very accustomed to drinking banana daiquiris. It was unanimously decided that my friend Laura used up all of the bananas on the island over the course of the week. She developed a minor addiction to them with the help of Superman the bartender, and is currently seeking counseling.

Jerk chicken...Get to know it and love it because the Jamaican diet consists of jerk chicken and french fries, served as many times a day as one can possibly stand it. My friend Jeremy, a fierce lover of jerk chicken, developed a slight fetish for it over the week, which turned into many late night trips to Da Buss.

Hey, Kat! Thanks for always taking one for the team!

"You got to drink the ganja tea... all the live-long day!"

For a little taste of home, Mr. Slice is the perfect place to visit on the way home from a long day at the beach. Even Jeremy and Laura enjoyed a little break from their usual diet with a slice of spicy veggie pizza.

You must wake up by 8 a.m. in order to catch the four hours of sun before the clouds appear and the torrential downpours begin. The clouds aren't necessarily a bad thing – Kat, Laura, and I had a record going for drinking the most banana daiquiris while waiting for the sun to appear again.

Remember the names Risky Business, Marguaritaville, and the Pickled Parrot. You will spend a lot of time there, but be careful of the men offering you "a little something special" while sitting by the campfire or on the Corona Hut. Mike and I found it a bit hard to recover from.

Overall, vacationing in Jamaica is one of the best experiences you can possibly have. Use our advice, however, and be sure to slow down to Jamaican time, avoid putting too much pollution into your lungs, and never walk on the street.

Samanthan Poulten is a Collegian columnist

Write for Ed/Op!

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 •
http://www.dailycollegian.com

Sam Wilkinson Editor-in-Chief Sam Wilkinson Managing Editor Shawn Ilinitch Business Manager
Ben Alamed Web Developer Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager
Sage Brousseau Co-Advertising Production Manager Jake Lillen Senior Diversity Editor

David Troupes Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Parshkin Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jake Lillen Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jeanne Gorlovsky Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sasha Senderovich Jewish Affairs Editor
Mariele Scherzinger Multicultural Affairs Editor
Adam Martin 3-Co-News Editor
Melissa Hammel Co-News Editors
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Adam White Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor
Joslyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Christine Cunnane Women's Issues Editor
Marc Menschel Finance Manager
Joshua Szymanski Distribution Manager
Katie Beith Promotions Manager
Catherine Turner International Affairs Editor
Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Chris Brennan Assistant Finance Manager
Eric Faber Assistant Advertising Manager
Amy Garganta Assistant Business Manager

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Your Opinion
Workout facilities, major elimination

To the editor:

I am writing this letter to inform the entire campus about how bad the workout facilities are here at UMass. For some reason or other it seems like every time I want to workout, the time is not right. For example, there is no open gym time anymore because of intramural basketball. And when there is a free court one of the athletic teams will be using it. It's not right that the athletes have first rights to a gymnasium when they are not even practicing basketball. Also there are weight rooms in Boyden, and one is for the entire campus and one is for the athletes. That is ridiculous when you think that less than twenty percent of the students here are part of the varsity athletics. This is not very fair to anyone who just wants to stay in shape and be healthy. I am paying the same amount of money as everyone else on this campus. Therefore I feel I should be treated like everyone else on this campus.

On Tuesday February 22, I tried to go down to the gym at 10:30 a.m., even though I usually go to the gym around 4 p.m., which is the time that everyone else goes so I have to wait in long lines while other weight rooms are empty. But at 10 a.m. the weight rooms aren't open, the entire building is up and running except for the areas that can be accessed by regular students. There is no way for me to consistently workout and stay in shape because it is too much of a hassle for me to go to class, do work, and actually go to the gym and get a complete workout in. I am really frustrated with the lack of support that UMass gives to try and keep their students healthy and in shape. I feel that working out is an important aspect of a young adult's life, and the University should support fitness. Instead this school makes it almost impossible to stay in shape. I think if people here were encouraged to work out more, the entire population would be doing better academically and mentally. This school must do something so more people can work out...not just the athletes!

Eric Frye
Central

To the editor:

I am writing to you concerning the legislation of marijuana. This subject has been discussed several times in our federal government and in many states. There are certain pros and cons that many people have brought up on different occasions. I am going to touch on a few of them.

For one, marijuana is a natural substance that does less damage to your body than cigarettes do. Cigarettes have nicotine in them which makes people become addicts while marijuana does not. Even though people say that one can become hooked on marijuana, it contains no substance that makes the user become addicted. The addiction comes purely from the excess consumption as in alcohol.

Another point that has been brought to my attention is a financial aspect. As it is in cigarettes, the tax on marijuana and all the products that people use to take it could produce a lot of extra money for the government. Since many people smuggle this drug across the border, the government could allow the drug into the country with a tariff. As we all know our government is in a lot of debt right now, and any extra money will help alleviate this problem. With the amount of people using marijuana, this surplus would surely be of some asset.

One of the things I believe the government is pondering is the reaction of parents. Parents need to realize that many teenagers are using this drug. I am sure you will agree that you would rather know what your child is doing, no matter what it is, right? Point made.

Business

Route 9 to get new diner

By Shawn Ilinitch
Collegian Staff

Clear your calendars for April 24. The newest hot spot in the Pioneer Valley, the Sitdown Diner, will be open for business. Located on Route 9 in the front of the Stop and Shop plaza, the new eatery offers patrons a multitude of dining choices in an authentic style diner.

The diner is being built by Kullman industries, who have been constructing diners since 1927. Recently, the New Jersey based company has been branching out into modular schools, prisons, as well as other types of buildings.

The owners of the new diner are both UMass graduates, James and Sue Tourtillotte both graduated from the Hotel, Restaurant and Travel Administration program in 1985. According to James Tourtillotte, "I've been looking at Amherst since the day we left here." While financing their first diner, however, Danbury CT became a more likely option for their first diner. Nevertheless, they feel excited to be returning to Amherst. Tourtillotte adds, "Amherst is a great town. The Pioneer Valley is a great area."

The diner will be open from 6 a.m. until 2 a.m. Breakfast will be served all day, and a full lunch and dinner menu will be offered. Some of the choices mentioned by Tourtillotte included: eggs, hot and cold sandwiches, burgers, hand cut french fries, and many more home made classics.

Both of the Tourtillotte's diners were named after his wife, Sue. While in college, he promised her that if they were to open their own business, he would name it after her. After deciding on a diner, three names made the final list. The Miss Sue Diner, Suzie Q's, and the Sitdown Diner all were being considered. Finally, the Sitdown diner was chosen; SIT are Sues initials.

Tourtillotte chose to open diners because they are an American institution. The Route 9 diner will resemble a diner from the 1940's era. The materials used in its construction are the same that were employed them, and although the interior will contain no memorabilia from the time period, it will be constructed to give you an old diner feel.

As you enter the diner, you will be greeted by the counter which makes diners famous. In this area there will also be a limited number of booths. This, Tourtillotte explains, is all that diners used to be. Recently however, many diners have added on dining rooms, and the Sitdown diner will have one included, giving it a total of 141 seats. The kitchen will have nothing old about it, as it will be designed to handle as many customers as possible.

Although there is no private dining room, Tourtillotte feels a divider in the larger room will provide large groups with a certain extent of privacy.

Currently, Tourtillotte lectures at times in the HRTA program at UMass, teaching the aspiring restaurant, hotel, or travel agency owners how to get started. Right now, the Tourtillotte's are the ones who can not wait to get started.

James Tourtillotte in front of the partially complete Sitdown Diner

SHAWN ILINITCH/COLLEGIAN

Strike headlines week in review

By Brian Lohnes
Collegian Staff

Overweight children everywhere breathed a collective sigh of relief this week when 1500 Teamster union members walked off the job at Interstate Bakery. Now plump kids will not have to endure ribbing from other children about the amount of Twinkies they eat, because the delightful snack cakes have become such a scarce commodity.

Interstate Bakery produces two million Twinkies per week and over 400,000 loves of bread. The city of Boston is almost 100% Twinkie free at this point. The strike began when workers claimed that the company was not abiding by arbitration agreements that were made during contract negotiations with the workers. Drake's cakes and J.J. Nissen bread are also affected by this strike.

In other business news this week, the price of comedy is rising. Malcom Kushner, a man with apparently way too much spare time said that the Laughing index, a list of 16 items that gauge humor rose by 5 percent last year. Among other things, the index looks at admission prices to comedy clubs in 10 cities, the cost of a case of rubber chickens, the cost of the "arrow through the head gag", the price of Mad magazine, and the fee a comedy writer is paid for writing a sitcom (per show). Thankfully the price for a case of rubber chickens held strong at $60, but Mad magazine rose 49 cents and sit-com writers are being paid $12,615 dollars per half hour show, an increase of $367 from last year. Mr. Kushner compiles this list every year. Mercifully the Dow was not affected by the sharp increase in the wages of comedy writers.

In exhilarating news this week, Pepsi Co. announced that they were bringing back the Pepsi Challenge. The challenge is the blind taste test of Coke and Pepsi to see which one people like better. The fact that Pepsi is and always has been the number two soft drink company behind Coke should give the PR folks some idea of what's to come.

In what could be the weirdest career move ever, hundreds of migrant California farm workers are being lured out of California to work in meat and seafood packing plants in the Mid-west and Eastern US. The workers, who make very low wages as field hands (usually about $5.75 per hour), are being swept off their feet by the promise of the meat and seafood packing industry. They are receiving increased wages and medical benefits. Unfortunately, their work environment does not sound too enticing.

According to the Associated Press, "The valley has become known for producing workers with the skills and endurance necessary to tackle tough, unpleasant jobs in agriculture. The meat and fish packing industries are finding it fertile ground for their recruiting drives."

Think you are having a bad day? Imagine losing six billion dollars in one day. Michael Saylor doesn't have to because he did. His company MicroStrategy Inc. took a huge hit on the stock market and Saylor lost six billion dollars in one day. Fear not, Mr. Saylor still has a measly 3.85 billion to toy around with.

Price waterhouse Coopers LP, the accounting firm representing Saylor's company made a boo-boo in computing the profit margins for the company's stock so it had to be reevaluated, and when it was it lost value.

Campus Designs copies and more for you

By David Katzoff
Collegian Staff

The high pace world of textual replication, artistic devising and networking communications engulfs the square consol of the store. Our undergraduate peers, friendly and equally busy, bustle about the premises with purpose and skillful competence.

Located in the upper tier of the Student Union, Campus Design & Copy provides the UMass community with incomparable services. Specializing in copying, faxing, designing, binding as well as computer and note assistance, the business conducts itself as any corporate structure. Yet as an entirely student-run and managed collective, C&DC is a vastly unique company, operating with the spirit and principles of a cooperative.

In addition to the impeccably professional copying and faxing services, C&DC personally designs flyers and programs for all occasions and compiles course packets for various professors.

The store was formed in January of 1990 when the Student Government Association decided to merge SGA Communications with Student Note and Printing Services and form one mega company – if you will – within the local academic service industry.

In the early years, CD&C was unable to establish frequent clientele and internally struggled to find a common direction. But as technology progressed, demands from University-affiliated patrons augmented. In 1994, with a new staff and clear path of enterprising, the business approached a turning point. With fresh regulatory policies of management and discipline firmly implemented, things began to move efficiently. With vastly improving revenues, the store was environmentally revamped to expand office space. After months of persistent legwork, the Xerox Corporation donated two new computers and a lazar printer and Campus Design & Copy never looked back. Although it is a non-profit organization technically "owned" by the University, the business has transgressed into a lucrative enterprise.

Through individually elected committees, each of the fifteen employees adheres to "Policy 1/15," which basically instills the philosophy of togetherness and equal responsibility. These committees are broken down into specific departments such as business, advertising, academics, hiring and inner-conflict steering. As reflected by the store's mentality and practices of its daily operations, students obtain experience co-managing a business while fostering the idealism of equality and diversity in the workplace.

Today, the business grosses over a quarter of million dollars each fiscal year, and with quick, inexpensive services, CD&C remains one of most competitive companies of its kind in the Pioneer Valley.

In the nearby Student Union, Campus Design and Copy is a valuable resrouce for students.

JARET BARR/COLLEGIAN

The Springfield Stock Exchange

"Corporate responsibility is not about giving away money, it is about how you make your money."

By Shawn Ilinitch
Collegian Staff

Meadowbrook Lane Capital has announced plans to begin a stock exchange in Springfield. The announcement comes after reports that the company has shown interest in Ben and Jerry's, offering them $32 a share, $4 more than the market value.

Meadowbrook Lane, a Springfield company, is lead by President Joe Sibilia. The goal of the new stock exchange, according to Sibilia, is "to allow socially responsible investors to invest in privately held companies." Sibilia explains that companies should have two goals: one is profit, and the other is to pursue a social mission. Currently it is difficult for a company to do this.

Although Sibilia could offer no statement as to a connection between Meadowbrook's offer for Ben and Jerry's and the creation of the stock exchange. Because of the timing, some feel the two activities are connected. Ben and Jerry's are currently part of a takeover. Many people believe that because Ben and Jerry own 40% of the companies stock, that they could stop the takeover. It is not that easy however. Sibilia explained that when a company is publicly traded, their board of directors is elected by the shareholders to represent their interests. The board of directors is then obligated by law to entertain offers, and if an offer is beneficial for to the shareholders, to accept the offer.

If Ben and Jerry's had not gone public, they would not be subject to a takeover. At the same time, however, they would have never had been able to raise enough capital to grow. Sibilia's new stock exchange would allow companies to grow without becoming a publicly traded company. Sibilia feels that the market for socially responsible businesses will grow in the future.

According to him, "We believe in the future a high value will be placed on those companies that operate with social responsibility." In addition, he feels these companies have more loyal customers, stating, "Social responsible businesses have more loyal customers because consumers make purchasing decisions not only on the product, but how the company makes the product."

The new of the exchange comes at a time when more and more companies seem to becoming socially responsible, Sibilia states, "The next evolution of capitalism is recognizing that all stakeholders needs must be met, not just a select few that hold wealth." Meadowbrook Lane Capital's primary activity is serving as a capital fund for low income entrepreneurs. One of their top executives left Bank Boston to help these future business leaders from impoverished areas. They seem to make a perfect fit for Ben and Jerry's, whose social efforts are well known.

No date could be specified for the new exchanges opening, but it should be within the year. Continuing with the socially responsible theme, Sibilia adds, "corporate social responsibility is not about giving away money, it is about how you make your money."

WRITE FOR BUSINE$$

Winners and Losers

5 Winners:

Palomar Med Tech INC (PMTI) makes disposable products used in cosmetic surgery. The company also makes lasers and delivers systems, which has been the focus of their business. The past 52 weeks have seen the stock price hit a low of 15/16 but it is now around 4

Morgan Stanley Dean Witter (MWD) is a familiar company in the financial industry. Their services include underwriting, brokerage and credit (Discover Card) to name a few. Cut to the chase; good underwriting decisions, higher income from credit and asset management gave this stock a boost.

Microsoft (MSFT) has been given a boost in light of news that the antitrust lawsuit filed against the software giant might be over soon. The Wall Street Journal reported that the software company could reach a settlement in the near future giving the stock a 4-_ point boost.

BP Amaco (BPA) and Shell Transport and Trading (SHEL) both dropped after President Clinton's decision not favoring OPEC and other countries interested in fixing oil prices. BP Amaco fell 1.6% and Shell Transport and Trading fell 3.1% after the news allowed crude oil prices to settle.

Micron Technology (MU) has rising from around 60 to what it is at this week, around 130. This is a semi-conductor company, which is a sector that has seen a lot of publicity recently.

Lost momentum

5 Losers:

Floyalty Corp. (FLOY) is a company that is focused on consulting for companies that want to improve customer relationships. Revenues have risen 39% in the past nine months; however, the stock price has been cut in half from 40 in February to around twenty-one today.

Zebra Technologies Corp. (ZBRA) is not estimated to reach its goal for revenue. This stock has fallen from the mid 60's to the mid 40's this week. This is all very recently, the price started to fall in mid February.

Santa Cruz Operation Inc. (SCOC) has also seen its stock price fall due to lack of revenue. It has fallen 30% since the beginning of the year. Apparently, the company is experiencing continuous Y2K problems.

U.S Restaurant Properties (USV) has consistently gone down this past year from a high of 22-9/16 to around 10 this week. This decrease can be attributed to operating losses.

RCM Technologies (RCMT) is focused on business, technology, engineering solutions and e-commerce software for the corporate and government sectors. This stock is down due to profit warnings.

Chris Brennan is a Collegian staff member.

In digital age: Internet start-ups prove a major challenge

By Shannon Henry
Washington Post

WASHINGTON – March 3 was a big day for Richard Blechman. He officially incorporated his Bethesville, Md., start-up Internet company, ProblemFixers.com. And he turned 60.

While young and hip still rules Internet society, not everyone starting a new company is under 30.

Those launching businesses in their later years have a different set of concerns. They may have more experience, but they also have more to risk, including a longtime reputation in an industry. And they're more likely than the youngsters to have kids in college, mortgages and other very grown-up responsibilities that make a fall much harder.

"Going from spaghetti to spaghetti is easy," says Vienna investor relations expert Doug Poretz, who works with new technology companies. "Going from Morton's to spaghetti is an entirely different issue."

The older entrepreneur "is not only taking a risk, but he or she is risking everything that they already gained," Poretz says.

Blechman had been in the mortgage business for years when he discovered the Internet. He took some computer courses, learned a bit from his 16-year-old son and decided to start ProblemFixers.com, which aims to provide credit and mortgage advice and information to people with financial problems.

Now in the development stages of the site, he has so far raised $50,000 in "angel" money from a private investor who has promised another $200,000. He says the Internet is the greatest thrill for anyone with entrepreneurial spirit.

"I don't think it's age-driven," he says. "I've always had it. I tend to end up running things."

Blechman says he's more confident now than he was when he was 30 or 40 – and has perspective on business. But he intends to hire some of those fearless, fast-thinking people closer to his kids' age. "I'm a fossil. But I'm bringing young people aboard," he says.

It's not easy, though. When Don Hyde, 53, came up with the idea for Internos Corp. after being in the building business for 22 years, he had two children in college. On his kitchen table one night about three years ago, he laid out his plans for creating industry-specific trading communities on the Web. He explained his dream to his wife, and they decided to go for it.

"Of course, you're always worried about money," Hyde says. For a while he had trouble paying himself a salary. He now has 80 employees at his Dulles, Va., office and has raised $12 million in investments in 1999.

Hyde says some people have treated him differently because he's older. He remembers after a presentation to a potential client, a young woman said to him: "I think it's wonderful that a man of your age came up with such a great technology."

Harry Weller, a venture capitalist with FBR Technology Venture Partners in Reston, Va., says the dream team for a start-up is a 45-year-old with experience plus a younger person with creativity and energy. But usually the venture partners just see the young person. Why aren't there more older entrepreneurs? Weller says older business people tend to be more economically conservative, more averse to risk and harder to inspire. But "they might be a little smarter," Weller adds.

Arts & Living

Your Guide to all that's going on in the Pioneer Valley

Type O Positively Rocks the Avalon

By Tim Dolan
Collegian Correspondent

BOSTON – As night fell over the 80s, teenagers and twenty-somethings wearing black lipstick, black clothes and multi-colored hair dye appeared from the shadows. Past the several buses on the street and stacks of equipment on the sidewalk, they traveled on their way to the entrance of the Avalon Ballroom. The buses and equipment belong to Type O Negative and their opening acts, Coal Chamber and Lull Devil Jacket.

Type O Negative has a unique sound. Often labeled "goth metal," The Brooklyn-based foursome's music entails slow rhythms and eerie melodies. Singer/ bassist Peter Steele's baritone is very melodic, often times rolling his "r's" as he sings of love and death. Having been around for twelve years and with four studio albums under their belts, Type O Negative has an extremely large cult following across the country.

Although singles such as "My Girlfriend's Girlfriend" and "Everything Dies" did help to bring the band closer to the mainstream, radio has not been friendly to the band. Their songs are intimate, they contain many parts, and are often over six minutes in length. As a result, most find out about Type O through word of mouth.

In support of their latest album, World Coming Down, released September 21, the band's "Disastour" came to the Avalon the night before Halloween. Five months later, the band returned to the venue on the "Road Rage 2000" tour.

As the lights went down, screams filled the air. From the mist on the stage emerged the band. They were greeted by the affectionate chants of "You suck!" from the crowd. More screams came at the sound of Josh Silver's opening keyboard riff to the afore-mentioned "My Girlfriend's Girlfriend" off of October Rust.

The band was energetic, excruciatingly loud and in perfect sync with each other. Peter Steele, the behemoth 6'6" vocalist and bassist, plucked at his instrument with fury and sometimes screamed at the top of his voice (something seldom heard on Type O albums). Silver's playing gave atmosphere to the songs, though sometimes the sound was drowned out.

Type O Negative, the nonchalant martyrs of goth metal.

Drummer Johnny Kelley made the beat a little faster than what's heard on their albums, something which suited the crowd just fine. But the most animated of the band was guitarist Kenny Hickey. With his black pants and button-down shirt, long hair and a mustache, he resembled Black Sabbath's Tony Iommi. He oftentimes ran to the front of the stage, with a foot out and head banged to the music.

The set contained some Type O classics such as, Bloody Kisses' "Christian Woman," and "Black No. 1 (Little Miss Scare-All)," and October Rust's "Love You To Death." What was surprising about the set was the lack of the first single off of World Coming Down, "Everything Dies," though the soon-to-be-released single, "Everyone I Love is Dead," was played.

In all, Type O put on a stellar show, complete with an ear-puncturing volume, great songs and an enthusiastic crowd to boot. Steele was as entertaining as ever. As he often jokes around with the crowd, "I just went backstage and they said we could play three more songs for you 'cause this place turns into a gay rave or something at midnight. So we're gonna play one more..." A great show.

Local musicians sound off: Joint's Custody'd Orange

By Ryan Benharris
Collegian Staff

JOINT CUSTODY
Orange
Independent Record

When we say "local flavor" at the Daily Collegian we mean local! Last year, you voted Joint Custody as your favorite local band, and now it's time to prove how much you love them. The band is set to release their second album, Orange tonight at The Skybox.

Joint Custody formed in 1996 right here at the University of Massachusetts, and has been playing to hundreds of different crowds ever since. The band released their first CD, The Lows, The Mids, and The Highs just a few short years ago, and has had continued local success. The community at UMass has already accepted them as something special, and now they want to reach out to a wider audience.

Joint Custody's new CD, Orange, is clearly the result of discipline and hard work. After speaking to the band, it was clear to me that they have one particular goal in mind. That is to make some terrific music. The instrumental funk on Orange shows some comparison to such bands as Pink Floyd, but the vocals are what clearly shine through. The real meaning of the album lies in the stand out lyrics. The last two tracks on the disc are two different versions of "Birds Fly," a fast-paced plea on words, with terrific drumming. In general, the album leaves a strong musical impression that is certainly worth listening to.

Joint Custody will release the CD to the public tonight at The Skybox. The doors open at 7:00 p.m., and Joint Custody will hit the stage at 10:00 p.m. B+

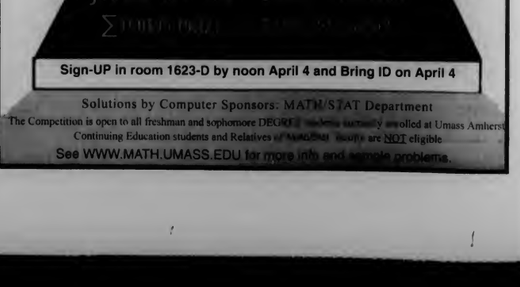
SPRING ON OVER FOR SOME GREAT BUYS AT ... LIQUORS 44 Don't Drink & Drive

EVERYDAY PRICING

1/2 KEGS BUD, BUD LIGHT, BUD DRY, MICHELOB, MICHELOB LIGHT, AMBER BOCK, ULTRAS, COORS, COORS LIGHT $39.99 REG.

1/2 KEGS NATURAL, NATURAL ICE $34.99 REG.

BUD & BUD LIGHT 30 PACK $16.99 REG.
MILWAUKEE'S BEST 30 PACK $9.99 REG.
SARANAC 12 PACK $8.99 REG.
ST. PAULI GIRL 12 PACK $9.49 REG.
PABST BLUE RIBBON $8.99 REG.
RICK'S SPIKED LEMONADE NEW $4.99 REG.



WINES OF THE MONTH
SEBASTIANI HERITAGE WINES $8.99
ALMADEN WINES $6.99
INGLENOOK ESTATE CELLARS $6.99
FOXHORN WHITE ZINFANDEL $4.99
ROSEMOUNT ESTATES SHIRAZ/CABERNET $6.99
JACK DANIEL'S COUNTRY COCKTAILS $3.99

BACARDI LIMON RUM $9.99
INVERHOUSE SCOTCH $12.99
GORDON'S VODKA $12.99
BOMBAY SAPPHIRE GIN $15.99
BLACK VELVET CANADIAN $12.99
CAPTAIN MORGAN SPICED RUM $18.99

NATIONAL BREWING 1/2 KEGS STEEL RAIL, POWER, TRADITIONAL, LP.A. $82.99 REG.

Glasses Available On Coors, Miller & Labatt Bud Dry Contracts.

AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344 · NORTHAMPTON 586-3007 · HOLYOKE 534-4855
SALE PRICES THURS. 3/23/00 THRU WEDS. 3/29/00

All That Smithsonian Masterworks Jazz

Yes, the Smithsonian Masterworks Jazz Orchestra is coming to UMass Saturday at 8 p.m. Tickets are still available by calling 545-2511.

Best! 1999 By The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Plan Ahead for Next Year

Excellent Location...1/2 Mile From Umass
Spacious Apartments - 1, 2 and 3 Bedroom Townhouse
All Rents Include Heat, Hot Water and Cooking Gas

PUFFTON VILLAGE

Office Hours: 8 am to 4:30 pm Monday-Friday
(413) 549-0145

Up to 50% of college students are infected with a virus that can cause genital warts.

That's 1 out of 2

Don't like those ODDS then Learn More at:

MAKING CHOICES
Contraception & STI Prevention
Held Tuesdays at 7 p.m. and Thursdays at 3 p.m. in room 304 at University Health Services.
Also, in the Campus Center on:
March 27th - 7:00 P.M. IN ROOM 905-09
April 24th - 7:00 P.M. IN ROOM 905-09
ALL ARE WELCOME!

YANKEE CANDLE®
Be part of a Scent-Sational Team!
One of America's fastest-growing businesses is now accepting applications for our exciting
PAID SUMMER INTERNSHIP/CO-OP PROGRAM
in the following areas of the company:
• MARKETING • FINANCE/ACCOUNTING
• ENGINEERING • INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY
Interviews will be scheduled at the Career Services Office for Friday, April 7th.
For more information, please contact the Career Services Office at 545-6265 or, apply online at www-ccn.acad.umass.edu
YCC NYSE
For a complete listing of current employment opportunities, please call the Yankee Candle jobline at 800-839-6038 and select menu option 4.
www.yankeecandle.com

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
WEEKEND FILMS-DOWNTOWN NORTHAMPTON
The Master of SUSPENSE Daily 5:00
JAMES STEWART GRACE KELLY
NEWLY RESTORED BACK IN THEATRES AFTER 15 YEARS.
IT ONLY TAKES ONE WITNESS TO SPOIL THE PERFECT CRIME
ALFRED HITCHCOCK'S REAR WINDOW
This Film RULES! DAILY 7:15 ...look again at the year's most honored film.
ACADEMY AWARD NOMINATIONS
KEVIN SPACEY ANNETTE BENING
AMERICAN BEAUTY R
DAILY 9:00 --Last Chance
3 ACADEMY AWARD NOMINATIONS
BEING JOHN MALKOVICH R
ACADEMY of MUSIC Cinema House NORTHAMPTON. 584-8435

15th Annual MATHEMATICS COMPETITION
APRIL 4, 2000 @ 7:00P.M.
ROOMS 101-103 LEDERLE GRADUATE CENTER
Sign-UP in room 1623-D by noon April 4 and Bring ID on April 4
Solutions by Computer Sponsors: MATH/STAT Department
The Competition is open to all freshman and sophomore DEGREE students currently enrolled at Umass Amherst Continuing Education students and Relatives of students are NOT eligible
See WWW.MATH.UMASS.EDU for more info and sample problems.

New gridiron captains take throne

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

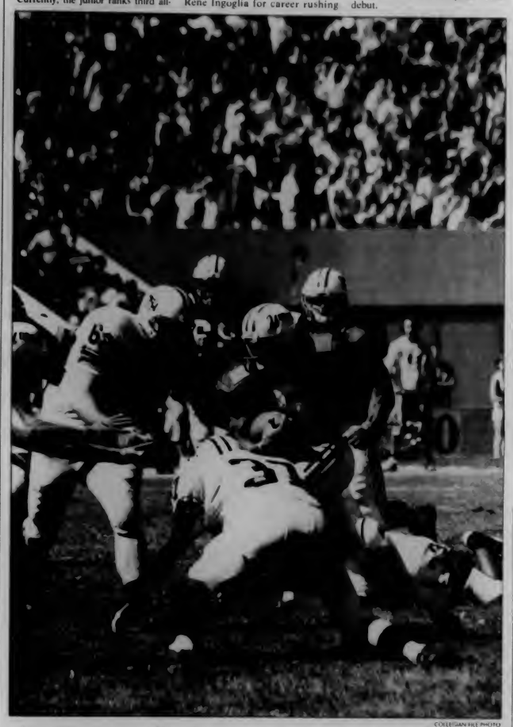
With this crew, somehow the future doesn't look so bad.

On Tuesday, the official team captains for the 2000 Massachusetts football team were announced, with soon-to-be seniors Marcel Shipp, Kole Ayi and Brian Smith, replacing the tandem of Todd Bankhead and Matt Dawson that guided the Minutemen to a 9-4 record and another postseason appearance.

Ayi nearly took the spot anyway last season, picking up where current Chicago Bear Khari Samuel left off in the middle of the Minuteman defense. The NH native was runner-up for the 1999 Buck Buchanan Award, given to the nation's best defensive player. However, except falling to the Associated Press' third team, that was about all he would fall short in. Gaining All-American honors from The Sports Network, the Walter Camp Football Foundation and Teamlink.com, Ayi led the team with 147 total tackles, anchoring a defensive unit that topped the Atlantic 10 Conference.

Currently, the junior ranks third all-time at UMass in solo tackles (254) and fifth in total tackles (355).

Smith, his defensive cohort, was snubbed in most postseason recognition, despite placing third on the team with 103 tackles. The Minutemen lost both their cornerbacks, Jerard White and Willie Hemmer, to graduation, but Smith returns with Jeremy Robinson at the safety spot. The pair combined for nine interceptions. Smith earned A-10 Academic All Conference honors while picking up honorable mention All-America honors from Don Hansen's Football Gazette.



Shipp heads up the offensive side of the ball, carrying the bulk of the load for the Minuteman offense. Placing sixth in the voting for the Walter Payton Award, the back found the Walter Camp Football Foundation first team after gaining 1,846 yards on 391 carries, finding the end zone 24 times in the process. He also caught 34 balls for 336 yards out of the backfield. In doing so, Shipp, who hails from Paterson, NJ, took over in the UMass record books for career rushing yards (5,144) and all-purpose yards (6,423). He ranks behind only Rene Ingoglia for career rushing touchdowns, entering his final season with 46 scores.

"Kole, Marcel and Brian are not only great players, but they bring a tremendous amount of leadership and character to our program," said UMass head coach Mark Whipple. "They also have a good deal of experience, with all three of them being starters each of the past two seasons. I expect them to follow in the line of our great captains the past two seasons."

Minuteman Notes

The upcoming schedule is all but set in stone for the Minutemen, with the season opener the only subject left up in the air at the moment. In hosting William & Mary, the administration is talking about moving the Saturday matinee up to Thursday night.

Unfortunately, the tentative lineup has left Big 12 powerhouse Kansas State off the slate, plans falling through at the last moment. To replace the Wildcats, UMass has slated American International College, a small school out of Springfield that will challenge Northeastern in both squads' 2000 debut.

Marcel Shipp gained over 1,800 yards last season on the ground, scoring 24 touchdowns to help the Minutemen to a 9-4 record.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Steinbrenner calls emergency meeting in face of Yankees' pre-season losses

By Lawrence Rocco
Newsday

TAMPA, Fl. – After watching his team lose yet another spring training game, George Steinbrenner called yet another emergency front office meeting late Tuesday night. And yet again, members of the front office successfully urged Steinbrenner to be patient, at least for now.

Yankees General Manager Brian Cashman said Wednesday that Steinbrenner called the meeting, which lasted a little more than an hour, specifically to address the team's 5-18 record, the second-worst in baseball.

"He asked appropriate questions," Cashman said. "I told him what I have told him since the beginning of spring training."

And that is that the Yankees are built better than any team in baseball right now. There are legitimate areas of concern, Cashman acknowledged, such as the fifth spot in the starting rotation, which Ed Yarnall is struggling to win, and the backup catcher and infielder spots.

But Cashman told Steinbrenner he should have no major concerns.

"I believe our question marks are much less troubling than everybody else's," Cashman said he told Steinbrenner.

"If we stay healthy and keep the position players out on the field, getting ready, we will be fine."

So Cashman reiterated to Steinbrenner that a major trade, such as one for St. Louis Cardinals center fielder Jim Edmonds, is not necessary at this point, and said once again he believes Ricky Ledee and Shane Spencer will be productive this year.

Cashman conceded to The Boss that he is a bit concerned with how Yarnall, who was bombed again Tuesday, has struggled. But Cashman said he believes the rookie has ample time to work out his problems before he is needed on a regular basis.

That won't be until late April, so Yarnall might be left behind in Tampa or sent to Triple-A Columbus to make a few starts if he does not turn things around in either of his two remaining scheduled exhibition starts. The Yankees could use Ramiro Mendoza to make a spot start April 15 in Yarnall's place, but Cashman says Yarnall will eventually be a fulltime Yankees starter.

"Yarnall had a bad big-league spring training last year," Cashman said. "Six innings is not going to change in my mind the large sample of success he had in majors and minors last year. Is he ready now? No. But does he have time to get ready if all the other starters stay healthy? Yes."

Cashman pointed out to The Boss that the other four starters - David Cone, Orlando Herandez, Roger Clemens and Andy Pettitte - have been rounding into impressive shape.

And although Cashman did acknowledge that a 5-18 record is disconcerting, he said the Yankees' recent World Series success should not only alleviate those concerns, it should help explain the record.

"When a veteran team has been to the top of the mountain three times in four years, you don't jude them in spring training," Cashman said. "You can't. You start to worry if losses like this rack up in April. It doesn't mean enough now. They are veterans. They are not trying to win games, they are trying to get in shape, stay healthy and get work in.

"This group has proven that when it comes time to win games, they will. I trust track records. ... The game of baseball for me requires patience."

That was the consensus of the meeting, also attended by execs Mark Newman, Gene Michael, Al Rosen and Kim Ng.

"Twenty-three games into spring training does not make me change our evaluation of our people at all," Cashman said. "We're fine. I believe this team does not need a jolt or a major trade at this particular time.

"His response was, and it has been throughout the spring, I have to ask these questions. I'm not going to argue. You have been right the past two years."

The Yankees acquired right-hander Christian Parker Wednesday from the Montreal Expos to complete the Hideki Irabu trade. Parker, 24, was 8-5 with a 3.65 ERA at Double-A Harrisburg last season.

■ polo

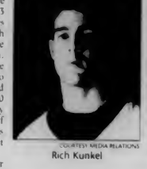
continued from page 10

Bulldogs suffered a fate similar to that of their counterparts last weekend, falling in a 16-5 final to the Maroon and White. That contest provided a breakout stage for freshman Mattie Newell, who socked home four goals to pace the Minutewoman offense.

A hat trick from senior Katie Grogan also played a key part in the humbling of Yale.

This weekend's schedule concludes with a 2 p.m. Sunday face-off between UMass and Dartmouth. The Big Green suffered what was undeniably the most brutal defeat of last weekend's tourney, a 16-0 blowout at the hands of Grogan and company.

Backup goalie Megan Thompson made six saves in the team's first shutout this season, while three different Maroon and White players – Newell, Claudia Clement and Marci Hupp – each registered a hat trick in the win.



The team will follow up this tournament with the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference Championships, to be held in Princeton, NJ next weekend.

■ lax

continued from page 10

Minutemen, mustering just six goals, which was plenty enough in the overall defensive war.

The Minutemen would love to get to double digits, since they have a 65-13 record in the '90s in games which they eclipsed the 10-goal plateau. However, they were unable to do so against Hofstra and Navy, both Top 20 squads, certainly the caliber of lacrosse Butler has been seen as in past years.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS
Rich Kunkel

The goaltender matchup should go a long way in determining the outcome, with UMass' Chris Campulettano and Butler's Marc Ferrandino. The latter has struggled against the nation's top offenses, yielding 18 goals to the Hoyas. While Butler's attack has been consistently mediocre, Ferrandino has been bombarded. Campolettano has had the luxury of having Greg Cannella's bruising defense in front of him, but hasn't been able to take a breather. Stopping 63 percent of the shots he's faced, the junior has given up under seven goals a game, better than last year's pace.

Rich Kunkel leads the offense onto the field, scoring seven goals and three assists to head the scoring column. The senior netted three scores and added an assist in the win over Vermont. He threw in two goals and set up another in beating Stony Brook. The Minutemen got balanced scoring in knocking off the Catamounts, with 11 players getting on the board, led by Kunkel.

Collegian Sports Rulz!!

Write for Sports!

Entertainment, Food, & Giveaways
AMHERSTONLINE.COM
Bookmark it!

STUDENT TRAVEL
Degrees of Freedom
Special Student Airfares
Great Travel Products
Adventure Holidays
Beds on a Budget
Travel Insurance
Eurail Passes
Camps, Tours
Student ID's
800-777-0112
STA TRAVEL
WE'VE BEEN THERE.
www.statravel.com

University of Massachusetts Boston
Ireland & Scotland Today:
Politics and Society
July 10 – August 6, 2000
This travel/study program provides a dynamic learning experience–a lively blend of field activities in Ireland and Scotland as well as course work at Trinity College in Dublin, the University of Edinburgh, and the University of Massachusetts Boston. Through direct observations, field trips and lectures by a variety of local experts, you will gain a critical appreciation of the subtle and complex interactions that are shaping Ireland and Scotland internally and within the European Union. Six undergraduate credits.
To learn more, contact:
University of Massachusetts Boston
Division of Continuing Education
100 Morrissey Blvd
Boston MA 02125-3393
617.287.7913
www.conted.umb.edu
UMASS BOSTON

Castaway Lounge
Proudly Presents.
Monday April 3
Amateur Night
1st Place $200
2nd Place $100
3rd Place $50
Rt. 5 & 10 Whately, MA (413) 665-8733

Coming Soon...
The Apartment Guide
March 27th
Classified section

Strapping Good Looks
by Steve Madden
downtown Amherst
www.zanna.com

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ACTIVITIES

Art of Living Workshop- Yoga and Meditation in Umass from March 31. Free intro talks on Monday 8pm in Boyden 237 and on Thursday 6pm. Contact Durgesh 549-5551.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Klub Kai is booking formals and Graduation Parties for May 2000. Call Cheng @ 586-2774 after 4:30 pm. Buffet Packages available.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Summer Sublet Needed! Rent is $750/mo and includes heat and hot water! Utilities already set up and apartment will have furniture for your use! Call us at the Boulders: 256-8012.

3 Bedrooms. Half mile from campus. Close to bus stop. 3 floors. Available June 1, 2000. Call 549-7706.

1 Bedroom Summer Sublet with option to lease on bus route. 1 mile from campus 549-1859.

1 Bedroom Apartment Colonial Village on bus line. $465.00/ month. Available 6/1. 256-3237

Apply now for best locations. Amherst Center 1,2 and 3 bedroom apartments. Gas heat, hardwood floor. April showings for June and September. Lincoln Real Estate. No fees charged. 253-7879.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Apply now for best locations. 3 bedroom condos. Gas heat, hardwood floors, bright heated basement with study and laundry area. 1/2 mile to campus, on bus route. April showings for June and September. Lincoln Real Estate. No fees charged. 253-7879.

AUTO FOR SALE

1994 Jeep Wrangler Sahara. 50k miles. Excellent condition. Forest Green with Sahara interior. Call Bob 549-2404.

Summer Jobs

EMPLOYMENT

For the Environment $3000 to $5000/Summer Campaign to save wilderness, endangered species and to reduce toxic pollution. Make a difference! Offices in over 30 States. Campaign to save the environment. 1-800-75-EARTH

Make a Difference AMERICORPS.ORG Joining AmeriCorps is a great way to get experience, take on new responsibilities and know the satisfaction of building a community. In exchange for a year of community service in the area sof public safety, education, human needs and the environment, AmeriCorps members receive an education award ($4725), a monthly stipend and health coverage.

EMPLOYMENT

Help Wanted: Part-time bar/floor manager. The Amherst Brewing Company is looking for an experienced, team oriented, assistant manager for our busy weekends. Excellent opportunity for an enthusiastic, professional. Apply in person at 24 No. Pleasant St, Amherst.

Summer Employment; Outdoors. Weight loss/sports camp looking for energetic people to lead campers in a fun filled summer. Located in West Stockbridge, MA. in the heart of the Berkshires. Call for more information. Toll Free 877-FIT-CAMP. email marc@camp-kingsmont.com

Flexible part-time. Evening and weekend shifts available. 20hrs/wk required. PVTA accessible. For more information call: Abt Associates, Inc. Paul Bebo, Recruiting Coordinator 1-800-792-4514. E.O.E, M/F

Cruise Line entry level on board positions available, great benefits. seasonal or year-round. (941)329-6434 www.cruisecareers.com

Summer Employment. Full-time jobs available at Visitors Center. Call 545-0306 for info and app.

Earn $1200-2000 this month part time and a new computer ! Will Train. For details 888-342-3267 code 45

EMPLOYMENT

Bilingual Tutors/ Translators for part-time paid assistance during the school day to students speaking Amharic, Chinese, Cape Verde/ Portuguese, Japanese, Korean, Mongolian, Tibetan, Urdu, Vietnamese. Contact: ESL/ Bilingual Office at 413-549-9857. Amherst-Pelham Schools. An Equal Opportunity Employer / Affirmative Action Employer

Bank on getting a tan this summer working outside with other students! Earn up to $9.00- $13.00/hr. Various positions available. For information or to apply on-line see our website at : http://www.university-painters.com

Summer Help Wanted Local corrugated Manufacturer Looking for summer help for 2nd and 3rd shift. Good Pay 1.25 an hour. Call Scott Parsons 413-582-3844

Delivery persons wanted. Apply at D.P. Dough, downtown Amherst.

Fall 200 Internships with the Student Legal Service Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field, work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary- training provided. Contact the Student Legal Services Office today: 545- 1995, 922 Campus Center.

EMPLOYMENT

3 Job Opportunities on Nantucket Island, MA beginning May. A.) Office manager with good typing, computer and telephone skills. B.) Office assistant, errand runner, mother's helper, household help. C.) Auction gallary assistant; furniture porter, display, delivery. Salary and housing. Drivers license required. (508)228-3942 or send resume: P.O. Box 2607 Nantucket, MA 02548.

UAHC Crane Lake and Eisner Camps, Reform Jewish co-educational Camps located in the Berkshires of Massachusetts, seek qualified, dedicated counselors and specialists, including Waterfront, Athletics, Arts. Good salary, r&b included, travel assistance. Crane Lake Camp: Contact Brad Gerstle, 800-227-2660 ILUVCAMP@aol.com; www.cranelake-camp.com. Eisner Camp: Contact Louis Bordman, 212-650-4130 EISNERGUY@aol.com; www.eisnercamp.org

CUSHMAN VILLAGE GENERAL STORE DELI & BAKERY

Quality help wanted for spring summer & fall 2000. FT/PT-all shifts. Availability through vacations & long weekends preferred. Kitchen skills and customer service a plus. Apply in person. Cushman Village General Store, Deli & Bakery. 491 Pine St., Amherst, MA 01002 (5 minute drive North from Amherst Center.)

EMPLOYMENT

Full and part-time ice cream and sandwich shop on bike trail in Hadley. Ice Cream Peddler 586-9508.

FOR SALE

For sale: Burton Alpine 51 Raceboard. Never used. $100.00 O/B/O 549-2071.

GREEK ANNOUNCEMENTS

Sigma Delta Tau would like to welcome all Greeks back from Spring Break. Hope it was an amazing one!

HOUSE FOR RENT

4 Bedroom 2 bath 2 car garage full kitchen. 4 min from school. Hadley 549-6465 or 549-9382.

Rent 7 Room House or single rooms. In Sunderland on bus route. Available June 1st. Call Steve 413-665-2276

INSTRUCTION

Private Boxing Lessons w/ retired pro Djata Bumpus in Amherst. Call 413-256-0364

MISCELLANEOUS

Modeling & Acting Have you always dreamed of being a model or actor but don't know where or how to get started? New faces MIETOUR is coming to your area soon. For more info call 1-877-MIE-TOUR.

MISCELLANEOUS

Million dollar game shows? Forget 'em! Bring your basketball brain to Shoot, Score and Win a million! at www.sixdegrees.com for tons of chances to win cash and prizes.

What do basketball tournament games, cash and prizes, and you have in common? Look for Shoot, Score and Win a Million! at sixdegrees.com to find out.

Get paid to lose weight and inches. All natural, doctor recommended. 1-800-397-7715.

ROOMMATE WANTED

1 Room in 3 bedroom apt. in So. Amherst. $325/mo. Heat/electric included available immediately. 256-4581.

SERVICES

Have you been ripped off by a retailer? Contact the Student Legal services Office regarding your rights as a consumer. 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

SUMMER SUBLET

3 Bedroom 2 bath in Puffton from June to August. If interested call Lauren 546-1568.

SUMMER SUBLET

Looking for a place to live this summer/fall? Great house in Amherst with two available rooms. $305/month. Please call! Erin 413-549-1543.

Take over my lease. 1 bedroom/2 bedroom apartment. South Point on bus line. $355.00 Available 6/1. 253-5410.

TICKETS

2 Elton John tickets. April 8th Concert. Call Laura 546-4993.

Chili Peppers, Foo Fighters for sale. James 549-9254.

Need two tickets for Creed April 15. sbradshaw@qurs.com.

Elton John Seats Section 1 Floor 6. Available 888-441-5634

TRAVEL

Study Spanish. Internships in Guatemala. College Credit. www.casaxelaju.com (512)416-6991.

WANTED TO RENT

House wanted: 3-4 bedroom house very close to campus. Wanted for rent starting 6/1. Please call Lia @ 2536378 w/any information.

Place your ads in The Collegian Classifieds today!! Call us at 545-3500

Five College Community Calendar

FRIDAY, MAR. 24

Community – The UMass Police Department would like to invite female students and staff to partake in a women's self-defense course. The class requires a 14-hour commitment and runs from 6-8:30 p.m. each night. Registration is from 7:30-8 p.m. tonight at the UM police station and is first-come, first served. Classes for men are available upon request.

Concert – The five college area brings you the work of Tanja Leon as a concert which will include poems and performances by numerous artists. It will take place at Smith's Sweeney Concert Hall, Sage Hall at 8 p.m.

Prayer – The Muslim Student Association is holding a Jummaa Prayer between noon and 2 p.m. in the Campus Center. Please check listing by the C.C. elevators for room number.

SATURDAY, MAR. 25

Comedy – MISSION IMPROVable will perform its improvisational comedy show at 8 p.m. in room 163 of the Campus Center.

Community – The UMass Police Department would like to invite female students and staff to partake in a women's self-defense course. The class requires a 14-hour commitment and runs from 6-8:30 p.m. each night. Registration is from 7:30-8 p.m. tonight at the UM police station and is first-come, first served. Classes for men are available upon request.

Concert – Smith College and Rutgers University Glee Clubs will perform at 8 p.m. in Sweeney Concert Hall, Sage Hall, at Smith College.

SUNDAY, MAR. 26

Concert – There will be a wind ensemble, chamber winds, and jazz ensemble concert at 3 p.m. in Sweeney Concert Hall, Sage Hall, at Smith College.

Recital – There will be a senior recital with Adele Ashles at 8 p.m. in Sweeney Concert Hall, Sage Hall, at Smith College.

NOTICES

Community – Mass Appeal, the newest co-ed a cappella group at UMass, is looking for students to arrange music. E-mail Erica at mass-appeal@mailbox.com for more information.

Help – From Feb. 15-April 13 on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays from 5-8 p.m. students/ volunteers from the School of Management will assist non-resident aliens with the preparation of their Federal and State income tax returns. Call 545-3660 for more information.

Scholarships – The STEMTECP/NSF Teaching scholars program is offering scholarships to students who are interested in exploring a career in K-12 math or science teaching. Students do not need to be enrolled in a certificate program to apply. Applications are due by April 1. Contact Johanna at 545-0626 for more information.

Support – A grief support group is available to all students who have experienced the death of someone they love. The groups are free, small and confidential, and meet on Wednesday and Thursday evenings. Telephone pre-screening is required for enrollment. Call 577-5316 if interested.

Support – AL-ANON and ALATEENs are offering local meetings for those affected by someone else's drinking problem. Call 253-5261 for meeting times and locations.

If/fs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

BOOKBUCKS™ From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks,® you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

Ustore CAMPUS CENTER

Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

HSCN 4 Hosting Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board		221 Gavel to Gavel
3 CBS/3	Hartford	222 NBC/22 Springfield
4 CBS/4	Boston	223 CNN Headline News
5 ABC/5	Boston	224 CNN
6 PBS/57	Springfield	225 CNN fn
8 HSCN	Movie Ch.	226 CNN SI
9 UPN/20	Hartford	227 TBS
10 Weather Channel		228 TNT
11 NBC/30 New Britain		229 College TV Network
11 Fox/61	Hartford	230 Univision
12 PBS/24	Hartford	231 Comedy Central
13 WOCH & HSCN		232 Cartoon Network
14 International		233 TV Land
15 UMass Academic TV		234 C-Span
16 WB/New Haven		235 ZDTV (Tentative)
17 Sundance		236 Bloomberg Financial Network
18 The Learning Channel		237 History Channel
19 UVC-TV19		238 HSCN Programming
20 ABC/40 Springfield

FRIDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MARCH 24, 2000

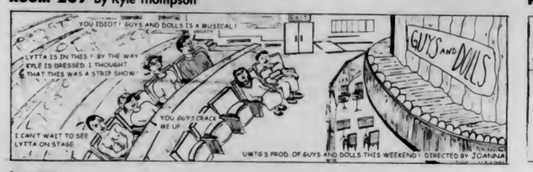
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Zobooma!oo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ⧖		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	Legislative Television		New Cop on the Beat		Nova "Crocodiles!" (In Stereo)
WFSB	3	News ⧖	CBS News	Inside Edition	College Basketball: NCAA Tourn. East or South Regional Semi. -- Teams TBA					College Basketball: NCAA Tourn.
WBZ	4	News ⧖	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	College Basketball: NCAA Tourn. East or South Regional Semi. -- Teams TBA					College Basketball: NCAA Tourn.
WCVB	5	News ⧖	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle ⧖	Who Wants to Be a Millionaire		Making the Band ⧖		20/20 ⧖	News ⧖	Nightline ⧖
WLVI	56	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends ⧖	Nanny ⧖	Jamie Foxx ⧖	Jamie Foxx ⧖	Steve Harvey	For Your Love	News ⧖	Friends ⧖	Nanny ⧖
WHDH	60	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ⧖	Providence "I Memory Serves"		Dateline (In Stereo) ⧖		Law & Order: Special Victims	News	Tonight Show
WTXX	6	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Blind Date	Real TV (R) ⧖	★★ "Sinking Distance" (1993, Drama) Bruce Willis, (In Stereo) ⧖				News	Real TV (R) ⧖	Blind Date	Change-Heart
WWIT	10	News	NBC News	Extra ⧖	Ent. Tonight	Providence "I Memory Serves"		Dateline (In Stereo) ⧖		Law & Order: Special Victims	News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons ⧖	Fraser ⧖	Seinfeld ⧖	Friends ⧖	World's Wildest Police Videos		Greed: The Series (In Stereo)		News	Friends ⧖	Fraser ⧖
WWLP	22	News ⧖	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ⧖	Providence "I Memory Serves"		Dateline (In Stereo) ⧖		Law & Order: Special Victims	News ⧖	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ⧖		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	Powerplay: "Rolling Stones: Bridges to Babylon"			Charlie Rose (In Stereo) ⧖
WGGB	40	News ⧖	ABC News	Seinfeld ⧖	Frasier ⧖	Who Wants to Be a Millionaire		Making the Band ⧖		20/20 ⧖	News ⧖	Nightline ⧖
WSBK	38	Judge Judy ⧖	Judge Judy ⧖	Seinfeld ⧖	Frasier ⧖	★★ "Sinking Distance" (1993, Drama) Bruce Willis, (In Stereo) ⧖				Star Trek: Voyager "The 37's"	Mad Abt. You	Judge Mathis
WTBS	26	Rosesnne ⧖	Roseanne ⧖	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	★★ "Problem Child 2" (1991, Comedy) John Ritter, Michael Oliver.				★ "Buffy the Vampire Slayer" (1992, Comedy)
AAE	17	L.A. Law "His Suit Is Hirsute"		Law & Order "Wannabe" ⧖		Biography: Lesley Ann Warren		Investigative Reports (R) ⧖		Poirot "The Third-Floor Flat" ⧖	Law & Order "Golden Years" ⧖
CNN	23	Worldview ⧖	Moneyline Newshour ⧖		Crossfire ⧖	World Today ⧖		Larry King Live ⧖		Newsstand ⧖	Sports	Moneyline (R)
COM	30	Sat. Night Live	Behind	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	★★ "Better Off Dead" (1985, Comedy) John Cusack.				★★ "Love Potion No. 9" (1992, Comedy) Tate Donovan. ⧖
DISC	21	Your New House (R)		Wild Discovery "Jungle Nights"		On the Inside "Killer Floods" (R)	News		Discover Mag.	Storm Warning! (R)		On the Inside "Killer Floods" (R)
ESPN	43	Sportscenter ⧖		Up Close	Cheerleading	Figure Skating: Four Continents Championship.				Baseball		Sportscenter ⧖
LIFE	29	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		"Fatal Vows: The Alexandra O'Hara Story" (1994) Cynthia Gibb.				★★½ "Shattered Dreams" (1990, Drama) Lindsay Wagner.
MTV	33	Spnnger	Spring Break	Britney's Vid.	Karaoke	Fashionably	Spring Break	Springer		Blink 182-Idiot	Dude	Fashionably	Cel. Stripdown
NICK	25	All That	Cesdog	U Pick Nicktoons (In Stereo) ⧖		Kenan & Kel	U Pick-Toons	Brady Bunch	Bev. Hillbillies	All in Family	Jeffersons ⧖	I Love Lucy	Bewitched
SCIFI	35	Sliders "Applied Physics" ⧖		Brimstone "Carrier" (In Stereo) ⧖		Farscape "Vitas Mortis" ⧖		Good vs. Evil (In Stereo) ⧖		Lexx: The Series "Fermina" ⧖		Farscape "Vitas Mortis" (R) ⧖
TLC	28	Home Again	Home Again	Life After Death		Speed! Crash! Rescue! (R)		Motorcycles -- Born to Be Wild		Death Defying Stunts		Speed! Crash! Rescue! (R)
TNT	63	In the Heat of the Night ⧖		ER "Getting to Know You" ⧖		★★★ "Forever Young" (1992, Fantasy) Mel Gibson.				★★★ "Running Scared" (1986, Comedy) Gregory Hines.
USA	27	Baywatch "Nevermore" ⧖		JAG "Yeah, Baby" (In Stereo) ⧖		Walker, Texas Ranger ⧖		★★★ "Sharkwrlands" (1993, Drama) Anthony Hopkins, Debra Winger. (In Stereo) ⧖
HBO	31	★★ "I'll Do Anything" (1994, Comedy) Nick Nolte, "PG-13" ⧖				★★½ "Predator" (1987) Arnold Schwarzenegger.				"No Alibi" (1999, Suspense) Dean Cain, (In Stereo) "NR" ⧖		Dennis Miller
MAX	32	★★ "Just Write" (1998, Comedy) Sherilyn Fenn. (In Stereo) "PG-13" ⧖				★½ "Idle Hands" (1999) Devon Sawa, "R" ⧖				★★★ "Interview With the Vampire" (1994, Horror) Tom Cruise, "R"		Passion Cove
SHOW	34	(4:45)	★½ "A Night at the Roxbury" (1998) Will Ferrell.			★★ "At First Sight" (1999, Drama) Val Kilmer, PG-13 ⧖				Stargate SG-1 "Demons" (R) ⧖	Outer Limits	Red Shoe

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau



Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Livin' By Sean Scanlon

Room 207 By Kyle Thompson

Spunk By Mike LaRiccia

Adam and Eric By Ross Burach

Balderdash By Tim Dwyer

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Nona By Anna Faktorovich

Horoscopes

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – Promises may come your way today which are difficult to take at face-value, but it is likely they will all be kept in the long run.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – You are in need of a little boost, and you know just whom to go to before the day is out. That special someone can lift your spirits and inspire you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – You'll find yourself recounting a favorite tale today – again and again. The more you tell it, the more you're likely to learn from it.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – You're not going to be the one to lead the way into something unknown or dangerous. You may, however, find temptation too much and follow willingly.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Even the most trivial development can prove important to you before this day is out. Pay particular attention to the unexpected.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Someone may be making decisions for you at this time, and it's simply got to stop. Go straight to the source – and stop it ASAP!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – Someone working with you may be in need of a talk – and it'll be up to you to say what must be said without hurting anyone's feelings.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – Something that seems trivial to you may be a matter of official policy and very difficult to change. Be prepared to put up with it!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Surrounding yourself with critics will do nothing for your self-esteem today – so you must know when you are endangering your confidence.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – You may have to work slowly today in order to keep track of your own progress. There isn't anyone else to watch over you at this time.

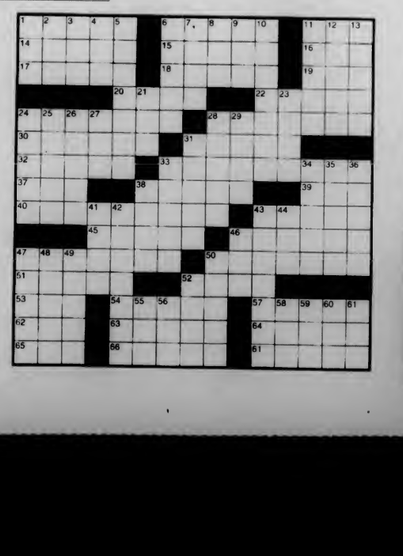
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – You're interested in pursuing a higher purpose today. Follow your instincts, and along the way you may actually receive a calling.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – Be ready to face a crisis today – though it may not actually materialize. Still, it is always better to be safe than sorry – especially today.

Quote of the Day

"Self-improvement is masturbation. Self-destruction - that's the answer."

–"Fight Club"



ACROSS
1 Memento
6 Up and about
11 Last but — least
14 Coral formation
15 Pet owner's buy
16 Gold: Sp.
17 Shade tree
18 African language
19 Harlem chamber
20 Neighbor on
22 Rioted
24 Propriety
28 Farm machines
30 Rain off to wed
31 Ungallant ones
32 Weaken as an excuse
33 Kind of sauce
37 Cash dispenser abbr.
38 Golf clubs
39 Make haste
40 Senior-class publications
43 Stringed instruments
45 Pound part
46 Interfere
47 Cleopatra's needle, e.g.
50 Own
51 Type of discussion
52 Ears of corn
53 Devoured
54 Forbidden
57 Comic Murphy
62 That fellow
63 Carefree episode
64 Glances
65 Cloud's region
66 Requires
67 Expensive

DOWN
1 Male sheep
2 Timetable info
3 Chop (off)
4 Down with the flu
5 Plainer
6 Stamp holder
7 Bench for one
8 Neutra color
9 "Social" and "sterile" e.g.
10 Kind of pie
11 Loop
12 Select from the menu
13 Common amphibians
21 Type of vase
23 Church part
24 Postpone
25 Make happy
26 Punctuation mark
27 Unlock, poet.
28 Some horses
29 Long times
31 Out of dough
33 Type of pot
34 — Island
35 Creaks
36 Wales in favor
38 Charged particles
41 — model
42 Like some bookcases
43 Sings
44 Psyche parts
46 Timing
47 Brightly colored fish
48 Hand-printed textile
49 Hostile force
50 Places to swim
52 Frigid
55 Citrus cooler
56 "So long!"
58 Speck
59 Forest animal
60 Presidential nickname
61 Clairvoyant's skill

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

3-30-00 © 2000 United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Lunch

Fried Clams
Tamale Pie
Savory Rice & Spinach Bake (vegetarian) (Berkshire & Worcester)
Tofu with Snow Peas (vegan)

Dinner

Chicken Fingers
Sweet Potato Quesadilla (vegetarian)
Ginger Black Beans (vegan)

Today's Staff

Night Editor: Adam Martignetti
Photo Technician: Kara Stokes
Copy Editor: Sam Wilkinson
Production Supervisor: Alan Basque
Production Staff: Elana Premack, Vlad Zahaschanskiy

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Stephanie Pavlick has scored in each of the Minutewomen's first two games, despite both games resulting in losses.

No time to relax

Spring in air as infamous Orangewomen raid Amherst

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

If clichés should be avoided in the world of sports writing, it would be wrong to mention that spring is upon us and the birds are chirping. It would be wrong to try and compare weather's new beginning with that of the Massachusetts women's lacrosse team, whose season-opening loss to Harvard was not only heart-wrenching, but also came in the freezing rain that marks the ambiguous transition between winter and spring.

It would be horrible to say that tomorrow's game against Syracuse at 1 p.m. at Totman Field will hopefully be a turning point not only for Mother Nature, but for the Minutewomen as well.

"We're just looking forward to having a fun game," UMass coach Phil Barnes said. "It's going to be warm out, we're looking for a lot of fans and to a have a great spring day."

The sun in the sky might clear away the rain that punctuated Massachusetts' 0-2 start – its other loss being a 10-6 defeat at the hands of No. 17 Cornell. But Syracuse is less interested in being used as a catalyst for a Maroon and White Atlantic 10 stampede. Only four games stand between the Minutewomen and their conference schedule, and a victory over a national powerhouse like the Orangewomen would be just the thing to supply UMass with instantaneous momentum.

Still, these are the same opponents that invited Massachusetts into their home, the notorious Carrier Dome, last year and proceeded to pummel them by an 11-2 margin. Syracuse, traditionally a lacrosse powerhouse, is the reigning ECAC champion. While 'Cuse holds a less-than-intimidating 1-3 record, their losses came at the hands of three Top 10 opponents. Last season, the Orangewomen began their campaign with losses to a trio of highly ranked teams, and then went on to win 12 out of 13 to finish the year.

"I've never viewed it as a mountain to climb," Barnes said. "It's just another game. We're going to go out and concentrate on what we do well as a team, and do our job, and if we do that, when the final whistle blows, we'll have more points."

If clichés were still to be avoided in sports writing, it would be wrong to asterisk that impressive resume by pointing out that the one major loss that Syracuse suffered to graduation at the end of last season, Carrie Bolduc, a 25-point scorer, is now an assistant coach with the Minutewomen.

"Carrie last year was an emotional leader for them in games and in practice," Barnes said. "Whenever you lose someone like that, there's always a hole to be filled."

On the other hand, there are next to no holes in the leadership of UMass, who have nine seniors and seven juniors returning from 1999.

"Our strength is that we're a little more experienced at every position," Barnes said.

The defensive-minded Minutewomen will be digging in to stop the "run-and-gun" Orangewomen. While Massachusetts returns nearly all of a defensive unit that was eighth in the nation keeping points off the scoreboard last year (with 7.40 goals a contest), Syracuse reached a score of 18 or more three times last season.

Something will have to give when the strong Orangewomen transition offense meets up with the strong Minutewomen transition defense at Totman Field tomorrow.

"They're a lot like their men's team, they'll take risks at any point in time in the game," Barnes said. "They play a high-scoring game and we play a low-scoring game."

Minutewomen marked by division challengers

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

When you're good, smart teams are weary of you. But when you're great, everyone wants a crack at bringing you down.

The story for the No. 11 Massachusetts women's water polo team (14-5) isn't much different. The Minutewomen patrol the New England division with targets on their backs, the subjects of countless pep talks on David and Goliath, and the losers of many a fantasy upset daydream.

But for the other four teams participating in this weekend's Collegiate Water Polo Association New England Tournament in New Haven, CT, any thought of bringing down UMass is probably just that – a fantasy. The Maroon and White chewed up the entire bracket – Yale, Dartmouth, Brown and Mt. Holyoke – en route to first place in last weekend's CWPA round robin.

Coach Dan McOsker's team outscored its four adversaries by a combined total of 52-9, with the closest tally coming via a 5-0 forfeit from Mt. Holyoke.

"We really played solid as a team throughout the tournament," McOsker commented afterward. "The girls were able to concentrate and play real well in each and every game."

This weekend's action will begin with a Mt. Holyoke rematch scheduled for noon tomorrow. As a club sport in a sea of varsity programs, coach Andy Reynolds' crew may have a little extra motivation to topple the division's top dogs. Reynolds is not only a UMass graduate, but a former polo player for the Maroon and White as well.

The Minutewomen will retake the pool at 6 p.m. tomorrow for a melee with Brown, whom they flattened 14-2 on Wednesday night and 16-6 last weekend. Eight different Minutewomen scored in the first meeting between the two teams, and second-year goalkeeper Dana Simkwich piled up 14 saves over the course of the two contests.

Despite UMass' recent success against the Bears, McOsker warily watches Brown as a New England rival that grows smarter, and more intelligent as a team, with each loss.

"They have an excellent program at Brown," McOsker said. "They get tougher each time we play them; I'm sure they're making adjustments after every game."

Sunday's slate will start bright and early, as Yale provides UMass with its next obstacle at 9:30 a.m. The host

Turn to POLO, page 7

JARET BARR/COLLEGIAN

The women's water polo squad will look to repeat on its undefeated performance in last weekend's regional tournament with a flawless fling in New Haven.

UMass hopes to eliminate Elis

Baseball to play two in New Haven

By Matthew Despres
Collegian Staff

Heading into the 2000 season, head baseball coach Mike Stone had high hopes for his young squad; a pool of fresh talent augmented by key upperclassmen he thought could deliver on the field. Although it suffered in the first week of the season, the Massachusetts baseball team has found its grooves as of late, reeling off its sixth win in a row at the hands of Holy Cross on Wednesday. Coach Stone and his team will try and ride this building wave of momentum as they head to Connecticut this Saturday to battle Yale (5-12) in an afternoon doubleheader.

To walk away with a pair of wins, the UMass bats will have to sustain their attack evenly throughout the afternoon. Although the Minutemen had nine hits on Wednesday, the offense tapered off in the later innings, collecting only one hit after the third. Sophomore Aaron Senez will look to repeat his performance on Wednesday, when the shortstop went 2-for-3 with two runs batted in and a run scored. His double in the first inning against Holy Cross was a major catalyst in sparking the UMass offense.

Third basemen Matt Boulanger will need to settle in at the plate again, where the freshman had a pair of hits and scored a run in the 6-1 win Wednesday. Senior Shaun Skeffington and freshman Jeff Altieri did not have such luck, collecting just one hit between them in eight at-bats.

The Minutemen will also be looking for consistency on the mound, where junior southpaw Craig Szado dominated on Wednesday in a six-inning, three-hit performance. Before giving up two hits in the sixth, Szado retired 15 consecutive batters. A similar effort from the UMass staff will be expected in this weekend's play.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Senior Shaun Skeffington is hitting .324 this season, collecting three RBI and seven bases along the way.

Although the Bulldogs stand seven games under .500, they have weapons to stay competitive. They are returning three of their top five hitters, as well as half of their starters from last year. The major offensive threat comes in the shape of senior captain Tony Coyne. Despite a knee injury last year, the shortstop was able to hit .417 and capture first-team All Ivy honors. He led the team with six home runs, and remained near the top of most every offensive category. He has returned at full strength this season, and will bring a .298 batting average into the weekend play.

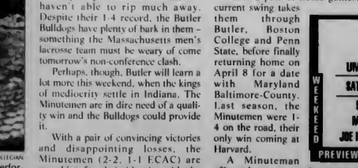
Alongside Coyne, the Bulldogs also send out the strong bat of second basemen Brian Ivy. The senior is back at Yale after transferring to the University of Texas, currently leading the team in homeruns with three, and batting second with a solid .328 average. Freshman Steven Duke has been a huge plus for the Bulldogs, batting .314 in his first year of play. Fellow freshman Darren Beasley will handle the duties behind the plate, but is only hitting a paltry .180.

The biggest factor in the equation for Yale lies on the mound. They bring back seven pitchers from last season, all of which started at least 10 games during that time. Senior Sudha Reddy has developed into a consistent force, having spent time in each of the past three seasons in the starting rotation. Supporting Reddy is sophomore Matt McCarthy, who was the 1999 Yale rookie of the year, and also boasts of the teams lowest ERA.

The first game of the double header is scheduled for 12 p.m. at Yale Field.

Men's lax to get test in facing Bulldogs

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff



They've gritted their teeth, but haven't able to rip much away. Despite their 1-4 record, the Butler Bulldogs have plenty of bark in them – something the Massachusetts men's lacrosse team must be weary of come tomorrow's non-conference clash.

Perhaps, though, Butler will learn a lot more this weekend, when the kings of mediocrity settle in Indiana. The Minutemen are in dire need of a quality win and the Bulldogs could provide it.

With a pair of convincing victories and disappointing losses, the Minutemen (2-2, 1-1 ECAC) are searching for their identity with the 'Dogs on tap tomorrow at the Butler Bowl. While BU has found its place among the world of college lacrosse, albeit somewhere in the middle, UMass still has yet to get the feel.

After a pair of home games, the current swing takes them through Butler, Boston College and Penn State, before finally returning home on April 8 for a date with Maryland Baltimore-County. Last season, the Minutemen were 1-4 on the road, their only win coming at Harvard.

A Minuteman offense has yet to make up its mind, answering the call last week by disposing of Vermont, 14-6, but only after Navy unveiled the Maroon and White's weakness, holding them to just three goals. The question remains whether or not UMass can score on a regular basis, a problem that has riddled the squad in recent years.

In the triumph over the Catamounts, the Minutemen fired more shots than they had in the two losses combined. Shots found against UVM simply have not opened up against the nation's elite. However, Butler (1-4, 1-0 Great Western Lacrosse League) stands in the neutral zone, close to the top as well as the bottom.

Butler's bowed to three teams in the top eight, including ECAC member Georgetown, 18-7, three weeks back. Its lone win coming against Ohio State, the Bulldogs have competed with undefeated North Carolina (13-7) and Duke (14-10).

The Bulldogs are led onto the field by senior midfielder Matt McSweeny, who had compiled eight goals and eight assists in BU's five games thus far. He scored two goals and added two assists in the team's solo victory, a 9-8 decision at Ohio State, a fellow league member.

UMass will counter with a stellar defense that has taken a beating thanks to the offense's futility. Navy has scored in double figures in all of its games except its battle with the

Turn to LAX, page 7

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Volume CVI Issue 58 Monday, March 27, 2000

Howe, Avakian win SGA elections; both to serve second terms

"It's nice to see such a high turnout," Zetye said, adding that he'd, "much rather lose with 488 votes then win with it. It would suck if I won with 488 votes out of the 20,000 on this campus."

"I'm thrilled, this is an extraordinary thing, and it was nice to be able to go out and to tell people what we've been doing and get such a positive response," Avakian said.

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

Jeff Howe and Seth Avakian have won an unprecedented second term as the Student Government Association President and Trustee after the highest voter turnout in recent memory.

Avakian beat Asif Sayani by 197 votes, 1482-1285, while Howe beat the next closest competitor and Sayani's running mate Jim Eltringham by 264 votes, 1388 to 1124. One other pairs of candidates came in third and fourth respectively, with Andy Foley receiving 397 votes for Trustee and Phil Zetye receiving 488 votes for President. Two write-in candidates, Gabriel Tavarez, who ran for president, and Malcolm Beckwith, who ran for trustee, received 114 and 120 votes respectively.

"I'm thrilled, this is an extraordinary thing, and it was nice to be able to go out and to tell people what we've been doing and get such a positive response," Avakian said. "As a result of these elections, we've discovered that we need to do a better job of being communicative with our constituents."

Howe too was pleased, noting that the victory made him "feel good about a lot of the work we've done over the past year. The student body is paying attention to what we've been doing, and it makes me feel confident that we've done a good job."

Avakian also commented on voter turnout, saying that it had been largely unexpected because of MASSPIRG's non-involvement in this year's election.

"Usually, they bring five to seven percent of students out to vote, so being able to get such high numbers voting was really nice," Avakian said. When asked what factors could have led to such high turnout, Avakian said that a combination of exposure, large campus-wide issues and SGA involvement encouraged students to vote.

He also noted that he was very pleased to be known as part of the first ever tandem of re-elected SGA leaders. Avakian said that "hot items" during the elections included the possible placement of security cameras on dormitory lobbies, a move vehemently opposed by Avakian and Howe.

"We can get going right away on the new students program and some other full year projects," Howe said. "We'll also work with the administration to oppose surveillance cameras being installed anywhere on campus."

Both responded to the election with confidence, saying that high turnout gave them faith in the job they have been doing.

"We see this election as a mandate from student's as support for the things we've done," Avakian commented, before adding that he and Howe would, "look at issues that other candidates ran on in an attempt to incorporate them into our agenda."

As for Howe, he has to find new cabinet members to replace those leaving to either graduate or study abroad.

"I'll be opening up applications for all positions in the next week," Howe said. Positions available will include the Attorney General and the Secretary of the Registry.

Besides replacing his candidates, Howe feels that the current SGA administration will be able to start out strong, as "we won't have those first few months to learn about how to do our jobs."

As for the other candidates in the election, all said they felt the election was fairly run.

"This is democracy and progress," Sayani said. "It was a fair election and as far as that goes, it was probably one of the fairest in SGA's history."

He said the numbers of students that turned out to vote excited him and that hopefully those numbers would go up again next year. His only quibble with the election was a campaign process that lasted only five days before elections.

"The student body should have more information about the issues rather than just students voting for the sake of voting," Sayani said.

His running mate, Eltringham, was unavailable for comment.

Zetye said that he felt that "Jeff and Seth put together a bang-up campaign, and did a lot of things right to win an election."

The campaign's second runner-up said that he was impacted when his election manager, write-in candidate Tavarez, decided to run as a write-in candidate two days before the election.

"It impacted me," Zetye said, refusing to explain further. But he said that he was pleased by the student turnout. "I was really glad to see a lot of people who otherwise wouldn't vote, voting."

"It's nice to see such a high turnout," Zetye said, adding that he'd, "much rather lose with 488 votes then win with it. It would suck if I won with 488 votes out of the 20,000 on this campus."

Zetye said he was pleased to know that a "portion of the population believed in us and what we were trying to do, but then again, other portions felt the same way about Jeff and Seth and Asif and Jim."

He said that he would continue to address the issues that he'd addressed before.

"If I'd won the election and now that I haven't, I'm still going to continue to do the same sorts of things that I've been doing for all my years here at UMass."

Jeff Howe

Seth Avakian

Students elect area senators; pass questions

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

In campus wide elections held last Thursday and Friday, University of Massachusetts students split their answers on three referendum questions and chose their area governors for next year.

Asked to answer three separate referendum questions, UMass students voted "yes" for one of them and "no" for the other two.

Question one concerned the placement of surveillance cameras in residence halls. Students responded, and while 514 supported their placement, 1900 did not. Placing of cameras in residence halls was a major campaign issue for President and Trustee elections winners Jeff Howe and Seth Avakian.

Students answered no to question two which asked if the UMass New Student Program prepared stu-

Turn to SENATORS, page 2

Students critique election results

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

Students questioned Sunday offered both their comments and opinions on the recently completed Student Government Association elections.

The election itself saw the appointment of current student Trustee Seth Avakian and incumbent president Jeff Howe to yet another term in their respective positions. It also brought roughly 3,000 undergraduates out to the polls, one of the highest voter turnout numbers in recent years, to vote for candidates and also to vote on three ballot questions.

One of the main complaints expressed by students regarding the election process itself was the fact that coverage for the election was in a way limited. According to Theva Rajan, a junior Hotel, Restaurant and Travel Administration major, the coverage was not extensive enough to allow students to fully form an opinion about the candidates. He explained that he did not get a sense of what the candidates were advocating, due to the fact that campaigning only took place on a few of the days preceding the election.

"You cannot identify with the candidates on what they want to do," he said.

Rajan went on to say that he also did not feel as though the organization was adequately representing the students, due to the low number of voters that actually turned up for the election. He explained that if the candidates were to begin campaigning earlier for the election, they might be able to make their positions on all issues much clearer to the voting population. He explained that because they could not communicate their issues to the students, they could not adequately represent them. He explained that if students had a better grasp of the issues, "the voter turnout would be higher."

"They don't actually have a mandate of the people, and they are not actually fighting for the people," he said.

He commented that he felt that both Howe and Avakian were elected because they were the incumbent candidates and their names were much more readily recognized on the ballot and by the entire student population.

"Their names have been appearing," he said. "They won this time around because they were incumbents."

Freshman School of Management major Namrata Kakkar also explained that she felt the election campaigning was not adequate and that because of this, many students could not get a sense of what the issues were really about.

"I didn't think that the campaigning was that good," she said.

She went on to say that she did not vote because she did not know the issues and could not get a feel for what the candidates themselves stood for.

"I didn't know what was happening," she said "I didn't know what it was all about."

Ryan Lamore, a sophomore business management major, felt that Avakian and Howe were the best candidates for their positions. He explained that he had a fairly good idea of how the elections ran, due to witnessing them first hand last year, and that he felt Avakian and Howe ran the best campaigns and were best suited for the job.

"I felt that Howe should win again because of the elections last year," he said. "I lived in the dorms and I saw more of how the election was run."

He also commented that neither candidate had to do anything much differently in their positions than they had in the past, because both had done a good job for the campus as a whole.

> "They don't actually have a mandate of the people and they are not actually fighting for the people...they won this time around because they were incumbents'

Oscars abound for 'Beauty' and Matrix sweeps effects categories

By Adam Martignetti
Collegian Staff

A sweep, it was not to be.

American Beauty may have been the favorite heading into last night's Oscars, but it did not sweep the 72nd Annual Academy Awards at many critics expected. American Beauty did claim five major awards, of the eight for which it was nominated, including Best Picture.

In one of the more diverse ceremonies in recent memory, it appeared early on that American Beauty would peter out. In fact, it led the first three categories in which it appeared. However, the Oscar favorite was not to be denied forever. Cinematography was American Beauty's first win and it took off from there. Conrad L. Hall (Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid) took home this award for his beautiful, Impressionistic repr[illegible]suburban America. [illegible]ured Best Original Screenplay [illegible] American Beauty its second win on the night.

Turn to OSCAR, page 3

CAITLIN WINKWORTH/ COLLEGIAN

Judith Young, an astronomer at the University of Massachusetts, has received a $75,000 grant to expand the campus Sunwheel.

Sunwheel grant for University

By Virginia Avadisian
Collegian Staff

Judith Young, an astronomer at the University of Massachusetts, has received a $75,000 grant to expand the campus Sunwheel, an astronomical calendar located on the southwest corner of the campus. The funding is from the National Science Foundation's POWRE (Professional Opportunities for Women in Research and Education) program.

Many students are not aware of what a Sunwheel is or what it is used for. A Sunwheel is a calendar. Like Stonehenge, the stories of a Sunwheel align perfectly with the rising and setting of the sun at the times of solstices and equinoxes.

For thousands of years, human beings have been fascinated by the cycles in nature. Astronomically, these cycles include the daily rising and setting of the sun, moon and stars, the monthly cycles of the phases of the moon, and the yearly cycle of the seasons. The long-term repeatability of these cycles provided an indication to human beings throughout time of the presence of order in the universe. Cultures that depended on farming learned how to use the sun as a calendar, and in particular, to mark the seasons through observations of the location of sunrise and sunset along the horizon. Some cultures also used these observations of the sun to indicate the proper times for ceremonies.

"The UMass Sunwheel contributes significantly to the pub-

Turn to SUNWHEEL, page 2

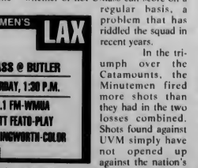
Deale seeks activism

By Adam Martignetti
Collegian Staff

Last Friday, Frank E. Deale, a professor at the City University of New York (CUNY) School of Law, beseeched potential law students to seek out future opportunities for political activism. During his speech, "Social Activism and the Law: Legal Careers that make a difference," Deale urged students to consider activism as a more fulfilling career choice, and as a viable alternative to the riches typically promised by Wall Street or investment banking.

Building on his own personal history, Deale outlined a path whereby lawyers could become more engaged with their clients by not only defending them, but also helping them change the judicial system as a whole. He was careful to emphasize the latter part of this philosophy saying, "There are activists and then there are activists." And real activists work to change the system in which they work.



Professor Deale began his journey at Antioch College, which he described as an activist institution. He chose Antioch because of their co-op program. The program gave Deale the opportunity to become involved outside the classroom – something he views as "an integral part of the educational experience." Likewise, Deale also stresses the importance of practical experience or clinical programs when selecting a law school.

"In my mind, a law school is defined by the extent of its clinical programs," Deale said.

However, he cautions that students today have other options besides law school to become politically active. He linked his decision to attend law school at the University of Pennsylvania to, "my desire to engage in some type of social change. This feeling was shared by many thanks in part to a tumultuous political climate, and in part to the Warren Berger court, which saw law school as more closely connected to the actual profession of being a lawyer.

UPenn did not offer the type of clinical programs that Deale now recommends for students, though, and here again he felt as if something was missing. After graduating from UPenn, Deale took a job at the Center for Constitutional Rights before being offered a job at Rutgers

Turn to DEALE, page 3

Survey Says!

See what zany things Seth Koenig has to say this week on today's Ed/Op page!

PAGE 4

It was a Monster weekend

Today in Arts, Dave Troupes tries to recover from seeing Whatever It Takes, UMass welcomes Guys and Dolls, and the latest Crow soundtrack is reviewed. Arts: we said adios to our pantalones long ago.

PAGE 8

Titanic Two-Sacker

Senior second baseman Shaun Skeffington had a monster of a doubleheader against Yale this weekend, going 4-for-7 in game one and scoring the winning run in game two on a wild pitch. Collegian sports: we're never afraid to shake off the signs.

PAGE 12

Arts & Living 8
Comics 11
Crossword 11
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 12

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

■ senators

continued from page 1

dents for their first year at the University. The closest of the three votes, 1283 answered that the program did not prepare them with 1094 saying it did.

The SGA also asked if students would be more likely to vote if they could vote online. Almost two thirds of students, 1581, said yes, while 834 said no.

Meanwhile, candidates for Area Government were still sweating out election results of yesterday, although it was believed that only one campaign, that for Orchard Hill, would be in any serious question, as Michael Whitehouse and John Sheehan ran against one another. Elections Commissioner Jeremy Roiille said that he would "be up late into the evening counting these votes as it will probably be a very close election."

He described other area government elections as "land-slides" with most candidates easily winning.

Judy Campbell, who described area government as only having only the "benefit of making sure house councils run smoothly."

He said that he hoped to help house councils write constitutions so that, unlike this year when house councils had their funds frozen, they could get started as soon as possible.

"I want to have a Constitution Writing 101 so that they [house councils] can get their programs going right away," Campbell said. "A lot of house councils did nothing this year because their funds were frozen."

Campbell also said that he hoped to work with whom ever won in Orchard Hill to have a joint event between the two areas of housing.

"Instead of just Fill the Hill, I want to see a three day event." Campbell said. He explained that, after helping house councils with their constitutions, the second half of his year would be spent planning the joined event.

Kerry Mulcahy who was elected as the Southwest Area Governor joined Campbell in victory.

"I thought I had a pretty good chance, and think I had a pretty good turnout," Mulcahy said. "People out there were interested, and I did some knocking on doors and I was at the DCs talking to people

She said that "this year would be better with Title 5 going through which will lead to more cohesion between area government and the Student Government association."

Besides working on a better Southwest Week, Mulcahy was vague of her intentions, saying only that she would work on "more stuff throughout the year."

Unlike Campbell and Mulcahy, who were both on the ballot, Mike McCarthy won a write-in campaign in Northeast.

"I knocked on doors and talked to friends who talked to their friends," McCarthy said. Away with ROTC over the weekend, McCarthy said he thought the voter turnout was a result of strong candidates running strong campaigns.

He said that he would try to let Northeast area residents know more about the campus and hoped that more people could be active in the residential area.

CAITLIN WINNINGHOFF- COLLEGIAN

Lounging around...

Lindsey Chute, a sophomore Theatre major, lounges in the sunshine with her guitar and a few friends.

■ sunwheel

continued from page 1

lic science education," Young said. She has made astronomy presentations to more than 1,500 individuals and 800 schoolchildren who have already visited the preliminary Sunwheel, which was constructed in May of 1997. Some of the topics she speaks on include measuring time, seasons, eclipses, phases of the moon, and light and shadows.

"The Sunwheel is valuable because it takes a complex scientific phenomenon and puts it into an everyday context which people of all ages can experience and understand," said Young.

The circle, currently marked by two-foot high boulders, has a 50-foot radius. These stones serve as placeholders for the eight-foot monoliths that Young hopes to have installed late this summer in time for the autumnal equinox with money that she received from the grant. The taller stones will allow the circle to be visible in all seasons, regardless of high grasses or accumulated snow. The final circle will be 120 feet in diameter. In the meantime, the rocks already in place serve as a teaching tool, making astronomical ideas visible and concrete for students ranging from University undergraduates, to local schoolchildren and the general public.

The last major event was March 20, the vernal equinox, when Young gave short talks at the Sunwheel at sunrise, 5:45a.m., and sunset, 5:15 p.m. She also gave a moonrise presentation at sunset on March 19, at approximately 5:15 p.m. as the full moon was rising.

Young was inspired to create the UMass Sunwheel during a trip to Montana in 1992, where she saw a Sunwheel constructed long ago, probably by the Blackfeet Indian tribe. The UMass Sunwheel is the only one in the country located at a university, according to Young. The public is welcome to visit the Sunwheel at any time.

"Students today see technology as such an integral part of the world, it's hard for them to imagine learning without it. This is not a classroom lesson or even a planetarium with an artificial sky. This is the real thing, and it's happening right before our eyes," Young said.

"Einstein said, 'knowledge is experience; everything else is just information,'" she explained. "Are you going to learn about astronomy in books, or are you going to watch it happen?"

Energy department restores warheads

By Walter Pincus
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON – The Energy Department plans to renovate more than 6,000 aging nuclear warheads over the next 15 years, almost double the number that the United States is allowed to deploy under the START II arms-reduction treaty, according to senior U.S. officials.

The added warheads will make up what Energy Department officials refer to as the "inactive reserve," some 2,500 to 3,000 refurbished warheads that would give the United States the ability to match another country's sudden production of additional warheads.

This plan, the legacy of a 6-year-old presidential decision, is coming under sharp criticism from arms-control proponents. They contend that it is unnecessary and possibly counterproductive to maintain an arsenal of 6,000 warheads at a time when President Clinton and other U.S. officials are attempting to persuade India, Pakistan, North Korea, China, and Russia to halt or restrain their nuclear-weapons programs.

"While the president is talking about the dangers of nuclear weapons, technicians at the national laboratories are working to refurbish a stockpile the size of which is unaffected by any agreement or treaty," said Janne Nolan, director of international programs for the Century Foundation and a former official in the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

The United States spends about $4.6 billion a year to maintain its nuclear arsenal. But to address what the acting head of Energy's defense programs called "shortfalls in production readiness," the department is requesting $55 million in the supplemental appropriations bill before Congress.

The funds are "essential," Brig. Gen. Thomas F. Gioconda told a House Armed Services subcommittee last week, to support "important workloads" at three plants involved in the refurbishing program: Pantex in Texas, Y-12 in Tennessee, and the so-called Kansas City plant in Missouri.

The first Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty (START I), signed in 1991, permits Washington and Moscow to maintain 6,000 strategic warheads on bombers, submarines, and land-based missiles. The 1993 START II agreement would reduce that limit to between 3,000 and 3,500 deployed warheads.

Neither treaty restricts the number of warheads kept in reserve.

Although the Senate ratified START II in 1996, the Russian Duma has delayed voting on it, so the treaty has yet to go into effect. Both sides have cut their arsenals to the START I level, but Congress has prohibited the U.S. military from going below 6,000 deployed warheads until Moscow ratifies START II.

KARA STOKES- COLLEGIAN

Sneaking up on the subject.

Graduate student Gung Ji, an engineering major, lurks quietly behind this sleeping swan.

The Index Yearbook
UMASS
ATTENTION!!!
CLASS OF 2000
ABSOLUTE LAST CHANCE
FOR SENIOR PORTRAITS
MARCH 27TH-31ST
Make your appointment now by calling
1-800-OUR-YEAR or log
on to www.ouryear.com
School Access #147
(You need to know the access number when you make the appointment)
Order Your 2000 Yearbook
ONLY $50.00
Log on to www.walsworth.com or
Call 1-800-929-1503
(Service Charge of $2.95 for orders placed by phone)
DAVOR PHOTOGRAPHY
Walsworth Publishing Company

Sigma [fly] Alpha
Just like any fraternity or sorority, Army ROTC offers teamwork, camaraderie and friendship. Plus, you'll get to do challenging stuff like this that'll help prep you for the real world. Stop by the Army ROTC department. We won't rush you.
JUMP INTO A SUMMER JOB & 2 YEAR SCHOLARSHIP
CALL THE UMASS ARMY ROTC AT 545-2321
ARMY ROTC Unlike any other college course you can take

Duke focuses on quality of death

By Michael Ollove
The Baltimore Sun

DURHAM, N.C. – Few regard death as a good thing, but is there such a thing as a "good death"?

Duke University believes there is and that each of us is entitled to one. Toward that end, the school has opened a $13.5 million research center devoted to the care of terminally ill patients and their families.

The existence of the institute is an emphatic assertion that the end of life need not be a choice between a lingering, painful death and a Kevorkian-style assisted suicide. There is a third option, a death carefully controlled to minimize pain while allowing the patient opportunities to come to terms with the end of life.

Named the Duke Institute for Care at the End of Life, the new center is not a medical facility _ or at least its orientation is not only toward medical care for the terminally ill. The institute was created with the conviction that death is seen too much as the professional province of doctors and nurses to the exclusion of others - notably the clergy and social workers.

"Issues of suffering and death and dying and grief and loss go to the heart of the human condition and appropriately extend beyond the confines of the clinical professions," says Ira Byock, a prominent figure in hospice and palliative medicine who is the author of the book "Dying Well."

The institute was born from the recognition that dying patients and their families have needs beyond the medical. "Surveys show that at the end of life, people want reconciliation _ to be at peace spiritually and with their families _ and that they regard that as the most important aspect of dying, second only to a pain-free death," says L. Gregory Jones, dean of Duke's School of Divinity, where the new institute is housed.

KARA STOKES- COLLEGIAN

Feeding the swans!

This man and his son have some fun with the swans over the weekend.

■ oscar

continued from page 1

Kevin Spacey took home the award for Best Actor. It was Spacey's second career Oscar as his sarcastic, but endearing role as Lester Burnham wooed voters.

First time director, Sam Mendes also cashed in on the American Beauty feast claiming Best Director for the picture. Mendes, who put together one of the more visually stunning films in recent memory, accepted the award from Steven Spielberg, who won last year for Saving Private Ryan and also owns part of Dreamworks (Beauty's distributor).

In the other major awards, Hillary Swank accepted Best Actress award for her gender-altering role in Boys Don't Cry. The young Swank was a class act, giving an emotional and relevant speech celebrating the film's progressive message.

The Cider House Rules took home the Best Adapted Screenplay, one of its two Oscar wins on the night. Its other win came in the Best Supporting Actor category, arguably this year's most competitive.

Here, long time veteran and Academy favorite Michael Caine won. Upon accepting the award for his role in The Cider House Rules, Caine gave a humbled and heartfelt speech - probably the night's emotional high point. In fact, Caine's humility was so great that he went one by one and commended each of the other nominees' performances (Haley Joel Osment, Michael Clarke Duncan, Tom Cruise, and Jude Law).

The Matrix proved to be of the night's biggest surprises claiming four total Oscars (the second most of any film), including Best Special Effects, Best Sound, Best Sound Effects Editing and Best Film Editing. In the latter category, the sci-fi adventure beat all the perennial Oscar favorites including American Beauty. The Cider House Rules, and The Sixth Sense. The Matrix also out dueled Star Wars Episode 1: The Phantom Menace in all the key technical categories, as the George Lucas film failed to win any of the categories for which it was nominated.

Early on, it appeared that the small, fairly obscure Topsy Turvy might have a good night as it claimed two Oscars for Best Costume and Best Makeup. Then, the aforementioned Matrix took over the mid part of the ceremony before American Beauty made its presence known.

Perhaps, the most bizarre film to win an Oscar during last night's ceremony was "MY MOTHER DREAMS the SATAN'S DISCIPLES in NEW YORK," which won for Best Short film.

Warren Beatty was awarded the Thalberg Lifetime Achievement Award and Billy Crystal hosted the nearly four and a half hour long production, jesting "It's the shortest this century."

■ Deale

continued from page 1

University. He finally achieved tenure at CUNY Law School. CUNY is highly regarded for being one of the few purely clinical law schools in the country.

Deale spoke compassionately to the students, telling them that they had an option to chase a lot of money and risk being burned out really quickly after law school, or they could do something much more rewarding. He encouraged potential lawyers to identify with their clients and to become politically involved with them in activities like picket lines. He also suggested that professional organizations like the American Bar Association, the National Lawyer's Guild, and the National Congress of Black Lawyers were good ways for lawyers to become involved with a large body of people making political decisions.

Deale concluded his speech by citing some of the problems with a traditional approach to law.

"Most professors at law schools have an abhorrence of this engaged activism," he said.

Since law schools depend on large endowments to grow, law professors favor more conservative tactics that cater to rich clients. Deale cites exactly this type of attitude as one ruining the law profession.

"The bottom line is that the law is going in the wrong direction," Deale warned.

While he sees a broadening vision for International human rights, Deale believes U.S. Civil Rights are going backwards. That is the reason Deale encourages students to do something worthwhile in the law profession. He wishes to help create a more diversified law profession – one that is more personal, more active, and, most importantly, more political in nature.

DAN GANTELA- COLLEGIAN

Mirror image

Two unknown souls about to cross paths by the greenhouses.

THERE WILL BE AN
ALL STAFF MEETING
ON MONDAY APRIL 3,
2000 at 4:00 P.M. at the Collegian.
PLEASE ATTEND!!

"Walk IT!"
"BUS IT!"
"BIKE IT!"
"Drive It!"
New Puffton Village. Great Apartments, Minutes from Campus.
Now accepting applications for Summer/Fall 2000
Rental Office
1040 N. Pleasant St. #410
Phone #:
(413) 549-0145
NEW PUFFTON VILLAGE
Serving all of Your Rental Needs

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Our Opinion

To bomb or not to bomb

At the end of his trip to India, President Clinton stopped in Islamabad, Pakistan and met with General Pervez Musharraf who seized power in Pakistan last October. The purpose of this brief visit was to let Musharraf and the Pakistani people know that if Pakistan does not do its part to resolve the border dispute with India, Pakistan's relations with the United States will decline and thus the country's future would be in jeopardy.

The real reason for Clinton's visit was everything to do with the fact that both India and Pakistan have nuclear weapons, and if they go to war over the Kashmir border region, there is the possibility that nuclear weapons may be used by one side or the other. This conflict, which is occurring thousands of miles away from U.S. soil, is quite relevant to the U.S. and its future interests. Nuclear war would spell disaster for the future of humankind.

The fact that nuclear technology has fallen into the hands of Indians and Pakistanis was inevitable given that nuclear scientists at the beginning of the twentieth century unleashed a Pandora's box of information: humankind for the first time had the ability to kill millions in a disturbingly short amount of time. Information, once learned, cannot be unlearned, and it was only a matter of time before it fell into unstable hands.

During the Cold War, the issue of nuclear disarmament touched close to home. In January of 1981, while many UMass students were in their infancy, the Doomsday Clock, a clock that symbolized the political climate in relation to nuclear weapons, was moved to four minutes to midnight. The atomic scientists who monitored the clock were prompted to do so because U.S. political leaders declared that nuclear war was "thinkable" and both the U.S. and the Soviet Union refused to pledge "no first use of atomic weapons."

Such a pledge would serve the interests of both Pakistan and India (and not incidentally the rest of the world) today. But it is politically unfeasible, at least for the time being, and Clinton is concentrating on a nonproliferation treaty.

But the very fact that India and Pakistan have these weapons decreases the quality of life for the citizens of those countries, even if they are never fired. After all, the U.S. has spent over 4 trillion dollars in the last fifty years on nuclear weapons systems, and while some of it went into the manufacture of nuclear weapons, most of it went into the launching systems.

Thus the costs for India and Pakistan will be high if they are to maintain an arsenal of nuclear weapons and the expensive launching systems that support them, and these are countries that have trouble feeding and educating their citizens. They can ill afford to devote millions or billions of dollars to weapons systems that, if used, will be irrelevant as will all other human activity in that part of the world since the participants in the conflict will all be dead. And while the number of weapons in India and Pakistan are nowhere near the number of weapons that the U.S. and the Soviet Union had in the 1980s, the destructive consequences of nuclear weapons will be felt in the United States.

The Collegian feels that a new generation of anti-nuclear weapon activists is needed, and the situation in India and Pakistan brings this to the foreground. We should all be working towards nuclear disarmament because the problem of nuclear war is still with us, and though it appears to have relocated to another part of the world, it still affects us all.

Would you like to take a survey?

I assume, if you haven't spent much of your life to this point in the security of a cardboard box, that you have an online persona of some sort, and the email address that goes along with it.

Some of you have simple ones – ones that consist of just your name and the old "@yahoo.com" or "@aol.com". Others of you out there are more inventive, and use elaborate plays on words that are indefinitely more useful in adult chatrooms – ones that describe your body parts in impossibly generous ways, and that leave other cyber-folks thinking that the Oscar Meyer weinermobile is tiny in comparison.

Regardless, if you have an email address, chat-lover or not, you have probably been on the receiving end of little pieces of pure hell known as "forwards". At this point in time, I'll come clean. I have sent forwards to my friends before. However, the amount of forwards I redirect is dwarfed by the amount of forwards I simply delete.

Those of you out there that are, in fact, from the cardboard box community, stick with me. I understand that complex terms like "delete" and "forward" probably leave you swimming in a mental sea of confusing computer-related acronyms, such as HTML and DOS, but that's okay. I'm about to get to (drum roll, please) a point.

Fancy that. I'm going to get to a point.

I've found that the forwards that most commonly end up stuffing my inbox are surveys. Surveys are quite fun, and you get to learn all sorts of immensely important things about your close friends that you didn't care to know anyway. Although I like participating in the joyous exchange of email surveys, I have received a couple thousand too many lately. With that in mind, I will take the questions that most frequently appear on these sharp probes and answer them for everyone in the Pioneer Valley, so that everyone knows, once and for all.

Seth Koenig

NAME: Seth Koenig. If I really needed to answer that for you, then you have severe comprehension problems.

AGE: 20, and no, I don't care if the bartenders see this.

GENDER: Male. See witty comment that follows "NAME:".

What are your nicknames? Strangely, my nicknames mostly disappeared when I left high school. Now, the few exceptions are that Collegian sports staffer Michael Kobylanski calls me Josè and many others refer to me by my last name, which, for those of you with severe comprehension problems, is Koenig.

Is the glass half empty or half full? Both. However, I suggest that if you feel the glass needs more water in it, you take the damn thing to a faucet. If you'd rather it not have so much, drink it or pour it out. Either way, if you're just sitting there pondering the status of the liquid in a glass, you're a passive waste of space.

Do you sleep with stuffed animals? Only if they buy me breakfast afterward.

Do you get along with your parents? Yes, quite well, thank you.

How many kids are you going to have? I figure I'll have as many as it takes to keep the lawn mowed and the garage clean.

What are you going to name your son? I'm going to name him "Go-clean-the-garage". That way I don't have to waste my breath on the extra syllables that it would take to separate his job with his designation.

What are you going to name your daughter? Provided she's born second, which is where the question comes in the survey, I'll name her "Go-help-your-brother".

What's sexy? "1.) Arousing or tending to arouse sexual desire or interest. 2.) Slang. Highly appealing or interesting: attractive." – The American Heritage Dictionary of the English Language, Third Edition.

Where's the strangest place you've ever had sex? I'd say on the kitchen table... my history is really quite tame in that respect. No wild encounters in moving elevators or random orgies in the bathrooms of airplanes to speak of.

What's your favorite position? Shooting guard.

If you could meet one person, alive or dead, who would it be? The real me, although I'm not entirely sure who that is. I prefer he be alive, though. I do know that.

Coffee or tea? Coffee.

Coke or Pepsi? Coke.

What's your favorite color/food/band/whatever? Royal blue, pasta with alfredo sauce, Metallica, whatever.

What's the most embarrassing thing you've ever done? The definition of embarrassing suggests that I wouldn't tell it to tens of thousands of others... however, isn't it ironic that the word embarrassing phonetically contains the phrase "bare ass".

What's the worst thing you've ever done? Strangely, I can't put my finger on the worst thing I've ever done. I don't know if that makes me really good or really bad.

What's on the walls of your room? Paint and windows... plus, of course, the stereotypical college arrangement of photos, posters, mirrors and such. Wouldn't it be freaky if I said that I had pictures of you? I won't tell you about that, then.

Seth Koenig is a Collegian columnist.

Attention all Collegian writers:

There will be an all-staff meeting Monday April 3 at 4 p.m. Elections will be held at that time, so all must attend.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Sam Wilkinson Managing Editor Shawn Ilinitch Business Manager
Ben Alamed Web Developer Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager
Sage Brousseau Co-Advertising Production Manager Jake Lilien Senior Diversity Editor

David Troupes Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pushkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jake Lilien Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jeanie Gorlowsky Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sasha Senderovich Jewish Affairs Editor
Mariele Scherzinger Multicultural Affairs Editor
Adam Martignetti Co-News Editor
Melissa Hammel Co-News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Adam White Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor
Joslyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Christine Connare Women's Issues Editor
Marc Menschel Finance Manager
Joshua Szymanski Distribution Manager
Katie Beith Promotions Manager
Catherine Turner International Affairs Editor
Samantha Poulsen Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Chris Brennan Assistant Finance Manager
Eric Faber Assistant Advertising Manager
Amy Gargano Assistant Business Manager

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Good things in small packages

First of all, let me tell you what I'm not going to do. I'm not going to be one of those pompous jerks who brags about how great my spring break was because I went to some exotic place where it was nice and warm, while you sat on your couch in your underwear, eating chips, and watching re-runs of "Dukes of Hazard." I simply can't sit here and try to prove to you that I'm better in any way simply because I traveled and you didn't. People who write columns like that should be taken into an alley and shot repeatedly.

So anyway, I'm on the plane ready to land in sunny Arizona where it was 80 degrees with no humidity. I have my sunglasses packed because the sun will be shining. I have my golf clubs packed because the weather will be way too nice to sit in the luxury suite watching re-runs of "Dukes of Hazard" in my underwear (Plus, I doubt the hotel maids want to see me in my underwear. This would be the reason that I'm banned from New York City for life). Ready to punch me yet? Yeah well, whether you are or not, there's something that I really wanted to talk about. I've discovered that there are way too many crazy ideas out there. I'm sorry, America, but you're simply trying too hard to entertain me. The days of attending a basketball game to watch two teams put a ball in a hoop are over. The times when you could turn on the television and watch good, wholesome comedy are long gone, No, instead we're stuck with monkeys dunking basketballs in front of fireworks, and people eating swords on TV. Allow me to explain.

Ryan Benharris

I have the attention span of a four-year-old on crack. You only grab my interest if you're doing something entirely out of the ordinary. Like I said before I went on a tirade about vacation, my flight to Arizona began at around 7:30 a.m. At around 8 o'clock, a flight attendant asked if I wanted any juice to drink. I graciously declined anything because it was simply to early for my stomach to hold down anything. The guy next to me ordered breakfast. By breakfast I mean two beers. Now, being a college student and living among thousands of alcoholics in the making, even I was surprised by the fact that this man was drinking ice cold Budweiser before most normal people had a chance to drink a cup of coffee.

The flight lasted around six hours, and by the time it was over, the man had spent 18 dollars on breakfast, lunch, and dinner. Yes, for those of you non-math majors like myself, that equals an entire six-pack at three dollars per beer. Let me also note that he smelled of brew when he first sat down. Being the obnoxious worm that I am, I laughed at him. Hey, you wouldn't be able to help yourself if you were watching a grown man knock down a sixer on an airplane either. It's truly something to experience! I just sat back and enjoyed it.

Besides the flight, I started to notice other things that were a little unusual. While in Arizona, I attended a Phoenix Suns basketball game. Before the game started, they set off purple and green fireworks in the arena. Yes, if you're anything like me, you automatically realize that basketball games are played indoors. There are two things I was taught when I used fireworks as a child. Number one: If the noise is twice as loud as it should be, you blew your ear off. Number two: Don't light that bad boy indoors! Suns, why, oh why, did you need to break rule number two. Does that mean I need to break rule number one? I hope to God not.

After the fireworks, a man in a monkey suit did 360 reverse jams, played musical chairs with ten fans, and threw pizzas into the crowd. I had to go to the box office and ask how I accidentally stumbled upon the circus. I don't know about the other 30,000 yuppies who were eating 12 dollar tofu while talking on the cell phone, but I paid my 55 dollars to see basketball. You know, that game where you put the round orange thing in the big hoop? Apparently, I'm the only one who remembers.

After I returned home from vacation, I turned on the television. "Dukes of Hazard" was over and I decided to watch MTV (I know, shoot me now). Being the Collegian's TV guy for the past three years, I have been very critical of the network that is ruled by teenage girls hungry for testosterone. I am very ashamed to admit this to you, but I guess the truth would come out eventually. Many of the things I have made fun of and criticized so crudely on MTV... I have never seen. Unfortunately, that ship has sailed. I was privileged enough to catch an episode of "Fanatic." Ugh, privileged is the wrong word! Without getting into too much about the show, all I'm going to do is repeat a quote. A young man said to Christina Aguilera, "When I acted in my high school play, I thought of you. Your inspiration helped me achieve success." There are simply way too many ways to interpret this, let alone the fact that Aguilera is the same age, if not younger, than the high school punk, but it was simply the dumbest conversation I've ever witnessed in my entire life. As a matter of fact, there are almost as many jokes to be made about that as there are about the fact that this summer's Brittney Spears tour is sponsored by, "Got Milk!" Please, MTV, for the love of God... just play videos.

> "...this summer's Brittany Spears tour is sponsored by, "Got Milk!" Please, MTV, for the love of God...just play videos."

MTV's not the only network guilty of coming up with worthless ploys to get my attention. The FOX family channel had some special where, in the course of an hour, a man ate an entire sword, two men stood on each other's heads and spun a hula-hoop, and when the show went to a commercial it said, "When we return, a man will pull a 3,000 pound truck using only his teeth." Yeah, I know, I had that same bewildered look on my face.

Like I said, they're trying too hard. Apparently good things don't come in small packages anymore. They come in the form of dunking monkeys and spiritual inspiration from Christina Aguilera. However, no matter what life may bring, what I do know is that I will forever be better than you! I've seen a man down a six-pack on an airplane, and you haven't!

Ryan Benharris is a Collegian columnist.

Quick, let us know what you think...send your opinions to Ed/Op

Black Affairs

THIS DAY IN BLACK HISTORY

March 27

Arthur Mitchell, dancer and choreographer, born, 1934

28

Slavery abolished in New York, 1799

Ohio passes law restricting the movement of Blacks, 1804

The Renaissance, the first Black pro basketball team, becomes the first Black team on record to win a professional world championship, 1939

29

Granville T. Woods, along with his brother Lyates, patents the first of two improvements on railroad brakes, 1904

30

Pearl Bailey, entertainer, born, 1918

The 15th Amendment, giving Black men the right to vote, adopted, 1870

Capt Edward J. Dwight, Jr. becomes the first Black candidate for astronaut training, 1963

31

Thomas Mundy Peterson, of Perth Amboy, New Jersey, becomes the first Black person to vote as a result of the adoption of the 15th amendment, 1870

Jack Johnson, first Black heavyweight champion, born, 1878

George Little Chocolate Dixon, the first Black world champion in boxing, knocks out Cal McCarthy to become the first Black man to hold an American title in any sport, 1890

MARCH...APRIL 2000

April 1

John Merrick opens North Carolina Mutual for business, 1899

Dr. Charles Richard Drew, pioneer of blood plasma research, dies, 1950

Marvin Gaye, singer, dies, 1984

2

Marvin Gaye, singer, born, 1939

John Thompson, Georgetown University coach, becomes the first Black coach to win NCAA basketball tournament, 1984

3

Carter G Woodson, the father of Black history, dies, 1950

Eddie Murphy, actor and comedian, born, 1961

4

Martin Luther King, civil rights activist, assassinated, 1968

5

Booker T. Washington, educator, born, 1856

6

Matthew A. Henson, explorer and first to reach the North Pole, leads expedition of six to the North Pole, 1909

7

The first major American slave revolt occurs in New York City, leading to the death of nine Whites and the subsequent execution of 21 Blacks, 1712

William Monroe Trotter, civil rights leader and editor of The Boston Guardian, born, 1872

Billie Holiday, blues singer, born, 1917

8

Henry Hank Aaron breaks Babe Ruth's major league record with 715 home runs, 1974

9

Paul Robeson, actor, singer, athlete and activist, born, 1898

Dr. Nathan Hare, publisher and educator, born, 1933

DESIGN BY TERI A. RODRIGUES

Brotherhood at multiple levels

Brotherhood has many levels. For some these levels can only be reached through hardship, enlightenment, and to some extent, embarrassment. Although it may seem difficult for the average college student to understand, brotherhood stretches far beyond the confinement of maternal and paternal walls. It stretches into the heart and soul of many students who search for a family unit or structure in which they can truly belong.

On Friday night at 10:22 p.m., I stood outside of the southwest pyramids waiting to see a young man enter into a fraternal family. Fascinated by the symbolism and the process, I arrived early. To my surprise there were about 50 other black people who showed up to give their support to the pledge. As we waited, I noticed the camaraderie of people. For the first time in about three years I saw black people on campus standing around in southwest having fun and being proud to be blacks.

One member of the crowd noted that for the first time black people are out in droves and food was not involved. Although very ignorant, he had a point. The Malcolm X cultural center was throwing a party that night and they were serving food, but the people that were out in the cold, freezing their butts off, were there to witness brotherhood and black pride; something that has been obviously missing from the black community here on campus.

As we waited, Sigma Gamma Rhos and Zeta Phi Betas embraced and talked as if they were at a family reunion or a great-uncle's funeral. Hugs, high fives, and a lot of introductions kept everyone busy as the night went on. Occasionally, you could hear a person saying that if this was supposed to start at 10:22, where were they. Some even went as far as to say that they were on CPI and those of you who are black know exactly what they meant.

After a while everyone walked down to the Kennedy towers because we thought that we saw him coming. It was at this point that the towers started to drum as black people that you had not seen in months emerged to see what was going on. Well it was not the pledge we had all come out to see, but a different fraternity, and three young men that it is pledging. These three young men entertained the crowd with their responses to their big brothers. Personally, I was very confused by what was going on, but as I stood there, more and more people in fraternities and sororities began to explain what was happening.

We were out there for a death march. The death march, as it's called, is the transition from pledge to brother. As I listened to them explain what the pledges were saying and doing, I began to realize the power of unity. Alone, the burden of the world may seem too heavy to bear. However, UMass' black community came out to make sure that even though he was physically going through it alone, he had a community that together as a family could take on anything.

Even though he never arrived on Friday, I went home thinking about the power of brotherhood. This is a power so strong that it made nearly 50 plus people leave their dorm rooms to stand out in the cold for over two hours and enjoy it. It is a power that moves you.

Late Saturday night at about 10 p.m., a friend of mine asked me if I was going to see him cross. I was not too sure, especially after what happened the day before, but as the time drew nearer to 10:22, all I could do was think about the pledge and hope that he made it over. It was too overwhelming, and so with many other black people, I ventured out into the rain with my umbrella to see him through.

When I arrived, I was amazed at what I was seeing and hearing. "Neva in me life" had I seen anything like it. If you remember Spike Lee's movie School Days, triple the intensity. I could not take my eyes off of what was going on. "Me sa, Me neva see nah body look so yet. Rough, cheese on bread. I felt so bad. Deman did jumping round like a monkey. Makin' noises and hallerin like a chimp. He had on black ever ting and gold boots. But through it all, he held on to his brick and answered every question that they asked him. He stepped, sang, danced, ever ting. The man was not giving in a tal, a tal, a tal." No matter what humiliating thing they asked him to do, he did it with pride, as if he realized that the humiliation that he was going through was secondary to the humiliation of his people, past and present.

I think that the most telling part of the night was the very last section. He had to walk with the brick that he was holding signifying the weight of the world. As his hand stayed steady, the fraternity brothers would hit it and ask him if he wanted to quit. As he walked forward, he was constantly asked if he wanted to quit. As his arm began to drop I saw several fraternity brothers run over and tell him not to drop it. As he reached his destination, he had to hold the brick out with his hands and sing. I never saw so much pain and pride in a man's face. It was like the movies where they put the father on the block to be sold into slavery – the pain is too much to bear, but he cannot cry or give in because his family is watching in horror. As he hand began to drop, he took his right hand off in order to hold up his left. The community began to yell to him and give him encouragement. You can do it, you're almost home, were a few of their words. As every second went by, his fraternity big brothers watched him with immense intensity. Finally, he was told to run and he took off running down into southwest.

Never had I felt more proud for someone that I hardly knew. I felt as if he was a part of my family. Words cannot describe the feeling of happiness and joy that were running through the black community here at UMass. As a member of the black community that was present and witnessed for the first time a fraternity crossing, let me congratulate him, and Alpha Phi Alpha Inc. A chain or a community is only as strong as its weakest link, and just by viewing the crossing, I think that a lot of links across campus have been strengthened.

Hugh E. Reid is a Collegian columnist.

Black Woman Cake

I'm making a Black Woman cake
'Cause it appears to me
That this should be an equal opportunity recipe.
I've had this craving for a long, long time.
But there must be a shortage.
'Cause the ingredients sure are hard to find.
I think I'll work my way from the inside out.
Add one gallon of spirituality, NO DIGGITY, NO DOUBT.
Next, add one bottle of vanilla extract,
In case you missed it, the woman in this cake is Black.
Let's see, oh yeah, a quart of intelligence, that's a must.
'Cause Sisters, sometimes the ability to wear spandex just ain't enough.
Add one cup of gentleness to make her personality warm and soft.
And then one cup of attitude, in case she needs to set it off!
Stir in a few pages from a book on proper etiquette,
So at formal dinners she knows which fork to pick.
Throw in a watch so she can have a sense of time.
(The last girl I dated always ran behind.)
And now for the exterior; How shall I begin?
How about a cup of oil, for some silky smooth skin.

OPTIONAL:
10 tracts of hair, blonde, red or black,
You can make it as high as her neck.
Or as low as her back.

As for the rest of the exterior.
the less you manipulate the better,
'Cause it's really what's on the inside that holds the cake together.
My Brothers, as you mix these ingredients,
you may adjust the quantities as you so choose.
However I would caution you not to interchange spirituality,
and not to stockpile attitude.

-The author of this poem is unknown

Black Family Pledge

By Dr. Maya Angelou

Because we have forgotten our ancestors, our children no longer give us honor.
Because we have lost the path our ancestors cleared, kneeling in perilous undergrowth, our children cannot find their way.
Because we have banished the God of our ancestors, our children cannot pray.
Because the long wails of our ancestors have faded beyond our hearing, our children cannot hear us crying.
Because we have abandoned our wisdom of mothering and fathering, our befuddled children give birth to children they neither want nor understand.
Because we have forgotten how to love, the adversary is within our gates, and holds us up to the mirror of the world, shouting, regard the loveless.
Therefore we pledge to bind ourselves again to one another
To embrace our lowliest,
To keep company with our loneliest,
To educate our illiterate,
To feed our starving,
To clothe our ragged.
To do all good things, knowing that we are more than keepers of our brothers and sisters. We are our brothers and sisters.
In honor of those who toiled and imputed God with golden tongues, and in gratitude to the same God who brought us out of hopeless desolation,
We make this pledge.

ESCA to hold showcase

By Hugh E. Reid
Collegian Staff

The English Speaking Caribbean Association, ESCA, is once again making a splash in the five-college area. On Thursday, March 30th, ESCA will hold its second Talent Showcase for the year. The Showcase is called Voices of the Caribbean Woman. Two days later, on April 1st, they will present Island Ting, a party at The Peking Garden.

Since the organization's birth in the fall, it has been performing all across campus and has been volunteering its services to other Registered Student Organizations throughout the five colleges. "We are a cultural organization, like HASA, CASA, and Boricuas Unidos. We are different in that we represent a host of countries and our primary language is English, but we are similar because we are all West Indians who share common indigenous peoples, music, and ancestry," said Hugh Reid, President of ESCA.

The night of the Showcase is dedicated to Caribbean women, in honor of women's history month. "We want everyone to know that this organization is not just an organization that can dance and look good. We want everyone to know that West Indians, especially female West Indians, are a proud, educated, hard working people. Although we are different from blacks in Africa and the United States, we share so many commonalities that unite us all. This is what we are showcasing," said Althea Holford, Treasurer of ESCA.

Don't get the wrong idea, ESCA will be dancing. In fact, they have scheduled four hot performances from their own ESCA dancers. The organization is "looking to recognize West Indian women from all generations," said ESCA dancer Shauna Rigard. Hosted by Howard Webley and Disc Jockeyed by Van Johnson, the showcase will be go from 6 to 11 p.m. It costs three dollars, and West Indian food will be served. "Our goal is to educate and enlighten, and, yes, entertain the community," said member Dionne Stennett.

If you thought it was over, you were mistaken. "After a culturally informative evening we intend to dazzle the people with an evening of entertainment at Peking Garden," said member Janelle Butler. She added that ESCA "is working very hard to get an after party at the Malcolm X cultural center that night."

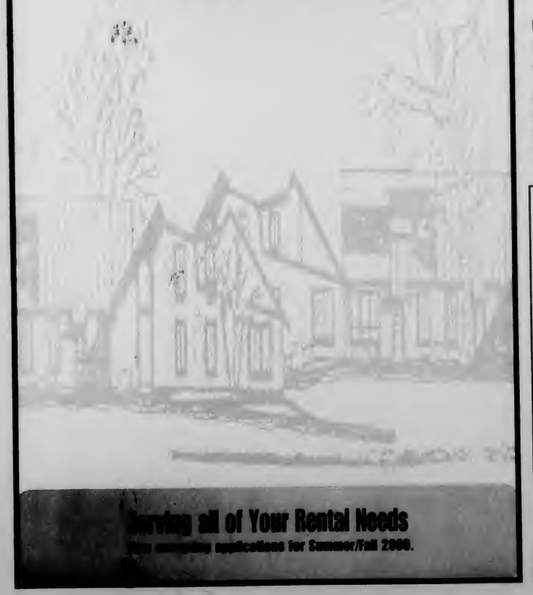
Many students across campus have been inquiring about a West Indian party since the beginning of the school year. "As a senior, I have waited a long time for an event of this magnitude for Caribbean people. Everyone loves our music and our dances. It is about time that we hold a function like the ones we had back home in Jamaica," said Stacey-Ann Lewis.

In order to make the party a success, ESCA has added two vital components to their West Indian fete. They will be having a Dancehall Queen contest. The Dancehall Queen will be awarded a cash prize and a mystery gift. As if that was not enough, they will be having a Sound Clash; two Disc Jockeys playing the hottest tunes battling for the crowd's approval. The Peking Garden party is called Island Ting. It begins at 9:30 p.m. and ends at 1 a.m. It costs five dollars.

If you are interested in writing, drawing, or taking photos for Black Affairs, please contact Hugh at 545-1762.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

APARTMENT GUIDE



A commuter's guide to off-campus housing...

NEW PUFFTON VILLAGE

1840 N. Pleasant St. #410 Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 549-0145

Serving all of Your Rental Needs
Now accepting applications for Summer/Fall 2000.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take over our lease. 3 bedrooms $950/mo. Big kitchen, living room, front porch, backyard, colorful decor. 1 mile from campus, close to Puffers Pond and Mike's Westview. Call 549-6757.

Two bedrooms, one bath. 1.5 miles from campus. On bus route. Pond view, huge backyard. Heat and hot water included. Michelle 548-3915.

Puffton Village 3 bedroom apartment for rent. Take over our lease and skip BUREAUCRATIC BS. Phone 549-4640.

Take over our lease. Renovated Puffton Apartment. 3 bedroom. Heat, hot water included. Available end of May. 549-1248.

Large 2 bedroom apartment. On Main St. 1 mile from town. $950/month. Available 6/1. Call 253-2738.

Summer Sublet w/lease option. Starts 6/1. On bus route. 10 minutes from campus. 2 bedroom, 2 bath ht/htwtr included. Furniture available, no extra charge. Call 253-6577.

2 bedroom apartment on bus route. $775/mo. Everything included. Available 6/1. 397-9798.

Summer Sublet w/lease option starting 6/1. Puffton Village 1 bedroom. $595.00 a month. Call 549-2060.

Large four bedroom apartment in Hadley, 2 bathroom. Right on bus route, bikepath in backyard. June 1st. Call 582-9679.

Summer Sublet Needed! Rent is $750/mo and includes heat and hot water! Utilities already set up and apartment will have furniture for your use! Call us at the Boulders: 256-8012.

1 Bedroom Summer Sublet with option to lease on bus route. 1 mile from campus 549-1859.

Apply now for best locations. Amherst Center 1,2 and 3 bedroom apartments. Gas heat, hardwood floor. April showings for June and September. Lincoln Real Estate. No fees charged. 253-7879.

Apply now for best locations. 3 bedroom condos. Gas heat, hardwood floors, bright heated basement with study and laundry area. 1/2 mile to campus, on bus route. April showings for June and September. Lincoln Real Estate. No fees charged. 253-7879.

Available 5/19 one bedroom in two bedroom apartment in Boulders. Heat and hot water included. On bus line. Great for summer session. $395.00 per month. Call 253-6440. Ask for Amanda or Justin.

SUMMER SUBLET

1 bedroom w/spacious living room and central air. On bus route. Available after finals. $625.00. Includes ht/htwtr. Parking, pool and laundry next door. 549-5581.

Spacious 2 bedroom apt, pond view. Heat/hot water included. Available 6-1. 549-4977.

2 bedroom apartment Summer Sublet. Available June 1st-August 31st. Call Tricia or Jen 253-0809.

4 Bedroom apartment. Great uptown location with parking. Available 6/1/00-8/31/00. Call Kelly at 253-2268.

2 bedroom in 3 bedroom Townhouse. $350 utilities included. 253-6488.

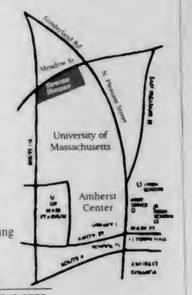
3 Bedroom 2 bath in Puffton from June to August. If interested call Lauren 546-1568.

Looking for a place to live this summer/fall? Great house in Amherst with two available rooms. $305/month. Please call! Erin 413-549-1543.

Take over my lease. 1 bedroom/2 bedroom apartment. South Point on bus line. $355.00 Available 6/1. 253-5410.

WANTED TO RENT

Looking for 3 or 4 bedroom apt/house near Amherst Center with parking. Call Alyse or Stacy 253-7708.



House wanted: 3-4 bedroom house very close to campus. Wanted for rent starting 6/1. Please call Lia @ 2536378 w/any information.

Make TowneHouse "Your home away from home!"

Townehouse at Amherst CONDOMINIUMS

TWO & THREE BEDROOM CONDOMINIUMS

- Two Different Floor Plans
- All Two Stories
- Gas heating (most), Electric (few)
- Fully applianced
- Air Conditioners
- Wall-to-wall carpet
- Bath and 1/2 lav.
- Spacious living room
- Individual patio
- Cable ready
- On Bus Route
- Ample Resident Parking

Look us up on the World Wide Web at WWW.The-Spa.com/Townehouse/Th-main.htm

50 Meadow Street ● Amherst, MA 01002 ● Tel. (413) 549-0839

Mill Valley ESTATES

Now...The lifestyle you've been waiting for...
Luxury two and three bedroom apartment in Amherst

Amenities Include
- Central Location
- Mountain Views
- Private Entries! Select Apartments
- On PVTA Bus route
- On site day care center
- Play areas
- Victory Gardens
- Tennis & Basketball Courts
- Laundry Room

We Offer.
- Heat & Hot Water included in your rent
- Wall to Wall Carpet
- Washer/Dryer Hookups
- Air Conditioning
- Fully Applianced Kitchens dishwashers, disposals
- Intercom (Entry) System
- Professional On Site Management
- 24 Hour Maintenance

420 Riverglade Drive, Amherst
Just off Rt. 9, Take West St. (Rt. 116s) to East Hadley Rd.
Take First Left onto Riverglade Drive.

Equal Housing Opportunity

Sugarloaf Estates & Alpine Commons
"We Make the Grade in Apartment Living!"

- A+ Luxury 2 Bedroom Apartment Houses
- A+ Free Heat & Hot Water
- A+ Washers/Dryers in Selected Styles
- A+ New Oak Kitchens
- A+ Designer Baths
- A+ Elegant Mirrored Accents
- A+ Sand Volleyball Courts
- A+ Sparkling In-ground Pool

- A+ Spacious 4 Bedroom Floor Plan
- A+ 2 Full Private Baths
- A+ Sliding Doors To Private Balconies
- A+ All Utilities Included
- A+ On-site Laundry Facilities
- A+ 3 Miles From Campus
- A+ Oak Kitchens With Breakfast Bars
- A+ Picnic Area/BBQ

28 River Road (Rte. 47)
Sunderland, MA 01375
sugarloaf estates@aspensquare.com
665-3856

133 Belchertown Road
Amherst, MA 01002
alpine commons@aspensquare.com
256-0741

We have your reasons for living off - campus!

Come by and see our model

Monday - Thursday 9 am - 6 pm
Friday 9 am - 4 pm

- Spacious 1 and 2 Bedroom
- On-site Laundry Facilities
- Beautiful Grounds
- On the Bus Line
- Private Balconies
- Sorry, No Pets
- Close to UMass
- Swimming Pool
- Central Air Conditioning
- Heat, Hot Water, Gas Inc.
- Close to UMass

Brandywine Apartments
549-0600
160 Brandywine Dr., Amherst, MA 01002

Monster Magnet and Earth Crisis crush on the latest Crow soundtrack and Victory Style 4, respectively.

PSI, Filter keep Crow afloat

VARIOUS ARTISTS
The Crow: Salvation Movie Soundtrack
Koch

VARIOUS ARTISTS
Victory Style 4
Victory

By Michael Delano
Collegian Staff

What is the difference nowadays between a movie soundtrack and a sampler? With the exception of some true scores of films like Air's The Virgin Suicides and Billy Corgan's production of the Stigmata soundtrack, there isn't much difference. Just a bunch of artists trying to stand out from each other with some originality or ear-grabbing sonic pleasure. So in the interest of time and space, the soundtrack to the newest film in the Crow franchise, as well as the most recent Victory Records sampler, has been condensed into one easy to digest morsel.

Following in the footsteps of recent heavy soundtracks like Strangeland and Scream 3, the soundtrack to The Crow: Salvation is 16 cuts of primal concrete sledge. And while it doesn't reach the grand heights of Strangeland, it thankfully isn't quite as dismal as Scream 3. The album has a strong electronic presence, with techno figureheads like Tricky and the Crystal Method accompanied by tech-influenced bands such as Pitchshifter and Static-X. Even metal stalwarts like Rob Zombie and Danzig contribute remixed tracks.

Filter's "The Best Things" is a great opener, with some great percussion loops and Richard Patrick's trademark eye-squinting screams, and Rob Zombie's "Living Dead Girl (Naked Exorcism Mix)" is definitely superior to the mix of the song on his recent American Music Made To Strip By. Unfortunately, it's a while before things get this good again, as you have to tread through some pretty rough waters ahead. Someone decided to give Juliette Lewis a microphone to help out The Infidels on vocals. "Nuff Said. Kid Rock's "Warm Winter" is another in a long list of songs which, in their horrendousness, have made "Bawitdaba" look like "Smells Like Teen Spirit." Monster Magnet's "Big God" is not one of their finest, but more than welcome in terms of its company, like The Flys' embarrassing "What You Want."

Pitchshifter easily steals the whole show with their excellent "Everything Sucks (Again)," a cut from their Un-United Kingdom EP. Days of the New's acoustics are a welcome change of pace, and Crystal Method's jumpy "Now is the Time (The Crystal Method Millenium Mix)" trounces Tricky's boring and disturbing "Antihistamine (Forgotten By the World Mix)." The cover of Ministry's "Burning Inside" by Static-X and Burton C. Bell of Fear Factory is completely useless, and adds nothing to the song, but if it ain't broke...

Victory Records, a label consisting mostly of hardcore and punk acts, puts out a sampler of its bands every so often, and for the usual five dollar asking price, anyone with casual interest in hardcore will get their money's worth. The same goes for Victory Style 4, which has the usual assortment of good tracks, as well as tracks that beg the question "if this is the track they chose to showcase, how bad can the rest of the album be?"

For my money, Snapcase is the best band featured on Victory right now, and their "Typecast Modulator" makes short work of mostly everyone else on this sampler. But that isn't to say there aren't some worthy tracks here. Earth Crisis' crushing "In the Wire" is as good an opener as you could ask for, and Shelter admirably keeps the energy high with "When 20 Summers Pass." I don't have much patience for happy punk/pop/hardcore, so my quick dismissal of GreyArea, Grade, Catch 22, and OS(10) may not do them justice, but I just can't stand it. The same goes for the very large percentage of bland hyper-aggressive and incoherent hardcore acts, such as Integrity 2000, Buried Alive, All Out War, and those angry religious boys called No Innocent Victim.

On the brighter side are some bands I hadn't heard music from previously that proved pretty impressive. Cause for Alarm and Blood for Blood were both noticeably better than most, except for the latter's cry-me-a-river rant about society today, which thankfully was saved by some of the disc's best riffage.

Both discs are solid, but the talent of a few bands can't carry the others on their back, which is almost always the case with soundtracks and samplers, so get ready to edit your playlist pretty heavily. The Crow: Salvation- C Victory Style 4- C

Guys & Dolls light and fun

By Matthew Maggiacomo
Collegian Correspondent

With all the great musicals out there for the UMass Theatre Guild to select from, it's a wonder why they'd choose to put on Guys and Dolls. The show is simple, mindless, and overwhelmingly dated, reminding us of the days when women were happy to be homemakers and men could still get away with acts of chivalry without being accused of sexism. A production of such a show runs the risk of losing its audience with old themes and stale jokes. In order for the production to make up for the time warp, it must offer its audience a contemporary spin, and a strong cast capable of communicating through the time difference. Otherwise, it falls into the realm of campy, overblown crap, and bores a contemporary audience to tears.

Thanks to a strong cast and some nifty choreography, the Theatre Guild's rendition of Guys and Dolls avoids most of these pitfalls. In her directorial debut, Jo Ann Valle gives us an honest, straightforward, and entertaining glimpse into the unlikely story of a New York City crapshooter's transition from a life of illegal gambling, to that of a domesticated husband. Despite a few awkward moments and some ridiculous set design, the majority of the production was consistently charming and, for the most part, well performed.

The plot is self-explanatory: a New York City gambler, Nathan Detroit (Adam Sanders), tries to organize an illegal craps game while avoiding both the law and his fiancee, Miss Adelaide (Julie Levine), who spends most of her time wallowing in her own frustration and misery over the fact that she's been engaged for 14 years. Meanwhile, his fellow gambler and male slut Sky Masterson (Michael Lantvet) is faced with the ultimate challenge: wooing the quintessential church lady, Sarah Brown (Beth Carey). In an ironic twist, a bet placed by Sky results in the soul-cleansing of himself and a slew of crap-shooters, thanks to the open-minded and somewhat desperate efforts of the city's Mission Band.

Sanders and Levine are perhaps the strongest pair in the performance. Sanders convincing accent and obvious appreciation for physical humor, paired with Levine's exceptional vocal talent and tastefully exaggerated antics, provides the show with most of its chemistry. However, the best vocal performance comes from Beth Carey as Sarah Brown. Unfortunately, her counterpart Lantvet seems uncomfortable and awkward in his role as Sky Masterson, speaking his lines in an emotionless monotone and failing to stay in key during most of his solos.

As a result, some of the show's energy is sucked out of scenes that should have been more rousing. For instance, "Luck Be a Lady" seems almost anticlimactic after the crowd-pleasing dance performed by the gangsters during the much anticipated craps game. On the whole, the show's biggest weakness is its tendency to fall into lulls in between moments of excitement and humor.

However, the production is fueled by an excellent supporting cast. Perhaps the most notable secondary performances come from Michael Tarselli as Nicely Nicely Johnson, and Robbie Medwed as Benny Southstreet. Perfectly casted, the pair combine in a classic tall and short comedic duo, and Tarselli's vocals in particular are essential to the show's success. His solo performance in "You're Rocking the Boat" brings the show to life in the second act. Other standouts in the supporting cast include Carolyn Ritter as Arvide Abernathy and Gordon Bedford as Rusty Charlie, both of whom handle most of the show's most memorable one-liners.

The show's set is a mixed bag of flimsy wooden structures and cartoon-like backgrounds. Perhaps the most questionable constructions are the palm trees in the Havana scene, which look undeniably phallic, sporting two coconuts each and a bush of green at the top. For the most part, the cute and goofy set match the cute and goofy plot, so any weaknesses in appearance need not be overanalyzed.

Overall, the Theatre Guild's production of Guys and Dolls is a success. However, it seems as though the talents of the cast are wasted on a dumb plot. Guys and Dolls would be more suited for production on the high school level, since it lends itself to cheap laughs and stupid humor. An audience of college students would probably be less inclined to enjoy a production that caters to the realm of family-oriented entertainment. In the future, it would be interesting to see the same actors in more challenging roles; there is no doubt that they could live up to the challenge.

■ baseball

continued from page 12

Gorneault sent an RBI single to left that scored Skeffington. Morgan followed suit by singling to right and sending home Kulak. Gorneault, who crossed home plate on a wild pitch, scored the third run of the inning.

The Bulldogs pulled even with UMass in the sixth after scoring an unearned run off of Minuteman starter Jesse Santos. Santos allowed seven hits through five plus innings, yielding three runs and striking out two.

The drama began to unfold in the seventh, setting the stage for the UMass victory. Skeffington ripped a single down the third base line, and advanced to second when Kulak sent one back to the mound. A wild pitch sent Skeffington to third. Following an intentional walk to Gorneault, another wild pitch was delivered to the plate, allowing Skeffington to cross home plate and give UMass the lead for good. It was the second time this season that a game has been decided in favor of the Minutemen by a wild pitch.

Junior Nick Skirkanich retired the side in order in the seventh, and picked up his first save of the year. Senior southpaw Todd Samolewicz improved to 2-0 on the season, picking up the win in relief of Santos.

The Minutemen will get back into action on March 28 at Hartford.

Senior Travis Veracka tossed a three-hit shutout by the biteless Bulldogs of Yale as UMass baseball took both games of a weekend doubleheader.

安城中国饭店
AMHERST CHINESE FOOD
we do not use "MSG"
253-7835 • 253-2813
62 Main Street, Amherst
VISA

EAST HEAVEN HOT TUBS
Best Place For A Hot Tub
$10 OFF WITH THIS AD
413-586-6843 • 33 West St. Northampton
www.eastheaven.com

UMass Student Legal Services Office
CALL TODAY
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
545-1995

Up to 50% of college students are infected with a virus that can cause genital warts.
That's 1 out of 2
Don't like those ODDS then Learn More at:
MAKING CHOICES
Contraception & STI Prevention
Held Tuesdays at 7 p.m. and Thursdays at 3 p.m. in room 304 at University Health Services.
Also, in the Campus Center on:
March 27th - 7:00 P.M. IN ROOM 905-09
April 24th - 7:00 P.M. IN ROOM 905-09
ALL ARE WELCOME!

Munchie Madness 3-6PM MONDAY-FRIDAY
Nachos Especial 7.99 4.00
Potato Skins Supreme 7.99 4.00
Shrimp Cocktail 5.99 3.00
1/2 PRICE!
OCMP WELCOME HERE
Judie's
51 N. Pleasant Street
253-3491
http://virtual-valley.com/judies

DO YOU NEED YOUR WISDOM TEETH REMOVED?
If so, patients are being enrolled for a wisdom teeth research study. Your wisdom teeth can be extracted by a Board Certified Oral Surgeon. Financial compensation will be provided for your opinion on a research pain medication.
For more information call:
SCIREX Corporation at (860) 285-0569
Outside Windsor call toll free 1-888-285-0569
SCIREX

Castaway Lounge
Proudly Presents.
Monday April 3
Amateur Night
1st Place $200
2nd Place $100
3rd Place $50
Rt. 5 & 10 Whately, MA (413) 665-8733

GET THOSE FORMS IN BY:
Swim Meet (M/W)----- 4/03
Tennis Doubles (M/W/C)-- 4/18
Ultimate Frisbee (M/W)-- 4/18
World Cup Soccer (M/W)-- 4/18
More Info: 215 Boyden, 5-2693 On the Web:
http://www.umass.edu/umim

Apply Now for Best Locations
Apartment Rentals
www.amherstlincolnrealty.com or call
Lincoln Real Estate
253 - 7879

listen up class of 2000!
because...
the perfect graduation gift is the one you actually want graduation countdown
class of 2000 network
graduation announcements online gift registry
real world guide
careers
and a whole lot more log on now
umass.eGrad2000.com
from your friends at
MDC
www.DailyCollegian
enter to win a trip for 10 to europe
egrad2000.com
The right start in the real world.
JOBTRAK.COM
"The best site for students & grads looking for their first job."
- Forbes Magazine

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ACTIVITIES

Art of Living Workshop- Yoga and Meditation in Umass from March 31. Free intro talks on Monday 8pm in Boyden 237 and on Thursday 6pm. Contact Durgesh 549-5551

ANNOUNCEMENT

Klub Kat is booking formals and Graduation Parties for May 2000. Call Cheng @ 586-7774 after 4:30 pm. Buffet Packages available.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take over our lease. 3 bedrooms $950/mo. Big kitchen, living room, front porch, back yard, colorful decor. 1 mile from campus, close to Puffers Pond and Mike's Westview. Call 549-6757.

Two bedrooms, one bath. 1.5 miles from campus. On bus route. Pond view, huge back yard. Heat and hot water included. Michelle 548-3915.

Puffton Village 3 bedroom apartment for rent. Take over our lease and skip BUREAUCRATIC BS. Phone 549-4640.

Take over our lease. Renovated Puffton Apartment. 1 bedroom. Heat, hot water included. Available end of May. 549-1248.

Large 2 bedroom apartment On Main St. 1 mile from town $950/month. Available 6/1. Call 253-2738.

Summer Sublet w/lease option. Starts 6/1. On bus route. 10 minutes from campus. 2 bedroom, 2 bath, hi/hi/w/r included. Furniture available, no extra charge. Call 253-6577.

2 bedroom apartment on bus route. $775/mo. Everything included. Available 6/1. 397-9798.

Summer Sublet w/lease option starting 6/1. Puffton Village 1 bedroom. $595.00 a month. Call 549-2060.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Large four bedroom apartment in Hadley, 2 bathroom. Right on bus route, bikepath in backyard. June 1st. Call 582-9679.

Summer Sublet Needed! Rent is $750/mo and includes heat and hot water! Utilities already set up and apartment will have furniture for your use! Call us at the Boulders. 256-8012.

1 Bedroom Summer Sublet with option to lease on bus route. 1 mile from campus. 549-1859.

Apply now for best locations. Amherst Center 1,2 and 3 bedroom apartments. Gas heat, hardwood floor. April showings for June and September. Lincoln Real Estate. No fees charged. 253-7879.

Apply now for best locations. 3 bedroom condos. Gas heat, hardwood floors, bright heated basement with study and laundry area. 1/2 mile to campus, on bus route. April showings for June and September. Lincoln Real Estate. No fees charged. 253-7879.

AUTO FOR SALE

'85 Ford Mustang 5 speed, all power, black, runs great $2000/obo. 549-0664.

1994 Jeep Wrangler Sahara. 50k miles. Excellent condition. Forest Green with Sahara interior. Call Bob 549-2404.

EMPLOYMENT

EMPLOYMENT
Summer Jobs For the Environment
$3000 to $5000/Summer
Campaign to save wilderness, endangered species and to reduce toxic pollution. Make a difference! Offices in over 30 States. Campaign to save the environment.
1-800-75-EARTH

EMPLOYMENT

$ Fundraisers $ Open to student groups and organizations. Earn $5 per MC app. We supply all materials at no cost. Call for info or visit our website 1-800-932-0528 ext. 65 www.ocmconcepts.com

Survey Personal Needed for PVTA ridership Study- the Pioneer Valley Planning Commission (PVPC) will be conducting a ridership survey of all PVTA routes May 1 through May 14. Surveyors will be paid $9.50 to $10.50/hour to distribute/ collect survey forms, answer questions, and collect ridership information. All shifts are available. Applications will be accepted until April 14, 2000. Applications can be downloaded at www.pvpc.org/pvpc/jobs.html or call 413-781-6045 or apply in person at PVPC, 26 Central St. West Springfield Ma. 01089. PVPC is an EOE/ AA employer.

CAMP CANADENSIS, Pocono Mountains, PA. Premier residential coed summer camp. We are looking for an energetic, qualified and caring staff to teach all general athletics, gymnastics, hockey, tennis, mountain bikes, golf, motorcycles, outdoor adventure, ropes, archery, drama, video, photography, fishing, WSI, waterfront activities, arts and crafts, cooking and much more ! Excellent facilities and great salary! 6/21/00 - 8/18/00. Call (800) 832-8228 or apply online: www.canadensis.com

GENERAL STORE DELI & BAKERY

Quality help wanted for spring, summer & fall 2000. FT/PT-all shifts. Availability through vacations & long weekends preferred. Kitchen skills and customer service a plus. Apply in person: Cushman Village General Store, Deli & Bakery. 491 Pine St., Amherst, MA 01002. (5 minute drive North from Amherst Center.)

Summer on Cape Cod. Non-smokers only. General restaurant work, including cashiering and service. We seek students who already have housing nearby or who are familiar with the area and can make housing arrangements. This is a great job for the right people. $8/hr and meals plus a bonus of $100/wk for each week you work through August 31, 2000. For more information, check www.nare.com/clamshack or call Bill Millett at 1-800-887-2951. Or mail resume to South Wellfleet Clam Shack, P.O. Box 321, South Wellfleet, MA 02663.

Earn $530 weekly distributing phone cards. No experience necessary. Full/part-time. Call 1-800-831-6717.

Copywriter: Part-time, student preferred. (413)536-5086. 12-7pm.

Help Wanted: Part-time bar/floor manager. The Amherst Brewing Company is looking for an experienced, team oriented, assistant manager for our busy weekends. Excellent opportunity for an enthusiastic, professional. Apply in person at 24 No. Pleasant St. Amherst.

Summer Camp Staff. Coed overnight camp in southern Maine seeks staff: Girls/Boys Unit Heads (21+), Camping Director (21+); swim, waterski and boating/sailing instructors; arts & crafts, photography, low ropes, athletics, theater, camping, newspaper, general counselors and office personnel. For information contact: Ava Goldman, Director. JCC Camp Kingswood, 333 Nahanton St, Newton, MA 02459, (617)244-5124 or email: info@kingswood.org

Summer Help Wanted Local corrugated Manufacturer. Looking for summer help for 2nd and 3rd shift. Good Pay. 1.25 an hour. Call Scott Parsons 413-582-3844.

EMPLOYMENT

Summer Employment; Outdoors. Weight loss/sports camp looking for energetic people to lead campers in a fun filled summer. Located in West Stockbridge, MA. in the heart of the Berkshires. Call for more information. Toll Free 877-FIT-CAMP, email marc@campkingsmont.com

Flexible part-time. Evening and weekend shifts available. 20hrs/wk required. PVTA accessible. For more information call: Abt Associates, Inc. Paul Bebo, Recruiting Coordinator 1-800-792-4514. E.O.E. M/F

Cruise Line entry level on board positions available, great benefits, seasonal or year-round. (941)329-6434. www.cruisecareers.com

Bilingual Tutors/ Translators for part-time paid assistance during the school day to students speaking Amharic, Chinese, Cape Verde/ Portuguese, Japanese, Korean, Mongolian, Tibetan, Urdu, Vietnamese. Contact: ESL/ Bilingual Office at 413-549-9857 Amherst- Pelham Schools. An Equal Opportunity Employer / Affirmative Action Employer.

Delivery persons wanted. Apply at D.P. Dough, downtown Amherst.

Full and part-time ice cream and sandwitch shop on bike trail in Hadley. Ice Cream Pedaler 586-9508.

EMPLOYMENT

Fall 200 Internships with the Student Legal Service Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field, work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary- training provided. Contact the Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

3 Job Opportunities on Nantucket Island, MA beginning May. A.) Office manager with good typing, computer and telephone skills. B.) Office assistant, errand runner, mother's helper, household help. C.) Auction gallery assistant: furniture porter, display, delivery. Salary and housing. Drivers liscence required. (508)228-3942 or send reume: P.O. Box 2607 Nantucket, MA 02548.

UAHC Crane Lake and Eisner Camps, Reform Jewish coeducational Camps located in the Berkshires of Massachusetts, seek qualified, dedicated counselors and specialists, including Waterfront, Athletics, Arts. Good salary, r&b included, travel assistance. Crane Lake Camp: Contact Brad Gerstle, 800-227-2660 ILUVCAMP@aol.com; www.cranelakecamp.com Eisner Camp: Contact Louis Bordman, 212-650-4130 EISNERGUY@aol.com; www.eisnercamp.org

FOR RENT

Take over our lease starting 6/1. 3 bedroom, 2 bath. Call 549-3895.

FOR SALE

For sale: Burton Alpine 51 Raceboard. Never used $100.00 O/B/O 549-2071.

HOUSE FOR RENT

4 Bedroom 2 bath 2 car garage full kitchen. 4 min from school. Hadley 549-6465 or 549-9382.

HOUSE FOR RENT

Rent 7 Room House or single rooms. In Sunderland on bus route. Available June 1st. Call Steve 413-665-2276.

INSTRUCTION

Private Boxing Lessons w/ retired pro Ojata Bumpus in Amherst. Call 413-256-0364.

MISCELLANEOUS

Modeling & Acting. Have you always dreamed of being a model or actor but don't know where or how to get started? New faces MIETOUR is coming to your area soon. For more info call 1-877-MIE-LOOK.

Get paid to lose weight and inches. All natural, doctor reccommended. 1-800-397-7715.

ROOM FOR RENT

Available 5/19 one bedroom in two bedroom apartment in Boulders. Heat and hot water included. On bus line. Great for summer session. $395.00 per month. Call 253-6440. Ask for Amanda or Justin.

ROOMMATE WANTED

2 bedroom in 3 bedroom Duplex in Belchertown. On bus route. Washer/dryer. Big yard. Non-smokers. $350 incl. Available 6/1. Call Denise 323-0120.

1 Room in 3 bedroom apt. in So. Amherst. $325/mo. Heat/electric included available immediately. 256-4581.

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

SUMMER SUBLET

2 bedroom apartment Summer Sublet. Available June 1st-August 31st. Call Tricia or Jen 253-0809.

4 Bedroom apartment. Great uptown location with parking. Available 6/1/00-8/31/00. Call Kelly at 253-2268.

2 bedroom in 3 bedroom Townhouse. $350 utilities included. 253-6488.

3 Bedroom 2 bath in Puffton from June to August. If interested call Lauren 546-1568.

SUMMER SUBLET

Looking for a place to live this summer/fall? Great house in Amherst with two available rooms. $305/month. Please call Erin 413-549-1543.

Take over my lease. 1 bedroom/2 bedroom apartment. South Point on bus line. $355.00. Available 6/1. 253-5410.

TICKETS

2 Elton John tickets. April 8th Concert. Call Laura 546-4993.

Chili Peppers, Foo Fighters for sale. James 549-9254.

Need two tickets for Creed April 15. sbradshaw@qurs.com.

Elton John Seats Section 1 Floor 6. Available 888-441-5634.

TRAVEL

Be flexible...Save $$$ Europe $159(o/w + taxes) CHEAP FARES WORLDWIDE!! Mexico/Canbbean $199 (r/t + taxes) Call, 800-326-2009 www.4cheapair.com

Mexico/Caribbean or Central America $229 rt. Europe $169 ow. Other worldwide destinations cheap. ONLY TERRORISTS GET YOU THERE CHEAPER! Book tickets on-line www.airtech.com or 212-219-7000.

Study Spanish. Internships in Guatemala. College Credit. www.casaxelaju.com (512)416-6991.

WANTED TO RENT

Looking for 3 or 4 bedroom apt/house near Amherst Center with parking. Call Alyse or Stacy 253-7708.

House wanted: 3-4 bedroom house very close to campus. Wanted for rent starting 6/1. Please call Lia @ 2536378 w/any information.

WORLDWIDE WEB

Get paid just for being online! Did you know that there are over thirty companies which will pay you to have a small adbar on your computer screen while you're on line? It's true! Plus you can sign up for free! If interested, please go to http://paidsurfing1.netfirms.com

Five College Community Calendar

MONDAY, MAR. 27

Class – The UMass Police Department's free self-defense course for women begins tonight from 6-8:30 p.m. Contact the UM Police Department for more information.

Workshop – There will be a workshop on contraception and safer sex at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center. Check at the information desk for the room number. Men and women are welcome.

TUESDAY, MAR. 28

Lecture – Dr. Nils Daulaire, President and CEO of the Global Health Council will give a lecture on population, environmental, and public health issues at 8 p.m. in the Nielson Library Browsing Room at Smith College.

Meeting – The UMass Ballroom Dance Club will meet at 8:30 p.m. in Totman 101.

Speeches – Three speakers will speak out against sweat-shops at 7 p.m. in rooms 162-175 of the Campus Center. Included will be a discussion on what students, faculty, staff and alumni can do to put an end to sweatshops. Call Michael Burns at 585-1564 for more information.

Workshop – There will be a workshop on contraception and safer sex at 7 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services. Men and women are welcome.

NOTICES

Help – From Feb. 15-April 15 on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays from 5-8 p.m. student volunteers from the School of Management will assist non-resident aliens with the preparation of their Federal and State income tax returns. Call 545-5600 for more information.

Scholarships – The STEMTEC/NSF Teaching scholars program is offering scholarships to students who are interested in exploring a career in K-12 math or science teaching. Students do not need to be enrolled in a certificate program to apply. Applications are due by April 1. Contact Johanna at 545-0626 for more information.

Support – A grief support group is available to all students who have experienced the death of someone they love. The groups are free, small and confidential, and meet on Wednesday and Thursday evenings. Telephone pre-screening is required for enrollment. Call 577-5516 if interested.

Support – AL-ANON and ALATEEN are offering local meetings for those affected by someone else's drinking problem. Call 253-5261 for meeting times and locations.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

BOOKBUCKS™ From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks,* you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions.

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

Ustore CAMPUS CENTER

Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

MONDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MARCH 27, 2000

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (N		Antiques Roadshow (In Stereo)		Thrills & Chills "An American Experience Special" (In Stereo) (N				Connecticut Journal
WFSB	3	News (N		CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	King	Grapevine (N	Raymond	Becker (R) (N	60 Minutes II (In Stereo) (N	News (N	Late Show (N
WBZ	4	News		CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	King	Grapevine (N	Raymond	Becker (R) (N	60 Minutes II (In Stereo) (N	News	Late Show (N
WCVB	5	News (N		ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle (N	"The Audrey Hepburn Story" (2000, Biography) Jennifer Love Hewitt. Premiere. (In Stereo) (N					News (N	Nightline (N
WLVI	56		Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends (N	Nanny (N	7th Heaven "Dirty Laundry" (N		Buffy the Vampire Slayer (N		News (N	Friends (N	Nanny (N
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (N	Freaks and Geeks (In Stereo)		Twenty One (In Stereo) (N		Third Watch (R) (In Stereo) (N	News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Blind Date	Real TV (N	Moesha (R) (N	Parkers (R) (N	Grown Ups (N	Malcolm-Eddie	News	Real TV (R) (N	Blind Date	Cheap Heart
WVIT	10		News	NBC News	Extra (N	Ent. Tonight	Freaks and Geeks (In Stereo)		Twenty One (In Stereo) (N		Third Watch (R) (In Stereo) (N	News	Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Simpsons (R	Frasier (N	Seinfeld (N	Friends (N	"70s Show	Titus (N	Ally McBeal "Boy Next Door" (N		News		Friends (N	Frasier (N
WWLP	22	News (N		NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (N	Freaks and Geeks (In Stereo)		Twenty One (In Stereo) (N		Third Watch (R) (In Stereo) (N	News (N	Tonight Show
WGBY	6	World News		Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (N		Antiques Roadshow (N		Thrills & Chills "An American Experience Special" (In Stereo) (N			Charlie Rose (In Stereo) (N
WGGB	20	News (N		ABC News	Seinfeld (N	Frasier (N	"The Audrey Hepburn Story" (2000, Biography) Jennifer Love Hewitt. Premiere. (In Stereo) (N					News (N	Nightline (N
WSBK	38		Judge Judy (R	Judge Judy (R	Seinfeld (N	Frasier (N	Moesha (R) (N	Parkers (R) (N	Grown Ups (N	Malcolm-Eddie	Star Trek: Voyager "Initiations"		Med Abt. You	Judge Mathis
WTBS	72		Roseanne (R	Roseanne (R	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	NBA Basketball: San Antonio Spurs at Seattle SuperSonics (Live)				Inside NBA		★★½ "Mars Attacks!" (1996)
A&E	51		L.A. Law		Law & Order "D-Girl" (R		Biography "Stephen King" (R		Investigative Reports (R) (N		City Confidential (R) (N		Law & Order "Breeder" (R
CNN	20	23	Worldview (N	Moneyline Newshour (R		Crossfire (R	World Today (R		Larry King Live (R		Newsstand (R		Sports	Moneyline (R)
CNN	30	39	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	★★ "Brewster's Millions" (1985, Comedy) Richard Pryor.				Strangers	Upright	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	52		Your New House (R		Wild Discovery "Wolverine" (R)		On the Inside: Commandos		By Any Means Necessary? (R)		New Detectives: Case Studies		On the Inside: Commandos
ESPN	40		Sportscenter (R		Women's College Basketball: East Reg. Final				Women's College Basketball: Midwest Reg. Final				Sportscenter (R
LIFE	53		Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Beyond Chance (R) (R		"Dead Silent" (1998, Drama) Rob Lowe. (R				Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	33		MTV Jams		Beat Suite	Music Videos	Music Videos	TRL (R) (In Stereo)		Road Rules	Road Rules	Road Rules	Meking-Video		Undressed	Loveline
NICK	43		All That		Cetdog	Hey Arnold! (R	Rugrats (R	Thornberrys	Thornberrys	Brady Bunch	Bev. Hillbillies	All In Family	Jeffersons (R	I Love Lucy	Bewitched
SCIFI	61		Sliders (In Stereo) (R		Outer Limits "Bits of Love" (R		Outer Limits "The Hunt" (R			Outer Limits "Heart's Desire" (R		Outer Limits "Regeneration" (R		Poltergeist: The Legacy (R
TLC	98	28	Home Again	Home Again	Trauma: Life in the ER (R)		Paramedics "House Calls" (R)			Undercover Blings: Anatomy		Undercover Blings: Secrets		Paramedics "House Calls" (R)
TNT	42		In the Heat of the Night (R		ER "Day One" (In Stereo) (R		WCW Monday Nitro Spring Breakout (In Stereo Live) (R				★★ "To Be the Best" (1993, Drama) Martin Kove, Mike Worth.
USA	59		Crush (R	Friends	JAG "Goodbyes" (In Stereo) (R		Walker, Texas Ranger (R		WWF Raw (L		WWF War Zone (R		Farmclubs.com (In Stereo) (R
HBO	91		15:00 "KidCop" ★½ "Home Alone 3" (1997, Comedy) Alex D. Linz. "PG" (R					Rid-E-Dorado	Sopranos "House Arrest" (R) (R		★★ "Message in a Bottle" (1999, Romance) Kevin Costner. "PG-13
MAX	85		★★½ "Big Business" (1988, Comedy) Bette Midler. "PG" (R					"Black Cat Run" (1998) Patrick Muldoon. (R (L		★★★ "Cookie's Fortune" (1999) Glenn Close. "PG-13" (R			"I Still Know"
SHOW	95		★ "Breaking the Rules" (1999, Drama) Jason Bateman. "PG-13"					★★½ "Down in the Delta" (1998, Drama) Alfre Woodard. "PG-13"			★ "Little Witches" (1996) Mimi Rechmeister. "R"		Hoop Life (R

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	81	Gavel to Gavel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	82	NBC/22 Springfield
4	CBS/4 Boston	83	CNN Headline News
5	ABC/5 Boston	84	CNN
6	PBS/57 Springfield	85	CNN Fn
7	HSCN Movie Ch	86	CNN Si
8	UPN/20 Hartford	87	TBS
9	Weather Channel	88	BET
10	NBC/30 New Britain	89	College TV Network
11	MTV/61 Hartford	90	Univision
12	PBS/24 Hartford	91	Comedy Central
13	WCCH & HSCN	92	Cartoon Network
14	International	93	TV Land
15	UMass Academic TV	94	C-Span
16	WB/ New Haven	95	ZDTV (Tentative)
17	Sundance	96	Bloomberg Financial Network
18	The Learning Channel	97	History Channel
19	UMC-TV19	98	HSCN Programming
20	ABC/40 Springfield

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Over the Hedge By Fry Lewis

Spunk By Mike LaRiccia

Livin' By Sean Scanlon

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Horoscopes

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – Today should be about compromise; remember that you can't build a bridge without seeing two different sides joined in the middle. And since you tend to be a klutz, make sure you don't fall off.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – You can expect to find yourself engaged in an emotional tug-of-war before the day is out. A trusted friend comes through in the nick of time.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – You may be quite restless, you monkey, but you can be rooted and stabilized by a timely connection with someone from afar.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – You must be prepared for more activity in the personal sphere today than you have been expecting. Work on internal rhythms; stay in touch with your gentitals.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Your willingness to work harder in order to capitalize on recent minor errors will serve you well today. Reality exceeds expectations; you want to freak this.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Dispense information freely, but be sure that what you have to tell is accurate and up-to-date. Keeping secrets is certainly ill-advised.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – If you're feeling restless, don't just sit and stew; get yourself moving; channel your energy into clearly positive, profitable endeavors, and socialize with koalas.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – Share and share alive today – and when you cannot, you would be wise to let that someone else enjoy that large portion of whatever is in question, whatever that means.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Someone you have to work with quite closely may be misreading you today. Take the time to talk things over honestly – and do it soon.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – You may be too inclined to overreact to routine surprises today; you can't expect everything to happen according to plan – at least not right now. Let me see your thong.....

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Ththong, thong, thong! You're being a little too selfish these days. It's time for you to shift your focus away from yourself; do so, or a friend will do it for you!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – You've been using yourself up at a more rapid pace lately, and now it's time to slow down and begin saving energy rather than expending it.

Quote of the Day

"You and me baby, we ain't nothin' but mammals, so let's do it like they do on the Discovery Channel."

–Bloodhound Gang, Bad Touch

ACROSS
1 Viaitor to Siam
5 Highlands apparel
10 Felines
14 Inert gas
15 Manicurist's board
16 Caspian feeder
17 Yin's counterpart
18 Plains sporter
19 Ready to be picked
20 — 13 mission
22 Handled
24 Dawn goddess
25 Arkin or Ladd
26 Small pets
30 Reside
35 — Khan
36 High degree
37 Uncanny
38 Disk-shaped toy
41 Dessert wine
43 Choir voice
44 Snooze
45 Toothpaste cover
46 Run-down
47 Prediction
50 Nippy
53 A Gershwin
54 Protein source
58 Haunted-house noises
62 Actor Sharif
63 Pool member
66 Birdfeeder treat
67 Des Moines locale
68 Fortuneteller e deck
69 Vicinity
70 Hanker
71 Practices boxing
72 Chimed

DOWN
1 Novelist Seton
2 Type of tide
3 Taboo
4 Devious methods
5 Lantern fuel
6 The Monkees "— Believer"
7 Was ahead
8 Catch (fish)
9 Damascus country
10 Ringed
11 Like the Sahara
12 Use the VCR
13 Luge
21 House site
23 Finished
25 Fireplace residue
26 Knife handles
27 Come to terms
28 New England state
29 AAA suggestion
31 Tiny
32 Novelist Jong
33 Turkish money
34 Vaulted
39 Turf
40 Utah canyon
41 Premier — Zedong
42 Downy fruits
44 Steelers .org
48 Spud spike
49 Kind of salad
51 Brewers ovens
52 Pub sign
54 Dirt
55 Melville novel
56 Show boredom
57 Crow
59 Emanation
60 Eager
61 Without an escort
64 Historical period
65 Neither's partner

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

3:31:00 © 2000 United Feature Syndicate

No menu today, just wishes for a sunny & peaceful Monday...

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Sam Wilkinson
Photo Technician	Dan Santella
Copy Editor	Samantha Poulten
Production Supervisor	Jeanette Santoro
Production Staff	Tereza Rodrigues, Katie Ross

Blast from the past

Baseball sweeps Yale in flashback fashion

By Matthew Despres
Collegian Staff

History, it seems, does in fact repeat itself.

Nearly one year ago to the day, the Massachusetts baseball team traveled to New Haven, Conn. to battle Yale in an early season doubleheader. The Minutemen took both games from the Bulldogs that afternoon, pushing their record to 8-7, and climbing above .500 for the first time that season.

Fast forward to this past weekend, where head coach Mike Stone and his team once again found themselves at the Yale field in a two-game swing with the Bulldogs. Although a full year came between the two series, the results were virtually identical as UMass swept Yale (5-1) and improved to 8-6 on the season.

The first game was highlighted by another gem of a performance from a UMass pitcher. On the heels of a stellar turn by Craig Stasko against Holy Cross on Wednesday, senior Travis Veracka stepped up and pitched a complete game three-hit shutout that helped carry the Minutemen to a 7-0 victory. Veracka, who was expected to be the top force on the mound this season for UMass, struck out six batters and walked only one en route to his first victory of the season.

UMass	7
Yale	0
Umass	4
Yale	3

The Minutemen continued their trend of jumping out to an early lead by striking at the Bulldogs in the first inning. After sophomore Mike Kulak reached first on a bunt and was pushed to second on a Nick Gorneault single, catcher Chris Morgan singled to right and drove Kulak home. With Gorneault now at third, shortstop Aaron Senez stepped up and knocked a two-out triple into center field, driving home two runs and staking the Minutemen to an early 3-0 lead.

After adding a run in the second, UMass again opened the offensive floodgates in the third inning. Senez came up big again, doubling down the left field line. Sophomore Scott Anderson loaded the bases on a fielder's choice, setting the stage for third basemen John Seed. With one out, Seed drove home Senez and Gavin Clark with a single to left center that gave UMass a six run cushion. The seventh and final Massachusetts run was scored by Scott Anderson, the result of a Shaun Skeffington single to center. Skeffington batted strongly all game, going 4-7 for the afternoon, and would save more of his clutch play for the second game. Provided some breathing room by the bats of his teammates, Veracka cruised, retiring nine straight batters at one point. Pitcher Matt McCarthy, who allowed seven runs on 11 hits, took the loss for Yale.

The second game of the afternoon was a far cry from the smooth ride UMass enjoyed in the first. The Minutemen escaped with a 4-3 victory under improbable circumstances, rallying from an early deficit and again banking on a little luck to carry them to their eighth consecutive win.

Down 2-0 early on, the Minutemen settled in by the fifth inning, scoring three times to take a one run lead. Skeffington singled to center, the first of four consecutive hits for UMass. After a Kulak single,

Turn to BASEBALL page 8

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS
Senior captain Shaun Skeffington

Lax quiets 'Dogs

Morley goes for six in win

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

It's why the game's four quarters long. Take away one chunk and it's a different story, perhaps skewing the picture. Perhaps the Bulldogs of Butler still don't know what hit them.

Once the train began chugging, Boston University tried to merely stay in the game, but the No. 16 Massachusetts men's lacrosse team used a decisive second quarter and timely scoring to put the "Dogs on a leash in a 12-9 victory in Indianapolis.

The teams traded goals in the first 15 minutes, with John Madigan catching a feed from Keith Gabrielli and BU answering just minutes later. The score was tied at two when UMass (3-2 1-1 ECAC) made its run, and the Bulldogs (1-5, 1-0 GWLL) could not fetch another score before the halftime buzzer. The Minutemen used the time period to run off four straight, taking a 5-2 lead into the locker rooms, extending the advantage after halftime elapsed.

Marc Morley got the ball rolling and kept it rolling all afternoon. The sophomore midfielder scored three goals and added three assists, getting his first score on the doorstep at the 9:04 mark of the second, which was followed by Dan Paccione's fifth goal of the season. The Maroon and White put more weight on when Alex Racioppi closed out the first half scoring.

The Minutemen didn't stop there, jumping out the gates after intermission with Morley's second tally. The Canton, N.Y. native scored just four points in the team's previous four games, but exploded for a career-high six against the Bulldogs. It also marks the most in one game since Rich Kunkel went for nine (six goals, three assists) in the Minutemen's 15-6 win over Fairfield last season.

Even still, Butler kept gnawing at UMass' lead, only to see it balloon in responses. With the Minutemen leading by four, twice the Bulldogs ripped off a two-goal run to close the gap between the two squads, but UMass' offense matched BU blow for blow.

After BU's Mike Regan cut the Minuteman lead to 6-4, it was just a matter of moments for the lead to swell once again. Thirty seconds after Regan beat UMass goaltender Chris Campolettano, Jeff Seals received a feed from Tim Socha to net his third of the season. Then Jeremy Guski came around a pick from behind the net, depositing the sphere past BU goalie Greg Ruccia off a pass from Morley.

Seals not only did the job on the scoreboard, but also on the statsheet.

UMass	12
Butler	9

The junior, who took over for David Kramer as the lead faceoff man, took 17 of 23 drops in the middle, giving UMass a tremendous advantage on offense.

Butler, however, closed the third with a pair of goals, but Morley and Madigan made sure the ball didn't pop out of the glove, in grand style at that. Both completed their hat tricks early in the final quarter, pushing the advantage back to four goals at 10-6, which was plenty enough for the UMass defense to hold onto. Meanwhile, Morley went to work on completing a hat trick of another kind - in the assist column. He found Madigan and Janowicz to close out the Maroon and White's scoring, helping the Minutemen reach double digits for the third time this year.

On the other side, UMass held its opponents to single digits for the fourth time this season, the exception coming in Hofstra's 10-7 win in Amherst in the season opener.

The Minutemen are hoping the win is the first of three on the road. UMass has just a few days rest before taking to the field again, wandering across the state to take on Boston College tomorrow afternoon in Chestnut Hill. The Eagles have struggled mightily this season. After opening with a convincing win against Canisius, BC has been outscored 30-9 in losses to Harvard (19-2) and Marist (11-7). Following the mid-week clash, UMass heads to Happy Valley for a duel with Nittany Lions of Penn State.

Spartans on verge of NCAA peak

David Rose on NCAA Basketball

Whoever came up with the term "March Madness" must have the biggest smile on his or her face today.

Not even Dionne Warwick could have predicted what has transpired the first two weeks of the tournament.

Check out the list of teams that will be watching the Final Four from the luxury of their dorm rooms: Arizona, Cincinnati, Duke, Kansas, Kentucky, Indiana, Ohio State, St. John's, Stanford, Syracuse, UConn (and believe me, I am heart broken about that), and Temple.

Instead of these perennial powerhouses, the Final Four will consist of two teams who in mid-February were praying just to get into the tournament, and another school known more for its "Fun and Gun" passing attack than its "Press and Bonib" full court attack.

However, with no disrespect to Florida, North Carolina and Wisconsin, and their amazing run to Indianapolis, the Final Four will turn into the coronation of Michigan State being the best team in the country.

To me, the national championship game will not take place in the RCA Dome because it already took place at the Palace in Auburn Hills, Michigan. The Spartans' clash with Iowa State had every bit the feel of a title game, with the intensity to match.

The game came down to the Spartans' heart winning out over Marcus Fizer and the Cyclones. It was the "Flintstones," Mateen Cleaves, Morris Peterson, and Charlie Bell not letting their team's chance of the national title die when it looked as if Iowa State had taken control of the game with four minutes left. It was the great coaching of Tom Izzo, who helped keep the Spartans under control when they trailed late for the second straight game. And, unfortunately, it took Larry Eustachy's tirade at the end of the game to prove which team had more mental toughness and composure by not letting the horrific officiating get in the way of its goal.

Also, after this game, there is one thing that needs to change in the NCAA tournament. The Spartans are good enough, but when you have a game 90 miles away from your campus and 20,000 fans are on your side, that gives you an added edge. With a game of that magnitude, the Cyclones were at a disadvantage from the start.

The Spartans were the best team in the country before the season began, and became a better team without Cleaves for the first 12 games. Although they suffered losses to Kentucky, Texas, Arizona, and little known Wright State, the role players got more confidence in their individual abilities and were able to compliment Cleaves when he came back on January 5th against Penn State. Peterson was huge during Cleaves' absence, and has averaged 16.6 points per game.

Cleaves' advantage is now the amount of games that he has played compared to the other teams in the tournament. While players on the Gators will be playing their 35th game, and the Badgers and Tar Heels playing in game number 36, Cleaves will be playing in his 25th and most likely his 26th game this year. His endurance showed in the final five minutes on Saturday, as he was by far the quickest player on the court.

The Spartans will play Big Ten foe Wisconsin on Saturday. The Badgers would not have even made the tournament without final week wins against Indiana and Purdue, and they were sixth in the conference in the regular season. But that is the beauty of the tournament, and Dick Bennett and his Badgers have gotten hot at the right time with their aggressive defense that has allowed an average of 56 points per game in the West Regional.

The same can be said for North Carolina, as the "Heels have gotten hot at the right time behind freshman Joseph Forte. Forte is the truth, and he has proved it during the tournament: Forte is averaging 20 points per game in the tournament, including a career high 28 against Tulsa on Sunday.

Tar Heel fans, and others around the country, have egg on their face today. Two weeks ago, both wanted Bill Guthridge out as head coach. Now, he has his team two wins away from the most improbable national championship in Tar Heel history.

And what is worst for Duke fans right now: the Tar Heels in Indianapolis or the Blue Devils not being there? And to make the sting worse, the team that knocked them out, the Florida Gators will show up in Indiana with the 2000 edition of Arkansas's "40 Minutes of Hell" that has upped the pace and led to three straight wins against higher seeded opponents.

Mike Miller's game winner against Butler in the opening round was the shot that got the Gators going, and they have continued that momentum in wins over Illinois, Duke, and Oklahoma State. Now Billy Donovan's team goes to Indy and the Final Four with a better defense than Steve Spurrier's football team could muster over its final three games last year.

The Final Four has reached Indianapolis, and while four teams have made it, only one realistically will be cutting down the nets next Monday night. Here is my take on the Final Four

Michigan State 70, Wisconsin 55
North Carolina 68, Florida 64
And for the National Championship: Michigan State 75, North Carolina 63.

David Rose is a Collegian columnist.

'Cuse gets loose on women's lax

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

The Syracuse women's lacrosse team, which came to Totman Field to take on Massachusetts complete with potent offensive weapons Lauren Brady and Karen Healy, didn't need the benefit of amazing luck in order to be competitive with the Minutewomen. Over the four games leading into Saturday's contest, Brady had registered 15 points, while teammate Healy was close behind with eight total goals and an assist on the season.

Still, with all that firepower, the Orangewomen based their 8-3 victory over the Maroon and White mostly on chance and circumstance.

After Syracuse midfielder Kim Wayne put a Carrie Soults assist past UMass goalie Jen Nardi to put the visitors up 3-1 with 17:57 still showing in the opening period, the Minutewomen took control offensively.

For the majority of the next 15 minutes, the hosting Massachusetts squad kept the playing field short – and directly around 'Cuse netminder Clothilde Ewing.

During that roughly-15 minute span, Ewing saw the bars around Syracuse net hit more often than George Foreman on a bad night.

"It could have been a different ball game," UMass coach Phil Barnes said. "In the beginning we hit a lot of pipes, but we did a lot of good things – defensively and offensively."

As the first half wound down, the only Minutewoman to avoid both Ewing and the crossbar was junior Fay Naber, who opened up the scoring early in the contest with her third goal of the year off of an assist by senior co-captain Rebecca Minaker. Nearly an entire half of play later, the Orangewomen tallied their fourth score of the game, as junior middie Katrina Hable upped the margin to three with a free position goal with only 16 ticks to go before halftime.

"I know a lot of people had shots today that they should've scored [on]," Minaker said. "It's just taking that extra second and really thinking about it and finishing off the shot, and there's something that we're missing that's keeping us from doing that."

Syracuse	12
UMass	9

In the second half, Syracuse continued to benefit from the proverbial storm cloud that was following UMass around the field. With only 2:32 gone in the final frame, the Minutewomen lost control of an easy ground ball near their own goal, and, after a momentary lapse of communication between Nardi and teammate Colleen Wales, the visitors were up by an intimidating 5-1 score.

"[Colleen] went down for the ground ball in the front of the cage, and she bobbled it up, I went down for it at the same time and she just threw it over my head," Nardi said.

Approximately three minutes later, Massachusetts finally got back on the scoreboard again, as Minaker picked up the carom off of a shot by freshman Lydia Robinson and put it past Ewing to shave the deficit back down to three, 5-2.

Brady single-handedly outscored the Minutewomen the rest of the way out, though, putting to rest any thought of a comeback. The Massachusetts native tallied three more unassisted goals on behalf of Syracuse to bring her game total to four – she was also credited with the Orangewomen's first score of the day. The only UMass answer came off the stick of senior defender Melissa Miele, who ducked inside the 'Cuse defense and whipped a shot by Ewing with 10:29 left in the match-up.

Brady's final goal came with only 11 seconds remaining to put the last nail in the Maroon and White coffin.

"[The Syracuse score] should've been a lot less," Barnes said. "It was disappointing. The most disappointing thing was giving up the eighth goal."

The loss drops Massachusetts to 0-3 on the season with their next game being on the road against New Hampshire tomorrow afternoon. The Minutewomen hope to break away from the disparaging 5.0 point-per-game average that has hurt them early on.

"We're progressing," Barnes said. "This was better than the first game and it was better than the second game, and we need to keep working at it. And the players are doing that – they're doing a great job... Things are slowly but surely coming together."

DAN SANTELLA/ COLLEGIAN
Denise Brey and the Minutewomen gave Syracuse a run for its money Saturday, but ended up on the short end of an 8-3 score.

These Red Sox offspring set out their own paths

By David Heuschkel
The Hartford Courant

FORT MYERS, Fla. – On any given day, the sons are playing baseball at the east end of Edison Avenue. You can find the fathers down the other end of the street named after the great inventor who became a favorite son of his city.

It's a rather fitting scenario, similar to the pages of the 2000 Boston Red Sox media guide. The fathers are toward the front of the book, the sons in the back.

That's the way it is on Edison, where the distance between the Red Sox minor league facility and City of Palms Park is less than three miles.

Yet the close proximity does not change the distance Red Sox Manager Jimy Williams and pitching coach Joe Kerrigan keep between their major league jobs and their sons' minor league careers.

Though some may consider them a couple of fortunate sons, Brady Williams and Joey Kerrigan see themselves for what they are: prospects in the Red Sox organization.

They can't help it if their fathers are big shots in Boston.

"I've still got to go out and play," Williams said. "I don't want a guarantee. It's no fun."

That's not to say being the son of a major league manager or coach doesn't have its perks.

When his father was a coach in the Montreal Expos organization, young Joe remembers hanging around and talking to players such as Andre Dawson and Tim Raines. How many kids can say they used to play catch with Pete Rose?

"Not many people remember (Rose) being traded to Montreal," Joey said. "He was there for only three months before being traded back to Cincinnati."

Brady was a bat boy for the Toronto Blue Jays when his father was the manager in 1986-89.

"George Bell used to call me Little Jimy," Brady said. "I was seven years old, eight years old."

Now he's 20 and hoping to play for the Augusta Greenjackets in the Class A Southern League. Last season, Brady played in the Gulf Coast League for rookies, and hit .256 with five homers and 25 RBI in 39 games.

Joey, 22, is also expected to move up this season to Class A Sarasota in the Florida State League. He played for Lowell in the New York-Penn League last season, and led the Spinners with a .314 average in 63 games. After the season, he was promoted to Augusta, a Class A team in the South Atlantic League.

"Everything's going great," said Joey, a second baseman. "It's nice to be in the same organization as my father."

Brady, a switch-hitting third baseman, played for his father in three Grapefruit League games. Jimy missed the first one after being ejected for arguing with the umpires.

But the next time, he was in the dugout when Brady went 2-for-2 against Montreal.

"It was an experience," Brady said.

One he'll probably remember. His first time up, Brady was ahead 3-and-0 when he stepped out of the batter's box and peered at third base coach Wendell Kim.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Volume CV3 Issue 19 Tuesday, March 28, 2000

Awad, Boss lock horns in election

Challenger concerned

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

A mother and an employee at the State Department of Public Health, Anne Awad is seeking to be elected to the Amherst town Select Board. It is her first time seeking the position.

Awad is running on a campaign that seeks to both develop and protect the local community.

"I've been concerned about the developmental pressures in Amherst and the possible loss of affordable housing, or at least what we have of it," Awad said. "Our new homes are more and more elegant, but less geared towards working people in town."

But development doesn't always have to be negative. Awad supports bringing new business into downtown Amherst, renovating vacant buildings and developing areas of town. She said she is committed to the job, and described it as a "consuming" pursuit.

"It will take many evenings a week, many hours, but I have time to do this," Awad said. "I'm going to drop everything and prioritize this responsibility if I win. This will be the other piece of my life besides my job."

One of the major issues that is a sticking point between her and challenger Hill Boss is a referendum question about marijuana. The question is non-binding legalization issue with an amendment that suggests the Amherst Police Department deprioritize marijuana arrests.

"I completely support the referendum and I completely support UMass students coming to the town to have us put something on the ballot. It shows a level of interest and engagement in government and it will let the voters have an opportunity to discuss this and decide this," Awad said.

She said that she felt society needs to look at what good the war on drugs has really done, saying that good people become criminals for minimal experimentation.

"These criminals are going to have doors close for them for the rest of their lives even if they've only been interested for a small part of their life," Awad said. She said students charged with even possession can never be schoolteachers, can never join the military and stand to lose their college loans.

She acknowledged asking the APD to deprioritize marijuana arrests, and complimented them, saying they'd been good at confiscating the drug and taking offenders home to parents.

"Everyone needs to realize that this is non-binding, and that beyond that it signals something very important that society should be talking about," Awad said.

Town of Amherst Elections

Precinct	Polling Address	Residential Areas in Precinct
1	N. Congregational Church Church Hall, 11199 N. Pleasant St.
2	North Fire Station 603 Pleasant St	Orchard Hill Van Meter
3	Immanuel Lutheran Church Church Lounge, 867 N. Pleasant St	Northeast Sylvan
4	Bangs Community Center 70 Boltwood Walk Downtown
4A& 10A	Hampden Dining Commons Southwest Residential Area	Southwest
5	Bangs Community Center 70 Boltwood Walk Downtown
6	Fort River School 71 Strong St.
7	Crocker Farm School 280 West St.
8	Munsen Memorial Library South Amherst Common
9	Wildwood School 71 Strong St.
10	Bangs Community Center 70 Boltwood Walk Downtown

Drug question key

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

Incumbent Hill Boss is running for re-election to the Amherst town Select Board in today's elections, and his stance on the referendum question is one of the main things that separates him from his opponent.

The referendum question on the ballot will deal with the decriminalization of marijuana, while the second part of it involves deprioritization.

Boss said he has no problem with the first part of the referendum, which would call for marijuana offenders to not be recognized as criminals. According to him, the second part of the referendum question, asking for deprioritization of marijuana, is what most people seem to be ignoring. He stated that he encourages police to "look the other way," but that marijuana is illegal and must be enforced.

"Until marijuana is legalized by the Massachusetts State Legislature or Congress, the referendum asks the town to instruct the police to look the other way," Boss said. "I certainly would hope the police would deprioritize and I think they have been deprioritizing their efforts to arrest people who smoke pot. But that's got to be a police decision and not a political issue."

According to Boss, if he had instructed the police to "look the other way" in cases involving marijuana usage, he would be breaking an oath as a politician to uphold the laws of the town, the state and the nation. Boss said a member of the Cannabis Reform Coalition (CRC) went before the Amherst Select Board to ask for support on the referendum question. Boss said the board begged them to take out the deprioritization part, and when the CRC refused to do it, Boss informed them that they couldn't endorse the referendum question.

He stated that his opponent, Anne Awad, has been ignoring the deprioritization issue, focusing only on decriminalization of marijuana.

Another issue Boss has been involved with is the issue of smoking in bars in downtown Amherst. He said he believes students are mature enough to enter a bar and make their own decision on smoking in bars. Awad is opposed and wants to ban smoking in all Amherst bars, Boss said.

"She obviously doesn't think students old enough to enter a bar are mature enough to make their own decision about smoking," Boss said.

In the past, Boss was responsible for installing town election voting booths in Hampshire Dining Commons at UMass.

"I strongly believe that students who spend nine months in Amherst should be able to participate in local affairs," Boss said. "The presence of the voting machines on campus makes it easier for them to do so."

"People's University" gets underway in CCC

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

Students, faculty and staff at the University of Massachusetts convened for the beginning of a three-day rally in the Campus Center Concourse to educate and gather support to protest privatization.

The group itself discussed the administration's decision to privatize, the decrease in diversity on campus, the budget cuts and elimination of majors.

According to John Zibbell, organizer of the "People's University," the three day event will feature guest lecturers from across the campus community. Yesterday's section featured Comparative Literature professor David Lenson, a member of the Massachusetts Society of Professors (MSP).

Lenson discussed the history of the Massachusetts School of Agriculture and explained to those in attendance how it arrived at its present day state. According to him, the University of Massachusetts was intended from the start to serve the purpose of appealing as a first rate higher education for the people, a "people's university."

However, as a result of the past couple years, it has opened itself up to the private sectors and is becoming less and less a public people-oriented institution.

"The need for us to be here today is because even though it is legally possible to sell off pieces of the people's university to the private sector, it is not morally acceptable," Lenson said.

Lenson stated that the university is a result of three generations of taxpayers, tuition money and labor put forth by the Massachusetts Commonwealth and its members.

In 1960's, Lenson said there was an expansion in higher education that was a direct result of Sputnik and a legislation called the National Defense Education Act, which was intended to bring about an increase in the size and scope of scholarships and allow new academic departments grow in size within already expanding institutions.

"UMass Amherst truly became the people's university when a visionary man named John Lederle saw a way to take this cow college which was rich in land and poor in everything else and make it grow almost overnight into a research university," Lenson said.

Lederle, in his 90's, is living in Pelham. Lenson said that many people have looked back on the election of Lederle and have said, "there was the last decent presi-

Turn to PRIVATIZATION page 2

LUCAS ZENK/ COLLEGIAN
Walking by the water...
A student is reflected in the campus pond as he makes his way to class

CRC hopes referendum packs election

By Alicia Upano
Collegian Correspondent

The Cannabis Reform Coalition (CRC) and the Citizens for a Sensible Marijuana Policy hope that today's town election will draw the largest student voter turnout in the history of Amherst, as student votes may be the key to passing question one regarding marijuana legalization.

The CRC, the Citizens for a Sensible Marijuana Policy and their supporters kicked their campaign into high gear over the past few days by calling all the registered students voters in Amherst, asking them to vote "yes" on the non-binding legalization question and also to cannabis reform supporter Anne Awad for the Amherst Select Board.

Alan Root, town activist, noted the issues of this election – from marijuana to Awad – is a way to "put the campus on the political map of Amherst." The CRC and supporters have been doing just that; their two-year campaign involved collecting thousands of signatures and registering nearly 3,000 people to vote. In contrast, 2,079 people voted in last year's election, 26 of which were on-campus students. With recent efforts, this year's voter turnout is expected to be considerably more.

However, Anne Awad is not only favored by the CRC and the Citizens for a Sensible Marijuana Policy solely because she supports the marijuana initiative but also because, "she is a local that has been good on student issues," Chris Tarnstrom, a long-time CRC member said.

Awad is running against current select board member Hill Boss, a man who according to Brian Julin, Chairman for the Citizens for a Sensible Marijuaun Policy and one of the founders of CRC has, "never been a favorite among a lot of students because a lot of things he's said and done." Some students objected to comments that were made regarding the campus elections. He was quoted as saying, "I still feel that if you set up a couple of kegs of beer next to the [voting] machines, [students] would have come out like flies." He later apologized to the Student Government Association.

The Boss-Awad selection and the legalization question constitute two of the three questions on the town ballot. The question proposed by the pro-marijuana organizations is two-tiered. First, it urges the town to lobby the state legislature and congress for marijuana legalization. The second part of the question asks that marijuana laws be deprioritized by the Amherst Police Department in the interim. However, the latter part of this question is similar to a vote denied by the town in 1976.

The legalization question that stands on the ballot today is actually a resurrection of a vote made in 1976, Article 52. Although, Article 52, Part 2 that supported the removing of laws regulating or proscribing the possession of marijuana was passed, Article 52, Part 1 was not. Part 1 requested the non-enforcement on the part of local police of marijuana possession laws.

Although Amherst Police Chief Charles L. Scherpa has publicly declared that any opinion, poll or recommendation does not supersede the law, Julin does not think this is a problem. He said, "Although the police say they have to enforce the law, they've already deprioritized marijuana compared to other towns."

The CRC believes that those who smoke marijuana should not be imprisoned, forming the base of their efforts in the UMass and Amherst communities. Vernon Coffey, CRC President, said, "We obviously try to appeal to those who smoke [marijuana] because they have personal knowledge of the issue and we want them to vote, but we're not promoting social-smoking. That's not our message."

According to Tarnstrom, the effort holds greater importance with the implementation of the Higher Education Act nationwide next fall. This act threatens to withdraw financial aid to students convicted of a drug offense.

Awad has similar ideas, she stated in a letter to the Amherst Bulletin. "The lives of many young people have been destroyed by jail time or criminal conviction histories because they have been caught in possession of marijuana."

Julin said there are a "surprising amount" of support from town voters, however the CRC recognizes that the students have the potential to sway the vote. The pro-marijuana organizations trust that many of their supporters vote today, but even before the election Tarnstrom views the entire campaign as a success. "Communication on a usually taboo subject in the public form – that itself is a victory," he said.

Voting takes place from noon to 8 p.m. at selected locations.

JARET BARR/ COLLEGIAN
Lazy day in the Campus Center
Two UMass students relax yesterday afternoon on one of the many available couches in the Campus Center.

Eamon defends Commonwealth College

By Jake Lilien
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Commonwealth College has been the subject of much attention since its conception last year. Some have praised the new Honors College, claiming that it may attract top students who would have otherwise attended private schools, while others have lambasted it with charges of elitism.

William Eamon, a candidate for the position of Dean of the Commonwealth College, explained his positions on the controversies surrounding the program to students yesterday at a discussion in the Campus Center. Eamon, the current director of the Honors Program at New Mexico State University, was met with questions ranging from proposed honors dorms to general education requirements.

Eamon began the discussion by explaining the differences between the Commonwealth College at UMass and the Honors Program at NMSU. The NMSU Program, he stated, is tracked along general education requirements, whereas UMass students have the option of fulfilling Honors requirements within their majors.

Furthermore, only 30-50 NMSU students a year complete the honors track, making their program much smaller than the Commonwealth College.

He then opened the floor to questions. When asked why he was leaving his current position in New Mexico, Eamon said, "I've always thought that transitions are good things in people's lives. I'm ready to take on a new challenge." He explained that he chose the University of Massachusetts because he considers the Commonwealth College a "quality program."

"I'm not going to leave New Mexico for a anything less than a very good job," he said. "In the academic job market, [positions for] directors of honors programs do not come up like cherries on a tree. This was the best job open to me."

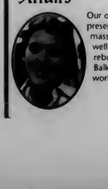
He also responded to concerns that he would be unfamiliar working with a program that featured Honors courses within academic majors.

"I have a lot of experience producing honors courses in general education, and the same skills can be applied," he said. "They aren't all that different."

Ken Campbell, a sophomore History major, brought up the question of "elitism" within the Honors College.

"How would you make it clear to students of the Commonwealth College that they are still members of the University?" he asked.

Campbell complained of honors students viewing themselves as Commonwealth College students



Turn to COMMONWEALTH page 3

EXTENDED FORECAST

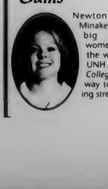
Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 55 LOW: 35	HIGH: 52 LOW: 36	HIGH: 58 LOW: 37

SOURCE: CNN.COM

International Affairs

Our own Catherine Turner presents her views on the mass suicide in Uganda as well as a look at the rebuilding process in the Balkans in this week's world news.

PAGE 5



Whatever It Takes.....

Don't see this movie. Find out why by turning to Arts, where you'll also find recaps of this weekend's musical and theatrical goings-on here on campus.
Arts: We won the Oscar for swellness.

PAGE 6

Net Gains

Newton native Rebecca Minaker will look to play a big part in getting women's lacrosse back on the winning track against UNH.
Collegian Sports: the best way to snap your own losing streak.

PAGE 10

Arts & Living 6
Comics 9
Crossword 9
Editorial 4
News 1
Sports 10

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

Police Log

Accidents
Apr. 24

A minor two-vehicle accident was reported on North Pleasant St. No injuries were reported.

Arrests
Apr. 24

Michael T. O'Donnell, 19, of Milton was arrested in Moore Dorm and charged with underage possession of alcohol and possession or use of a false or stolen RMV document.

Apr. 25

Jason D. Blodgett, 22, of Lowell was arrested on North Pleasant St. and charged with Possession of a class D substance, operating a motor vehicle under the influence of alcohol, and unsafe operation of a motor vehicle.

Marcin L. Kopec, 20, of Springfield was arrested on Massachusetts Ave. and charged with operating a motor vehicle under the influence of alcohol, and speeding.

Larceny
Apr. 24

A laptop computer, valued at $1200, was reported stolen from a room in Van Meter Dorm.

A wallet was reported stolen or missing from Van Meter Dorm.
Apr. 26

A bicycle, valued at $570, was reported stolen from a hallway in Patterson Dorm.

Vandalism
Apr. 24

A window was reported smashed in Cance Dorm.
Apr. 25

A window was reported smashed in a door at the Chancellor's House on Chancellor Drive.

A window was reported smashed in a vehicle in lot #43.

A door in Patterson Dorm was reported kicked in.
Apr. 26

Housing was notified of damage to a bathroom in John Quincy Adams Dorm.

Damage to a vehicle was reported in lot #63

Misc.
Apr. 24

Skateboarders were reported at the Lederle Research Tower. Someone reportedly attempted to break through a doorway in Durfee Conservatory.

A liquor law violation was reported in Lot #32. Court action will be sought.

Illegal use of a phone card was reported from Thoreau Dorm.

A noisy party was reported in Cance Dorm.

A noisy party was reported in Prince Dorm.
Apr. 25

An intoxicated person was reported in Hills house.

Police received a report of a fight in progress on the fourth floor of Patterson Dorm.

Police received a complaint of individuals with foghorns in Wheeler Dorm.

UMass Police assisted Amherst Police Department with dispersing a large party on East Pleasant St.

British pair examines trends in autism

By David Brown
Washington Post

WASHINGTON – A recent paper by two British epidemiologists suggests the skyrocketing numbers of autistic children being seen by U.S. public school systems actually may fall within the range predicted by some European studies.

They used 91 per 10,000 as the prevalence of children who meet, or just miss, the definition of an "autism spectrum" disorder. Although that is an extremely liberal estimate, the current enrollment of autistic children in California, the state with some of the best and most alarming data, is still smaller than the British study would predict.

So it is possible California (and every other place in the country) is simply playing catch-up with a group of neurological disorders that were never as rare as people thought.

On the other hand, it could be that the true biological risk for autism is changing. That possibility has parents – and researchers – casting around for things that are different now from the past. Vaccines are one of the things on the list.

In 1998 a British researcher reported on 12 autistic children with intestinal problems. He speculated that the childhood vaccine that contains weakened measles, mumps and rubella viruses caused a low-grade infection that decreased the children's absorption of nutrients, which led to their disability.

This theory has now been largely refuted. An epidemiological study from London showed a steady rise of autism since 1979, but no jump when the measles-mumps-rubella vaccine was introduced in 1988. It also found virtually identical vaccination status of autistic and non-autistic 2-year-olds. A Swedish study found no difference in prevalence of the disorder before and after the vaccine's introduction.

Many parents, however, are convinced that if not that specific vaccine then maybe multiple vaccinations per se are somehow disordering the immune system and causing autism. Critics of this theory say the relationship between the first appearance of autistic symptoms at about 18 months and numerous doses of vaccine given shortly before then is nothing but predictable coincidence.

The federal Agency for Toxic Substances and Disease Registry recently finished a study of Brick Township, N.J., a community north of Atlantic City where the childhood prevalence of autism is reputed to be 1 in 200. Although the agency's final report (and a formal prevalence survey by the CDC) will not be released until later this spring, a registry scientist, Tomas Mignone, said recently that the town's water system, which supplies all residences, meets state and federal purity standards and that no unusual airborne pollutants have been found. Perhaps the strongest evidence against a postnatal cause of autism is the autistic brain itself.

"The changes observed have varied, but none has ever been reported that could have occurred even in late gestation, or after birth," said Patricia Rodier of the University of Rochester, who has studied brains of autistic people.

What seems certain is that genetic predisposition plays a huge role in determining who develops autism and who doesn't. If one child in a set of identical twins is autistic, there is an 80 percent chance the second child will be too. Siblings of autistic children have about a 5 percent likelihood of developing some autism-spectrum disorder – far higher than would occur by chance alone. (However those numbers also prove that genes aren't everything.) At least a dozen genes help lay the groundwork for the disease, scientists believe.

To promote research on the genetics of autism, an advocacy organization called Cure Autism Now two years ago set up a depository at Rutgers University where DNA samples from about 430 families with autistic members are stored. Gene sequences, as well as behavioral inventories of the autistic people in the database will be made available to researchers worldwide through the Internet.

■ privatization

continued from page 1

dent this school ever had."

He had the idea he could persuade the legislature to grow something overnight that could carry on into the biggest and best research institution in the country, Lenson said. He caused the legislature to carry out enormous programs for expanding departments and buildings and for appointing faculty.

"There was never a more exciting opportunity for a person coming out of graduate school in all of history because we knew when we got here that we could make this place into what we wanted it to be," Lenson said.

He explained that he arrived at the university along with all of the other senior faculty between 1968 and 1972. Most of the faculty had come from private schools and Ivy League schools. Lenson said they were a special kind of young faculty members that wanted to give back in education what they had received and Lederle had given them the infrastructure, the money and the opportunity.

"The basic ideas still remained to serve the people of the Commonwealth whose labor taxes and tuition had built this place from the ground up and maintain the vision John Lederle had when it was merely a pasture."

However, according to Lenson, the university has been "hanged around" over the past few years, always going through periods of ups and downs.

"We began to see deterioration of physical structure around us," Lenson said. "It became more and more difficult for us to replace faculty that had been left vacant."

The roof caved in with the George Bush recession of the late 80's and 90's and the university was unprepared to face budget cuts in the early 90's so the vision of the people's university was severely eroded.

"These days were so bad that it was enough to make you feel sorry for the administration," Lenson said. "They were forced to somehow figure out how to get through another day, another week, another semester."

According to Lenson, the three colleges that were most affected and continue to be to the present day were the College of Natural Resources, College of Arts and Humanities and the College of Social Sciences. The reason for this he said is because these colleges are concerned with people and not with infrastructure and technology and therefore can be cut. He said with these cuts, faculty decreased and vacant positions failed to be filled.

"When I started here in 1971, I was the youngest member of my department," Lenson said. "It is now the spring semester of the year 2000 and I still am."

Lenson discussed that repaving parking lots, installing fume hoods and maintaining buildings have taken absolute precedent over the human components of the university.

"Now having squandered a fortune on software that may or may not work or saving portions of buildings from collapsing, an addition to the Fine Arts lobby and now news comes academic structure will be squeezed," Lenson said. "When they look at a university that has now announced that it is for sale, they [private sectors] will come vulturizing around here circling around our library saying, 'It's going to be our library from now on,' and then see if your student ID is enough to get a book out five years later."

Lenson said he recommends students to pressure Chancellor Scott and the Board of Trustees and the Massachusetts legislature in letting them know that they won't put up with this "necessary evil."

"He [Scott] said he gets up in front of the mirror and says, 'when I look in the mirror, I say to myself I'm evil, but I'm a necessary evil,'" Lenson said. "He's flattering himself. He's not really evil."

Lenson said students could become involved and organize a trip, all expenditures paid, to the state legislature to get involved with the process. For more information, call the Massachusetts Science of Professors (MSP) at 545-2206 and volunteer to protest and petition at the state legislature level.

Ahh... the Collegian

Your source for news, arts, sports and good old fashion opinions

The University of Massachusetts
Something Every Friday
Presents
Richie Havens in Concert

Featuring vocalist:
Dayna Kurtz

UMass Fine Arts Center
Concert Hall
Friday March 31, 2000
8:00p.m.
Free to UMass Students;
$5.00 General Public

Ruben Blades Concert, Clinic, & Lecture

Featuring "Editus"
UMass Fine Arts Center Concert Hall
Concert: Sunday April 2, 8:00pm
Musical Clinic: Monday April 3,
10am...Free
Lecture: Monday April 3, 1pm...Free

Concert Ticket Information:
Free to UMass Students with valid I.D.;
$5 Five-College Students
$10 General Public

Latin music performer, Ruben Blades is an accomplished singer/songwriter as well as actor and activist. Winner of 3-Grammy's and performed in over 20 movies.

Tickets for both programs on sale at FAC Boxoffice: 545-2511
Co-Sponsored by:
The Student Affairs Cultural Enrichment Fund: The UMass Arts Council; The Student Government Program Board; The Distinguished Visitors Program; The UMass Alumni Association; The UMass Cultural Centers:CASA Dominicana; SGA Finance Committee; the Latin American Studies Program; Umass Auxiliary Services; Campus Activities Cluster; the Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs; and the Commuter Area Government.

UMASS The Index Yearbook
ATTENTION!!!
CLASS OF 2000
ABSOLUTE LAST CHANCE FOR SENIOR PORTRAITS
MARCH 27TH-31ST
Make your appointment now by calling
1-800-OUR-YEAR or log
on to www.ouryear.com
School Access #147
(You need to know the access number when you make the appointment)
Order Your 2000 Yearbook
ONLY $50.00
Log on to www.walsworth.com or
Call 1-800-929-1503
(Service Charge of $2.95 for orders placed by phone)
DAVOR PHOTOGRAPHY
Walsworth Publishing Company

■ ball

continued from page 10

University of Florida while picking up his lone victory in overpowering the College of the Holy Cross. Szado will look to put together several strong innings for the Maroon and White in hopes to lower his current 7.11 ERA.

It is quite difficult to argue the fact that UMass is on a roll. They won't, however, take Hartford as any less of a challenge than any other team they have taken on thus far. The 5-8 Hawks are coming off of a two-day, two double-header weekend that found them dropping three out of four games. They fell twice to Sacred Heart University while participating in a two-game split with Rhode Island. Today's game will serve as the home opener for Hartford.

Stone mentioned that he rarely researches an opponent in depth and that his sole concern is that of the performance of his players, not the weaknesses of a specific team.

"I don't spend a lot of time matching up the team against any other. We hope to beat everyone but I don't single out anyone we play as a certain victory," Stone said. "I am really only concerned about our team and how focused they are. I just want them to play really solid."

Mandatory News staff meeting Monday, April 3

Win a $25 Gift Certificate from Zanna to Ladies Night at The Monkey Bar

Register to win at Zanna
every Thursday 6-7PM.
Winner drawn at 7:05PM.
Must be present to win.
(Thursdays March 30 through May 4)

■ commonwealth

continued from page 1

rather than UMass students. He also brought up concerns about non-Commonwealth students being forced out of residence halls to make room for honors "Learning Communities."

"What you're talking about is representative of a specific perspective," Eamon responded. "I suspect that this is indicative of the kind of debate [that has occurred.] What I gather, from other students I've spoken to, is that some of this is a perception of information that may not be complete.

There is a perception that the Honors College is draining off funds from other places on campus, which is not true."

Eamon went on to say that, as Dean, he would try to "open the lines of communication," not only to honors students but to the entire UMass community. He also mentioned that he has proposed an honors dorm at New Mexico State, and is not opposed to the idea of one at UMass.

Eamon refrained from criticizing any aspects of the current Commonwealth College, although at one point he expressed doubts about the current freshman-only Learning Communities in Orchard Hill, saying that breaking up floors of students after a year could be detrimental.

Eamon is one of several candidates for Dean of the Commonwealth College that will be addressing students at information sessions. Linda Nolan, the Interim Dean of the College, is also one of these candidates.

Studies challenge belief that black students' esteem enhances achievement

By Michael A. Fletcher
The Washington Post

CHARLOTTE, N.C. – With her erect posture and precise diction, Ayaba Bey is the picture of certitude as she leads three seniors at the Brisbane Academy Math and Science Preparatory School through their affirmations.

"I am OK. I am capable," they recite. "There is no one exactly like me."

This is a lesson in self-esteem, a subject that officials at this small, black-run private school take as seriously as reading, writing or arithmetic. "If you love them, they will learn" is a mantra at Brisbane, and it has proven compelling to the school's loyal cadre of supporters.

Brisbane students, some of whom have struggled elsewhere, score an average of 3.5 years above grade level on standardized tests in math and English. And to many parents, that success is a product of the school's focus on building students' self-worth. They see Brisbane as a critical buffer against corrosive racial stereotypes that distort the way black children see themselves.

"A lot of the academic success we have is because the students feel good about themselves," said Geraldine Brisbane-White, a former public school teacher who, with her husband, William, founded the predominantly black school in 1992.

The school's academic success is unquestioned. But new research is casting serious doubt on whether self-esteem has anything to do with student achievement here or anywhere else. The self-esteem of black students undoubtedly is reinforced at Brisbane and schools like it, but an increasing number of researchers say the boost is hardly needed because black children start out with a stronger self-image than often is assumed.

These findings are challenging long-held beliefs about the psychological impact of racism on African Americans. Low self-esteem among blacks has been thought by generations of parents, educators and researchers to lie at the root of an assortment of problems from academic underachievement to crime.

But there is mounting evidence to the contrary.

After reanalyzing data from 261 studies in which the self-worth of a half-million participants was assessed, Bernadette Gray-Little, a psychologist at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, concluded that black youth exhibited self-esteem that was at least as healthy as that of their white counterparts.

"For a long time, I think, the assumption has been made by others, and sometimes blacks themselves, that self-esteem will go along with the way society views you," Gray-Little said. "Our belief is that self-esteem is more personally based than that. You do not believe you are magnificent or miserable because of social status."

This is why many criminals have been found to have high – and often inflated – self-esteem, while many overachievers are dogged by a sense of worthlessness, she said.

Gray-Little's findings parallel little-known work by other researchers who have drawn similar conclusions in recent decades. These studies have proven controversial because they contradict conventional wisdom – and earlier research – that says low self-esteem is part of the historical burden borne by African Americans.

It's a view that has been etched in the nation's consciousness for at least half a century, ever since noted psychologist Kenneth Clark and his wife, Mamie, performed several studies that still stand as landmarks of American race relations. The most famous, in 1947, involved 253 black schoolchildren who were asked to choose between one of two dolls that were identical except in color.

Apply Now for Best Locations
Apartment Rentals
www.amherstlincolnrealty.com
or call
Lincoln Real Estate
253 - 7879

Castaway Lounge
Proudly Presents.
Monday April 3
Amateur Night
1st Place $200
2nd Place $100
3rd Place $50
Rt. 5 & 10 Whately, MA (413) 665-8733

AMHERST TOWN ELECTIONS
TUESDAY MARCH 28TH

UMASS STUDENTS
Registered to vote and unsure where to go?

Call the Amherst Town Clerk's Office
265-4035
call between the hours of:

Monday 8:00 a.m.-4:30 p.m.
Tuesday 7:00 a.m. - 8:00 p.m.

NEW SOUTHWEST VOTERS:
Welcome to your polling place!

Vote in Hampden Dining Commons
Voting Hours 12 p.m.- 8:00 p.m.

Any questions please feel free to contact:
Amherst Town Clerk's Office
256-4035

Don't Forget to VOTE
Don't Forget to VOTE

Rental Office
1040 N. Pleasant St. #410
Amherst, MA 01002
Phone #: (413) 549-0145
Best! 1999 UMASS Massachusetts Daily Collegian
NEW PUFFTON VILLAGE
Serving all Your Rental Needs
Now Accepting applications for summer/fall 2000

www.bu.edu/summerterm
Summer Term 2000
Boston University

617/353-6000
Session 1: May 23–July 1
Session 2: July 5–August 12
Twelve-Week Session: May 23–August 12
BOSTON UNIVERSITY
An equal opportunity, affirmative action institution

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Our Opinion
Where do we go now?

With Student Government Association elections completed and the current administration of the SGA staying for a second year, it is perfectly reasonable for of the students on this campus to expect big things.

After all, both president Jeff Howe and trustee Seth Avakian have a year's worth of experience in their pocket, and that, if nothing else, should benefit their work and, by extension, the UMass student body. They know who to talk to and how to talk to them, where to find them, and, hopefully, how to say the right things so that the UMass campus is well represented.

UMass students deserve strong leadership, and the fact that Howe and Avakian have a year's worth of experience should help them. Knowing the majority of the SGA shouldn't hurt either, as well-known patterns for success and accomplishment should already be in place. Most senators should know where to go and how to do the things that they want to do.

Because of their experience, and the fact that the SGA knows them, anything less than success is not an option. The election itself set a high standard for the SGA pair: both Howe and Avakian won closely contested races, a fact that should tell them that there are students on this campus that believe differently than them. Both winners need to work to unite the differing viewpoints, bringing the 1,200 voters that supported Jim Eltringham and Asif Sayani to their side, or at least close the gap between the two so that SGA can strongly stand on an acceptable voter turnout.

And the SGA will need to stand together In the days and months of the next academic year. Major issues face students, perhaps most important being a proposal to put security cameras in dorm lobbies. If the SGA is to be successful in their opposition to this intrusive proposition, they must stand together as a body, and Jeff and Seth must be the people they rally around.

Of course, the SGA also must be able to deal with the kinds of issues that spring up over the course of the year; while their response to assaults was acceptable, perhaps they can take pro-active measures against possible problems in the future.

Instead of reacting to crisis after one happens, perhaps proposing ways to deal with them before hand would be a benefit to all students. Avakian has already started, taking classes in how to deal with situations like last semester's assaults, but the SGA's response should be better prepared and more proactive for students.

Classes, seminars and education.

And these are basic proposals. What the student body expects might be better, but hopefully won't be worse. However, It is ultimately their judgement, and to make that judgement, they will have to be informed.

Both Howe and Avakian have proposed that they want to communicate with the student body in an attempt to better educate them. But how? -

They propose to fight against the administration's proposal for security cameras, but how?

The first job of the two year administration is to inform students of just how it is they want to accomplish the things they have promised. Once students know their methods, they can then go about accomplishing those same tasks. The Daily Collegian wishes our SGA administration the best of luck, and only hopes they can come through with what they've said is their interest.

Your Opinion
Racism on campus

To the Editor:

"Why are all the black students [standing in the triangle]?" That quote is an excerpt from a popular Beverly Tatum book which tries to answer the question often imposed on people of color: why do they assemble, why do they flock, why do they come together, why do they...? A greater challenge to understanding this would be for those who are pondering the question to ask themselves why they are seeking the information. On this past evening, March 25, at approximately 11p.m., the historically African-American fraternity Alpha Phi Alpha was conducting an initiation process at the Southwest triangles. During the ceremony, some white students were yelling profanities and throwing beer cans at the crowd. Why? Do racial minority groups throw beer cans at the myriad of inebriated motley crews that stampede through campus every Thursday through Saturday?

Although the rituals of other students are often puzzling, students of color do not disrespect nor find it necessary to engage in disinterested inquiry. A few white students passing by often stopped and asked what was going on and got an answer, even though these same white students would often pass a student of color on a regular day and conveniently have nothing to say. If these students who watched from afar or either of the more ignorant students (see the campus police log for details) had been part of the ceremony, they would have known what was going on! So why is the information so important? Well, after having beer cans thrown at me as If I were some menacing animal invading a person's backyard, I realized that racism's lasting effects are still alive and kicking.

On an average day, a white student may be lucky to find more than four students of color in a class, yet nothing seems threatening at that point. But when more than four students of color get together, some white students need to know what's going on. My problem is that these students ask their questions as if they are genuinely interested in the events of students of color. Yet where are they during these events? Don't get me wrong, I do see a good number of white students at the events held by students of color, but it is usually the same students. At predominantly white colleges across the US, often times the actions of racial minorities are closely scrutinized under a microscope. The threat of 'more than four' provides that we still have a long way to go; for those of you who think racism is dead, but instead he took a vacation to Cancun and now is back to attack.

And for those who still need an explanation for why students of color are congregating, check the weather report because we are getting closer to the African climate.

Remon M. Jourdan
Southwest

Salman Rushdie and booze

Boomer Pinches

A couple weekends ago, I ran into my old friend Salman Rushdie in New York. He was at the Astor Lounge in the East Village, swigging cocktails and regaling the ladies with tales of intrigue and danger from his life as a hunted man. He had a buxom blond listening with rapt attention at the bar: "There I was, dollface, cornered by an assassin in a Calcutta laundrette. 'Prepare to die, Rushdie,' he sez, leveling his pistol at me. I looked him square in the eye, one hand scooping up some Tide detergent behind my back. 'I think not, my friend,' I said. We writers have very quick reflexes from all that, well, typing we do, and before he knew it I had blinded him with Tide and knocked him headfirst into one of the washing machines with a karate chop to the neck. I slammed the door and set the dial for 'High.' 'Well, punk,' I said as he whirled around choking on soapy water and my dirty undies, 'looks like you're all washed up.'"

That Salman. Always a killer with the ladies.

He was glad to see me, though for a moment he mistook me for Hunter S. Thompson. We ordered white Russians and found a table towards the back.

Salman and I met while I was over in London. I was in some nightclub or other in Brixton, trying to track down Huggy Bear from "Starsky and Hutch." He was in town doing a play and I was supposed to Interview him for The Eagle, the newspaper I was working for. Instead I found Salman Rushdie, drunk and giddy, standing on the bar with no pants on and singing "Like A Virgin" at the top of his lungs.

Good God, I thought. This place could be crawling with fanatical assassins. He's gonna get himself killed.

I took it upon myself to rescue Salman Rushdie, who is after all, one of the most accomplished living authors in the world. I approached him under the pretense of singing along with his one-man butchery of Madonna's hit.

"Listen, Salman," I whispered in his ear when I was close enough. "We've got to lam it. They could be watching us even now."

He stopped singing and turned to look at me, slightly confused. Then he broke out into a gleeful version of "The Love Boat."

Too much time had been wasted already. I threw him over my shoulder, grabbed his pants, and rushed out the fire exit. Checking to make sure we weren't followed, I ducked into an alleyway off Electric Avenue. He was singing "Memories" from Cats now, on the verge of tears, and I had to slap him around a little to shut him up.

"Zip it, Rushdie, or I'll kill you myself. Now put your pants on."

Somehow I got him home. The next day I received a call from him. He was grateful and a little embarrassed. "Ha ha, one too many martinis, went right to my head." I assured him there were no hard feelings and we went out to a wonderful night at the opera.

My plan was to interview Rushdie for The Eagle. My editor, a drunken lout from Texas named Gus who wore a gigantic cowboy hat everywhere he went, was finally starting to realize that I wasn't exactly the savvy and experienced journalist I had passed myself off as. I kept going out to cover stories and coming back to write articles that had nothing to do with the original assignment. Or I would head out to the local pub with the other reporters and get too soused to type anything resembling a coherent English sentence. I was no good at talking on the phone; I once got into an argument with the press attaché at the French embassy and hung up on him – he had implied that all Americans were obnoxious boors and I told them that, obnoxious or not, we were the only reason that his people weren't speaking German. He called back and cursed at Gus for a half-hour while I ducked out to catch The Big Lebowski at the cheapie theater in Leicester Square.

But the interview never happened because the paper folded before I got around to it (or, conversely, before Gus could fire me). It turned out Gus had lost all his money at the track and fled to Finland before his advertisers could track him down. It was just as well really because I don't think anyone in London actually read The Eagle. I once ate at a TGIFridays over there and found it being used as a placemat. I tried to get out of paying for dinner by showing the waiter an article I had written on the midget porn star Little Angus, but my byline was smeared with ketchup.

Talking with Rushdie now, a year later and an ocean away from our first meeting, I confessed that I was starting to come to the conclusion that there were few things worse than pursuing a career in journalism. It was a profession full of opportunists, backstabbers and con men. Most of my older colleagues in London had become either cynical to the point of despondence or dangerously paranoid. The younger ones were snippy little careerists constantly trying to one up each other.

"It's sad, really," I told him. "This writing thing used to be a lot of fun. But you turn it into a career and it's all politics."

"Tell me about it," Salman said. "Come on," he said, "you're getting too depressed. The night is still young. I know where Thomas Pynchon lives. Let's dress up like call girls and surprise him, eh? Won't that be a laugh?"

"I never wanted to be a journalist anyway," I went on, a little tipsy. "I'm at work on the Great American Novel, dammit. But it's become almost impossible to write what you want to write and get paid for it. Where's the art, Salman? Is it all money now? Is this just the way things are and we scrappy young wannabes are just gonna have to conform to the company line?"

But Salman had spirited off to the bar again, serenading some pretty young thing with "Where The Streets Have No Name."

Boomer Pinches is a Collegian Columnist.

Protecting our free speech

B.J. Cortis and Sarah Hamill

Imagine this scenario: someone breaks into your home and attempts to steal something you value highly. Then, almost before you realize, it's being threatened, someone else intervenes on your behalf and protects it. Will you appreciate it more from now on? Should you? This scenario just took place nationwide. Our right to free speech and debate on campus was nearly stolen from us all. Last Wednesday, before many college students even realized that their rights were in jeopardy, the Supreme Court ruled unanimously to protect these rights.

The case was called Southworth vs. UW Madison Board of Regents. It called into question whether universities could collect mandatory fees to fund student groups that some students may be ideologically opposed to. On one side of the case was Scott Southworth, a University of Wisconsin at Madison pre-law student with conservative views, who wanted to be free from funding liberal groups such as the local gay rights group, environmental advocacy groups like WISPIRG, and other progressive organizations. Though at first it appeared that this dissenting student was confronting a massive university by himself, it quickly became apparent that his threat was much greater.

Southworth was actually funded by the Alliance Defense Fund, a $5 million legal conservative foundation. The ADF has made a name for itself fighting legal battles to "defund the left." Its mission is to undermine the democratic debate. On the opposite side of the courtroom were more than 140 UW Madison student organizations, the student Board of Trustees and defenders of free speech from across the nation. Their message was simple: mandatory fees support a diverse set of opinions, encourage debate on campus and are neutral when distributed through a student-elected government.

UMass Amherst's Student Government Association has been working to fortify our own university's position in defense of student rights, lead by Trustee Seth Avakian, Chair of Ways & Means Amy Pellegrino and other involved RSOs. The Supreme Court ruled that universities have the right to collect mandatory fees for student organizations that some students may oppose, as long as the fees are distributed with "viewpoint neutrality."

Now we face the real challenge, and it involves everyone reading this article. Our free speech was tried in the highest court in the country, and we won. We won because in this country you can't steal a citizen's voice. You can stifle it and you can beat it down, but the Supreme Court has ruled that you cannot remove any citizen's right to engage in democratic debate, no matter how underrepresented that group of citizens may be in this society.

The real challenge is whether we, as students, will now exercise this right to free speech. Our society discourages and disempowers activism. Now that we've secured – for the time being – the rights to protest, we need to appreciate that right. We need to use it. We each have a voice, whether it speaks on conservative, liberal, or any other front, and though it may seem difficult to make a difference with it, there are more opportunities to do so than most of us realize. Write letters to the Editor on issues that concern you. Vote in the Amherst town elections tomorrow. Call your state legislators and urge them to support programs you believe in. Join the UMass Student Government Association, which is in place precisely so that your voice may be heard.

Southworth has demonstrated that we must constantly keep ourselves informed and fight for what we believe in. There will always be those who threaten our rights, and if we are to speak up, we must speak up today.

B.J. Cortis and Sarah Hamill are UMass students.

The cult-ure of politics

Jason Trenkle

A cult is defined as an organization that is bound together by devotion to the same thing, person or ideal. Any group that denies freedom of thought and speech goes against the First Amendment basis for freedom of the press and the right to circulate accurate information, regardless of human interest or consequences resulting from that idea.

The Upside Down Club is one of those groups residing on the UMass campus that denies freedom of thought and expression. The SGA as a Registered Student Organization. Perhaps, the Upside Down Club isn't the only "cult" on this campus. In fact, any group that denies freedom to access of information, thus freedom of the press, can be considered as a cult in limiting the free marketplace of ideas.

Over the past weeks, I have received a lot of criticism based on the articles that I printed in regards to the Student Government Association's budget allocations. Many students criticized me as being a lobbyist and not a journalist. However, in all cases, I have upheld journalistic integrity by reporting on accurate information that may not have been in the interest of the SGA. Isn't it the purpose of a free press to circulate accurate news concepts in a marketplace that causes people to think critically, regardless of whether they chose to accept or disagree with what is printed? To deny the right of a press to report accurate information is to adhere to the same guidelines as a cult in prohibiting the free expression of ideas, and thus the First Amendment.

I would state to the SGA that it is the group's right to disagree with what was published, but to attempt to control what is being published it unconstitutional. To accuse the Collegian of being biased is to go against the very rights of every student on this campus to have access to accurate information. The SGA's purpose is to represent the those you love." By taking this passage referring to the growth and maturation process and forcing a student to believe it means never talking to your parents again, this group denies one's right to freedom of religious interpretation.

Many students' lives have been ruined and tainted as a result of getting involved with this group that denies religious tolerance, and yet it continues to be recognized by the SGA as a Registered Student Organization. Perhaps, the Upside Down Club isn't the only "cult" on this campus. In fact, any group that denies freedom to access of information, thus freedom of the press, can be considered as a cult in limiting the free marketplace of ideas.

Over the past weeks, I have received a lot of criticism based on the articles that I printed in regards to the Student Government Association's budget allocations. Many students criticized me as being a lobbyist and not a journalist. However, in all cases, I have upheld journalistic integrity by reporting on accurate information that may not have been in the interest of the SGA. Isn't it the purpose of a free press to circulate accurate news concepts in a marketplace that causes people to think critically, regardless of whether they chose to accept or disagree with what is printed? To deny the right of a press to report accurate information is to adhere to the same guidelines as a cult in prohibiting the free expression of ideas, and thus the First Amendment.

I would state to the SGA that it is the group's right to disagree with what was published, but to attempt to control what is being published it unconstitutional. To accuse the Collegian of being biased is to go against the very rights of every student on this campus to have access to accurate information. The SGA's purpose is to represent the student body and by attempting to control or look down on the information or the flow of ideas, that organization is to not representing the students at all.

In addition, many students accused me of misrepresenting the truth process of the SGA committee. My job as a reporter is to report the truth based on the facts, the truth being that distribution of funding is not an illegal process as most students would have expected it to be. Senator Tarnstrom stated on record that there is indeed misrepresentation of certain RSOs in getting funds. He stated that certain organizations, like the Republican Club, get the funds they ask for more easily than other RSOs because they have representation sitting on the committee. However, he now states that he was taken out of context.

I would like to remind him that he was not taken out of context and that he was indeed aware of what he was saying and how he was being quoted. In fact, I congratulate him for being so open about the process for he was allowing for free expression and the flow of ideas to occur; he was representing the students by stating that the process was unfair. The very fact that he was condemned by certain SGA members for having talked openly about the inequalities in the process conveys that the SGA does not represent the students and that it is in as much violation of prohibiting free expression and ideas as any other cult.

In addition, I spoke with Senator Whitehouse this week and he asked me whether it would be possible for the Collegian to work "hand-in-hand" with the SGA in attempts to inform students about upcoming dates and how students can become involved with what the SGA is doing. I would like to explain for the record that this newspaper is not called the "Daily FYI" and like any normal newspaper, our job is not to recruit students for the interests of the SGA or any organization for that matter. The Collegian's purpose is to state the facts and report the news to students, and whether they want to accept that information is as much their rights as it is my right to publish the information I gather.

Two years ago, I went undercover with the Upside Down Club and as a result was able to expose the operation of a cult in limiting ideas before it was too late. Yet, too many people have become involved with this group on this campus and have lost their freedom of accessibility to ideas and the ability to think critically.

To say that it is not the purpose of a newspaper like The Daily Collegian to report news to students is to deny the public's access to information that is a part of its rights. I urge every student to think critically about the information that the Collegian prints because that is your right. However, it is not your right to deny other students' rights to a free flow of accurate ideas and information.

The Supreme Court recently heard is the Southworth v. University of Wisconsin case. A student at the University of Wisconsin was suing the school because he believed his rights to free expression were being violated by his being forced to support RSOs through mandatory student fees.

Like Southworth, I think critically about the student representation that is allowing the fees I pay to go toward supporting organizations that, like cults, suppress freedom of the press and the flow of information in a marketplace of ideas. As for what has been printed by me in the Collegian, I have no regrets because it has been factual information and it has been as much the Collegian's right to print it as it is every student on this campus' to know where their money is being spent.

Jason Trenkle is a Collegian Columnist.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 •
http://www.dailycollegian.com

Sam Wilkinson Acting Editor-in-Chief Sam Wilkinson Managing Editor Shawn Ilinitch Business Manager
Ben Alamed Web Developer Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager
Sage Brousseau Co-Advertising Production Manager Jake Lilien Senior Diversity Editor

Ryan Benharris Acting Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Puskar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jake Lilien Co-Guy, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jeanie Gorlovsky Co-Guy, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sasha Senderovich Jewish Affairs Editor
Mariele Scherzinger Multicultural Affairs Editor
Adam Martignetti Acting Co-News Editor
Melissa Hamniel Acting Co-News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Adam White Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor
Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Christine Connare Women's Issues Editor
Marc Menichel Finance Manager
Joshua Szymanski Distribution Manager
Katie Beith Promotions Manager
Catherine Turner International Affairs Editor
Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Chris Brennan Assistant Finance Manager
Eric Faber Assistant Advertising Manager
Amy Gargantа Assistant Business Manager

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

International Affairs

International News Brief

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

Tanzania: Six African presidents will sit down with former South African president Nelson Mandela in an attempt to forge a peace agreement in war-torn Burundi.

The seven year conflict has claimed upwards of 200,000 lives, most of whom were civilians. The talks, which were to begin last Monday, would bring together Benjamin Mkapa of Tanzania, Daniel arap Moi of Kenya, Pierre Buyoya of Burundi, Sam Nujoma of Namibia, Yoweir Museveni of Uganda and Olusegun Obasanjo of Nigeria.

Libya's minister for African unity, Ali Abdulsalam Trickl would also be in attendence, and Omar Bongo, the president of Gabon, was also a possibility. The talks would seek to end a war between Forces for the Defense of Democracy, a majority Hutu group, and the Tutsi dominated national military.

With only 6.5 million residents, Burundi's civil stability collapsed into civil war as Tutsi paratroopers assassinated Melchior Ndadaye, the nations first democratically elected president in 1993.

Mongolia: More than one million camels, goats and horses died after severe weather plagued the developing Asian nation, traditional herders now have to go without what defines their lives.

Terrible droughts and rodents destroyed pastures last summer and heavy snow harmed incoming grass this winter. Now the main food supply of herd's is hard to come by, and according to some sources, the Gobi desert is littered with bodies.

Some nomads are heading hundreds of miles from traditional homes in search of food supplies for livestock, but so many animals grazing small amounts of land quickly eliminate feed.

Close to half a million nomads have been hurt by the weather, almost twenty percent of the nations 2.7 million people. Nomads are estimated to herd close to 33.5 million animals, although that number is thought to have significantly dropped after the recent weather. Some 300,000 animals are estimated to have died per week.

Some families have been split up as a result of the weather, with the elderly and children staying in tents while adults take herds in search of much needed food.

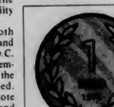
St. Lucia: The small Caribbean nation has earned the dubious distinction of being the first nation eliminated for World Cup contention by penalty shot shootout, that coming only a day after Grenada became the first country eliminated from contention.

St. Lucia's goalie Abraham Mentor gave up goals to Suriname's Orlando Grootfaam, Remny Kianst and Werner Blackson. Valencius Joseph was the only kicker from St. Lucia to score against Surinamese goalkeeper Roel Tempo.

In other football news, Guatemala beat Belize 2-1 after Ruddy Ramirez scored in with fifteen minutes left in the game. The game was played in Honduras because of political tensions between the two central-American nations. FIFA ruled the game had to be played in a neutral nation because of a "dangerous border situation between the two countries."

One other game had to be moved over the weekend. The Dominican Republic beat Montserrat 3-1 in a game that had to played in Port-of-Spain, Trinidad after volcanic activity on Montserrat.

Tonga: In Uku-Alofa, Tonga, the national government is considering opening tuna-rich waters to foreign fisherman in an attempt to boost exports. Many other Pacific Island nations rely on fishing license from foreign fleets as a substantial part of national income.



Tonga had previously allowed only their own fisherman access to the waters. The Director of Fisheries, 'Aka'ola, said that a Korean company based in Fiji would pay $10,000 per year to fish the waters.

IMF and World Bank to meet; motives and funding protested

By Steven Borg
Collegian Correspondent

On April 16 and 17, the International Monetary Fund (IMF) and World Bank will be holding meetings in Washington, D.C. These two sister organizations, conceived in 1944, have been increasingly in the public eye following their major involvement in the economic crisis of 1997-98.

Their structured plans for aiding the troubled Asian economies have brought much criticism. Also, misleading transactions, worth almost $1 billion, made by the Ukraine government to inflate the worth of its currency successfully duped the IMF to approve several loans. Such incidents have revealed the organization's lack of accountability and secretive administration.

The IMF and World Bank both consist of 182 member nations and are both based in Washington D.C. The US is the most influential member of the IMF with 20 percent of the vote, based on funds contributed. The goal of the IMF is to promote international exchange stability and foster economic growth. The World Bank's goal is to end world poverty.

Both organizations have traditionally overlapped their areas of involvement, and have focused on high-dollar mega-projects that have arguably given primary importance to Western economic interests in developing nations. Their methods have a poor track record for achieving distributed economic growth. In many cases, their structured plans for recovery have caused an increase in debt and unemployment. Their large undertakings have aimed at major economic overhauls that increase investment value in the major cities, with long-term goals of bringing economies into the global market. These projects ignore the vast rural populations and often have detrimental effects on urban unemployment.

Protestors are looking to bring awareness of these issues to the world stage by disrupting the meetings next month. Building on the momentum from the World Trade Organization protests, tens of thousands of protestors from across the country and abroad are preparing for a dedicated rally committed to nonviolence and no property damage.

The protestors are against the globalization promoted by the IMF and World Bank that can concentrate wealth into fewer hands. Protestors are also calling for a more democratic process for these global lending agencies that have become such a powerful influence on world populations.

Another viewpoint working against the IMF and World Bank comes from a Congressional Advisory Commission chaired by economist Alan Meltzer. The commission's report, submitted earlier this month, outlined severe criticisms of the World Bank and IMF, focusing on their lack of accountability and transparency, and their poor performance.

The report suggests radical reforms for the IMF and World Bank supported by five of the eight-member commission. The reforms call for a downsizing of both organizations and clearer delineation of the rolls of each. The IMF would be reduced to an agency of last resort that would provide short-term loans and guidance only for governments facing harsh financial problems.

The World Bank would direct its loans, grants, and technical assistance toward the poorest nations and would limit or restrict any operations in countries with access to capitol markets.

Another recommendation of the report is for the IMF and World Bank to write-off all money owed by the heavily indebted poor countries that are pursuing effective programs in economic development.

The Meltzer report is gaining support among conservative Republicans, but the Clinton Administration along with the IMF's new managing director are both defending the role of the IMF and World Bank, while acknowledging the need for reform.

Treasury Secretary Lawrence Summer urged milder recommendations for reforming the World Bank to counter those of the Meltzer report. Summer called for shifting the World Bank's goal toward poverty reduction and loans for environmental protection and health projects.

The real problem with these two agencies is the conflict in motives. The opinion expressed unconditionally by the protestors and indirectly by others is that the World Bank and IMF should be working strictly for the altruistic goals of improving the lives of the huge number of poor in the world. The conflict comes when the practical goals of maintaining economic prosperity in the developed nations are thrown in. These goals are founded in the sound argument that the developed nations can only foster global economic development when their own economies continue to flourish. Throw in the fact that the IMF and World Bank are funded by tax-payers, it is unrealistic to expect governments not to promote their own best interests through these organizations.

The question is often raised if these agencies should exist at all. Some suggest that poverty alleviation programs be left to the Non-Governmental Organizations (NGO's) that have specific goals and expertise accomplishing just that without being directed by corporate or government pressures. The problem with this opinion is funding. Many of the NGO's working towards poverty alleviation are funded by the World Bank.

The reality is that governments and voters can only be relied on for so much charity. The amount of money going to the IMF and World Bank is possible only because of their ability to advance the economic interests of the US and other developed countries. This type of policy should be accepted as part of any responsible government, but should not sacrifice the general good of the world's impoverished.

It is apparent from the history of IMF and World Bank programs that entire generations are being sacrificed for globalization. Now that reforms are being demanded, the policy-makers need to define clear goals for the IMF and World Bank and initiate more effective administration to achieve those goals. Also, people need to form their own opinions on what role developed nations have for affecting the poor nations of the world. If limited sacrifices are acceptable for the greater good of millions of the world's hungry, then our government needs to hear those voices.

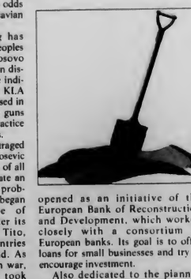
The desired outcome of current reforms will be an IMF that takes a more progressive approach to economic stability while integrating the interests of the populations of poor countries. The World Bank could greatly benefit development by reducing focus on its large, nation-altering programs, and directing its efforts on the more difficult but highly effective programs that alleviate poverty by combining methods of microcredit loans, education, and progress evaluation.

Another goal that is unlikely now, but could greatly relieve pressure on many countries, is the write-off by the IMF and World Bank of its outstanding loans to heavily indebted poor countries, as recommended by the Meltzer report. The idea has been making steady progress, but such a huge act of charity needs more support from the people.

As with many organizations, the IMF and World Bank are founded on good intentions and fill a need in the world economy. But other common outcomes inherent in organizations dealing with billions of dollars are the corruption and selfish motivations that pressure those in control. Reforms will limit these abuses and bring more diverse input into the administration of these two powerful agencies.

A slow recovery in the Balkans

By Catherine Turner
Collegian Staff



Late March, 1999: all attention was turned to the shells being dropped on Kosovo by NATO. A year later, conflict continues to plague the Balkans as United Nations peace troops maintain their positions in the region.

Not unlike the centuries-old conflict in the Middle East of two religions fighting for the same sacred land, the Eastern Orthodox Serbs and the Muslim Albanians are still at odds with each other over the Yugoslavian province of Kosovo.

Though NATO bombing has stopped, the tension between peoples is consistent. The original Kosovo Liberation Army (KLA) has been disbanded, but recent reports have indicated that a new branch of the KLA is gaining momentum. Men dressed in military garb carrying machine guns have been witnessed running practice drills and other training routines.

Last year, the world was outraged as Serbian leader Slobodon Melosevic began to purge the tiny country of all Albanians by any means to create an ethnically pure state. But the problems with Melosevic actually began in 1992 when the state of Yugoslavia, once united under its communist leader, Marshal Tito, began to split apart and countries seceded from the motherland. As blood was shed in the Bosnian war, the United Nations finally took notice and instituted special peacekeeping troops in the region.

Meanwhile, since the March 1999 bombings, clean up of the cities and towns has been the main focus of both the Albanians and Serbians. Former soldiers are turning into civil servants and picking up brooms instead of guns.

During the months of January and February, the Kosovo capital of Pristina was covered with a blanket of thick ice causing many injuries, such as broken legs, due to slipping. In a humanitarian effort, former KLA agents were taking up pickaxes trying to alleviate the people of the ice problem.

Progress is also beginning to be made in the economic realm, as the first bank of Kosovo was opened. The Micro Enterprise Bank was opened as an initiative of the European Bank of Reconstruction and Development, which worked closely with a consortium of European banks. Its goal is to offer loans for small businesses and try to encourage investment.

Also dedicated to the planned investment in the country is Kosovo's wealthiest son, Behgjet Pacolli. He is determined to reconstruct the downtown area, with a shopping complex and yet another bank. Most of the buildings were destroyed in last year's bombings and nothing has been reopened yet. Pacolli hopes that his investment of his own money will influence other investors to pour more money into the damaged economy.

As the country tries to heal, the steps seem tiny and slow, but as much larger step was taken when thousands moved from their 'temporary' living tents to community housing set up by the United Nations. By leaving their ramshackle excuses for houses, the Kosovars have made a pledge to stay with and support their city, and are dedicated to its re-growth.

Finally, the most important development of the past couple of months has been the creation of the Joint Administrative Council on December 15, 1999. The young panel has been formed to bring together representatives of the Kosovars, the Albanians and the Serbs. Though a seat has been open to the Serbs since the Council's creation, no one has stepped up to claim it. However, United Nations representatives are hopeful that soon Melosevic will send someone to fill the chair.

The council has goals of inducing the three groups to work together to try and manage issues that come up in the region, including setting up schools and clinics for public use. Hashim Thaci, former leader of the KLA has sent a sincere plead to the Serbs to join the Council so the ethnically divided country can begin to tolerate and respect each other.

Though plans have been made and steps been taken to try and piece together the broken cultures, peace is still far from entirely attainable. Serbs and Albanians are still killing each other although the death toll is remarkably small. Hopefully as money begins to flow into the country, so will cooperation between devastated peoples.

Ugandan mass deaths: good reason to fear cults

By Catherine Turner
Collegian Staff

Of all the issues in the political and ethical spectrum throughout the world, none is more devastating than that of suicide. The recent event in Uganda has once again brought to attention the phenomenon of mass suicide.

As the ashes have begun to be examined, the bodies of not only men and women, but those of children have been uncovered, many with stab wounds or ropes around their necks. Officials don't know how many people killed themselves and how many were actually murdered by their leaders. Every day that passes, however, does not answer questions, but rather leads everyone deeper into desperation as more bodies turn up and details add sad dimension to this tragedy.

Catherine Turner

The Movement for the Restoration of the Ten Commandments of God has been added to the growing list of crazed religious cults becoming eerily abundant in the world. Remember the 1978 mass suicide of the Jim Jones cult in Guyana? And remember the whole Waco incident only a few years ago? Where are these religious fanatics coming from and why do so many people follow them into their own destruction?

Officials in Uganda believe that these people were set ablaze after they became disappointed that the world didn't blow up on New Year's Eve. Here's another question: why did so many people, especially religious people, believe that the world would end, and truly stop existing as such, as the clocks struck midnight on December 31st?

Now we here in the United States did our fair share of panicking and worrying about the change of the century, and with reason considering that it was entirely possible that computers would be released

Arts & Living

Your Guide to all that's going on in the Pioneer Valley

Whatever It Takes to be unfunny, insulting

By David Troupes
Collegian Staff

Whatever It Takes
Directed by David Hubbard with Shane West, Marla Sokoloff playing at Showcase Cinemas, West Springfield

Is it me, or has America been unable to produce a worthwhile teen movie since The Breakfast Club? Teen flicks these days are a seething wasteland of offensive cliches, unforgivable character shallowness, and ineffective gestures toward humor – and Whatever It Takes is ground zero.

Here's the plot line, which was produced, I imagine, by shaking up a massive Boggle game with bits of other scripts taped to the dice: Ryan and Maggie have been best friends their whole life. Ryan spends his time pining after the beautiful and vapid Ashley, while Maggie finds herself constantly propositioned by Ashley's cousin Chris, a soulless jock interested only in sex. Ryan and Chris hatch a plan: Chris will put in the good word with Ashley on Ryan's behalf, and Ryan will help Chris say the right things to Maggie.

Let's go over that again, just to clarify: Ryan is helping a known jerk seduce his best friend for personal social advancement. If that's not enough to write Ryan off as a complete moral deficient, he publicly slams his good pal Floyd in order to appear cooler in front of Ashley's crowd. The rest of the movie falls into place as you would expect, with the right people ending up together and feeling swell, while Chris and Ashley get their due social castration.

Along the way, Whatever It Takes manages to employ, and then insult and degrade, every single high school stereotype in existence. Ryan and Maggie are social outsiders, and so the movie assumes that their only dream is to hang with the in-crowd. Ashley is popular, and so is portrayed as an airhead among airheads, a self-obsessed cretin without any sense of empathy. Chris is an athlete, and so thinks about nothing but sleeping with as many girls as possible. The movie's willingness, eagerness even, to accept these stereotypes as fact is beyond forgiveness; and apart from the ethical implications, it means that the movie is populated not by true characters, but by alienating, one-dimensional mockeries of actual human beings, further injuring the already forgettable storyline.

The list of moral repugnancy continues, but I'll spare you. When the movie isn't shoving stereotypes down our throats, it's trying to be funny, and except for a few instances of successful physical comedy, nothing about the movie made me want to laugh. The acting is equally bland; Marla Sokoloff as Maggie does fairly well for herself, but rest of the cast can't deliver a line with any amount of sincerity.

Whatever It Takes has nothing to offer but insults and annoyance, and I recommend it for masochists only.

COURTESY COLUMBIA PICTURES

Shane West and Jodi Lyn O'Keefe dancing the night, and the audience's attention span, away.

Welcome to The Machine: tribute to hit Skybox

By David Siegel
Collegian Staff

The Machine
The Skybox
March 22, 2000

On Wednesday Night, The Machine, a fantastic Pink Floyd tribute band, made a stop at the Skybox for their last ever New England performance. After 11 years of strenuous touring, the band has decided to end their run to allow for all members to explore other musical opportunities. Unfortunately, this show was the only one I have attended and I am saddened at the prospects of it also being my last. The Machine recreates the Floyd experience giving out a solid performance and phenomenal light show while paying tribute to one of the greatest and most influential bands of the last century.

The Machine quietly made their way onto the stage a few minutes past nine to the ovation of a surprisingly large weeknight crowd. The 250+ crowd was very relaxed, sitting quietly throughout the show. The opening song was "Shine On You Crazy Diamond", which gave a warning to what kind of great performance was to transpire. Next up came the song that gave the band its moniker. "Welcome to the Machine". This song was the first real glimpse of the sophisticated light show throughout the show.

Next up off of Floyd's The Wall was "Mother" with its soft acoustic guitar opening meandering into a skillful layered jam led by extraordinary guitarist Joe Pascarell. Pascarell is the standout performer, whose voice and guitar was almost like a carbon copy of those of Floyd front man Syd Barrett. At times, I shut my eyes and it almost felt as if I were actually seeing Pink Floyd.

The highlight of the show came next, when the gentle guitar signified the beginning of "Breathe" which eventually segued into "Time" and finally into "Hey You." The first set ended with a perfect rendition of "Have a Cigar," leading the crowd into intermission with its haunting, eerie keyboards.

The second set began with the complete version of "Dogs" off of Floyd's Animals album, which lasted a remarkable 20 minutes. Next was "Echo" with its long drum solo by Todd Cohen. The Echo jam slowly meandered into a solid performance of "Set the Controls for the Heart of the Sun" which showcased the trippy keyboard playing of Neil Alexander. The highlight of the second set came when the band broke out into another Floyd favorite "Wish You Were Here." The second set came to an end with "Lucifer Sam" jamming into "Dark Side of the Moon" with Pascarell's chilling laughs.

The band came back on stage after a short break where the now standing crowd was cheering madly. Expecting to hear either "Money" or "Another Brick in the Wall," I was happily surprised with a smooth version of "Run Like Hell." I was content to end the night with this song, but the same was not to be said about The Machine. After jamming out Run, they broke out into a steaming rendition of the Grateful Dead's "Not Fade Away," which segued into the tale end of "Run Like Hell."

I was very surprised with the show that was given by this band. The Skybox made for a great venue, allowing for a large sounding band to play in such an intimate setting. Please check out the band's website at http://www.themachinelive.com to learn about where these great musicians will be playing next.

Dancing: a delightful mixture of art and energy

By Patrick D. O'Connor
Collegian Correspondent

There is a painter who, with music blaring, and paint flying, works in a frenzy, which brings about the most beautiful portraits. Well, in the contemporary performance Dancing, just like this painter, many exciting elements are combined in communicating a unique and exciting work to the audience. Though there is no paint, nor painter, Dancing is made up of a sequence of poetry, dance and music, a combination that never lets go of the audience's attention.

The four-act presentation, put forth by the Off Center Series Production of Residential Arts, was preformed on March 23, at Mt. Holyoke's Kendall Studio Theatre. Kendall theatre provided an intimate space that perfectly complimented the action of this performance. During each act, the dancers were no more than twenty feet from the eyes of the audience allowing us to see the sweat and emotions running off their faces. Also, the small theatre enhanced the sound quality, which resounded soft and clear throughout the show.

Dancing was composed of a minimal set, leaving room for the artists to create a world within the spaces. In act four, called Partners Who Touch, Partners Who Don't Touch, only a steel tub filled with water was placed in the right corner, three books in the left, and a ladder in the rear of the stage. In each place a small drama unfolded, which worked into center stage where the pain, intimacy or confusion was expressed through dance. And act one was confined within the flags of Switzerland, creating a border around the performance. The scene was called Alpsegen (God Bless and Protect this Mountain), and was set during Nazi occupied Europe. The positioning, and amount of props expanded on the theme of fear and secrecy experienced by the Swiss people of the time.

Intermingled with the dancing was a perceptive and often times hysterical text. In the first act, performed by Patrik Widrig, the voice of an old Swiss farmer demanded the audience's attention. The old farmer's prayer for the protection of his land was juxtaposed with a third person narrative pertaining to a Jewish couple, who were being forced over the Swiss border and back into Nazi occupied Europe. The voices in this act spoke of the tension, paranoia, and injustices of the time.

In act two, titled Dr. Pearson's Guide to Loss and Fear, Sarah Pearson plays a girl who has just lost her virginity, and thus become a "woman." In the scene, Sarah works the audience like a stand-up-comedian. Accompanying this was Sarah's talented and unique movements, which added to the visual splendor of the show.

Of course, the most entertaining element of the night was the dancing. Coupled with smooth blues and cafe-like toons, the physical dance kept the audience's eyes wide open. Each act being combined with an athleticism of graceful movements, purposefully awkward steps, and painfully hard falls; the dancer Patrik Widrig, for example, after the show must have felt like he just finished a pick-up football game with no pads, because of his physical moves about the stage. Overall, each dance demonstrated the passion and power put into this work by the performers.

The many exciting elements of Dancing (some not mentioned like the waterfall of sugar) made it difficult for me to leave the theatre; after the lights brightened and the wall-like curtains fell, all I could hope for was an encore; no such luck. Therefore, I had to settle for the cheese (which was quite tasty) and the wine in the reception room. So, if you ever get a chance to experience Dancing by Sarah Pearson and Patrik Widrig, cancel your plans, whatever they may be, and make your way to this exhilaratine performance.

WRITE FOR ARTS!!!

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENT

April is make-a-wish month. Please support the Greek Events to raise $ for children with terminal illnesses. April 1 Sunbash & Rafters.

Klub Kai is booking formals and Graduation Parties for May 2000. Call Cheng @ 586-3174 after 4:30 pm. Buffet Packages available.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Puffton Village 3 bedroom townhouse ASAP. Call 549-1917.

Two bedrooms, one bath. 1.5 miles from campus. On bus route. Quiet area, huge backyard. Heat and hot water included. Available now. Michelle 548-3915.

Puffton Village 3 bedroom apartment for rent. Take over the lease and skip BUREAU CHARGES. Phone 549-4640.

Take over our lease Remodeled Puffton Apartment Townhouse. Heat, hot water included. Available end of May. 549-1248.

Large 2 bedroom apartment on Main St. 1 mile from town. $950/month. Available 6/1. Call 253-2708.

Summer Sublet w/lease option. Starts 6/1. On bus route. 10 minutes from campus. 2 bathroom, 2 bath townhouse unit. Furniture negotiable, no extra charge. Call PJ, 6/17.

2 bedroom apartment on bus route. $750/mo. Everything included. Available 6/1. 397-4708.

Summer Sublet w/lease option starting 6/1. Puffton Village 1 bedroom. $595.00 a month. Call 549-2060.

Large four bedroom apartment in Hadley, 2 bathroom. Right on bus route, bike path to campus. June 1st. Call 584-9078.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Summer Sublet Needed! Rent is $750/mo and includes heat and hot water! Utilities already set up and apartment will have furniture for your use! Call us at the Boulders: 256-8012.

1 Bedroom Summer Sublet with option to lease on bus route. 1 mile from campus. 549-1859.

Apply now for best locations. Amherst Center 1,2 and 3 bedroom apartments. Gas heat, hardwood floor. April showings for June and September. Lincoln Real Estate. No fees charged. 253-7879.

Apply now for best locations. 3 bedroom condos. Gas heat, hardwood floors, bright heated basement with study and laundry area. 1/2 mile to campus, on bus route. April showings for June and September. Lincoln Real Estate. No fees charged. 253-7879.

AUTO FOR SALE

'85 Ford Mustang 5 speed, all power, black, runs great. $2000/obo. 549-0664.

1994 Jeep Wrangler Sahara. 50k miles. Excellent condition. Forest Green with Sahara interior. $11,000 or B.O. Call Bob 549-4204.

EMPLOYMENT

Seeking experienced wait-staff and kitchen help for new restaurant and bar opening downtown Amherst. In April. Call Carl at (413)330-4546.

Attention UMass Students! Do you want to earn extra money with a job you can be proud of? The U.S. Census Bureau is hiring for Census 2000! Application process done on campus, flexible hours, work on campus. Make at least $11.50/hr. U.S. Department of Commerce, Bureau of the Census. Contact Charles Yi at (413)732-2120.

EMPLOYMENT

Are you connected? Internet users needed! $350-850/wk. www.AMScommerce.com

Summer on Cape Cod. Non-smokers only. General restaurant work, including cashiering and service. We seek students who already have housing nearby or who are familiar with the area and can make housing arrangements. This is a great job for the right people. $8/hr and meals plus a bonus of $100/wk for each week you work through August 31, 2000. For more information, check www.nare.com/clamshack.htm or call Bill Millett at 1-800-887-2951. Or mail resume to South Wellfleet Clam Shack, P.O. Box 321, South Wellfleet, MA 02663.

Copywriter: Part-time, student preferred. (413)536-5086. 12-7pm.

Help Wanted: Part-time bar/floor manager. The Amherst Brewing Company is looking for an experienced, team oriented, assistant manager for our busy weekends. Excellent opportunity for an enthusiastic, professional. Apply in person at 24 No. Pleasant St, Amherst.

Flexible part-time, Evening and weekend shifts available. 20hrs/wk required. PVTA accessible. For more information call: Abt Associates, Inc. Paul Bebo, Recruiting Coordinator 1-800-792-4514 E.O.E. M/F.

Cruise Line entry level on board positions available, great benefits, seasonal or year-round. (941)329-6434 www.cruisecareers.com

Have an amazing summer! Prestigious coed camp in beautiful Mass seeks caring, motivated college students & grads who love kids. GENERAL & SPECIALTY COUNSELORS needed. Join a dedicated, fun team. Competitive salaries+travel+room+board. Call Camp Taconic. 1-800-762-2820.

EMPLOYMENT

Bilingual Tutors/ Translators for part-time paid assistance during the school day to students speaking Amharic, Chinese, Cape Verde/ Portuguese, Japanese, Korean, Mongolian, Tibetan, Urdu, Vietnamese. Contact: ESL/ Bilingual Office at 413-549-9857. Amherst- Pelham Schools. An Equal Opportunity Employer / Affirmative Action Employer.

Summer Help Wanted Local corrugated Manufacturer Looking for summer help for 2nd and 3rd shift. Good Pay 1.25 an hour. Call Scott Parsons 413-582-3844.

Delivery persons wanted. Apply at D.P. Dough, downtown Amherst.

Fall 200 Internships with the Student Legal Service Office, get hands-on experience in the legal field, work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary- training provided. Contact the Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

3 Job Opportunities on Nantucket Island, MA beginning May. A.) Office manager with good typing, computer and telephone skills. B.) Office assistant, errand runner, mother's helper, household help. C.) Auction gallery assistant: furniture porter, display, delivery. Salary and housing. Drivers license required. (508)228-3942 or send resume: P.O. Box 2807 Nantucket, MA 02548.

Summer Employment. Full-time job available at Visitors Center. Call 545-0306 for info and app.

Full and part-time ice cream and sandwich shop on bike trail in Hadley. Ice Cream Pedaler 586-9580.

EMPLOYMENT

UAHC Crane Lake and Eisner Camps, Reform Jewish co-educational Camps located in the Berkshires of Massachusetts, seek qualified, dedicated counselors and specialists, including Waterfront, Athletics, Arts. Good salary, r&b included, travel assistance. Crane Lake Camp: Contact Brad Gerstle, 800-227-2660 ILUVCAMP@aol.com; www.cranelakecamp.com. Eisner Camp: Contact Louis Bordman, 212-650-4130 EISNERGUY@aol.com; www.eisnercamp.org.

Quality help wanted for spring, summer & fall 2000. FT/PT/all shifts. Availability through vacations & long weekends preferred. Kitchen skills and customer service a plus. Apply in person: Cushman Village General Store, Deli & Bakery. 491 Pine St., Amherst, MA 01002 (5 minute drive North from Amherst Center.)

FOR RENT

Take over our lease starting 6/1. 3 bedroom, 2 bath. Call 549-3895.

FOR SALE

or sale: Burton Alpine 51 Raceboard. Never used. $100.00 O/B/O 549-2071.

HOUSE FOR RENT

4 bedrooms, 2 baths, heated basement. 1 1/2 miles to UMass, $2000. Call Lincoln Real Estate 253-7879.

5/6 bedroom newer home with large backyard, 4 min. from UMass Hadley, Stockbridge Rd. $2000/mo 549-4270.

4 Bedroom 2 bath 2 car garage full kitchen. 4 min from school. Hadley 549-6465 or 549-9382.

Rent 7 Room House or single rooms. In Sunderland on bus route. Available June 1st. Call Steve 413-665-2276.

INSTRUCTION

Private Boxing Lessons w/ retired pro Ojata Bumpus in Amherst. Call 413-256-0364.

MISCELLANEOUS

Modeling & Acting Have you always dreamed of being a model or actor but don't know where or how to get started? New faces MIETOUR is coming to your area soon. For more info call 1-877-MIE-LOOK.

Get paid to lose weight and inches. All natural, doctor recommended. 1-800-397-7715.

WANTED

Looking for musician(s) to play instrumental at dinner. Great exposure and advertising. Call Sherri 256-1115.

ROOM FOR RENT

Cheap rent! $300 a month. includes utilities. 3 rooms available in house on bus route. June 1st. Great location in Amherst. Call Vito 549-0774.

ROOMMATE WANTED

2 bedroom in 3 bedroom Duplex in Belchertown. On bus route. Washer/dryer. Big yard. Non-smokers. $350 incl. Available 6/1. Call Denise 323-0120.

1 Room in 3 bedroom apt. in So. Amherst. $325/mo. Heat/electric included available immediately. 256-4581.

SERVICES

Know your rights Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find Out! Contact Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

SUMMER SUBLET

3 bedroom, 2 bath, free cable/hot water. AC available, refurbished. $ neg. Start 6/1 to 9/31. Puffton 549-0268.

1 bedroom w/spacious living room and central air. On bus route. Available after finals. $625.00. Includes ht/h/wtr. Parking, pool and laundry next door. 549-5581.

Spacious 2 bedroom apt, pond view. Heat/hot water included. Available 6-1. 549-4977.

4 Bedroom apartment. Great uptown location with parking. Available 6/1/00-8/31/00. Call Kelly at 253-2268.

2 bedroom in 3 bedroom Townhouse. $350 utilities included. 253-6488.

3 Bedroom 2 bath in Puffton from June to August. If interested call Lauren 546-1568.

Looking for a place to live this summer/fall? Great house in Amherst with two available rooms. $305/month. Please call! Erin 413-549-1543.

SUMMER SUBLET

Take over my lease. 1 bedroom/2 bedroom apartment. South Point on bus line. $355.00. Available 6/1. 253-5410.

TICKETS

2 Elton John tickets. April 8th Concert. Call Laura 546-4993.

Chili Peppers, Foo Fighters for sale. James 549-9254.

Need two tickets for Creed April 15. sbradshaw@qurs.com.

Elton John Seats Section 1 Floor 6. Available 888-441-5634.

TRAVEL

Mexico/Caribbean or Central America $229 rt. Europe $169 ow. Other worldwide destinations cheap. ONLY TERRORISTS GET YOU THERE CHEAP-ERI Book tickets on-line www.airtech.com or 212-219-7000.

WANTED TO RENT

Looking for 3 or 4 bedroom apt/house near Amherst Center with parking. Call Alyse or Stacy 253-7708.

House wanted: 3-4 bedroom house very close to campus. Wanted for rent starting 6/1. Please call Lia @ 2536378 w/any information. Get paid just for being online!

WORLD WIDE WEB

Did you know that there are over thirty companies which will pay you to have a small adbar on your computer screen while you're on line? It's true! Plus you can sign up for free! If interested, please go to http://paidsurfing1.net-firms.com

Place your ads here in The Collegian Classifieds!

Call us at 545-3500

Five College Community Calendar

TUESDAY, MARCH 28

Lecture – Dr. Nils Daulaire, President and CEO of the Global Health Council will give a lecture on population, environmental, and public health issues at 8 p.m. in the Northern Lights Browsing Room at South College.

Meeting – The UMass Ballroom Dance Club will meet at 6:30 p.m. in Edmon 101.

Speeches – Three speakers will speak out against sweatshops at 7 p.m. in room 162-175 of the Campus Center. Included will be a discussion on what students, faculty, staff, and alumni can do to put an end to sweatshops. Call Michael Burns at 585-1564 for more information.

Workshop – There will be a workshop on contraception and safer sex at 7 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services. Men and women are welcome.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 29

Class – The UMass Police Department's free self-defense course for women will continue tonight from 6-9:30 p.m. Contact the UM Police Department for more information.

Lecture – Julie Moir Messervy will present a multi-media slide lecture on "The Toronto Music Garden" at 7 p.m. in Wright Hall Auditorium at Smith College. The event is free and open to the public. Call 585-2742 for more information.

NOTICES

Help – From Feb. 15-April 13 on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays from 5-8 p.m. student volunteers from the School of Management will assist non-resident aliens with the preparation of their Federal and State income tax returns. Call 545-5660 for more information.

Scholarships – The STEMTEC/NSF Teaching scholars program is offering scholarships to students who are interested in exploring a career in K-12 math or science teaching. Students do not need to be enrolled in a certificate program to apply. Applications are due by April 1. Contact Johanna at 545-0626 for more information.

Support – A grief support group is available to all students who have experienced the death of someone they love. The groups are free, small and confidential, and meet on Wednesday and Thursday evenings. Telephone pre-screening is required for enrollment. Call 577-5316 if interested.

Support – Al-ANON and ALATEEN are offering local meetings for those effected by someone else's drinking problem. Call 253-5261 for meeting times and locations.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

BOOKBUCKS From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks, you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

UStore CAMPUS CENTER Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MARCH 28, 2000

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	10 Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Scientific American Frontiers		Surviving the Good Times				TBA	Seven Crowe
WFSB	3	3 News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	JAG "Promises" (In Stereo)		City of Angels (In Stereo)		Judging Amy (R) (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	4 News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	JAG "Promises" (In Stereo)		City of Angels (In Stereo)		Judging Amy (R) (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	5 News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Who Wants to Be a Millionaire		Dharma-Greg	Sports Night	NYPD Blue "The Irvin Files"		News	Nightline
WLVI	6	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends	Nanny	Buffy the Vampire Slayer		Angel "I Will Remember You"		News		Friends	Nanny
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	3rd Rock-Sun	God, Devil	Will & Grace	Just Shoot Me	Deteline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Blind Date	Real TV	Secret Agent Men (In Stereo)		The Beat (In Stereo)		News	Real TV (R)	Blind Date	Change-Heart
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	3rd Rock-Sun	God, Devil	Will & Grace	Just Shoot Me	Deteline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Simpsons	Fresier	Seinfeld	Friends	Simpsons	Family Guy	70s Show	Family Guy	News		Friends	Fresier
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	3rd Rock-Sun	God, Devil	Will & Grace	Just Shoot Me	Deteline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	8	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Scientific American Frontiers		Surviving the Good Times				Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	29	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Fresier	Who Wants to Be a Millionaire		Dharma-Greg	Sports Night	NYPD Blue "The Irvin Files"		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Fresier	Secret Agent Men (In Stereo)		The Beat (In Stereo)		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		Mad Abt. You	Judge Mathis
WTBS	72	Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	"Sleepwalkers" (1992, Horror)		Brian Krause, Madchen Amick,				"Mars Attacks!" (1996, Comedy)	Jack Nicholson,
A&E	15	L.A. Law "Urine Trouble Now"		Law & Order	Turnaround	Biography: Audrey Hepburn		Investigative Reports (R)		Inside Story (R)		Law & Order
CNN	20	23 Worldview	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire	World Today (R)		Larry King Live		Newsstand		Sports	Moneyline (R)
COM	33	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	Whose Line?	Whose Line?	Whose Line?	Whose Line?	Stein's Money	Stein's Money	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	32	Your New House (R)		Wild Discovery: Queen-Killers		On the Inside: Missing Person		New Detectives		FBI Files "Moving Target"		On the Inside:	Missing Person
ESPN	31	Sportscenter		College Basketball: NIT Semifinal — Teams to Be Announced				College Basketball: NIT Semifinal — Teams to Be Announced. (Live)					Sportscenter
LIFE	45	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"Harmful Intent" (1993, Drama) Tim Matheson, Emma Samms.				Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	35	MTV Jams	Beat Suite	Making-Video	Music Videos	TRL Wanna	TRL (R) (In Stereo)		Tom Green (R)	Tom Green (R)	Lyricist	Undressed	Loveline
NICK	53	All That	Catdog	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Rocket Power	Rocket Power	Brady Bunch	Bev. Hillbillies	All in Family	Jeffersons	Love Lucy	Bewitched
SCIFI	43	Sliders "The Great Work"		Xena: Warrior Princess		Xena: Warrior Princess		Xena: Warrior Princess		Xena: Warrior Princess		Poltergeist: The Legacy
TLC	24	Home Again	Home Again	Treume: Life in the ER		Treume: Life in the ER		Human Sexes		Human Sexes		Treume: Life in the ER
TNT	54	In the Heat of the Night		ER "Going Home" (In Stereo)		NBA Basketball: New York Knicks at Sacramento Kings. (In Stereo Live).				NBA Basketball: Sours et Trail Blazers
USA	59	Crush	Friends	JAG "Pilot"		Walker, Texas Ranger "Angel"		"Black Rain" (1989, Drama) Michael Douglas, Andy Garcia. (In Stereo)				Crush
HBO	91	(5:30) "Mix Money" (1994)	Melanie Griffith,			"Paternity" (1981) Burt Reynolds, PG		"Lost & Found" (1999, Comedy) David Spade. PG-13				Soprenos "House Arest" (R)
MAX	40	"Cocktail" (1988, Drama) Tom Cruise. (In Stereo) R						"Interview With the Vampire" (1994, Horror) Tom Cruise, R		"In Her Defense" (1998) Michael Dudikoff. NR		"Erotic House"
SHOW	96	"The Borrowers" (1998, Adventure) John Goodman. PG						"Naked City: A Killer Christmas" (1998)		"Hard Rain" (1997) Morgan Freeman. R		Movie News	"You There"

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	69	Gavel to Gavel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	222	NBC/22 Springfield
4	CBS/4 Boston	224	CNN Headline News
5	ABC/5 Boston	225	CNN
6	PBS/57 Springfield	226	CNN fn
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	228	CNN SI
8	UPN/20 Hartford	227	TBS
9	Weather Channel	229	MT
10	NBC/30 New Britain	230	Cable TV Network
11	Fox/61 Hartford	240	Univision
12	PBS/24 Hartford	241	Comedy Central
13	WOCH & HSCN	242	Cartoon Network
14	International	243	TV Land
15	UMass Academic TV	244	C-Span
16	WB/New Haven	245	ZDTV (Tentative)
17	Sundance	246	Bloomberg Financial Network
18	The Learning Channel	247	History Channel
19	UVC-TV19	248	HSCN Programming
20	ABC/40 Springfield

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Doonesbury Flashbacks By Garry Trudeau

Doonesbury Flashbacks By Garry Trudeau

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Over the Hedge By Fry Lewis

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Over the Hedge By Fry Lewis

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Horoscopes

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – A mysterious message that demands your immediate attention may come your way. Don't hesitate to accept an evening invitation.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – Fulfillment may seem elusive for you at this time, but perhaps you're simply trying too hard. Maybe you should take a back seat temporarily.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – It's time to get that engine revving and to set your sights on a higher goal. The sooner you get started, the sooner you'll get there.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – Peace of mind can be yours today, but you must be willing to work a little in order to share it with others in your life.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – You can come to an important solution to a stubborn problem today through a careful process of elimination. Don't take chances!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – You may be making the wrong things too important – for yourself and others. It may be time to let someone else do the deciding for a while.

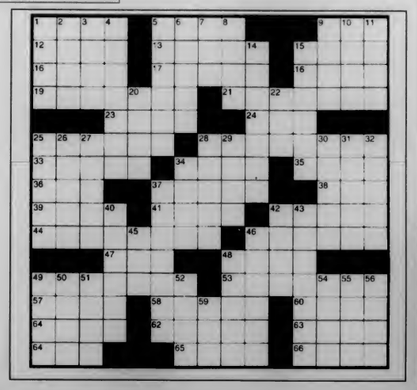
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – You may have to work hard today to prove your point to someone close to you. It's not that he or she doesn't believe you; you just have to make your point clearer.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – All big things have small beginnings – and today, that beginning may be so small as to escape your notice. Pay more attention to the little things!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Keeping up the pace will make all the difference today. Take care that you don't start out so fast, however, and that you soon wind down.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – What you really want isn't all that far away, today – but you may be looking in the wrong direction. Take time to scout the area thoroughly.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – You may be invited to take a walk on the wild side before the day is out. Are you really prepared to make the necessary sacrifices?



PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – You may encounter a problem that can become quite explosive if you're not quick to address it. Put out any fires as swiftly as possible today.

Quote of the Day

"Time is the great teacher. Unfortunately, it murders all of its pupils."

-Hector Berlioz

ACROSS
1 Thick slice
5 Openwork fabric
9 Frat girl
12 Sound
13 "— of Old Smokey"
15 Soar
16 Garden spot
17 Marshy inlet
18 Jai —
19 Self-denying one
21 Me or them
23 Sensed
24 Collegiate defense
25 Kobrin's spouse
28 Zest
33 Party givers
34 Greek letter
35 Repeating sound
36 "— seeing things?"
37 Suit fabric
38 Vex
39 Bogs
41 The Y in BYOB
42 Free-for-all
44 Harbor sounds
46 Changed color
47 Boxing great
48 Brown-off glacier
49 Be inattentive
53 Arroyos
57 "Garfield" pooch
58 Carrying a weapon
60 Roof overhang
61 Wire measure
62 Move on
63 Erupt
64 Conger
65 Vase-shaped pitcher
66 Seabird

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

DOWN
1 Mets stadium
2 Boys
3 Actor Baldwin
4 Help
5 Crib decoration often
6 Pass into law
7 Farm home
8 Mula —
9 Hawaiian port
10 Isaac's son
11 Bridle part
14 Early settler
15 Cause resentment
20 Hardly heroine
22 Out — limb
25 Grain husks
26 Juliet's love
27 Exploding
28 Second planet from the sun
29 Caesar's road
30 Coddy
31 It's a crowd
32 Teamed up as oxen
34 — Narrows Park
37 Melodious
40 Rocks formed from clay
42 TV's Griffin
43 Tensest
45 Cheer for a matador
46 Library frequenter
48 Vower mark
49 Alaskan city
50 Entertainer Adams
51 Fish part
52 Pine for one
54 Back of the neck
55 Always
56 Patched
59 Gullet

There is a surprise cookin' for you at the DC....

What could it be?!??!

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Adam White
Photo Technician	Lisa Metcalf
Copy Editor	Ken McDonald
Production Supervisor	Janine Tangney
Production Staff	Lisa Metcalf, Kara Stokes, Mary Grein

Women's lax set to rebound from subpar start vs. UNH

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

After a frustrating 0-3 start, the Massachusetts women's lacrosse team is looking to overcome offensive shortcomings today against New Hampshire in Durham.

With stellar defensive showings against Harvard and nationally-ranked Cornell and Syracuse, the Minutewomen have averaged only five goals a game in a trio of defeats.

Rebecca Minaker

Lynne Young

Against the Orangewomen on Saturday, UMass couldn't find the net despite controlling the ball for most of the first half, finishing the game with only three points. The high-scoring Syracuse team won the contest with only eight.

"We have the shots and we have the ability, but there's just something missing that we need to finish off and score the goals," Minutewoman senior co-captain Rebecca Minaker said. "It happens with everybody. I don't know if it's that we're putting pressure on ourselves to put the ball in the cage and that's what's doing it. There's just something that we need to spark us, and it has to come from everybody individually."

Offense is what the Wildcats will bring to the field in Durham, after waxing Drexel 12-5 on Sunday, their first win of the season in four tries. Senior captain Stephanie Keefe, however, is very close to being the team's lone gunwoman. Keefe torched the Drexel defense for five goals, an even-par scoring afternoon with her season-opening four goal, one assist performance in an 18-6 loss to Dartmouth.

Keefe can't do it alone, though. After Dartmouth scored 18, Vanderbilt netted 16 and Yale whipped in 12 in another pair of lopsided Wildcat losses. If the Minutewomen want a defense to score against, this might be it.

While the UMass goal will be protected by the nation's top goaltender in 1999, Jen Nardi, and three-time regional All-American defender Lynne Young, New Hampshire boasts a defensive unit without a single senior.

Still, if the Maroon and White can't tickle the twine, its defense will become a non-factor.

"I want to see a little more fire on the offense," Nardi said. "I want to see people not being timid on offense, and I want to see people wanting to score."

If the matchups work out and the Minutewomen can get their offense back on track, a victory might be in the cards, something that would help the team mentally as they near their Atlantic 10 schedule.

"The first win is going to be great," UMass coach Phil Barnes said. "It's going to give us a little extra confidence. We're really not thinking about wins or losses, we're thinking about playing well and taking care of our job and our responsibility."

With ranked opponents in their rear-view, the fact that New Hampshire is a meager 1-3 doesn't seem to factor in. The Minutewomen will fight to establish their own game, regardless of the opponent.

"It doesn't matter what the team is," Nardi said. "I think that every game gets us more prepared for the next game ... if we put it all together, I think we'll be fine."

Men's lax soars to BC

Balanced attack looks to shoot down Eagles

By Bryan Smith
Collegian Staff

A cross-state rivalry will be renewed tonight when the Massachusetts men's lacrosse team faces the Eagles of Boston College at Alumni Stadium in Chestnut Hill. The game that was originally scheduled for 3:00 p.m. has been moved to 7:30 p.m. faceoff to accommodate the BC football program.

"We try to accommodate each other however we can," UMass coach Greg Cannella said.

The Minutemen (3-2, 1-1 ECAC) are coming off an impressive win against the Butler University, Saturday, a game in which UMass was forced to sustain a late charge by the Bulldogs. The win was the second in a row for the Maroon and White.

The game at hand with the Eagles is quite important to the success of the Minutemen as they head into the bulk of their conference schedule after the non-conference matchup.

"Every game on our schedule is important," Cannella said. "I said that from day one."

UMass has had success against BC in the past, posting wins in all 26 of the games that the teams have played. Last year the Minutemen beat the Eagles 17-7 to maintain their perfect record.

"They've always played us tough regardless of what their record is and ours is," Cannella said. "Traditionally it is BC's biggest game of the year."

The Eagles will have to deal with the balanced Minuteman attack that has averaged 10.6 goals per game with outburst of 17 and 14 with a three spot sandwiched in the middle.

PREVIEW

MENS LACROSSE
VS. BOSTON COLLEGE
TODAY AT 7:30 PM
PROGRAMS AT 7:00 PM
MATT FEATO - PLAY
SEAN MCELROY - COLIN COMMENTARY

UMass has also done an excellent job in getting players involved in the scoring column with 17 players notching a least one point.

Rich Kunkel, Jeremy Guski and the red-hot Marc Morley lead the team with 10 points apiece. John Madigan and Kevin Dell each have eight while Keith Gabrielli has seven.

On the defense side of the ball the Minutemen are lead by captain Chris Campoletano. The junior goalie 54 saves in his five starts this season while allowing just over 6.8 goals per contest. Not to go unnoticed has been the play of Matt McFarland. The sophomore standout anchors one of the nation's top defenses.

BC has a record of 1-1 with results to their most recent game unavailable. The Eagles defeated Canisius College in their season opener by a count of 17-9 and then were defeated in their second contest 19-2 by Harvard. The results against Marist College were not available as previously noted.

"Offensively they have some experience, but they're not as experienced on the defensive end," Cannella said.

UMass, with its balanced attack will look to take advantage of the inexperience of the Eagle defense. Morley, who posted 6 points in the game against Butler with three goals and three assists, will look to continue his scoring barrage.

In the game the Minutemen are looking to win their third consecutive game, a feat that last year's squad was unable to accomplish. Inconsistency was a problem last year, but thus far UMass played well in every game, even though they have lost two.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

The UMass men's lacrosse team is prepared to rise to the challenge of besting cross-state rival Boston College tonight

Wait doesn't prove to be a problem for Maine in 5-2 win

By Bryan Smith
Collegian Staff

ALBANY, NY -What do you do when you have to wait three and a half hours to play a hockey game? The answer is not simple; in fact there is no precise answer to the question at hand.

Saturday at the Pepsi Arena, the Universities of Maine and Michigan found out just how hard it was to be prepared for a 3:30 p.m. start and not hit the ice until 7:00 p.m.

The reason for the delay in the start time was not your typical 'problem with the boards or glass;' it was the marathon contest that St. Lawrence and Boston University played for the third berth to the Frozen Four.

The game started at noon and did not get over until after 6:00 p.m. because of the four overtime sessions that were required to determine the winner. The game, in its seventh period, ended when Robin Carruthers of St. Lawrence netted the game-winner in the 124th minute.

"You don't want to stay too uptight," Maine's Ben Guite said. "If you keep thinking and thinking and thinking about what you have to do, you just start thinking all crooked. We have a really young team, so we tried to stay relaxed.

"Most of the guys just sat down and were chatting or watching the game. It was just a relaxed atmosphere waiting. There's not much you can do. You've got to go with what you have."

The Maine players had the luxury of a first round bye because of their No. 1 seed in the East Region. The position that they grabbed after winning the Hockey East Tournament in dramatic fashion gave the players an extra days rest. It did not seem to matter, as was evident in their lack of offensive output through the first two periods, but they responded to the challenge at hand.

Trailing 1-0 heading on a goal that Ilobey Baker Award finalist Mike Cromrie netted midway through the second period Maine knew what it had to do to win the game.

In the final 20 minutes the Black Bears ground their way back and eventually came away with a 5-2 win over the Wolverines.

"We changed up our forecheck a bit and decided to keep coming with four lines like we did all year," Maine coach Shaun Walsh said. "We had earned the bye and we knew that now was the time to take advantage of it. We just tried to give them positive thoughts."

A Guite goal at the 5:14 mark of the third period evened the game at one, but Michigan responded just over two minutes later when Cromrie tallied on the power play to regain the lead. Then the wheels came undone for the boys from Ann Arbor.

"When they made it 2-1, I think that a lot of teams would have crumbled because of the energy level, but we came back and got the goal to tie it."

Guite once again rose to the challenge when he tied the game on a backhander from the slot. His second goal of the night ignited a fire in the Black Bear offense as they dented the twine three more times in the final 12 minutes. The goal also got coach Walsh fired up, as he encouraged the Maine faithful to rise from their seats with a series of hand gestures in support of their beloved Black Bears.

The win did not come without a cost as Len Ceglarski Sportsmanship Award winner Cory Larose received a game disqualification for an apparent butt-end on a Michigan player. Television replay, later, showed that the Wolverine did not go down from the Larose violation, but rather a Robert Ek punch to the back of the head.

As a result of the violation the Black Bear captain will be forced to miss the next game, a Frozen Four matchup with North Dakota.

"One player doesn't make a Maine team; we try to be balanced," Walsh said. "Cory's won some games for us and now it's our job to win one for him so that he can play in the next one."

SLU outlasts BU and earns trip to the Frozen Four

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

ALBANY, NY – The stage was set for a fifth battle of Commonwealth Avenue between the Boston University and Boston College hockey teams. After the Eagles won on Saturday night in Minneapolis in the West Region of the NCAA tournament, all that the Terriers needed to do was defeat St. Lawrence Sunday afternoon in Albany to force yet another showdown for the two rivals.

Completing the task of upending the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference regular season and tournament champions, however, was easier said than done. BU and St. Lawrence went to quadruple-overtime on Sunday afternoon at Pepsi Arena, with the Saints surviving the marathon in dramatic fashion, 3-2.

Sophomore right-winger Robin Carruthers knocked home the rebound of his own shot 3:53 into the fourth extra session to propel St. Lawrence into the Frozen Four, while spoiling what could have been an All-Beantown national semifinal in the process.

Saint Lawrence	3
Boston University	2

"Like I said before the game, any time that you're playing BU and it's March 26, then you know that you've had a pretty good season," St. Lawrence coach Joe Marsh said. "This was maybe the greatest game that I've ever been associated with. It's a great feeling to come out on top, and we're thrilled to be going to the next step."

The game, which ended as the longest NCAA tournament game in history, went more than 123 minutes, failing to eclipse only a 1997 Western Collegiate Hockey Association conference tournament contest between Colorado College and Wisconsin in total duration. Among some of the other notable newly set records in the game included a 77-save performance from Terrier freshman netminder Rick DiPietro.

"I thought that we would have our hands full, knowing that St. Lawrence was the only team to win their regular season and conference tournament titles," BU coach Jack Parker said. "It got to be a war of attrition out there. It was certainly a great game to watch."

St. Lawrence (25-9-7) jumped out to a 2-0 lead early in the second period behind goals from sophomores Brandon Dietrich and Jack O'Brien. Dietrich netted his 15th goal of the year late in the first period, while O'Brien recorded his seventh of the season two minutes into the middle frame.

The Terriers comeback effort began with a power play goal by Mike Pandolfo midway through the second period. BU would then net the equalizer at the 11:50 mark of the third stanza on a goal by Brian Collins.

From there, the two teams played almost 75 minutes of scoreless hockey – 13 more minutes than in a standard regulation game. Both teams had chances to score the game-winner, but the best opportunity may have occurred when BU defenseman Chris Dyment hit the crossbar late in the first overtime.

Derek Gustafson, freshman goalie for the Saints, finished up the evening with 72 saves. As the game progressed, both netminders stepped up their play with an assortment of spectacular stops, but it was Gustafson and the Saints who earned the victory in the end.

"They [the two goaltenders] are of very contrasting styles. Rick is very athletic and is like another defenseman out there for them," Marsh said. "Derek is an outstanding positional goaltender and does a great job of reading situations out on the ice. Both of them can sure stop the puck though. You saw two magnificent freshman goaltenders tonight."

Along with St. Lawrence and Boston College, North Dakota also earned a trip to Providence for the Frozen Four thanks to a 4-1 win over Niagara on Saturday night in Minneapolis. Rounding out the field is Maine, who was a 5-2 winner over Michigan in the second game in Albany on Sunday.

Baseball out to pluck Hartford Hawks

By Eric Soderstrom
Collegian Staff

In nature, it has come to be known that hawks frequently hover over one area and search for their prey. Today, when the University of Hartford Hawks host the Massachusetts' baseball team at McKenna Field in East Hartford, they will have to do more than just hover unless they feel like being shot down by the surging Minutemen.

Last weekend, UMass brought its attack into New Haven, Conn. and swept Yale in a double-header, 7-0 and 4-3. The two wins, knocking Yale's record to a mere 5-14, upped UMass' record to 8-6 and over the .500 mark for the first time this season.

"We played pretty well for the most part," Coach Mike Stone said. "We played solid in the first game but got off to a sluggish start in the second."

With the heroics cast from the arm of reliever Nick Skirkanich, the Minutemen were able to finish off last Saturday with a late inning rally that secured the one run victory. Skirkanich retired the side in order in the seventh to pick up his first save of the year. Senior captain Shaun Skeffington starred on the offensive side, going four for seven on the day with four singles.

"We did what we had to do in crunch time," Stone said. "You have to feel good about winning a double-header no matter what."

It was only about one year ago when the Minutemen took control of visiting Hartford and claimed victory while plating 13 unanswered runs at Earl Lorden field. The Minutemen approach this years contest looking for a similar result, balancing on the heels of an eight game winning streak. Since UMass' six straight losses at the beginning of the season, they have outscored their opponents 90-17. The win streak started on March 13th with a 4-0 win over Canisius.

Junior pitcher Craig Szado will get the start on the mound today for the Minutemen. Szado lost his first game of the year thanks to the

Turn to BALL, page 3

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Senior captain Shaun Skeffington came up huge for the Maroon and White in its doubleheader against Yale and will look to keep up the intensity against Hartford.

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Volume CVI Issue 10 | Wednesday, March 29, 2000

Online academics protested

Budget under fire

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

"The People's University-Education Before Profit" protest held in the Campus Center Concourse, continued yesterday as issues of privatization, budget cuts and diversity on campus continued to be discussed.

From 10 a.m. – 5 p.m., a number of different speakers presented issues facing the campus population to those in attendance.

Jon Zibbell, a member of the graduate student senate, explained to students that the issues on campus directly affected them.

"For any of you undergraduates walking by, I just wanted to let you know that your academics are at risk," he said. "If you don't think that this will effect you, you are wrong."

He went on to explain that projected budget cuts to the University would create even more difficulties in getting into available classes. He commented that because of the 25-percent reduction in teaching assistants in the Spanish and Portuguese Department, students would not be able to get into the classes that they need.

Graduate student Thomas Coffee also made similar comments about the Spanish Department and the cuts they are facing. He spoke out against the possible implementation of online courses to alleviate the problems with fewer classes in the department.

He asked those in attendance the rhetorical question, "What is the best way to speak to Spanish?" He went on to answer, "To speak it. Written comprehension and the ability to speak it are two different things."

According to Coffee, students will soon be faced with teleprompters rather than professors and will have much less direct contact with individuals at the University.

"They are looking to expand this program [online courses] across the nation and across this campus," he said. "You get a videotape, you get a website, if you are lucky you get one conference with a faculty member."

He went on to say that the University was using this new practice of online courses only to save money and not to improve the quality of education at the school.

"The idea is not to improve the quality of education," he said. "They admit that with online courses the test scores are lower and the completion rates are lower."

In addition, he also spoke out about funding that was allotted to the area of technology and spending that was occurring in that area of the University. He commented that the University was spending extraneous amounts of money on projects that involved private corporations.

"They don't have the money to teach you... they are turning it over to corporations," he said.

Coffee explained that much of the money spent in the area of technology was spent on the installation and implementation of the computer program PeopleSoft.

According to him, the program itself was not reliable and has proven itself to be problematic at other large universities around the country. It has also faced lawsuits due to problems with the program.

"There are six shareholder suits against PeopleSoft for fraud," he said. "Their own shareholders are suing them."

The program has cost the University a total of 35 million dollars thus far and its installation has not yet been completed, Coffee explained.

"PeopleSoft produces a massive cost overflow," he said. "That 35 million dollars is just paying for the software, and the staff to run it."

Also mentioned was the possibility of the University placing computers in dorm rooms for student use.

"They are talking about putting computers in the dorms," he said. "That is not so that you can do your homework, it is so that you can take your classes."

The group will continue to voice their opinions on the subject of privatization, budget cuts, and diversity. Their mission statement being that they would like to see UMass move back towards being an accessible, affordable, public land grant institution of higher learning.

They will continue with their protest today in the Campus Center from the hours of 10 a.m. – 5 p.m.

TERESA LANNO/RIVERA | COLLEGIAN

Charlotte Coates, a member of the UMass community for more than ten years, talks to students about privatization issues.

UMass explores sweatshop group

By Alicia Upano
Collegian Staff

Furthering their efforts to push the University to join the Workers' Rights Consortium (WRC) and also to strengthen the existing code of conduct, the UMass Students Against Sweatshops organization invited a WRC advisory committee member and UMass professor to speak last night.

UMass Students Against Sweatshops aims to ensure that merchandise bearing UMass logos is not the handiwork of sweatshop workers. Organization member Michael Burns said, "As long as we accept the profits, we must accept the responsibility."

The first speaker, Eve Weinbaum, is a professor at the Labor Relations Research Center. Through 1996-97, she was also the Political and Education Director for the Southeast Region of the Union of Needletrades, Industrial and Textile Employees (UNITE). Weinbaum explained that though many people believe sweatshops exist only in developing countries. She cited a statistic showing that over 50 percent of American clothing is made in sweatshops.

Sweatshop workers are often being paid sub-minimal wages or not being paid at all. As such industry has traditionally been and continues to be mostly women's work, bosses are known to fire pregnant women and force women to take birth control or get abortions.

"Brand names don't make clothing, they just sell it," Weinbaum asserted. Weinbaum believes retailers no longer have a connection with the people who are actually making the clothes, and this is where the UMass Students Against Sweatshops are concerned. It is not common knowledge who and under what conditions stitch the UMass logo-bearing merchandise which are sold everyday on this campus.

The main reason that retailers or colleges, like UMass, do not know where the merchandise is made is because there are many levels to the process. First, college licensing decides on a manufacturer (the athletic department, for instance, uses Nike), and the manufacturer uses its own subcontractor to actually produce the merchandise. However, these subcontractors are often owners of factories based in foreign countries. Each level along the way receives profit, except the worker – in many countries making less than $1 US a day.

In light of the talks of the UMass Students Against Sweatshops with David P. Curley, director of licensing and trademarks, Vice Chancellor for Administration and Finance Paul Page recently announced a plan to establish a committee to research the sweatshop issues. The committee's responsibility is to decide if the current code of conduct for firms that are licensed to make clothes and other goods are current and effective.

Also in favor of the anti-sweatshop movement, Page said that the University is sending a representative to the WRC founding conference on April 7 to examine its opportunities. The second speaker, Jeff Ballinger, is an advisory committee member of the WRC.

About 25 universities have already joined the WRC. Recently Smith College has joined both the WRC and its opponent, the Fair Labor Association (FLA). The WRC asks for one percent of licensing revenue, and for very small schools there is a $3,000 fee, Ballinger said. "It's an ambitious undertaking, we know that we won't be able to look at every factory disclosed by the university but... [our work will enable us to] sit down with the licensing director and decide whether people producing UMass t-shirts are at the bottom of the heap, somewhere in the middle, or whether they're on top. I don't think that's over ambitious."

WRC's goal for the year is to set up connections with groups monitoring factories, like Non-Governmental Organizations and trade unions. When an audience member asked Ballinger if he knows one business that is working fairly, he quickly replied,

TERESA LANNO/RIVERA | COLLEGIAN

Students gathered last night at the Campus Center to express their concern about sweatshops all over the world.

UMass female jogger assaulted

By Daniel Ruetenik
Collegian Staff

Police Roundup

The Amherst Police department is investigating a report of an assault on a University of Massachusetts student.

The UMass Police department among other incidents during the past week arrested two people for disorderly conduct and is investigating a report of an assault on a student receptionist.

According to an Amherst PD press release issued yesterday, a female UMass student was assaulted on Monday, March 6 at approximately 3 p.m.

The alleged victim was jogging along East Pleasant St. near the water towers when she was assaulted by a white male with dark complexion, stocky approximate-

Turn to POLICE, page 2

Awad lands on Select Board

Incumbent Boss ousted from seat

By Virginia Avedisian
Collegian Staff

Last night, Anne Awad beat incumbent Hill Boss in the race for a seat on the Amherst Select Board 2189 to 1429. Voters also answered a referendum question concerning marijuana with a resounding yes.

Awad won Boss' place on the Amherst Select Board and, as of 11:50 p.m. last night, the Amherst Town Clerk's office announced that the non-binding question concerning the decriminalization and de-prioritization of marijuana had indeed passed with 1659 citizens voting in favor of it and 981 voting against it. The voting took place on campus from noon to 8 p.m. at the Hampshire Dining Commons for Southwest residents, North Fire Station in Amherst for Orchard Hill and Van Meter residents and Immanuel Lutheran Church for Northeast and Sylvan residents.

Awad is currently an employee at the State Department of Public Health. She sought to not only develop, but also to protect the local community. She was in favor of the referendum question on the subject of marijuana and had many students' support for both her campaign and for her position on the referendum question. The incumbent, Boss, was clearly divided in his views on the referendum question from those of his opponent. Boss said that he had no problem with the first part of the referendum question, which dealt with the decriminalization of marijuana offenders.

The referendum asked that marijuana offenders not be considered criminals. He disagreed with the second part of the question, which asked for police to in a way to, in his words, "look the other way," in that type of situation. Boss felt that the issue was currently being taken as a political issue when it should instead be a strictly a legal decision.

When it comes to the question of the deprioritization and the decriminalization of marijuana, the Cannabis Reform Coalition (CRC) branch at the University of Massachusetts and the Citizen's for a Sensible Marijuana Policy have been extremely involved in getting this non-binding question to pass. At least one woman decided to sit outside under the bridge in the Southwest residential area on an inflatable chair urging students passing by to vote for Awad and the referendum question.

The CRC also petitioned Amherst using a signature drive that included students in the past to initially get the question onto the official ballot. In addition to its past efforts, the CRC discussed the issues associated with marijuana and voting for Awad in the Campus Center, and passed out many different flyers to students passing by.

It was anticipated that voter turnout would be considerably higher this year as many local residents were expected to vote on the referendum question. The final voter turnout was 20.4 percent

EXTENDED FORECAST

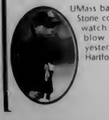
Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 52 LOW: 38	HIGH: 54 LOW: 32	HIGH: 58 LOW: 32

SOURCE CNN.COM

Like a Virgin

Sam Wilkinson writes about virgins. Check out page four.

PAGE 4



Wish you didn't miss Miss Britney?

Today in Arts we talk to Nigel Pulsford from Bush about their upcoming show with Moby. Also, Britney Spears comes to town and brings her two best friends. Arts: We got a Machinehead

PAGE 6

Cate-Game Slide

UMass baseball skipper Mike Stone could do nothing but watch as his Minutemen blow a late-inning lead yesterday, losing to host Hartford, 10-6.

PAGE 14

Arts & Living 6
Comics 13
Crossword 13
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 14

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

Culture and activism offered

Five student groups sponsor night of dancing and education

By Joe Collins
Collegian Correspondent

Last night the University of Massachusetts was given a taste of culture and activism as "Meet Me at the Mosaic," sponsored by five student groups among other contributors, took place in the Student Union Ballroom.

Hosted by Rahilya Napoli, attendees were entertained by a number of performers including Springfield's "House of Wayne" dance troupe, Professor Ann Ferguson (Woman's Studies) on acoustic guitar, Puerto Rican poetry by Carla Santiago and a number of students performing dances from Egypt, Palestine, Lebanon, Iraq, Sumatra, and West Java. Food from a variety of nations was also present for a minimum fee.

However, the entertainment was only a sideline to the true purposes of the evening: education and activism. Students representing several UMass organizations, as well as several international nations, educated those attending with informative tables.

Freshman Samalid Maldonado worked the event "...to show people what is Puerto Rico." Her table and peers did so through displays, food and beverage, and a historical video.

The Newman Graduate Group attended to celebrate the 20th anniversary of the assassination of Archbishop Romero, who was killed on March 20, 1980 in El Salvador. He was an activist for human rights. Jennifer Logan, a graduate student in Public and Community Health stated that they were "celebrating activism, and all encompassing Catholic social justice."

The Muslim Student Association was also in attendance. Senior Biochemistry major Sarah Ali commented that the group was there to serve the Islamic community for prayer, holiday celebration, and education. The group is open to both Muslim and Non-Muslim students.

The Graduate Women's Network (GWN) and the Health Reach International (HRI) groups were also in attendance to spread information on their work. Junior Oliver Sanchez, a Finance major, explained that the HRI is in existence at UMass "...to outreach to international students for health care in the United States."

The highlight of the evening was a speech given by Dr. Barbara Love of the Social Justice Education Program. She informed the crowd in her keynote speech that, "getting born was your first act of activism. You were born fully human. We act on the world in order to change it."

She focused on telling those attending that they are all activists and should speak up and let their discontent be known. "Determine whether or not discrepancies exist and do what needs to be done."

Her speech included references to various activists. She quoted Viktor E. Frankl, in saying, "isn't enough to just be here, to go with the flow."

Love explained that in Frankl's book, "Man's Search for Meaning" he pointed out that people who had special goals were more likely to survive in life. Rosa Parks, she said, "realized that she could change a seemingly impermeable situation" by refusing to give up her seat to a white man on a Birmingham, Alabama bus. She also pointed out the life of Nelson Mandela, who, after 27 years of imprisonment, still held on to his vision of a free and just South Africa and today is president of that nation.

She ended her speech with five "principles to remember." She wanted attendees to trust in their visions, to trust in the power of their visions, to know that they too can make a difference, to do the work of changing the world, and to do it all with love, care, and compassion.

"This is the thing that will make the final difference in the world," she said.

UMASS students, Yujing Qing and Xiao Ying, represented China during the International Affairs Fair held last night at the Student Ballroom.

■ police

continued from page 1

ly 5-foot-10, 19-23-years-old, dark brown hair, wearing a white baseball cap emblazoned with an unknown logo, bright red zipper-type jacket with a white stripe across the mid-section, and navy blue running pants with a white stripe along the seam.

The woman was shoved to the ground by the assailant, however, she was able to spray him in the face with hair spray in order to secure her escape.

The assailant fled the area, and the woman reported the incident to the University of Massachusetts Police Department.

The woman sustained abrasions as a result of the incident, and she will seek medical attention on her own.

UMass does not reveal the names of individuals that have been assaulted.

UMPD Spokesman Jim Lyons said the matter was still under investigation. Lyons said the police department is unaware of any connection between this event and last semester's assaults near the campus pond.

According to Lyons, the incident happened outside of the boundary of the campus so it is being investigated by the Amherst Police in conjunction with UMass police.

If anyone has any information they are asked to contact the Amherst Police Department at 256-4011.

On Thursday March 2 at 2:33 a.m., while police were responding to a report of a medical emergency at Patterson Dorm, Joel M. Roy, age 20, from Newbury, jumped on the hood of a police cruiser.

Lyons said, "A person jumped on the hood of a police car causing more than $250 in damage while police were dealing with a medical emergency."

Police arrested Roy and charged him with wanton destruction of property valued at over $250, disorderly conduct, resisting arrest and possession of a false or stolen liquor ID card.

Also on Thursday, a student receptionist working in John Quincy Adams Dorm was assaulted while attempting to stop someone from entering the building without permission.

According to Lyons, the assailant, who is described as a black male, 5-foot-8, wearing a black bandana and black baggy jeans, "pushed by [the receptionist" when she tried to stop him.

On Sunday Morning at 1:44 a.m. in the campus center police arrested Chimaeze R. Ugwuegbu, age 21, from Detroit. He allegedly became disorderly at a party in the campus center. Police responded and found a can of pepper spray while searching him. They arrested Ugwuegbu and charged him with disorderly conduct, resisting arrest and possession of ammunition without a Firearms Identification Card.

Gore's proposal to create endowment for campaigns

By Ceci Connolly
The Washington Post

Vice President Gore's prescription for overhauling the campaign finance laws, including creating a new federal endowment fund to underwrite elections, is an innovative remedy — but one that may do more to boost Gore's own presidential prospects than to achieve the fundamental reform he says is needed.

As Gore formally announced his fresh approach to reducing the influence of money in American politics this week, his Republican opponents, fundraising experts, members of Congress and even the most ardent advocates of tighter campaign laws expressed skepticism about the pragmatism of his proposals.

In a speech Monday at Marquette University in Milwaukee, Gore detailed his plan for creating a new $7.1 billion "Democracy Endowment" that would finance general election contests for the House, Senate and — perhaps eventually — the White House. Donations to the fund would be tax-deductible, and any candidate accepting the financing could not accept any other contributions.

Because donations would go to a nonpartisan account, rather than an individual candidate or party, Gore said, "We will break the connection between the giving of money and the gaining of influence in these election contests." Gore also vowed to press for an end to the huge "soft money" contributions to political parties from wealthy individuals, corporations and labor unions.

Gore's new stridency on campaign finance reform is an attempt to neutralize the damage of his 1996 fund-raising lapses and seize the reform mantle in the wake of Arizona Sen. John McCain's departure from the presidential race.

And although the tax deduction would cost the federal treasury an estimated $2 billion in lost revenue over seven years, Gore predicted the endowment would have more appeal than pure public financing of campaigns — a proposal he supported early in his congressional career but has come to believe is not widely popular.

But many outside experts doubt the practicality of Gore's plan. They questioned whether individuals or companies would actually contribute to a general fund rather than the candidate of their choice. They said Gore's plan would still allow such donors to funnel money to shadow groups that would largely remain exempt from having to disclose their contributors. And they expressed doubt about whether a Congress that has been reluctant to pass far more limited changes would be willing to embrace such far-reaching reform.

"It's hard to believe this is going to pass," said Scott Harshbarger, president of the campaign finance watchdog group Common Cause.

The most attractive feature of the Gore plan for people worried about the disproportional clout of wealthy contributors and corporations is that the vice president would end the relationship between giver and politician.

"If you care about reform, this does give you a vehicle to get rid of the special interests," Harshbarger said. "In every race, people would have money to compete and it would put a screen between contributions and access."

But observers fear that few individuals or companies would write a check without getting "credit," and most would be loath to give money that could go to candidates they seek to defeat.

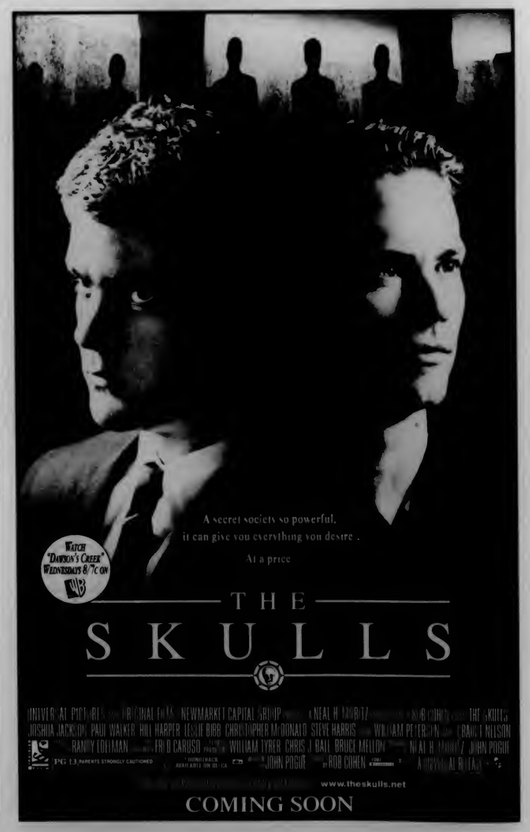
"Will the money be forthcoming, absent the rationale that people now give money for access?" asked Charles Kolb, head of the Committee for Economic Development, a New York-based collection of corporate leaders pushing to abolish soft money and increase federal matching funds for small contributions.

UMASS

INFORMATION FOR SENIORS

COMMENCEMENT PROGRAM NAME LISTING

The list of names in the undergraduate Commencement Program book will be based on senior records for the Class of 2000 as of April 7, 2000.



If the answer is "yes" to any of the questions below, immediately contact the Registrar's Office (Senior Staff) 207 Whitmore 545-0555

- ❑ Are you unsure of your eligibility to graduate?
- ❑ Are you an undeclared major?
- ❑ Do you anticipate changing your graduation date?
- ❑ Was the Registrar's February mailing to you verifying your name and graduation date incorrect? (If you did not receive the mailing or if you did not make corrections, please contact the Registrar's Office).

Due to printing deadlines, names cannot be added to the program after April 7th.

Please note: Your graduation status is not affected even if your name is not listed in the program.

The Undergraduate Commencement information brochure is available at www.umass.edu/commencement or at University Advancement (390 Whitmore), the Registrar's Office (207 Whitmore), and the Visitor's Center

Students struggle to understand foreign professors

By Gary Dorsey
The Baltimore Sun

At Towson University, Bryan Jablonski hid a tape recorder during class so he could later translate his teacher's broken English.

At Princeton University, Bill Fedyna had four teachers in a math course for engineers. Three of them did not speak English.

At the University of Missouri, Don Collins could communicate with the instructor of his chemistry lab only by jotting down questions in a notebook and waiting for a written response. "It's not so unusual," Collins said. "Almost everyone has a story like that."

In college classrooms across the United States, many students voice the same complaint: The prevalence of non-native speaking professors and teaching assistants – particularly in math, science and engineering – has become an impediment.

Language complaints have been common on the nation's college campuses since the early 1980s, when foreign student enrollment in graduate schools began a sharp rise from about 20,000 to more than 40,000 in recent years. Because the majority of foreign students come from Asian nations, where the transition to English can be particularly troublesome, the problem has persisted.

The issue is controversial whenever it comes up, educators say, because it raises suspicions of prejudice and xenophobia.

Several students and professors asked not to be quoted for those reasons. Some students acknowledged that they preferred not to discuss the topic publicly because they feared retribution from teachers.

Yet the subject comes up repeatedly at even the best colleges.

"This has been a hot topic in higher education for a number of years," said Patricia Monoson, a speech pathologist at the University of Arkansas who has studied and written about the issue. "You find it at the large research institutions, even in some smaller colleges."

Student complaints at Princeton became so frequent that the school announced recently that graduate students will have to pass an English proficiency exam before they can teach.

At the University of Missouri, complaints reached such a pitch this year that the state Legislature held public hearings and began debating a bill to require professors to demonstrate English fluency before being allowed to teach.

In most cases, the underlying tension is not prejudice toward foreigners, observers say, but a feeling among parents and students that they are not getting their money's worth.

"Students here don't feel there is any acceptable excuse to have someone in the classroom who can't communicate with us – not when you're paying $30,000 a year," said George Soterakis, senior class president at the Johns Hopkins University. "That's just a blunt statement of fact."

Misuzu Otsuka, a Japanese graduate student in economics, came to Hopkins in 1998 understanding English but without being able to speak the language. Although the school needed her to teach weekly sections for a large undergraduate economics course, she had to wait a year and improve her English before being allowed to lead a class.

Even though she now feels comfortable teaching, she still does not always understand students' questions. Speaking spontaneously, she said, can be a struggle.

"Students use slang and a casual style that is hard to understand," she said. "But they respect my effort."

Despite the apparent widespread nature of the problem, many universities have shown "curious indifference" to language impediments, according to Michael Olivas, a law professor at the University of Houston, who has studied the trend.

His analysis of state laws in 1996 showed that in the absence of adequate response from educators, parents and students pressure state legislatures to respond. Unfortunately, he said, some of the laws passed are discriminatory or so vague they have been ineffective.

"Some states have gone overboard and some have left it up to institutions that continue to be derelict in training people," Olivas said. "Universities simply have not been very attentive to the issue."

The dilemma, observers says, is rooted mostly in science and engineering departments, which have come to rely on a steady supply of international students to staff graduate schools during a time when American students have opted for other careers.

"In a good economy, many American students are bypassing graduate school for the dot-coms and start-ups and better paying jobs," said Nancy Oppenheim, who conducted one of the largest studies of language proficiency issues in the mid-1990s at the University of Texas. "At the same time, the native English speakers in grad school don't want to be (teaching assistants) because the more prestigious jobs are in the research labs and they find teaching is an all-consuming job."

According to a 1998 report from the National Science Foundation, more than a third of all master's degrees earned in engineering, math and computer science go to foreign students. In science and engineering, international students claim almost half the doctoral degrees.

"Universities are caught in a bind," said Ghislaine Kozuh, international teaching assistant coordinator at the University of Texas. "They need to staff these large undergraduate survey courses in physics, math, chemistry and engineering, but they don't have a selection of native speakers to draw from."

Grab and Go
English major Emily Heiple grabs some lunch at the People's Market

Happiest Place:

Disney gets mustache

By E. Scott Reckard
Los Angeles Times

Memo to Disneyland cast members: Walt had one. Now you can, too.

The Walt Disney Co. said Monday it has scrapped a 43-year-old ban on mustaches for its theme park employees. The move is a concession to the modern times.

The Magic Kingdom continues to have one of the strictest grooming codes of any American employer.

Beards are still prohibited. Nose rings and purple hair? Forget it. And no Elvis look-alikes please: Sideburns below the bottom of the ears aren't allowed.

But in a letter going out this week to 12,000 workers at Disneyland and at four parks in Florida, Disney Attractions President Paul Pressler said the mustache edict was lifted because surveys show patrons don't find them objectionable – neatly trimmed mustaches, anyway.

"The discussions with our Guests showed, not surprisingly, that they feel strongly about the importance of our Disney look and view our Cast Members as role models for their children," Pressler's 289-word memo said. "And it was clear they also felt neatly trimmed mustaches are consistent with what they have come to expect of us."

"It was this information, coupled with our Cast conversations that made us comfortable with this change to our guidelines."

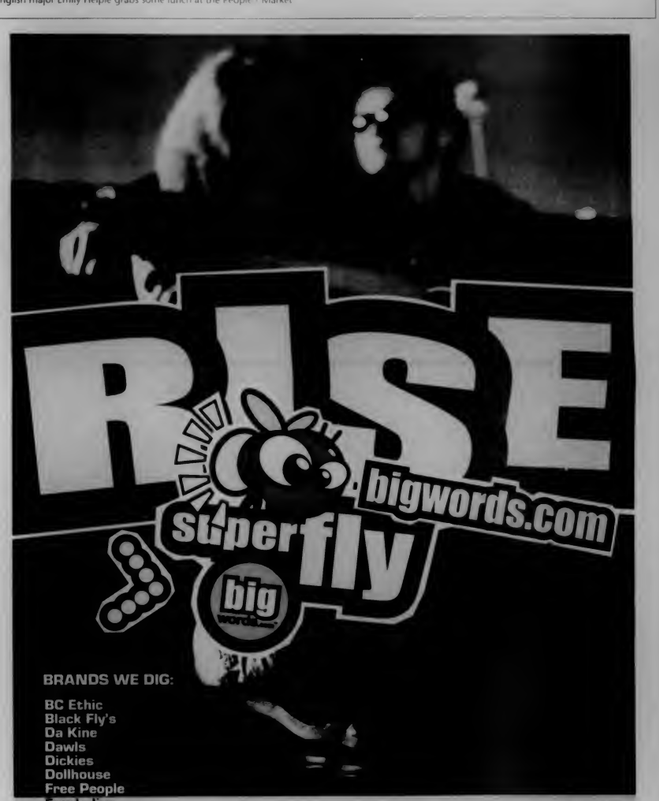
But management had no such comfort level for four decades.

When Walt Disney opened Disneyland in 1955, the Anaheim, Calif., park and the workers in it were meant to contrast with the tawdry amusement parks of the day and the "carnies" who ran the rides and games.

Disney, who enjoyed a cocktail or two, banned alcoholic beverages at Disneyland. And despite having a mustache himself – a neatly trimmed one at that – Disney decided in 1957 to ban facial hair formally for all workers at The Happiest Place on Earth. The prohibition spread to the company's Magic Kingdom park near Orlando, and at the other three Florida parks it has opened: Epcot, Disney-MGM Studios and Animal Kingdom.

Over the years workers have long pined for an end to the ban. But Disney had held firm.

In 1989, after Disney acquired the company that operated the Queen Mary in Long Beach, Calif., it created a major stir by firing the mustachioed first officer and two other employees with facial hair.



Having taken facial hair so seriously in the past, it wasn't surprising that Disneyland on Monday conducted an all-employees briefing. "Mickey's roll call" in Disneyspeak, to explain the changes in detail.

In a room beneath the Innoventions attraction in Tomorrowland, park officials explained how they had shown pictures of beards, mustaches, spiky hair and other bodily decorations to highly diverse focus groups before deciding the mustache decision was the right one – and going ahead with it.

Some people speculated that the sudden change was prompted by the increasingly tight labor market, in which many employers in tourism and other industries are desperately trying to recruit workers.

But Bill Warren, a spokesman for the four theme parks at Florida's Disney World, said that "was not the driver here." Rather, he said, the sentiment among the staff and customers had motivated the change.

"Certainly the timing of something like this is as much art as science, but this feels right," he said.

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Our Opinion

Tortoise on the hill

Yesterday, the United States Senate took up a proposed constitutional amendment on flag desecration that would make harming the American flag illegal. In addition, Sen. Ernest Hollings, a Democrat from South Carolina, wants to tack a provision to that amendment that would set limits on the amount of contributions that can be made to a candidate for federal office.

The original amendment was introduced by Republican Sen. Orrin Hatch.

This double-pronged political sword is the latest pair of relatively unrelated issues that have been crudely stuck together to serve the competing interests of the two dominant parties in Washington. As a result of the juxtaposed ideologies represented in the amendment and provision package, the package is particularly hard to deal with in Congress.

The Daily Collegian looks with disdain on this continuing process that slows progress in Washington. A senator that might agree with part of the proposition might adamantly oppose the attached provision, and that keeps politicians from voting on each given issue and how each issue might or might not help the American public that he or she represents. The lines between the two issues begin to blur, and confusion in Congress is rampant enough without additional help.

Even more discouragingly, each of the aforementioned issues is debatably unconstitutional by nature. Flag desecration, in particular, is protected quite clearly in the category of "Freedom of expression," love it or hate it.

With this in mind, the Collegian's agreement with the protection of that freedom is almost a moot point. Sure, as a newspaper, it would be ludicrous for us to say that American citizens should not be legally allowed to desecrate the flag.

These ideas are best stated by Paul Tash, the executive editor of the St. Petersburg Times and chairman of the freedom of information committee of the American Society of Newspaper Editors when he told the Associated Press, "To protect the symbol of freedom at the expense of freedom itself is backwards to me," adding that the real test of free speech comes "when that free speech is repugnant."

Congress struck down the issue once before, when Hatch offered a flag desecration amendment in 1995.

The Collegian believes that the government is wasting its time with issues that have been decided against in the past and that are most likely going to be decided against in the future. Unless new breakthroughs on the subject are made, the president, see especially ones as recent as 1995, should not be revisited ad nauseum.

Subjects that clearly violate the First Amendment of the Constitution are also wasting Congress' time. If Hollings' motion, as Republican Sen. Mitch McConnell from Kentucky said, "crudely reaches in and rips the heart right out of the First Amendment," then instead discuss an issue that does not.

While a number of bills go through Washington in a gray area of sorts; unclear about how the Constitution shines on them; others are brought to the table as political tools. Suggestions that don't stand a chance, even in the eyes of those proposing them, take up hours that could be put to use dealing with subjects that could directly influence the American people.

The Collegian suggests, knowing that the idea doesn't stand a chance in Congress, that the senators stop playing games and get down to business. Washington needs to focus on issues that aren't recently beaten and unconstitutional.

Virgin's not a dirty word

I was riding home after Spring Break and saw a billboard that made me wonder if I'd missed something. I had left West Virginia the night before and hopped a train in Charlottesville after visiting with my friend Alice. I went to Washington D.C., Delaware, New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and eventually the fine state of Massachusetts.

Sam Wilkinson

The billboard was somewhere along the way, although I don't remember where.

On the billboard was written: "VIRGIN Teach Your Kids It's Not a Dirty Word." Apparently this is the new "don't have sex until later" campaign initiated by some group intent on making sure that the world remains tight... assed when it comes to sex. 'Virgin' was written in red spray paint, the rest, "Teach Your Kids It's Not a Dirty Word," written in black type.

I wasn't aware that virgin was a dirty word. I don't ever really remember being taunted in school as a virgin, nor do I remember going to parties and getting into fights with non-virgins. I don't remember gangs of students walking around West Side Story-style, singing "When you're not a virgin/you're not a virgin all the way/from your first time for thirty seconds/to your last sex having day." I don't ever remember seeing graffiti anywhere that mocked virgins. I don't remember ever hearing angry coaches call their players a bunch of virgins. I don't ever really remember anybody anywhere ever using the term virgin in any sort of negative way.

So what's the deal? Have I been missing out on a hell of a lot of good "you're such a virgin that..." jokes? Probably. I never really hung out with the roided jocks or crack whores that would have made a huge deal about such a trivial matter, but regardless, good jokes are good jokes.

Hell, jokes aren't even the point of this. And true to form, there is a point to this although I'm taking my sweet time getting there.

Why is it that people who are against tobacco, teen sex, drugs, fast driving, blah, blah, blah seem to honestly believe that encouraging parents to teach their children that something is bad will fix things? Do they honestly think that parental intervention will encourage kids to do or not to do something? Do they honestly think parents aren't doing a good enough job teaching their children that various things are bad?

A lot of people tout parental intervention as the way to solve America's problems. A lot of those same people don't seem to understand that kids ultimately make the final decision, and at this point in America, there aren't a lot of kids who really think the word virgin is dirty. Honestly, dirty words are available for our usage, and there are currently some great ones. I assume that the younger generation probably hasn't gone around grabbing at new words in an attempt to have naughty things to say. And besides, teaching kids that virgin isn't a dirty word is another pathetic attempt to sway decision making; kids already have the bejeezus scared out of them by health classes and the realities of the world. High school health education classes do a great job of teaching everything there is to know about how bad sex is without adding anything about technique.

"Maybe it's after some heavy petting, maybe they're bored, maybe they really want to, but ultimately, it's their decision, those two people sitting or laying there."

But that's neither here nor there; the real decision to have sex ultimately comes down to a decision made, hopefully, between two consenting people. Maybe it's after some heavy petting, maybe they're bored, maybe they really want to, but ultimately, it's their decision, those two people sitting or laying there.

Then they do it, then they get off, or at least they hopefully do. Both of them.

I can't think of one thing that's particularly dirty about actual sex, but I'd certainly maintain that, of virginity or sexuality, sex is clearly the dirtier of the two. One has to clean up, shower, maybe deal with the condom, whatever.

Meanwhile, virgins don't have to deal with any of that, and the word itself, virgin, only really describes a state of sexual being, but what's so wrong about never having had sex? Nothing at all. Sure, it can be an amazing experience, but so can sitting in a field and looking at stars or falling asleep next to someone or knowing that there is a person willing to share themselves with you, even if only for a few minutes.

Of course, this is the somewhat romanticized notion of sex and sexual activities. Whores and players will always have to get their action out there, but the point is that they will – always will. Parents can teach their children all they want about sex and sexuality, and there are plenty of available reasons to say no and stay a virgin, but it's that kid who makes the final decision. It's that kid who decides that they like whoring or playing, or maybe they decide to take one of the thousands of available roads: staying a virgin, committing to a long term relationship, enjoying random hook-ups, whatever.

While parental intervention can change minds and sway feelings, those kids in the backseat will ultimately make the final decision. Some will make really bad decisions and regret they ever made it, other will make fine decisions and love their first minute and a half of pleasure, still others will enjoy knowing that they are waiting to meet the right person to share themselves with.

Teaching kids that virgin isn't a dirty word isn't going to solve the "problem" if there really is a problem to begin with. The word "virgin" isn't "dirty." But in as much as it isn't, there's also nothing dirty about those having sex. Are kids getting off really such a bad idea? Is there anyone reading this who doesn't really enjoy feeling that release? Is there anyone reading this who's really so against sex as to try to teach people that virgin, a non-dirty word by its very nature, is, in fact, not dirty?

I'd seriously doubt it and I seriously wonder why individuals are pushing the idea that kids should be taught that virgin isn't a dirty word. Kids know that. We all know that. This isn't some complex theory; it's merely a fine state of sexual being, no better or worse than any other state of sexual being.

Sam Wilkinson is a Collegian columnist.

Write For Ed/Op

Encountering me

I met me the other day.

I was at the Bicycle show at the Skybox last Saturday (which was actually a damn good show until Reville decided to get on stage), and I was standing behind this group of kids who were probably sophomores in high school. One of them was (I swear to God) a carbon copy of me at that age.

He was wearing jean shorts, black sneakers, and a black t-shirt with a white undershirt underneath. His hair was longish and disheveled, his face a little on the zitty side. He was in a constant in nervous motion, tapping or vibrating his foot, chewing his nails and talking to his friends in a rapid voice, which they basically ignored. This was me exactly as I was when I was 15-years-old.

I talked to me for a little bit. I told him about the opening bands, which were the reason I was there, but he had never heard of them and asked about the other shows I'd seen during my hard-rock career. He was mightily impressed. He talked a little about the few shows he'd seen, and then he went back to nail biting. I decided to leave me alone; I was always freaked out when strange bald guys talked to me at shows when I was his age. I thought they were all tough and hardcore and stuff.

Rob Schulze

The truth is, though, that I'm not tough at all. i simply inherited the Schulze family hairline, which began receding when I was 16. I don't have body piercings because I'm a self-immolating rebel; I have them because my girlfriend likes them, and I would walk on my tongue through a broken-glass-covered field of raw sewage and battery acid for that girl. I was wearing a black shirt because my white one was in the wash. And yet I knew that I was looking at me that way, because that was the way I looked at guys like me when I was that young.

It's startling how much you change form when you're a sophomore in high school to when you're a sophomore in college. Looking back I barely recognize myself in that brooding ball of hostility and hormones, which i remember myself being.

"Looking back I barely recognize myself in that brooding ball of hostility and hormones, which I remember myself being."

For one thing, i wore black t-shirts every day. Every day, the depths of the Massachusetts winter included. I had a plain black one, two AC/DC ones and a Megadeth one, which i wore day in and day out, clean or not. i could wear them in the middle of winter because I also wore a massive full-on biker rebel leather jacket. My hair was a longish mess, occasionally washed.

I never smiled. My world was one I didn't care for very much. Except for a few people in my headbanger clique I didn't care for people. I didn't like school because I was so socially awkward. I was a straight-A student that said nothing at all in class because – and I want you to follow me closely here – there were girls there. Girls terrified me. I am still not an eloquent speaker, but I've made my peace with it; then I felt it very keenly, and would turn bright red before I even started talking because i knew i was going to embarrass myself and would get all frustrated and angry before I even opened my mouth, especially if girls were around.

That isn't to say that nothing made me happy. Some people are music fans – I lived for it. It's kind of hard to swallow now when it seems kind of ridiculous to me, but if you had insulted my music when i was 15 or 16, I would have fought you. Metal was my life, and I was the world's worst intolerant Puritan when it came to it. If it wasn't full, balls-on hard rock that you were listening to, it sucked, you were a pussy, etc. Anything that even had a keyboard in it i wouldn't give a chance, let alone anything rap-tinged or something like that.

I dreamed of meeting 311 in an alley and ripping their tongues out.

I was a total, utter, fully realized loser. And my hair was always greasy.

Well, I guess some things never change. But except for the loser part it's kind of strange how much i'm no longer the me I met at that show. i guess I may have matured just a little. The last few years of high school and all of college have just been very positive, growing experiences. i don't mean to get all chicken-soup-for-the-soul on you or anything, but it's really true. People grow up.

But do you know what the coolest experience was? His friends and me were all watching me out of the corner of their eyes the whole time. Whatever I did they would do a little later (and I will admit that I tested this theory by doing things that nobody actually would do unless they were making the people who are copying him look like fools). And really, if a guy as cool as the 15-year-old version of me can look up to me I must not have turned out to be that bad.

Just one more thing while i'm lingering on sophomore in high school memories: I heard recently that the girl in my Geometry class who broke my heart all those four years ago got kicked out of her little community college. My reaction: HAHAHAHAHAHA!

Rob Schulze is a Collegian columnist.

©2000 BY MATT GROENING

Attention perceptive thinkers!

If you are a person who likes to keep up with current events and has interesting opinions about them, the ed/op page is looking for your submissions. Columns should be between 800 and 1000 words on a topic of interest relevant to students on this campus. It should be well organized and your opinion should be clearly stated and supported with facts. We would like a copy printed on paper and a copy on disk saved in Word or RTF format. Both the disk and paper copy should have your name and phone number on them. Drop them off in the ed/op mailbox in the Collegian offices. Any questions? Talk to Gary, Alexis, or Rob.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Sam Wilkinson Managing Editor Shawn Ilinitch Business Manager
Ben Alamed Web Developer Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager
Sage Brousseau Co-Advertising Production Manager Jake Lilien Senior Diversity Editor

David Troupes Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Yunkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jake Lilien Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jeanie Gorlovsky Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sasha Senderovich Jewish Affairs Editor
Mariele Scherzinger Multicultural Affairs Editor
Adam Martignetti Co-News Editor
Melissa Hammel Co-News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Adam White Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor
Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Christine Connare Women's Issues Editor
Marc Menichel Finance Manager
Joshua Szymanski Distribution Manager
Katie Belth Promotions Manager
Catherine Turner International Affairs Editor
Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Chris Brennan Assistant Finance Manager
Eric Faber Assistant Advertising Manager
Amy Gargunta Assistant Business Manager

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Vermont – the progressive state?

(U-WIRE) LOS ANGELES – Although the passage of the California Defense of Marriage Act may have appeared as a triumph for homophobic America, it has become a fleeting victory for others. Eight days after the passage of Proposition 22, the state of Vermont created an alternative to gay marriage by approving legislature that would legalize gay "civil unions."

The Vermont House of Representatives voted 78 to 69, on March 16 to forward the bill to the State Senate, where it is expected to win approval by the end of April. If the bill allowing gays to form "civil unions" passes, Vermont will have gone further than any other state in recognizing same-sex couples.

Gay couples that form these civil unions would be entitled to about 300 state rights available to married couples, in such areas as inheritance, property transfers, medical decisions, insurance and taxes. Although the federal government will not recognize such unions with regard to immigration rights, Social Security or federal taxes, gay rights advocates still praise the Vermont bill as a first step in gaining equality.

" Opponents of gay marriage contend that homosexual marriages threaten the sanctity of marriage. Supposedly, marriage is a pious union, one that should be upheld as a marker of our society's moral fiber."

Tejal Bhirud

By granting gay couples rights that they have been systematically denied by the government, Vermont has taken significant strides in creating equitable legislation. By denying gays rights afforded to every other citizen, California has made clear that it is a state that publicly promotes sexuality-based discrimination. However, rather than publicize Proposition 22 as a bill that denies legal rights, it is depicted as the "California Defense of Marriage Act," a law that protects the "sanctity" of marriage.

Another history lesson for future youth. It is an example of how the American government denies legal rights to minorities under the guise of "sanctity." It was only 50 years ago when California banned interethnic marriages through anti-miscegenation laws that strove to uphold the "sanctity" and "purity" of white America. The denial of legal rights to gay Americans is a consequence of the same types of prejudice.

While Vermont has risen above the denial of legal rights based on bigotry, it has not yet risen above prejudice in its terminology. By using the term "civil union," Vermont implies that gay relationships do not deserve the "sanctity" of marriage. Although the bill pushes Vermont to the edge of recognizing gay marriage, lawmakers still sought to preserve the term "marriage" for heterosexual relationships by adding an amendment clarifying that position. It is a subtle but significant step.

Opponents of gay marriage contend that homosexual marriages threaten the sanctity of marriage. Supposedly, marriage is a pious union, one that should be upheld as a marker of our society's moral fiber. It would seem that we, as a country, would strive for reforms that would confer marriage with the morality that it presently lacks. Instead, Americans choose to blame gay marriages as the source of the deterioration of family values.

Amidst the debate regarding gay marriage, the battle for regaining America's family values continues. Politicians call for a return to marriage in order to discourage the fad of "living in sin." Yet, there are gay couples who desire to bless their relationships with the moral union of marriage and are denied this right. As a threat to the sanctity of marriage, gay couples are forced to "live in sin." In essence, America promotes immorality under the guise of protecting sanctity.

Although the Vermont law does not allow gay couples the right to form unions under the moral covenant of marriage, its passage is still a victorious step toward attaining greater legal equity. It is still an open question whether couples from another state might be able to enter into civil unions in Vermont and have them recognized in their home state. Thus, Proposition 22 has protected Californians from the "threat" of gay marriages, but it serves no protection against "civil unions." As a result, the controversy will continue to rage in California until we decide that we do not have the right to deny legal benefits based on discriminatory tendencies.

Same-sex marriage is an issue that has the country running around in circles; maybe Vermont will provide the first step toward concerted action.

Tejal Bhirud writes for the University of Southern California's Daily Trojan.

Here's to you, Mr. Robinson

Jack F. Robinson is on a political kamikaze mission and his plane has a few extra bombs strapped to it. Robinson has entered the race for Senator Ted Kennedy's seat in Congress, and frankly he is going to be beaten so badly that he won't be able to sit in his own chair let alone Teddy's. Robinson has a laundry list of past problems that range from domestic disputes to plagiarism charges and not being one to disappoint I will have something to say about all of them.

Brian Lohnes

Currently Robinson resides in Connecticut, that's right, not Massachusetts. He is going to move in with his parents who do live in Massachusetts. Is this starting to sound like a bad movie or what? Robinson has no political experience of any kind. He established Cellular One Caribbean, and in 1980 he was actually the Vice-President of the Brown Republican Club during Ronald Regan's campaign... talk about qualified. Recently, a lot of information became available about Robinson that he hadn't really planned to get into. Instead of doing the honorable thing and covering up the dirt facts he met them head on, the equivalent of trying to stop a speeding train by standing in front of it. The fact that this guy wants to spend a million of his own dollars to beat Kennedy is not only humorous but it's downright foolish. Kennedy has been in the Senate for over thirty years and this guy thinks he is going to waltz into town and beat him. Let's take this guy's past from the top.

Okay, Robinson graduated from law school in 1985, and he didn't pass the Massachusetts bar exam until 1991. Why you ask? The delay was due to the fact that he took the New York and Texas bar exams twice and flunked both times. But then again, he has a few extra bombs strapped to it. Robinson has entered the race for Senator Ted Kennedy's seat in Congress, and frankly he is going to be beaten so badly that he won't be able to sit in his own chair let alone Teddy's. Robinson has a laundry list of past problems that range from domestic disputes to plagiarism charges and not being one to disappoint I will have something to say about all of them.

Up close and personal with Bush guitarist Nigel Pulsford

By Ryan Benharris
Collegian Staff

There's no doubt that Bush is back. In October of 1999, the band released The Science of Things, their third studio album. After two singles, and some high profile appearances that included a trip to Woodstock '99 and a New Year's Eve performance for MTV, the British superstars have revitalized the music that's been missing for the past two years. On March 23, Bush kicked off their Campus Invasion tour in Florida to a sold out crowd. The tour which includes Moby, finds the closest stop to Amherst in Providence RI at Providence College. Last week, I had the great fortune to talk with Bush's guitarist Nigel Pulsford. Pulsford had quite a bit to say about the band's past, as well as their goals for the future.

Promoting the new album must be the first thing on the band's mind. After being away for so long it is essential that they get the sound out into the open for the public to open its arms to. Pulsford said that promotion for the new disc has been going very well. He said the band has just finished touring Europe and is very eager to get back in the States to keep moving.

Bush's last two albums, Sixteen Stone and Razorblade Suitcase have had tremendous amounts of success. Difficulty will always follow when a band has had prominent triumphs like the first two albums. When Pulsford was asked to look at the new CD in comparison to the last two, he replied, "It's a bit off, and there are a few different things that will embellish our fans, but it's our progression. I think my favorite song off the album is 'Dead Meat.' I like what I played on it, and it has a nice mixture from soft sounds to hard sounds."

After and extensive worldwide tour, the band has finally returned to the United States. The last time they were here, they were promoting Razorblade Suitcase. The tour actually ended in Mansfield, Mass. at Great Woods. When Pulsford was asked to comment on the different fan responses he receives in the US from anywhere else in the world, he said, "There isn't really too much of a difference. They either love our music or they hate us. The fans in Portugal seemed to be much more passionate, and the Latin countries are more passionate as well." He also added that the band, which formed in 1992 when he met lead singer Gavin Rossdale, gets along very well.

Nigel Pulsford and lead singer Gavin Rossdale head up the return of Bush and their new album.

The upcoming tour that the band has planned is quite unique. It includes some very tiny venues at some major universities. Pulsford proclaims that the band has lots of surprises in store for this tour. He said, "[We plan to] represent ourselves as well we can." He also added that there will be a good mixture of songs from the three albums as well as some new cover songs. The band has been known to cover the Sex Pistols, REM, and a marvelous version of the Rolling Stones' "Wild Horses," that they played on "The Tonight Show With Jay Leno." Pulsford said they do not plan to specifically play any of the songs they have covered in the past, and have all new things in store. He said they are playing such small venues because they feel they need a chance to play smaller venues, and they're trying to build up steam and remind people they are still around.

Perhaps the most interesting aspect of the campus invasion tour, is the fact that Bush teams up with techno luminary Moby. Moby's most recent album Play has had perhaps the best reviews of any techno CD ever made. It was highlighted by a number of Grammy nominations, and a top twenty placement on Spin Magazine's top 100 albums of the 90's. Bush has been no stranger to the techno scene. In 1997, they released a remix album entitled Deconstructed to moderate success.

Pulsford said the two tremendous acts planned to team up because they have met before. Pulsford said, "He likes his (Moby's) music and his new album is great. We try to play with new people and introduce people to things that are new." When Pulsford was asked if he would be playing on stage with Moby, he said it would not be happening due to time constraints. He said that Bush does not intend to incorporate any techno mixing into any of their sets.

If nothing else, the simple fact remains that Bush is back, and on Friday night they will bring their tremendous hard rock sound to Rhode Island. The fact that Moby is on the ticket only adds to the greatness that Bush always brings with them. Nigel Pulsford seems very confident that even after nine years together, the band is headed in the right direction. It was surely an honor to be speaking with him, and our discussion only made my loyalty for Bush even stronger.

Phish drummer leads Pork Tornado

By David Siegel
Collegian Staff

Pork Tornado
Pearl Street Night Club
March 25, 2000

On Saturday Night, Pork Tornado rolled into a packed house at the Pearl Street Night Club, putting on a marathon show that covered a wide array of music types and genres. Much of the crowd was obviously there to see famed drummer Jon Fishman from the band Phish, but as the show progressed the other members of the band won the crowd over. The rest of the band is made up of four other solid musicians with Joe Moore on sax, and and steamy funk vocals, Dan Archer on guitar, Phil Abair on the keys and Aaron Hersey thumping away on the bass and vocals. Pork Tornado blends together a smooth jazz and blues feel to their original songs as well as to their eccentric selection of cover tunes.

The band came to the stage to a roaring ovation, overwhelmingly for the quirky Fishman. They opened up with a hip song, giving each member of the band an opportunity to showcase their skills and introduce themselves to the crowd. Fishman received the most attention as he laid down a sweet groove that eventually the whole band joined in to jam on. Next up was the first cover of the night, a funky grooved out edition of Frank Zappa's "Trouble Every Day." Throughout the first set, the highlight for me was Aaron Hersey's phat bass grooves and his sweet vocals. A few songs later came a great cover of Maceo Parker's "Shake Everything You Got" with a quick tease to Hendrix's Voodoo Child. Next up was a crazy version of Tom Jones' "Hooked On a Feeling."

The drummer for the most popular band on the planet came around town with his band Pork Tornado last week

The next set began the set with the band's catchy theme song "Pork Tornado." Next up was a Phil Abair's original "I Heard You Twice" with a skillful keyboard solo and his smooth soulful vocals. Following that was an awesome blues song with beautiful finger work by Dan Archer on guitar. For the next song, keyboardist Phil Abair was temporarily replaced by local Agawam High School English teacher Mark Scortino sitting in with one of his favourite bands. He sat in for James Brown's classic hit, "Sex Machine." The second set ended with the song everyone came to hear, Kool and the Gang's "Jungle Boogie" where the band welcomed a gang of girls to dance onstage.

Overall, I would say that Pork Tornado is a solid house band with a phenomenal rhythm section that carries the rest of the band.

Oizo and Armada Groove

By Michael Delano
Collegian Staff

MR. OIZO
Analog Worms Attack
Mute

GROOVE ARMADA
Vertigo
BMG/Jive

"What the hell is this?" is the response I usually encounter whenever I have Mr. Oizo running through my speakers. For those unfamiliar with techno or newbies raised solely on a diet of Moby and Fatboy Slim, Oizo's minimalist approach to electronica can certainly seem like a drag. No "funk soul brother" samples, no badrocking. Mr. Oizo is more akin to the thoughtful approach to drum and bass a la Luke Vibert than the bouncing house of Daft Punk. And anyone who can appreciate music like Plug knows that the payoff is in the subtleties of the music and in the atmosphere that is created and then explored. And Mr. Oizo has quite an interesting atmosphere to explore on his debut full-length Analog Worms Attack.

Mr. Oizo is actually French artist Quentin Dupieux, a figure who is riding a Spike Jonze-esque wave of hipness as of late. His experimentation with keyboards dates back to the mid-nineties, which resulted in two LP releases that received critical acclaim. During this time, Dupieux also started to direct music videos as well as commercials. All of his talents would converge for his breakthrough single "Flat Beat," which was used as the soundtrack to a massively successful European Levi's commercial starring a Dupieux-created puppet named Flat Eric. I haven't gotten a chance to see this commercial, but if it is anything like the video for "Flat Beat," included on Analog Worms Attack's enhanced CD, than it is sure to be absolutely hilarious. Flat Eric bobbing violently along to the repeating stynth is truly a sight you need to behold.

The catchy, lo-fi groove of "Flat Beat" is expanded upon on Analog Worms Attack to mostly good effect. The album is said to be a spoof of B-movie soundtracks, and while there is no real indication of that, besides the funny title, there is definitely a good amount of humor among Dupieux's compositions. A cute dialogue sample placed a few tracks in as well as the general light-hearted feel of the tracks create an enjoyable vibe in what could easily have been a somber experience. Aided by DJ Feadz, a hip-hop theme is definitely noticeable, especially on tracks like "Flat 55" and "Feadz on," the latter of which is an amazing showcase of Feadz's turntable mastery. The strength of tracks like those, as well as "Bad Start," "Monophonic Shit," and "The Salad" make up for areas where the album drags a little. There is more than enough here to warrant any techno fan's attention, and feel free to get on board now because when "Flat Beat" invades American television commercials, which it is planned to do, you won't be able to escape this attack.

However, if Fatboy-style electronica is what you crave, then the duo of Tom Findlay and Andy Cato should do the job nicely, even recruiting Norman Cook for an album-closing remix. Like the spacious, sparsely decorated apartment in the booklet and the laid-back look of the pair on the cover, London's Groove Armada gives off a feeling of groovy relaxation on their second release Vertigo. Strong hip-hop elements, soothing brass sounds, and some great samples make for a very interesting and repeatedly enjoyable release.

"Chicago" is a showy opener which displays the Armada's talent for crafting a song out of many disparate elements, while "Whatever, Whenever" is a straightforward hip-hop track with some great wordplay from rapper M.A.D. "Pre 65" is an amazing cut that words simply don't do justice; you must hear the beautiful collisions between horns, woodwinds, live and sampled drums, and Armada's techno for yourself.

Eventually Groove Armada had to throw something out for the dance floor, and although "If Everybody Looked the Same" is serviceable, the obvious dance hit from Vertigo is "I See You Baby." With some bouncy percussion and the unforgettable sample "I see you baby, shakin' that ass" courtesy of Giani na Funk, it's a sassy little catch that loses some its charm in Fatboy Slim's epic big-beat remix, but becomes even more dance-friendly in the process. "At the River" is undoubtedly the centerpiece of the album, a sprawling opus that progresses from bluesy horns to soulful vocals and truly showcases the massive talent at work.

Whether you prefer the loony, thinking-cap techno of Mr. Oizo or the soulful, dancefloor-happy beats of Groove Armada, there is no shortage of talent present, and for electronic music the year 2000 has gotten off to a great start.

Analog Worms Attack B Vertigo A-

Mr. Oizo likes to play with puppets. From this picture it's clear that he's not playing with a full deck.

THE LALLY SCHOOL
AT RENSSELAER
Management and technology.
Application and innovation.
GET THE JUMP
On The New Economy
The Lally School at Rensselaer.
Business savvy for a world gone digital.
The MBA@Rensselaer
why not change the world?™
Rensselaer
http://lallyschool.rpi.edu 518.276.6586

The Index Yearbook
UMASS
ATTENTION!!!
CLASS OF 2000
ABSOLUTE LAST CHANCE FOR SENIOR PORTRAITS
MARCH 27TH-31ST
Make your appointment now by calling 1-800-OUR-YEAR or log on to www.ouryear.com
School Access #147
(You need to know the access number when you make the appointment)
Order Your 2000 Yearbook ONLY $50.00
Log on to www.walsworth.com or Call 1-800-929-1503
(Service Charge of $2.95 for orders placed by phone)
DAVOR PHOTOGRAPHY
Walsworth Publishing Company

The University of Massachusetts
Something Every Friday
Presents
Richie Havens in Concert
Featuring vocalist: Dayna Kurtz
UMass Fine Arts Center Concert Hall
Friday March 31, 2000
8:00p.m.
Free to UMass Students; $5.00 General Public
Ruben Blades Concert, Clinic, & Lecture
Featuring "Editus"
UMass Fine Arts Center Concert Hall
Concert: Sunday April 2, 8:00pm
Musical Clinic: Monday April 3, 10am...Free
Lecture: Monday April 3, 1pm...Free
Concert Ticket Information:
Free to UMass Students with valid I.D.;
$5 Five-College Students
$10 General Public
Latin music performer, Ruben Blades is an accomplished singer/songwriter as well as actor and activist. Winner of 3-Grammy's and performed in over 20 movies.
Tickets for both programs on sale at FAC Boxoffice: 545-2511
Co-Sponsored by:
The Student Affairs Cultural Enrichment Fund: The UMass Arts Council; The Student Government Program Board; The Distinguished Visitors Program; The UMass Alumni Association; The UMass Cultural Centers;CASA Dominicana; SGA Finance Committee; the Latin American Studies Program; Umass Auxiliary Services; Campus Activities Cluster; the Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs; and the Commuter Area Government.

WEDNESDAY NIGHTS AT
fun•food•spirits
THE PUB
amherst
DRINK SPECIALS 24 Oz. Bud Lite Cans $3.75 24oz Miller Lite Cans $3.75
DRINK SPECIALS 20oz Miller Lite Drafts $1.99 16oz Rum and Coke $1.99
BRING YOUR FRIENDS
KAROAKE IS BACK!!!!
10 - 1 AM

THE MONKEY BAR & GRILLE
WEDNESDAY NIGHT IS LADIES NIGHT
FEATURING FREE PRIZES AND GIFT CERTIFICATES FROM
Zanna, Ultimate Fitness, Oasis Body Wraps, The Monkey Bar, Styles by Deborah, Aesthetics Skin + Body Care, and Pinocchio's
COME IN TONIGHT AND GET YOUR FREE PASS FOR IBIZA NIGHT
THURSDAY MARCH 30TH THE ULTIMATE CLUB NIGHT COMES TO AMHERST
AND AS USUAL ALL THE JAMZ SPUN BY DJ FOOZ
63 NORTH PLEASANT STREET 259-1600

Britney comes to Worcester

By Emily Vacanti
Collegian Staff

Britney Spears (with LFO)
Worcester Centrum
March 25, 2000

On Saturday night Britney Spears rocked the Worcester Centrum. It was a full house and it was clearly obvious why. The audience was not only younger boys and girls, but also a good number of 18 year-olds and up.

With LFO opening for Spears, everyone was easily able to get warmed up before she began to perform. LFO was easily recognized due to their hits "West Side Story" and "Summer Girls (I like girls who wear Abercrombie and Fitch)." LFO did an excellent job getting everyone up and excited. The choreography of their backup dancers was impressive. They were constantly performing different acrobatic moves like cartwheels and flips while spinning and throwing their legs up in the air. I was amazed.

With her amazing body and voice, Spears got everyone going. People all through the Centrum were dancing in the rows. She opened the show with "Crazy." Almost everyone was dancing and screaming during this song. Her ensemble was innocent, but daring. She wore a skintight white crop top with long sleeves and tassels on the arms. To my surprise, she recently has added a navel ring to her look. Her pants were also skintight and white. She looked gorgeous. For the first few songs she remained in this outfit and continued to rock the audience. The next few songs were mainly about falling in love and having your heart broken.

At one point she had a competition for the biggest heartbreaker. At that point her backup dancers went out into the audience searching for the biggest heartbreaker. They came up with four contenders. The winner was "Kurt." But instead of being a heartbreaker, he stated the he is a love maker (not to mention quite attractive). The audience went wild. As his prize, Britney dedicated her song about having her heart broken, "From The Bottom Of My Broken Heart," to him while singing to him, while she was seated next to him. This went over very well with the crowd. The majority of the boys and men in the audience were jealous of him. And I do have to admit that I was also quite jealous. At the end of that song she broke into a new set with another outfit. This outfit also looked amazing, and was much more daring. Everything was again skintight and cropped, but now her top was black with a red sparkly design and her pants were also black but with a red stripe.

Spears introduced two new songs that will be on her next album. They both went over exceptionally well. The first one was very slow and nice, a love song that will go over nicely with everyone. The second had a much faster beat. Per usual, she was flying all over the stage dancing to it. The second song, "Not So Innocent," will be the first single on her next album. Spears made a point of telling the audience that "Not So Innocent" was in no way about her. She claims to still be innocent, but she wanted a change of pace for this song. A change of pace is exactly what she accomplished. When she was actually singing the song before her explanation, I was surprised at the words and I was wondering if she had crossed the line and become "Not So Innocent." But her words after the song reassured me and gave me faith in her again.

Her last song was previously a single. She surprised us all by leaving "Sometimes" for the end of the show. The audience was again up and enjoying it. She was back in the white outfit from before. After "Sometimes" she was supposed to be done. But like with all concerts, she left only to tease us, and she came back after a couple of minutes. Her encore was, as expected, her smash hit, "...Baby One More Time." The audience went wilder during this song than during any other song that she performed. It seemed as though the whole audience was dancing. It felt amazing. The only thing that I did not like about her encore was her outfit. She wore a blue leather number. Again, a skintight crop top, but this time with tassels over her midriff, and blue leather pants that were tight around her butt and loose around her ankles (I've got good eyes).

Even though most of the audience looked as though they had a great time, two of the younger girls did not expect much due to the surprise of where their seats were located. Both Kelly Powers and Jillian Piwinski had the unfortunate luck of purchasing seats with an obstructed view. Their biggest gripe was that they had not been warned of the placement of their seats when they made the purchase. Both of the girls were under the impression that they had purchased relatively decent seats. Unfortunately the opposite was true. Though, as far as I could tell, the people working in the "Reserved Seats" booth took pity on them and found them better seats. It seems as though these girls hucked out.

For me, and what seemed to be the rest of the audience, the show was fun, amazing, everything that I expected and more. Seeing Britney Spears live was a true experience, and I ended up having a great time (thanks to Rob for the ticket and company). With all of the screaming girls around, one could get a headache, but fortunately, the sound of Britney's voice was louder and sweeter than most of the screaming.

It was a very enjoyable concert, and one that I'll never forget.

COURTESY JIVE RECORDS

As difficult as it is to find a picture of Britney Spears, here's one of the only photos in existence where she's showing off all of the talent she has. Spears impressed the crowd with her sparkly outfits and spicy dance moves.

Video Wars

By Martie Zad
The Washington Post

A bit of video history is being written this week as George Lucas' "Stars Wars: Episode One: The Phantom Menace" is released worldwide, marking the first time film fans around the globe are able to enjoy a new release in the same week.

The 1999 box-office champ was released yesterday in the United States and Canada. The pan-and-scan format of the two-hour, 13-minute movie is listed at $24.98.

Twentieth Century Fox Home Entertainment and Lucasfilm Ltd. also are releasing a wide-screen, video collectors edition (limit of 1.5 million) at $39.98 that includes an additional 12 minutes of behind-the-scenes documentary footage, a 48-page booklet and a strip of 35mm film from an original theatrical movie print. No DVD release is scheduled for this year.

"Episode 1" is closing in on $1 billion at the box office, second only to "Titanic," with a $430 million gross in North America and $492 million internationally, as of March.

"Star Wars: Episode 1: The Phantom Menace" is a journey back to the beginning of the "Star Wars" saga and the meeting of young Anakin Skywalker and then-young Jedi knight Obi-Wan Kenobi, a union that will change the course of galactic history.

The film, written and directed by Lucas and produced by Rick McCallum, stars Liam Neeson, Ewan McGregor, Natalie Portman, Jake Lloyd, Ian McDiarmid, Samuel L. Jackson, Terrence Stamp and Pernilla August.

National Geographic Video has two releases, "2000: Amazing Moments in Time" and "Hindenburg's Fiery Secret," that measure up to the quality of this series. John Lithgow narrates the 90-minute "Moments," venturing back to the beginning of the universe.

Collegian Arts

Council Travel
America's Student Travel Leader for over 50 years

The journey is the reward...
Give your family & friends the gift of travel
Gift certificates, passport photos, airport transfers, tours, language programs, work exchanges, ISIC backpacks, rolling duffels, & all sorts of gear, guidebooks, railpasses, tickets, accommodations and more.
44 Main Street
Amherst MA
413-256-1261
www.counciltravel.com

listen up class of 2000!

because...

someone's gotta win an incredible trip for ten to europe and it might as well be you!

graduation countdown
class of 2000 network
graduation announcements
online gift registry
real world guide
careers
and a whole lot more

log on now
umass.eGrad2000.com
from your friends at

enter to win a vacation for ten to europe including hotel, airfare, eurail pass, digital camera and more!

egrad2000.com
The right start in the real world."
JOBTRAK.COM
"The best site for students & grads looking for their first job."
- Forbes Magazine

Toad Guthridge turns to prince

By Michael Wilbon
The Washington Post

Just three weeks ago, one topic dominated conversation at the ACC tournament in Charlotte: Bill Guthridge's expected departure from North Carolina. After the worst basketball season in many a year, would he be forced out or would he jump? Would Dean Smith intervene on behalf of his longtime lieutenant? Would Roy Williams leave Kansas and return to Chapel Hill where he, too, had assisted Smith?

What if Williams didn't want to leave Kansas; would Larry Brown leave the 76ers to finish his distinguished career at North Carolina? Would the powers-that-be at Carolina even look outside the family? Would they ever consider a guy such as Rick Pitino, should he want out of his Boston Celtics contract?

They wouldn't ever consider a Pinckie such as Tommy Amaker, even though he's one of the bright young coaches in America, would they? I mean the Tar Heels were so unprepared Carolina had to do something about Guthridge, right?

It's all we talked about. By week's end, everybody media folks, ACC officials, coaches and athletic department officials from other conference schools and, of course, the fans who uttered some pretty brutal insults. It became all-consuming, particularly after North Carolina lost an opening-round tournament game to Wake Forest.

Goodness, it didn't even look like a North Carolina team the way the players hosted up crazy shots with no apparent fear of consequences from the Head Coach. There were editorials in state newspapers that said the Tar Heels didn't deserve an at-large big to the NCAA tournament after that loss to Wake. And we all know who had to suffer the hit, right? Coach Gut. Uncle Bill. Nice guy, job too big.

When Smith, during one pep talk, reminded Guthridge that early-on Smith was hanged in effigy in North Carolina, Guthridge said, "Being hanged in effigy would be fine... Just as long as they don't hang me for real."

No matter what happens this weekend in Indianapolis, Guthridge won't be hanged – he'll be serenaded, maybe given a parade. That's what four victories in March will do, change virtually everyone's perception, and change a 62-year-old man's life. North Carolina and Guthridge, with 13 losses, are still vying for the national title.

This month alone is Hollywood stuff. March began for Carolina with the depressing loss to Wake Forest in the ACC tournament. The Tar Heels beat Missouri in the first round of the NCAA tournament, then upset Stanford, the No. 1 seed in the South Region. But Guthridge had almost no time to savor making the Sweet 16 because last Wednesday his 90-year-old mother, Betty, died. She was buried Monday in Parsons, Kan.

The Tar Heels already had become closer from dealing with the criticism following the 18-13 regular season. After all, one more loss and it would have been the most defeats since 1951-52. But after winning two games, then rallying around Guthridge in the wake of his mother's death, the Tar Heels found themselves on something of a crusade, and eliminated Tennessee in the regional semifinal, followed by Tulsa.

What happened? "We just became a team," point guard Ed Cota said. "We finally just got it together, and there can't be a better time for this."

Guthridge has been asked a hundred times how his team could go from performing so poorly late in the season to beating Missouri, Stanford, Tennessee and Tulsa. "I pushed the wrong buttons," he has said repeatedly. "It's my responsibility."

But the players have been quick to shoulder the blame, and they should. Cota turned into a turnover machine late in the season. Brendan Haywood and Kris Lang were loud-mouth trash-talkers who turned soft as Charmin when it came time to let their actions speak. Jason Capel was dazzling at times as a freshman, but didn't appear to get any better as a sophomore. A freshman, Joseph Forte, had to bail them out more times than a freshman should.

Even now, Guthridge protects his players. He ripped his decision to leave Haywood in with four fouls against Tennessee. After Haywood fouled out, Guthridge said his decision "backfired."

Of course, not much is going wrong when you've won four straight in the middle of March. It has turned into the warm and fuzzy story of the biggest weekend of the season, even with the death of Betty Guthridge. Larry Brown just signed a new contract to stay in Philly. Everybody's talking about what wonderful freshmen and sophomores Roy Williams has at Kansas.

Six days before the Final Four, I am again wondering about Bill Guthridge's potential departure from North Carolina basketball. I am wondering, if the Tar Heels win the national championship Monday night, whether Guthridge will call a news conference to announce he is going out on top of college basketball to provide this story with just about the only fitting ending.

Cleaves is winning ugly, but he's winning, okay?

By Scott Howard-Cooper
Los Angeles Times

The shot comes from near the right temple, sometimes an ear-high fling and other times, when extra propellant is needed on a three-pointer, from closer to the shoulder, when it looks as if he's pushing the ball. Pretty it is not.

The turnovers just come. Ten last season against Temple. Nine this season against Indiana. Six against Ohio State. Seven against Connecticut. And, in the biggest game, five – and only two assists – last Saturday in the Elite Eight against Iowa State.

The success comes from within. Through attitude and determination, senior point guard Mateen Cleaves has willed, demanded, dragged, inspired and threatened his Michigan State teammates to either within an inch of their lives or a national championship. A player who has been hearing for years about his ugly game for some reason has decided not to quit.

Of course, it can be tough to hear that stuff at the Final Four, what with all the hoopla about success and people saying how he's the guts of the Spartans, aesthetics be damned. This makes two consecutive trips, something no other team can claim, for the Spartans, who play Big Ten foe Wisconsin on Saturday at Indianapolis.

"He doesn't worry about any of that," said Charlie Bell, the other starter in the backcourt. "He knows what he can do out there. He's our leader."

Has been for years. A fire hydrant at 6-foot-2 and 205 pounds – star forward Morris Peterson is five inches taller and 10 pounds heavier – Cleaves has always been respected for what he means to Michigan State.

Two years ago, he shot 40 percent, was named second-team All-American and Big Ten Player of the Year, and then finished the season by making seven of 21 shots against North Carolina in the East Regional semifinals. In 1998-99, he shot 40.6 percent overall and 29.2 percent on three-pointers, had a weak assists-to-turnovers ratio of 1.9-1, and was named first-team All-American and conference Player of the Year.

Then the critics found something to ponder. Cleaves missed the first 13 games this season because of a stress fracture in his right foot, and the Spartans lost to Texas in Puerto Rico, Arizona in Tucson and Kentucky in Lexington, losses that were understandable. But then they scored 49 points and lost to Wright State on Dec. 30, and the sirens started wailing.

Even an out-of-commission Cleaves caught flak. Cries that he blew it by not jumping to the NBA after the run to the national semifinals – and a loss to Duke – in his junior season were commonplace. He heard those comments too. Paid them about the same attention he paid the others.

"At that time, I still felt like I had made the best decision, he says now. "A lot of people did call me and I heard a lot where, 'You should have left for the pros. You can always come back and get your degree.' That type of thing. But I don't want to grow up too fast. I want to enjoy my time while I'm in college. The money is great, but I believe if you work hard, it'll come. People said, 'You should have left.' Well, I just would have been in the NBA with some money (and) a broken foot."

Before the Big Ten opener Jan. 5, the Spartans were 9-4. In the next 24 games, with Cleaves back in harness, in a minefield of a conference, they lost only three times – at then-No. 13 Ohio State, to Elite Eight-bound Purdue and in overtime at No. 16 Indiana.

The tournament has been so typical for Cleaves. In a bit of an upset, he made seven of 11 shots, four of seven three-pointers, in the second-round victory over Utah, but made the biggest impact by getting in the faces of Bell and Peterson, for all to see, during a second-half timeout. That shook the – Spartans from an early malaise.

A game later, against Syracuse, he made only four of 12 shots but delivered a scathing halftime speech that jump-started the comeback from a 10-point deficit. After that one, Coach Tom Izzo came off like Good Cop to his players.

Around East Lansing, Mich., they're about to send Cleaves out on the motivational circuit, or at the very least will make a "Best of ..." tape. So he made only four of 12 shots against Iowa State, had five turnovers and only two assists. No one blinked, because he ran the point to near precision in the final minutes and did a good job all night of keeping Cyclone Jamaal Tinsley out of the lane.

■ lax

continued from page 14

game, the latter coming with just one second remaining in the half.

Even still, Camella was not satisfied.

"I think it's all in the attitude. There needs to be a killer instinct out there," he said. "When you get a team on the ropes out there, you got to put them away and we didn't do that. We kind of lost our focus after the first period."

BC crawled to within 12-5, but then the Minutemen smelled potential upset intentions before gutting the Eagles with a four-goal run midway through the final period. Racioppi and Janowicz scored about a minute apart before Madigan completed a hat trick of his own to give the Maroon and White their first two-figure lead.

Highly-touted freshman Kevin Leveille broke out of his scoring funk, chalking up his first collegiate goal with two minutes left in the third, which was followed by Madigan's second of the evening on a pretty wraparound. Chris Fiore and Paul Hutchen closed out the scoring column.

The next test comes in State College, Pa. when the Minutemen take on the Nittany Lions of Penn State. It will mark both squads' return to conference play. PSU stands at 3-5 and 0-2 in the ECAC.

yardgLasses.com
a division of restaurantchairs.com

Collegian Sports needs reliable writers. 545-1851

11.99 cd — DAY ONE, Ordinary Man
13.99 cd — DJ DAN, Another Late Night
13.99 cd — DIESELBOY, System Upgrade
13.99 cd — JANIS IAN, God & The FBI
13.99 cd — DR. JOHN, Duke Elegant
13.99 cd — CRAZY TOWN, The Gift Of Game
13.99 cd — ROBERT BRADLEY'S BLACKWATER SURPRISE, Time To Discover
24.99 cd (2-CD SET) — VARIOUS ARTISTS, Machine Soul: An Odyssey Into Electronic Dance Music

Visit our Jam Central department. Guitars, amps, drumsets, sheet music and more

MEDIA PLAY
Your Entertainment Superstore
For the store nearest you, call toll-free 1-888-60-MEDIA.
MediaPlay.com
Product selection and pricing may vary online.
Cassettes available on select titles. 807430 2416
Sale ends April 8, 2000

1 — 1ST FARE FULL PRICE
2 — 2ND FARE 50% OFF
FREE — 3RD FARE FREE!

THANKS TO AMTRAK® SPRING 1-2-FREE FARES, IT'S EASY TO TAKE YOUR BUDDIES ON THE ROAD.

Like saving money? We sense a lot of heads bobbing "Yes!". Well, thanks to Amtrak® Spring 1-2-Free Fares, the first fare is full price, the second fare is 50% off, and the third is free. Even if just two people are traveling, it's a terrific offer. But don't wait. Seats are limited. Amtrak Spring 1-2-Free Fares must be reserved by May 13 for travel March 11 - June 10, 2000. Reservations required 14 days in advance of travel. For more information, call your travel agent or Amtrak at 1-800-USA-RAIL. Train departs from the Amtrak station at Railroad St. in Amherst.

FROM AMHERST TO:	First Ticket	Second Ticket	Third Ticket
New York	$44	$22	FREE

Choose from over 500 destinations!

Amtrak
A PROUD SPONSOR OF MAJOR LEAGUE BASEBALL
www.amtrak.com

Tickets must be purchased within 3 days of reservation. Blackouts apply to travel 4/20/2000-4/24/2000 and 5/26/2000-5/30/2000. Full-fare passengers and companions must travel together on same itinerary and are subject to same restrictions, blackouts and exchange fees as any other adult passenger. Additional charges apply for First Class and other accommodations. Not valid on any time for travel on AutoTrain®, Metroliner® Service, Friday/Sunday passes on Northeast Direct®, Acela® Regional, joint ventures/AVIA Rail Canada services to or from Ontario Canada, shuttle-ride fares or YOSC fares. Minimum of 14 days advance reservations required on all trains including unreserved service. Fares non-refundable once purchased and subject to change fees if applicable. Amtrak Spring 1-2-Free Fares cannot be combined with other promotions, offers or standard Amtrak discounts. Fares based on availability and are subject to change without notice. ® & ™ trademarks and copyrights are used with permission of Major League Baseball Properties, Inc. • National Railroad Passenger Corporation

■ Equestrian club

continued from page 14

the horses do all the work," Wagner said. "That's not true. You've got to have the horse balanced between your legs. Everything you do has to be a precise movement."

The magnitude of those precise movements was clear on Saturday, as club secretary Rachel Stoloff rode through Intermediate Fences on a mount dubbed "Danny." The horse's enthusiasm was clear to all those surrounding the barn fences as he galloped through each corner, and only the deftest of direction from Stoloff kept Danny in his rhythm over the eight-fence course.

Precision. Balance. Skill. Another first place run.

"He was very consistent, but I really had to ride him strong," said sophomore Stoloff. "He was a little quick, so I had to control his rhythm by half-halting with the reins."

Perhaps the most remarkable aspect of the success of the UMass riders is the fact that they triumph through teamwork with a virtual stranger. The host team provides the horses, which are assigned through a blind-draw process. The riders are given a list with descriptions of each animal, but aren't allowed to touch the horses prior to competing, much less warm up on them. That creates a unique situation for both rider and mount, who must establish a near-perfect working relationship in a matter of moments.

"Horses are a lot like people, because each has his own personality," Coach Schurink said. "It's the luck of the draw, and then the two have to get to know each other in 10 minutes. If they get off on the wrong foot, it can make all the difference."

That unfamiliarity can also add an element of danger to the sport, according to junior Megan Meserve. "You come draw a horse that you don't know, then go jump eight fences with him," Meserve said. "Of course it can be dangerous."

The steeds provided by Smith this weekend were a diverse mix of sizes, colorings and temperaments. The smallest – a Norwegian Fjord named Uri – weighs in at just under 1,000 pounds, while goliath Yankee tips the scales at nearly twice that. Thoroughbred Danny stands a full six hands (about two feet) taller than the diminutive, barrel-shaped Uri, making for some interesting pairings come draw time.

"You try to find a horse that's built like you; it just works better," said Smith's Lydia Ixmer. "UMass has some really nice horses. They're all Morgans, and they're really comfortable."

The quality of UMass' steeds is one of many perks that has attracted a bevy of talented newcomers to the program. Despite a highly competitive selection process (about 60-percent of those who try out in the fall don't make it), the University has garnered several new faces largely due to the strength of the Equestrian Club. Plymouth native Linn Giovanetti had a full dozen years of riding experience behind her when she chose UMass, and an exciting freshman year on the team has her thinking it was a no-brainer after all.

"I loved the facility – it was just awesome," Giovanetti reflected after capturing first in Advanced Walk-Trot-Canter on Saturday. "The campus was nice, too. But the girls on the team have turned out to be the best thing about it. I love them all."

Another first-year collegiate rider, Stephanie Davis of Leominster, used the Smith show to ascend classes and up the ante for future competition: Davis pointed out of the Walk-Trot class and will now try to make her mark in Walk-Trot-Canter. "That was definitely a goal for me today," Davis said.

The club's lone male competitor, Eric Berns of Millbury, also left an impression on the judges at Smith. The junior walked off with a ribbon after a third-place ride through Beginner Walk-Trot-Canter.

"We call Eric 'the Minuteman'," joked teammate and Wisconsin original Tracy White, herself a place winner in Intermediate Fences.

Nearing the end of Saturday's show, Lilien-Zwiebel had little chance to savor her fence win from earlier. She had drawn "Cecil" as her steed for the flat competition, a sizeable horse that had been giving riders fits all afternoon with his excitable manor. The petite freshman perched rigidly atop Cecil with a look of pure concentration throughout the class, as the feisty horse strained against her control in an effort to break free and simply run.

But the sun was indeed shining down upon Lilien-Zwiebel on this the day, the day before her nineteenth birthday, with her coach beaming at her from the other side of the rail fence, she captured first place and her second blue ribbon of the show.

"I was surprised, because I thought [Cecil] being bad would affect the judges. I had seen him taking off with other riders," Lilien Zwiebel said. "He was trying to take off on me, getting quicker and quicker. And he was backing. So I just tried to be soft, give him half-halts, and not tense up on him. And I guess it worked."

So what kind of advice could her coach possibly have for her after such a seemingly perfect run?

"He told me I need to smile more," said Lilien-Zwiebel, obeying her mentor's words.

■ NHL

continued from page 14

tion themselves.

Look for Bourque to simply try to will the Avalanche into the Finals, because it's doubtful he'll settle for anything less.

Meanwhile back in the Hub, the Boston management continued its rebuilding by dishing grits forward Rob DiMaio to the New York Rangers for strapping winger Mike Knuble. Knuble gives the Bruins some much needed size, while the physically diminutive DiMaio gets to hook up with ex-Bruin Tim Taylor, which also gives the Rangers two-thirds of last season's Bruins penalty killing unit.

It is a good trade for both teams, as they try to sneak into the final playoff berth.

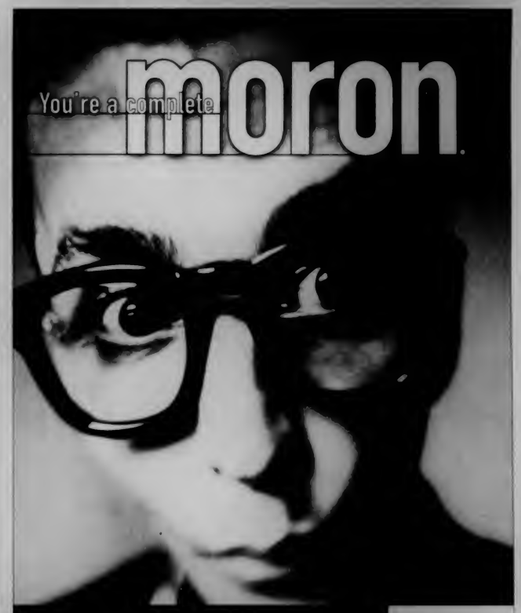
The Pittsburgh Penguins sent Acton-Boxboro alum Tom Barrasso to the Ottawa Senators for Ron Tugnutt. The last time Barrasso turned in a big playoff performance and won a Cup was last century, and it doesn't look like it's going to happen again anytime soon.

Tugnutt, of the 80-save performance against the Bruins a while back, was a steal for the Penguins. He is a solid starter and excellent backup for Jean-Sebastien Aubin, the Penguins young phenom in net. While Barrasso has the experience, it's doubtful that he'll be able to guide the Senators deep into the playoffs.

The Washington Capitals are showing the stuff that took them to the Stanley Cup Finals back in 1998. A renewed commitment to defense and an opportunistic offense makes this team the Eastern Conference's version of the Dallas Stars. With Olaf Kolzig running hot, this team is geared up for the playoffs. This team is going to make some noise this year.

Alex Wood is a Collegian columnist.

Plan Ahead For Next Year...
Excellent Location... 7 Mile From UMass
Spacious Apartments - 1, 2 and 3 Bedroom Townhouse
All Rents Include Heat, Hot Water and Cooking Gas
PUFFTON VILLAGE
Office Hours: 8 am to 4:30 pm Monday - Friday
(413) 549-0145



YANKEE CANDLE
Be part of a Scent-Sational Team!
One of America's fastest-growing businesses is now accepting applications for our exciting
PAID SUMMER INTERNSHIP/CO-OP PROGRAM
in the following areas of the company:
• MARKETING • FINANCE/ACCOUNTING
• ENGINEERING • INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY
Interviews will be scheduled at the Career Services Office for Friday, April 7th.
For more information, please contact the Career Services Office at 545-6265 or apply online at www-ccn.acad.umass.edu
YCC NYSE
For a complete listing of current employment opportunities, please call the Yankee Candle jobline at 800-839-6038 and select menu option 4.
www.yankeecandle.com

Apply Now for Best Locations
Apartment Rentals
Location Locations Locations
Check them out:
www.amherstlincolnreality.com
or call
Lincoln Real Estate
253 - 7879

Castaway Lounge
Proudly Presents.
Monday April 3
Amateur Night
1st Place $200
2nd Place $100
3rd Place $50
Rt. 5 & 10 Whately, MA (413) 665-8733

FEATURED ITEM THIS WEEK

Take an additional $5 off
ALL MESH SHORTS
Regular Prices from $29.99-$19.99
Champion, Dodger, Cotton Exchange, Atlantic Sportswear
COLLEGIATE Castrals
UMass Clothing for Everyone
M-Th 8:30-6 Fri. 8:30-5
Sat. 11 to 4
(413) 545 - 2619
THE University Store
Not like a mall... Better.

But don't worry. 'Cause now you can have access to the latest research in an easy-to-use search tree. Academic Edition. Created from thousands of magazines, journals and newspapers. Made fresh daily. And all yours.
sixdegrees.com/research
SEARCH ENGINE ACADEMIC EDITION
SEARCH FOR:
Arts and Humanities • Applied Science and Technology • Science • Psychology • Business and Economics
Education • Telecommunications and Computing • Social Science • Recreational Reading

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENT

Moving off campus? Come to the Apartment Complex Fair on Wed. April 5 from 10-3 on the Campus Center Concourse. One-stop-shopping! Sponsored by Commuter Services, 428 Student Union.

Klub Kai is booking formals and Graduation Parties for May 2000. Call Cheng @ 586-2774 after 4:30 pm. Buffet Packages available.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Brandywine Apts. Now accepting apps for June, July, Aug or Sept 1 yr leases. Call 549-0600 or stop by the rental office.

Puffton Village 3 bedroom. Available ASAP. Call 549-6247.

Two bedrooms, one bath. 1.5 miles from campus. On bus route. Pond view, huge back yard. Heat and hot water included. Michelle 548-3915.

Puffton Village 3 bedroom apartment for rent. Take over lease and skip BUREAUCRATIC BS. Phone 549-4640.

Take over our lease. Renovated Puffton Apartment. 3 bedroom. Heat, hot water included. Available end of May. 549-1248.

Large 2 bedroom apartment. On Main St. 1 mile from town. $950/month. Available 6/1. Call 253-2738.

Summer Sublet w/lease option. Starts 6/1. On bus route. 10 minutes from campus. 2 bedroom, 2 bath, ht/htwtr included. Furniture available, no extra charge. Call 253-6577.

2 bedroom apartment on bus route. $775/mo. Everything included. Available 6/1. 397-9788.

Summer Sublet w/lease option starting 6/1. Puffton Village 1 bedroom. $595.00 a month. Call 549-2060.

Large four bedroom apartment in Hadley. 2 bathroom. Right on bus route, bikepath at backyard. June 1st. Call 582-9679.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Summer Sublet Needed! Rent is $750/mo and includes heat and hot water! Utilities already set up and apartment well have furniture for your use! Call us at the Boulders: 256-8012.

1 Bedroom Summer Sublet with option to lease on bus route 1 mile from campus. 549-1859.

Apply now for best locations. Amherst Center 1,2 and 3 bedroom apartments. Gas heat, hardwood floor. April showings for June and September. Lincoln Real Estate. No fees charged. 253-7879.

Apply now for best locations. 3 bedroom condos. Gas heat, hardwood floors, bright heated basement with study and laundry area. 1/2 mile to campus, on bus route. April showings for June and September. Lincoln Real Estate. No fees charged. 253-7879.

AUTO FOR SALE

89 Ford Mustang 5 speed, all power, black, runs great. $2000/obo. 549-0664.

1994 Jeep Wrangler Sahara. 50k miles. Excellent condition. Forest Green with Sahara interior. $11,000 or B.O. Call Bob 549-4204.

EMPLOYMENT

$Fundraiser$ Open to student groups and organizations. Earn $5 per MC app. We supply all materials at no cost. Call for info or visit our website. 1-800-932-0528 ext 65. www.ocmconcepts.com

$$$ SUMMER CASH $$$
Student Business Mngmt./ Sales
Position with National Firm. Pays $10-$12 + Commission. Available to Soph, Jr and Sr only. For info go to — http://www.jablon.com

Bank on getting a tan this summer working outside with other students! Earn up to $9.00-$13.00/hr. Various positions available. For information or to apply on-line see our website at http://www.university-painters.com

EMPLOYMENT

Survey Personal Needed for PVTA ridership Study- the Pioneer Valley Planning Commission (PVPC) will be conducting a ridership survey of all PVTA routes May 1 through May 14. Surveyors will be paid $9.50 to $10.50/hour to distribute/ collect survey forms, answer questions, and collect ridership information. All shifts are available. Applications will be accepted until April 14, 2000. Applications can be downloaded at www.pvpc.org/pvpc/jobs.html or call 413-781-6045 or apply in person at PVPC, 26 Central St. West Springfield Ma 01089. PVPC is an EOE/ AA employer.

Camp Canadeasis, Pocono Mountains, PA. Premier residential coed summer camp. We are looking for energetic, qualified and caring staff to teach all general athletics, gymnastics, hockey, tennis, mountain bikes, golf, motorcycles, outdoor adventure, ropes, archery, drama, video, photography, fishing, WSI, waterfront activities, arts and crafts, cooking and much more! Excellent facilities and great salary! 6/21/00- 8/18/00. Call (800)832-8228 or apply online: www.canadensis.com

Seeking experienced wait staff and kitchen help for new restaurant and bar opening downtown Amherst. In April. Call Carl at (413)330-4546.

Attention UMass Students! Do you want to earn extra money with a job you can be proud of? The U.S. Census Bureau is hiring for Census 2000! Application process done on campus, flexible hours, work on campus. Make at least $11.50/hr. U.S. Department of Commerce, Bureau of the Census. Contact Charles Yi at (413)732-2120.

Are you connected? Internet users needed! $350-850/wk. www.AMScommerce.com

Summer Help Wanted Local corrugated Manufacturer. Looking for summer help for 2nd and 3rd shift. Good Pay. 1:25 an hour. Call Scott Parsons 413-582-3844.

EMPLOYMENT

Summer on Cape Cod. Non-smokers only. General restaurant work, including cashiering and service. We seek students who already have housing nearby or who are familiar with the area and can make housing arrangements. This is a great job for the right people. $8/hr and meals plus a bonus of $100/wk for each week you work through August 31, 2000. For more information, check www.nare.com/clamshack.htm or call Bill Millett at 1-800-887-2951. Or mail resume to South Wellfleet Clam Shack, P.O. Box 321, South Wellfleet, MA 02663.

Copywriter: Part-time, student preferred. (413)536-5086. 12-7pm.

Help Wanted: Part-time bar/floor manager. The Amherst Brewing Company is looking for an experienced, team oriented, assistant manager for our busy weekends. Excellent opportunity for an enthusiastic, professional. Apply in person at 24 No. Pleasant St, Amherst.

Flexible part-time. Evening and weekend shifts available. 20hrs/wk required. PVTA accessible. For more information call: Abt Associates, Inc. Paul Bebo, Recruiting Coordinator 1-800-792-4514. E.O.E. M/F.

Cruise Line entry level on board positions available, great benefits, seasonal or year-round. (941)329-6434. www.cruisecareers.com

Delivery persons wanted. Apply at D.P. Gough, downtown Amherst.

Fall 200 Internships with the Student Legal Service Office, get hands-on experience in the legal field, work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary- training provided. Contact the Student Legal Services Office today 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

Busy Auction Gallery seeking office manager with good typing/computer and telephone skills. May- Dec. (but would consider may- sept 2) on Nantucket Island Ma. Good salary plus housing - 508-228-3942. PO box 2607 Nantucket, Ma. 02584.

EMPLOYMENT

Have an amazing summer! Prestigious coed camp in beautiful Mass seeks caring, motivated college students & grads who love kids. GENERAL & SPECIALTY COUNSELORS needed. Join a dedicated, fun team. Competitive salaries+travel+room+board. Call Camp Taconic 1-800-762-2820.

Full and part-time ice cream and sandwich shop on bike trail in Hadley. Ice Cream Pedaler 586-9580.

UAHC Crane Lake and Eisner Camps, Reform Jewish coeducational Camps located in the Berkshires of Massachusetts, seek qualified, dedicated counselors and specialists, including Waterfront, Athletics, Arts. Good salary, r&b included, travel assistance. Crane Lake Camp: Contact Brad Gerstle, 800-227-2860 ILUVCAMP@aol.com; www.cranelakecamp.com. Eisner Camp: Contact Louis Bordman, 212-650-4130 EISNERGUY@aol.com; www.eisnercamp.org.

FOR RENT

Need to sublet your apartment for the summer? Don't pay for rental ads. Use our website for free! http://home.oit.umass.edu/~cshrc. Sponsored by Commuter Services, 428 Student Union.

Take over our lease starting 6/1. 3 bedroom, 2 bath. Call 549-3895.

FOR SALE

For sale: Burton Alpine 51 Raceboard. Never used. $100.00 O/B/O 549-2071.

HOUSE FOR RENT

4 bedrooms, 2 baths, heated basement. 1 1/2 miles to UMass. $2000. Call Lincoln Real Estate 253-7879.

5/6 bedroom newer home with large backyard, 4 min. from UMass Hadley, Stockbridge Rd. $2000/mo 549-4270.

4 Bedroom 2 bath 2 car garage full kitchen. 4 min from school. Hadley 549-6465 or 549-9382.

MISCELLANEOUS

Modeling & Acting Have you always dreamed of being a model or actor but don't know where or how to get started? New faces MIETOUR is coming to your area soon. For more info call 1-877-MIE-LOOK.

Get paid to lose weight and inches. All natural, doctor recommended. 1-800-397-7715.

MUSICIANS WANTED

Looking for musician(s) to play instrumental at dinner. Great exposure and advertis-

PAINTERS NEEDED

Painters Needed
Hardworking, independant students wanted, no exp. necessary $8 starting + bonuses contact Alex @ 413-247-9299 or 877-626-9904

ROOM FOR RENT

Cheap rent! $300 a month, includes utilities. 3 rooms available in house on bus route. June 1st. Great location in Amherst. Sublet option available. Call Vito 549-0774.

2 bedroom in 3 bedroom Duplex in Belchertown. On bus route. Washer/dryer. Big yard. Non-smokers. $350 incl. Available 6/1. Call Oenise 323-0120.

ROOMMATE WANTED

1 Room in 3 bedroom apt. in So. Amherst. $325/mo. Heat/electric included available immediately. 256-4581.

SERVICES

Rental problems? Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the conditions of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

SUMMER SUBLET

Cute 4 bedroom apt in Amherst 1/4 mi. from campus- bus route 6/1-8/31. Call 549-9621! Sunny front porch.

Looking for Summer Sublet? 6/1-8/31. Sunset Townhouses across from Southwest. 3 Bedroom, 2 bath $1000.00/month. Negotiable. Call 549-0236.

3 bedroom, 2 bath, free cable/hot water. AC available, refurbished. $neg. Start 6/1 to 9/31. Puffton 549-0268.

1 bedroom w/spacious living room and central air. On bus route. Available after finals. $625.00. Includes ht/htwtr. Parking, pool and laundry next door. 549-5581.

4 Bedroom apartment. Great uptown location with parking. Available 6/1/00-8/31/00. Call Kelly at 253-2268.

2 bedroom in 3 bedroom Townhouse. $350 utilities included. 253-6488.

3 Bedroom 2 bath in Puffton from June to August. If interested call Lauren 546-1568.

Looking for a place to live this summer/fall? Great house in Amherst with two available rooms. $305/month. Please call Erin 413-549-1543.

Take over my lease. 1 bedroom/2 bedroom apartment. South Point on bus line. $355.00. Available 6/1. 253-5410.

Large room in spacious apartment, close to town. Call 253-0218.

TICKETS

Creed Floor tickets for 4/15. Call Mike at 546-1872.

Chili Peppers, Foo Fighters for sale. James 549-9254.

Need two tickets for Creed April 15. sbradshaw@ours.com.

Elton John Seats Section 1 Floor 6. Available 888-441-5634.

TRAVEL

Mexico/Caribbean or Central America $229 rt. Europe $189 ow. Other worldwide destinations cheap. ONLY TERRORISTS GET YOU THERE CHEAPER! Book tickets on-line www.airtech.com or 212-219-7000.

WORLD WIDE WEB

Get paid just for being online! Did you know that there are over thirty companies which will pay you to have a small adbar on your computer screen while you're on line? It's true! Plus you can sign up for free! If interested, please go to http://paidsurfing1.net-firms.com.

ENTERTAINMENT

18 + Dance Party @ The Pub 10 pm - 1 am This Friday 3/31

Place your ads in The Collegian Classifieds TODAY!!

Call us here at 545-3500!!

Five College Community Calendar

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 29

Class — The UMass Police Department's free self-defense course for women will continue tonight from 6-9:30 p.m. Contact the UM Police Department for more information.

Lecture — Julie Moir Messervy will present a multi-media slide lecture on "The Toronto Music Garden" at 7 p.m. in Wright Hall Auditorium at Smith College. The event is free and open to the public. Call 585-2742 for more information.

THURSDAY, MARCH 30

Lecture – Richard Pleak will present a lecture entitled "Working with Gender Atypical Youth: Issues of Diagnosis, Treatment, and Ethics" at 12:30 p.m. in room 903 of the Campus Center.

Workshop – There will be a workshop on contraception and safer sex at 5 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services. Men and women are welcome.

NOTICES

Help – From Feb. 15-April 15 on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays from 5-8 p.m. student volunteers from the School of Management will assist non-resident aliens with the preparation of their Federal and State income tax returns. Call 545-5600 for more information.

Scholarships – The STEMTEC/NSF Teaching scholars program is offering scholarships to students who are interested in exploring a career in K-12 math or science teaching. Students do not need to be enrolled in a certificate program to apply. Applications are due by April 1. Contact Johanna at 545-0626 for more information.

Support – A grief support group is available to all students who have experienced the death of someone they love. The groups are free, small and confidential, and meet on Wednesday and Thursday evenings. Telephone pre-screening is required for enrollment. Call 577-5316 if interested.

Support – AL-ANON and ALA-TEEN are offering local meetings for those affected by someone else's drinking problem. Call 253-5261 for meeting times and locations.

Please send us your FYI's!

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

BOOKBUCKS™ From Bookworks

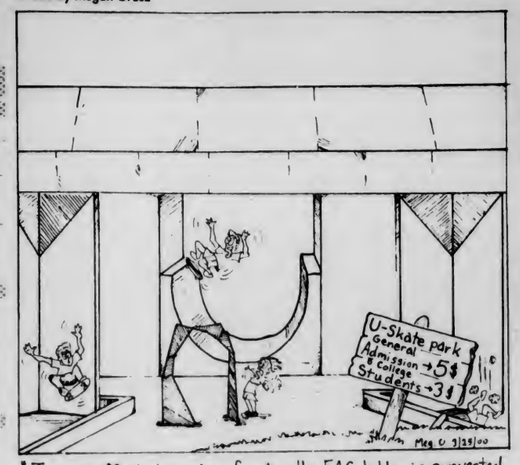
Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks,* you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

UStore CAMPUS CENTER — Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs



HSCN 4 Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	21	Gavel to Gavel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	22	NBC/22 Springfield
4	CBS/4 Boston	23	CNN Headline News
5	ABC/5 Boston	24	CNN
6	PBS/57 Springfield	25	CNN Fn
7	HSCN Movie Ch	26	CNN Si
8	UPN/20 Hartford	27	TBS
9	Weather Channel	28	BET
10	NBC/30 New Britain	29	College TV Network
11	Fox/61 Hartford	30	Univision
12	PBS/24 Hartford	31	Comedy Central
13	WCCH & HSCN	32	Cartoon Network
14	International	33	TV Land
15	UMass Academic TV	34	C-Span
16	WB/ New Haven	35	ZDTV (Tentative)
17	Sundance	36	Bloomberg Financial Network
18	The Learning Channel	37	History Channel
19	LIVE-TV19	38	HSCN Programming
20	ABC/ 40 Springfield

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MARCH 29, 2000

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	12 Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Live From Lincoln Center "New York City Opera – Puccini's Tosca" (In Stereo)						In the Life (In Stereo)
WFSB	3	3 News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	City of Angels (In Stereo)		★ "Fathers' Day" (1997, Comedy) Robin Williams. (In Stereo)				News	Late Show
WBZ	4	4 News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	City of Angels (In Stereo)		★ "Fathers' Day" (1997, Comedy) Robin Williams. (In Stereo)				News	Late Show
WCVB	5	5 News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Two Guys-Girl	Then Came	Drew Carey	Spin City	20/20		News	Nightline
WLVI	6	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends	Nanny	Dawson's Creek (In Stereo)		Roswell "The Balance" (R)		News		Friends	Nanny
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Dateline (In Stereo)		West Wing "The Short List"		Law & Order "Blood Money"		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Blind Date	Real TV	7 Days "For the Children" (R)		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		News	Real TV (R)	Blind Date	Change-Heart
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Dateline (In Stereo)		West Wing "The Short List"		Law & Order "Blood Money"		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Simpsons	Fraser	Seinfeld	Friends	Game Show		Get Real "Guilt" (In Stereo)		News		Friends	Fraser
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Dateline (In Stereo)		West Wing "The Short List"		Law & Order "Blood Money"		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	8	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Live From Lincoln Center "New York City Opera – Puccini's Tosca" (In Stereo)						Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	20	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Two Guys-Girl	Then Came	Drew Carey	Spin City	20/20		News	Nightline
WSBK		Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	NHL Hockey	Boston Bruins at Montreal Canadiens (Live)					Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)	Judge Mathis
WTBS	22	Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Ripley's Believe It or Not!		WCW Thunder		WCW Thunder		Ripley's Believe It or Not! (R)
A&E		L.A. Law "Consumed Innocent"	Law & Order "Showtime"			Biography: Harrison Ford		Investigative Reports		American Justice		Law & Order "Poison Ivy"
CNN	23	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		Newsstand		Sports	Moneyline (R)
COM	30	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	★★★ "The Witches of Eastwick" (1987, Comedy) Jack Nicholson, Cher.					South Park	Man Show	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	42	Your New House (R)		Wild Discovery: Little Killers		On the Inside: Navy SEALs		Shipwreck! "Deadly Harbor" (R)		Shipwreck! "Fatal Collision" (R)		On the Inside: Navy SEALs
ESPN	43	Sportscenter		High School Basketball		High School Basketball: McDonald's All American (Live)				High School Basketball		Sportscenter
LIFE	42	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"Final Descent" (1997, Suspense) Robert Urich.				Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	33	MTV Jams	Beat Suite	Music Videos	Music Videos	TRL (R) (In Stereo)		Road Rules	Lyricist	True Life "I'm a Pom Star" (R)		Undressed	Loveline
NICK	41	All That	Caleb g	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Spongeb	Spongeb	Brady Bunch	Bev. Hillbillies	All in Family	Laverne &	I Love Lucy	Bewitched
SCIFI	45	Sliders "New Gods for Old"		Crypt Tales	Crypt Tales	Crypt Tales	Crypt Tales	Crypt Tales	Crypt Tales	Crypt Tales	Crypt Tales	Poltergeist: The Legacy
TLC	28	Home Again	Home Again	How'd They Do That?		Extreme Machines		Medical Detect	Medical Detect	Demolition Day: Seattle		Extreme Machines (R)
TNT	29	In the Heat of the Night		ER "Hit and Run" (In Stereo)		★★½ "Sudden Impact" (1983, Drama) Clint Eastwood, Sondra Locke.						★½ "Trial by Jury" (1994) Joanne Whalley-Kilmer
USA	29	Crush	Friends	JAG "Pilot"		Walker, Texas Ranger		★★★ "Backdraft" (1991, Drama) Kurt Russell, William Baldwin. (In Stereo)
HBO	35	(5:00)	★★½ "Crocodile Dundee II" (1988, Comedy)			Paul Hogan. PG		Romeo Must		Soprano "House Arrest" (R)		Oz "Ancient Tribes" (In Stereo)	★★½ "Pushing Tin" (1999)
MAX	33	(5:45) ★ "Sphere" (1998, Science Fiction)		Dustin Hoffman. PG-13		★★ "Doctor Dolittle" (1998)		Eddie Murphy.		★★ "In Dreams" (1999)		Annette Bening.	Stalker Guilt
SHOW	36	★★★ "Mrs. Dalloway" (1997, Drama)		Vanessa Redgrave. PG-13		★★★ "Elizabeth" (1998, Drama)		Cate Blanchett. (In Stereo)		★★ "Stepmom" (1998, Drama)		Julia Roberts. PG-13	Passion Cove

Frosh By Megan Orosz

"In an effort to raise funds, the FAC lobby is converted into a half pipe."

Over the Hedge By Fry Lewis

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Horoscopes

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – You may feel today as though you are walking a tight-rope, but your professional status, at least, is not at risk.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – You may have to make up for lost time today, and a quick start will serve you well. Take time to judge your progress at regular intervals.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – Put the emphasis on personal choice today, despite the outcome. What is important at this time is that you exercise your independence and initiative.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – There is little room for error today, particularly in social circles where what you say will have the greatest impact. Think things through.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – What happens around you today is likely to prove pivotal in the days to come, though it may all seem rather routine just now.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – What you've been doing for others for so long can, today, be done for you – if you surround yourself with the right people.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – You are feeling independent and venturesome today, but this doesn't mean you must go it alone. Indeed, a friend or loved one wants to go along!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – You may not begin the day feeling quite yourself, but later on you'll enjoy a fresh burst of energy and a brief but profitable inspiration.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Your tendency toward over-involvement in the affairs of others must not lead you into dangerous emotional webs today. Use your head!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Pleasure and profit go hand-in-hand today, but you must first concentrate on the one before you begin enjoying the other – and vice versa.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – That which seems, upon first glance, to be the most trivial today is likely to prove the most essential in the long run. Consider everything!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – You may be called upon to step in and fill another's shoes quite unexpectedly today. See to it that you don't come off as too cocky or arrogant.

Quote of the Day

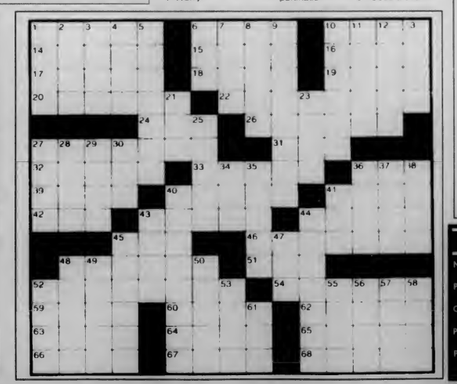
"Why in a country of free speech, are there phone bills?"

–Stephen Wright

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere



Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

ACROSS
1 Weather problem
6 Colorful fish
10 Moves up and down
14 Musical show
15 Volkswagen sin
16 Fashion magazine
17 Tennis champ Chris
18 Arrogant person
19 — gin
20 Christmas decoration
22 A snow line provides this
24 Mousse
26 Reverberated
27 Martial art
31 In what way?
32 Presses
33 Dutch export
36 — chi: self-defense art
39 Tanks
40 Sleds
41 Voter's district
42 Overhead trains
43 Turkish official
44 Compel
45 Surfing spot
46 Eases
48 Famous desert
51 Computer in 2001
52 Adhesive
54 Shake rapidly
59 Matinee guy
60 Burrows
62 Let
63 Be bold enough
64 Gymnast Korbut
65 Steer
66 Lodges
67 Relax
68 Coal

DOWN
1 Worry
2 Jeans maker Strauss
3 Kitchen appliance
4 Yours and mine
5 Discovers
6 Assn. formed in 1948
7 Football action
8 Cherish
9 Brazers
10 Give
11 Stan's co-star
12 Vampire's craving
13 Observed
21 — Vegas
23 Use an axe
25 Ballerina's attire
27 Jazz horn
28 Caspian feeder
29 Scribbles
30 Election winners
34 "Yuck"
35 Pet-owner's purchase
36 Tangy
37 Curved structure
38 Bad day for Caesar
40 Type of retriever
41 Court (a sweetheart)
43 Ring
44 Leaves
45 Spends (time)
47 Rank above capt.
48 Red Sea country
49 Oak product
50 Spry
52 Longish skirt
53 Breakfast order
55 Down in the dumps
56 Sick
57 Prospector's quest
58 Vase-shaped pitcher
61 Used a chair

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

S	L	A	B		M	E	S	H		T	H	E	R
H	A	L	E		O	N	T	O		R	I	S	E
E	D	E	N		R	A	Y	O	U	A	L	A	I
A	S	C	E	T	I	C		P	R	O	N	O	U	N
C	R	U	I	S	E		V	I	T	A	L	I	T	Y
H	O	S	T		Z	E	T	A		E	C	H	O
A	M	I		T	I	N	E		M	I	R	K
F	E	N	S		Y	O	U	N	G		M	E	E
F	O	G	H	O	R	N	S		H	E	D	I	E	D
A	L	I			B	E	R	G			R	A	Y
N	E	G	L	E	C	T			R	A	Y	I	N	E
O	D	I	E		A	R	M	E	D		E	A	V	E
M	I	L			E	A	V	E			P	E	W
E	L				S	E	W	E	R		T	E	R	N

4-1-00 © 2000 United Feature Syndicate

WE DON'T KNOW WHAT

THE DC IS SERVING YOU!!

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Kathleen Ralls
Photo Technician	Teresa Canino-Rivera
Copy Editor	Melissa Hammell
Production Supervisor	Joylyn Lombard
Production Staff	Roberto Delgado, Melanie Thomas

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of sports.

Page 14 | The Massachusetts Daily Collegian | Wednesday, March 29, 2000

Big week for lacrosse programs

Men rip Eagles by score of 17-5

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

For years, Boston College has been the tree for the Massachusetts men's lacrosse team's woodpecker. No matter what the Eagles do, the pesky bird lands on the field with them and continues to chip into them seemingly at will, with BC all but unable to fight back.

Last night at Alumni Stadium in Chestnut Hill, the romp continued as the Minutemen made it 27 in a row against their cross-state rivals, pushing their win streak to three with a 17-5 pounding.

"It was a good win," head coach Greg Cannella said. "We're happy to get out of here with the win. BC played us pretty tough tonight as I expected them to."

A good sign of a one-sided affair surfaced in the boxscore, which showed that one player's night outdid an entire squad, an unfortunate result for the Eagles in last night's melee. UMass' stingy defense in Indianapolis remained exactly that in returning to the East Coast. It held BC at bay all evening while junior attackman Rich Kunkel had a field day of sorts.

After remaining rather quiet following a three-goal afternoon against Vermont two weeks ago, the Centereach, N.Y. native connected six times to lead the UMass offense. The curvy figure matches Kunkel's career-high performance against Fairfield last season, where he also added three assists.

It was quite ironic that the game was played on the Eagles' football field. While BC (1-3) walked around blindly in the contest's early stages, UMass (4-2, 1-1 FCAC) jumped out to a touchdown lead in the game's first 7:13. The Minutemen's first line immediately went to work, as Marc Morley picked up where he left off against Butler, beating BC goaltender Tom Gallagher less than a minute in.

Open sesame.

John Madigan and Mike Janowicz posted goals before the reins were turned over to Rich Kunkel. Finding the net seven times coming in, Kunkel would take little time in scorching Boston College. The attackman scored UMass' next four goals, all assisted. With 11:14 remaining, Kunkel kicked off his one-man show, catching a pass from Madigan and depositing it to the back of the net. Madigan would hit Kunkel for his third goal as well, which gave the Maroon and White a 6-0 advantage. It was his 10th on the season, the first Minuteman to delve into double digits.

The lead ballooned to seven as Kunkel wasn't satisfied just yet. Kevin Dell found him from behind the cage for number four before Jeremy Garth finally stopped the bleeding for the Eagles at the five-minute mark of opening frame.

However, it would prove a moot point as UMass hammered away on offense, led by Kunkel, who scored a pair of goals in the second quarter. Alex Racioppi tallied his third of the season, but then Kunkel went back to work, registering his fifth and sixth of the

Turn to LAX, page 10

Rich Kunkel's offensive explosion in the first half helped the UMass men's lacrosse team cap an exciting evening, as it rolled to a 17-5 win over Boston College.

Minutewomen to host Catamounts

While the rain cancelled yesterday's contest against UNH, the UMass women's lacrosse team and senior defender Melissa Miele, right, will look for their first win of the year at home today against Vermont.

By David Rose
Collegian Correspondent

This one just wasn't in the cards. At least not in Mother Nature's deck.

The 2000 regular season schedule of the Massachusetts women's lacrosse team was cut by one yesterday as their game against New Hampshire was canceled due to inclement weather.

The game was to have been a makeup for a contest originally slated for March 21. Now, it's been removed from the schedule entirely.

But the Minutewomen used the day off to prepare for today, when they will host the University of Vermont at 3 p.m. at Ruth I. Totman Field.

The contest against the Catamounts may be the perfect tonic for a UMass team that has begun the 2000 campaign with three consecutive losses. Vermont, on the other hand, has only a slightly better mark of 1-2, and was thumped by the Minutewomen in 1999 by a lopsided score of 16-2.

The Catamounts were also scorched in each of their first two games this year against Hofstra and Delaware by a combined margin of 37-6 before breaking out in their third game with a 17-4 win over the Blue Devils of Central Connecticut.

Much of UMass' early season difficulty can be attributed to its inability to score. The Minutewomen defensive unit has held high-scoring offenses like that of Syracuse to only eight goals, but the attack provided only three.

Led by netminder Jen Naidi, and the defensive prowess of Lynne Young, the Minutewomen have allowed just 25 goals in their first three contests. But the offense has mustered just 15 in those same three games.

Today, the Minutewomen will hope to find an ace up their sleeves and give coach Phil Barnes his first win as head coach.

Of equal importance, after today, the Minutewomen will play three of their next four games on the road: at Hofstra on Saturday, at St. Bonaventure on April 7th, and at Duquesne on the 9th. They play host to Dartmouth next Wednesday.

Current hockey season scarred beyond any repair

It's been a tough season for the National Hockey League. After getting good reviews on the NHL All-Star game on ABC, things have quickly gone downhill for the league.

The NHL got off on the wrong foot when the season started was back in September, when Alexei Yashin refused to honor the remainder of his contract. Nikolai Khabibulin and Byron Dafoe sat out with other disputes.

Of course, then there was Marty McSorely's best Mark McGwire imitation with Donald Brashear's head, which earned him a suspension and landed him in the Canadian legal system.

Alex Wood on the NHL

Then, Boston Bruins icon Ray Bourque was traded to the Colorado Avalanche, and Ed Belfour tried to save himself some jail time by trying to bribe police with one billion dollars when he was arrested for public drunkenness and getting into a scuffle outside a Dallas hotel.

Following that incident, Bryan Berard had his retina detached when his was hit in the eye on the follow through of a shot. The latest lolli in this ongoing comedy/tragedy was Scott Niedermayer's two-handed chop to the head of Peter Worrell.

Niedermeyer received a 10-game suspension, which is his first in his eight NHL seasons. The suspension will keep him out for the remainder of the season and also keep him from playing in the playoff opener.

Niedermayer isn't even known as a tough guy. One grab, they will play dirty – things such as sneaky elbows and hits from behind, simply because they don't have the talent to play with the stars.

The biggest black eye the NHL will get should come next season when they water down the talent even more, marketing a product that is less exciting, less entertaining, and more expensive.

And, as they continue to crack down on the "goons" things will only get worse. Hockey is a passionate game, arguably more so than any other sport. The action is fast and furious and emotions run high.

What the NHL doesn't realize is that by eliminating the players who police the ice, they are allowing the sneakier, dirtier players to get away with murder. has to wonder what's happening on the ice that would make a usually reserved guy so irritated that he would take a two-handed swing at the head of an opponent.

The answer to that is simple. The game has turned into a clutch and grab suitable for Hustler. The strongest effect that expansion has on the NHL is not revenues, but dilution of the talent pool.

With 30 teams playing around the league next season, one can only expect the batting practice to pick up. Another 40 players will come into the league with Minnesota and Columbus, wearing uniforms snuck out of Barnum and Bailey's Circus.

Most of the newcomers probably can't keep up with the big boys who deserve to be playing in hockey's elite arena. They will clutch, they will

As the old adage goes, "When the cat's away the, the mice will play." Without players like McSorely, Tie Domi, and Bob Probert, all you're left with are the lowlife's like Claude Lemieux, and Ulf Samuelsson, and Darius Kasparitis – players that go for the knees and use their sticks like swords, and who can end careers with their dirty play.

It takes a policeman to defend the stars of the game. Without McSorely, Wayne Gretzky would have had quite a hard time in Edmonton and Los Angeles, especially. Let the enforcers do what they do best: enforce the unwritten rules of the game.

Players will think twice about taking cheap shots when they know that there's a Tony Twist sitting on the bench looking for that type of stuff. And the players, who can play, won't get so frustrated when they don't have a 200-pound parasite clinging to their jersey.

With the addition of Bourque and Dave Andreychuk, the Colorado Avalanche are set to compete with the big boys in the Western Conference. They are also about to secure a playoff berth, something that would not have happened if they didn't make a major personnel move.

Bourque carried the sorry Bruins on his back for two extremely miserable seasons, and he's playing like a man possessed, now that he thinks he can have a shot at Lord Stanley. Likewise, Andreychuk now has someone who can dish him the puck in Joe Sakic and Peter Forsberg, players who also attract a lot of attention.

Turn to NHL, page 11

Baseball wastes late lead

Four-run edge in seventh vanishes

By Eric Soderstrom
Collegian Staff

As far as the Massachusetts' baseball team is concerned, John Orefice isn't the most popular chap around these parts.

Yesterday in East Hartford, Conn., Orefice left the Minutemen (8-7) thunderstruck by cracking a game-winning grand slam and picking up his first victory on the mound as the University of Hartford (8-8) snapped an eight-game winning streak for UMass, 10-6, at Ray McKenna Field.

The Maroon and White began the contest strongly, picking up right where they had left off on Sunday against Yale, plating three runs in the top of the first inning. With one gone, sophomore Scott Anderson doubled and advanced to third on a wild pitch by Hawks starting pitcher Dustin Webb. Webb then walked junior Nick Gourneault before tossing up a meatball to catcher Chris Morgan who belted it out of the park to give the Minutemen a 3-0 edge. UMass starting pitcher Craig Szado glided through the bottom half of the inning, walking one and striking out three.

When the Minutemen came up to take their rips at the top of the fourth inning, they did so with the three-run lead still on their shoulders. Senior Kevin O'Connell added to the lead with UMass' second round-tripper of the game, upping the score to 4-0. Sophomore Aaron Senez added a single that frame.

The Hawks scored their first run of the game, unearned, at the bottom of a sordid fourth inning that saw senior Shaun Skeffington commit two errors for the Minutemen. Skeffington, to some extent, made up for his mistakes by taking one for the team at the top of the fifth, getting hit by a pitch that would advance the soon-to-be run scoring John Seed who had singled to lead off the inning.

After UMass' third homer of the game by Senez, Hartford entered the bottom of the seventh trailing 6-2. After a single by Carlos Olivo off new Minuteman pitcher David Williamson scored Matt Marchese, making it 6-3 with two on base, Ryan Gardner singled to load the bases with nobody out. Next at-bat was Orefice, who had started the game as the designated hitter but took over on the hill in the sixth inning. After the working the count to 3-2, he drilled a belt-high fastball deep over the left centerfield fence for the first homer run of his career.

Up 7-6, an adrenaline-filled Orefice fanned Senez, Seed, and Mike Kulak at the top of the eighth. Hartford would not look back. Marchese led off the bottom of the eighth with a double and scored on another double-bagger by Josh Yuhas. Olivo homered to make it 10-6.

Senior first baseman Kevin O'Connell smacked a home run for UMass yesterday, but it wasn't enough as host Hartford rallied for a 10-6 win.

Equestrian club charges on to regional peak

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

Yankee just didn't feel like a winner on Saturday.

It wasn't yet noon, and the massive Quarter Horse seemed to have better things to do than gallop through a series of fences. He turned his head reluctantly at a tug on the reins from Massachusetts' Sharon Lilien-Zwiebel, as rider and mount swung from the outside sunlight into the barn in preparation for the Novice Fence class.

Less than five minutes later, both were left to bask in championship glory.

"I think the judge gave me some credit, knowing that he's such a tough horse," said Lilien-Zwiebel in an attempt at downplaying her first place run. "He's extremely sluggish, with a lot of leg. I just had to really think my course through."

The success of this first-year collegiate rider seemed to be the story for UMass at Saturday's Amherst College Intercollegiate Horse Show, as the University's equestrian club out pointed 15 others to win the event crown and subsequently overtake Mt. Holyoke for first place in the region. Coach Jerry Schurink's group tallied 41 points through the day's 24 events, with host Smith (32) and Mt. Holyoke (29) rounding out the top three.

"We're having a really good afternoon," said Schurink, keeping a watchful gaze on a UMass rider's form in the Walk-Trot-Canter event. "We're riding very well and we've blocked a lot of points."

The 24-member club, which is supported by the UMass Department of Veterinary and Animal Science, could not have hit its stride at a better point in the season. Heading into this weekend's regular season finale at Mt. Holyoke, UMass has an excellent shot at taking home the regional crown, assuring it a trip to the Zone Championship. The top two programs from that event then advance to the Nationals, held at Conyers, Ga.'s Olympic Park.

"By next weekend, we will have the most riders qualified for regionals that we've had in five years," said team co-captain Candice Wagner, after turning in a blue ribbon run in the Open Flat class.

The program certainly deserves a larger degree of exposure on the University's varsity-centric sports scene, and for more than just its obvious excellence in competition. The club's minimal school funding forces the riders to each pay their own entrance fees, which are typically upwards of 30 dollars per rider, per show over an eight-show schedule. They conduct fundraisers of all types to offset expenses, including car washes and candy sales.

Weather is another adversary with which the team must contend. Despite enjoying "one of the nicest facilities in the region, maybe in the zone" according to Wagner, the riders often find themselves practicing in less than ideal temperatures. "Our facility isn't heated, so we still ride if it's 20-degrees out, at 6 a.m. or 10 p.m.," she said.

But according to the senior, the biggest challenge facing the modern equestrienne is that of overcoming the sport's most widespread fallacy.

"Everyone has a misconception that

Turn to EQUESTRIAN CLUB, page 11

UMass rode off with first place at this weekend's Intercollegiate Equestrian Show at Smith College.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Volume CVI Issue 41 | Thursday, March 30, 2000

UMass police issue computer theft warning

By Daniel Ruetenik
Collegian Staff

The first weekend after Spring Break saw a high number of alcohol related incidents, just between 8:16 p.m. and 9:16 p.m. on Friday, March 24, University of Massachusetts Police arrested four people for underage possession of alcohol in three separate incidents in Southwest.

Also, an unknown vandal tossed a rock through a window in Chancellor David K. Scott's front porch and the UMass PD issued a public safety alert after police received the ninth report of a laptop being stolen on campus since Feb. 14.

Between 6:19 and 11:52 p.m. on Friday night, there were 11 liquor law violations reported by the UMPD. In total for the weekend there were 18 incidents of liquor law violations reported.

Michael T. O'Donnell, 19, of Milton, Mellyssa C. Maul, 18, of Rockland, Jonathan Cliff, 18, of Natick and Brendan G. Mcquillen, 18, of Belchertown were all arrested in Southwest within one hour of each other. All four individuals are being charged with underage possession of alcohol.

Jim Lyons, UMPD spokesman said, "The number of potential arrests out there was enormous. There were a lot of people out and around."

"In a couple of these, the reason these people were probably arrested was because they had false [Registry of Motor Vehicle] documents," Lyons said. "Usually the arrest situation is not the one poor kid who happens to walk by with a beer in his pocket."

Lyons said he was not aware of any particular sting operation in Southwest that night.

On Saturday morning, at around three, an unknown person broke a window in Chancellor Scott's house on Chancellor Drive.

Lyons said "somebody threw a brick through the window."

A single pane in a glassed in porch on the front of the Chancellor's house was broken. There are no suspects, and police do not know the motive for the vandalism.

Chancellor Scott was not available for comment at press time.

In Van Meter Dorm, a CTX laptop computer, valued at

Turn to WEEKEND, page 2

Chancellor Scott continues budget debates

Diversity on campus, technology issues raised

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

Students gathered at the School of Management yesterday for the second in a series of budget forums to speak to members of the faculty about issues such as the budget, diversity on campus and technology expenditures.

Early in the forum the Chancellor explained to those in attendance the benefits of the technology project PeopleSoft. He explained that many had addressed concerns regarding the program and the difficulties other large universities had experienced problems during the later stages of the program. He reassured students that the problems were being fixed and that by the time the UMass campus reached that stage the problem should be solved.

"It was explained that the problems that other universities were having occurred during the implementation," he said.

He commented that although many people had criticized him for the decision to spend a great deal of money on the program he felt that he needed to upgrade in order to better improve the communication and technology on campus for the upcoming years.

"People can disagree as to where priorities should lie," he said. "But, it is an investment that has to be made."

Graduate student Thomas Laffee explained to the Chancellor that students were more concerned about their classes than they were about new technology. He claimed that the students had never been asked how they felt about new and updated technology but that they had made it clear that they wanted educational resources to be available to them.

"It is clear that what we [the student] want is facility, staff and books," he said.

Also related to this issue were concerns that were brought up about the distance learning courses that were soon to be offered on campus. James Shaw, the president of the Graduate Employee Organization, asked Scott if classes that were currently taught would be replaced by Information technology, instead he asked, "Are you willing to commit that no classes currently being taught by professors will be replaced by Internet technologies?"

Graduate student Ed Cutting also spoke out against the excessive spending that was taking place in Information Technologies. He explained that this was causing the University to move further away from their actual mission.

"The University is spending untold millions not just at this campus, but their other system, on a reckless, ambitious IT (Information Technology) program, at the expense of the core mission of the University, so much so, that they are looking to redefine the core mission, so that they are no longer viable to the charge of betraying the people of the commonwealth."

To that Scott responded by explaining that technology was the wave of the future and allowed students from all different places in the country to take classes online. He explained that by implementing online classes into the curriculum in the University, it allowed students to be part of distance learning.

"Distance learning has a distance element in it. The purpose of it is to give people who will never set foot on the campus the opportunity to get a UMass education," he said. "Should we deny them that opportunity?"

Another issue discussed during the meeting was the elimination of funding for several departments on campus. Shaw expressed concern regarding the elimination of funding for the Spanish department and questioned the Provost Office on where funding was being allocated, and in light of the re-allocation of teaching assistants where the individual departments within the College of Humanities and Fine Arts were spreading out their resources.

Deputy Provost John Cunningham couldn't answer the question regarding the funding of individual programs commenting to the group, "I don't know, that is up to the Dean of Humanities and Fine Arts as to how they allocate their funding."

Scott also made comments regarding the cuts themselves at the meeting. He explained that the cuts would not be the same across the board for all departments.

"It was never our intention for there to be universal cuts across the campus," he said.

He also maintained his commitment to limiting cuts to the academics to only one percent and explained that he would rather not fund other areas of campus by cutting monies from academics.

"I will not allot funds to infrastructure if it means that we will have to cut Academic Affairs by more than one percent," he said.

However, Cutting brought up the point that the University would actually be cutting an additional .75 percent off of the one percent that is already being cut.

To these allegations Scott responded by saying, "There is a .75 percent that we are taking off on a one-time basis, that is not coming out of the base."

Chancellor David K. Scott listens to concerns over the pending budget cuts during a forum at the School of Management last night.

Students react to budget issue

By Virginia Avedisian
Collegian Staff

Last night Chancellor Scott held another open forum in the School of Management from 6-8 p.m. The forum began with Scott addressing the issue of what to do about the crisis situation we as a University are undergoing. The students and faculty at the forum had many positive and insightful questions and responses for the Chancellor.

The largest concern that people seemed to have about the budget cuts were that they might end up in enough faculty and resources for next year. Many were also concerned about class size and the availability of buildings to hold classes for. The Chancellor explained that the University as a whole has three main obligations to attend to. These three main obligations consisted of: increase in salaries, The University Scholars Program, and education overseas. He also said he "would be willing to give up infrastructure if necessary and that we as a University have to do this in the perspective of debts and commitments."

Vice Chancellor John Cunningham also stated that he has asked deans down the question of how they would deal with a one percent projected budget cut within their area of study.

It was then reported by him that the deans responded by saying this, "certain positions will not be filled, part-time assistantships will not be filled along with the elimination of 10 teaching assistants in each department."

He went on to say that "we as a University do not want to eliminate any of the general education faculty pool, therefore if necessary we will have to cut down in the major areas."

Turn to BUDGET, page 2

SGA debates, passes Title V; says goodbye to departing members

Jim Eltringham (left) and Asif Sayani (right) thank their fellow SGA members for their support during the two's failed run for President and Trustee.

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

After waiting for six years, The Student Government Association just barely passed Title V, a document that governs Area Government and House Councils. It had been six years since the document had been last modified.

If three votes had gone a different way, the document, which needed a two-thirds majority to be passed, would have failed. The final vote was 30 votes for 12 votes against and five abstentions. There was heavy debate on the issue after Greek Area Government was left out of the group of area governments on the first page of the ten page document.

During an early presentation, Sheila Turney, who oversaw the writing of the document, and Aaron Saunders, a Commuter Senator, explained their position on the legislation, explaining that they had been advised to remove Greek Area Government from the document because of issues that were "bigger than the SGA."

"We're not doing this punish GAG, but to help other Area Governments and House Councils," Tunney said. Saunders explained that the removal was only temporary and could be the method changed to a week if the Senate chose to do so.

Ethan Handwerker, a Senator representing Lambda Chi Alpha, questioned the author of the legislation, Tunney, asking if Greeks had been informed about the impending SGA vote.

When told that the year before everyone had participated in a meeting about funding, Handwerker asked again if Greeks had been recently informed about the possibilities.

SGA recently re-elected president Jeff Howe answered the question, saying the SGA and Greek organizations had been informed during meetings.

After a motion to table the motion failed, the issue was debated. Handwerker, who revealed that he had never debated before addressed his concerns.

"This is the most serious issue to face my constituents since I have been a part of this body," Handwerker said. "If this were to pass, it would fail. If there are people who say we don't want Greeks to have representation like everybody else on this campus, those people should get out now."

He elaborated, saying that the UMass campus was home to 1,000 Greek students.

"They should be represented," Handwerker said. "We're Greeks, we're students. Let's wait a week to work out these bugs because right now we're voting against improving Greek life."

Handwerker admitted that he didn't know all of the problems that surrounded the motion to pass Title V, but that he knew enough. He then yielded his remaining minutes to Jim Pellegrino. The Chair of the SGA Ways and Means Committee said that if the Greek area wasn't going to be represented, it would be better if the administration mixed it and not our own Student Government Association.

"We can't promise to fix the problem next week because temporary problems become permanent problems rather quickly around here," Pellegrino said.

Former presidential and trustee candidates Jim Eltringham and Asif Sayani debated for the motion. Sayani said that the Greeks were an important part of this campus, especially considering that they give 5,000 hours of community service to the campus each year and make up seven percent of the campus.

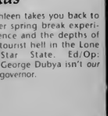
"I understand their concern, but Title V is for everyone. The other 93 percent of this student

Turn to SGA, page 2

EXTENDED FORECAST

Thursday	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 55 LOW: 27	HIGH: 49 LOW: 32	HIGH: 60 LOW: 37

SOURCE: CNN.COM



Plastic toys in Texas

Kathleen takes you back to her spring break experience and the depths of tourist hell in the Lone Star State. Ed/Op: George Dubya isn't our governor.

EDITOR PAGE 4

10,000 flushes

The Arts and Living staff takes it upon themselves to rate the state of this campus's restrooms.

ARTS PAGE 5

Old Blarney

The Massachusetts football team has landed an Irishman. Check out who's heading east to play for the Minutemen next season.

SPORTS PAGE 14

Arts & Living 5
Comics 13
Crossword 13
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 14

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

UM connection to sweatshops under committee examination

By Brian Lohnes
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts has begun to set up a committee to explore licensing issues with regard to sweatshops. The committee announced by Vice-Chancellor for Student Administration and Finance Paul Page announced the committee's formation. The major task of the committee will be to ensure that the University's code of conduct for companies that produce UMass apparel and products is followed.

The code of conduct was established three years ago and has strict guidelines regarding many aspects of worker rights. David Curley, the Director of Licensing and Trademarks for all five UMass campuses said, "The code of conduct was established three years ago and has provisions for discrimination, women's rights, minimum wage, the age of the workers and many others. It is a three or four page document." He also said that the University demands that the companies with which they are in agreement disclose the locations of all the factories where the products are made and their own codes of conduct as well as phone numbers where they can be contacted.

Curley said that his job is three fold; he has to protect the University name in the open market, ensure quality control, and promote the University name. "The University name had a value and we have to make sure that it stays associated with good things," said Curley. The quality control aspect of his job entails looking at products. "In children's clothing we look for loose strings that may choke, and all children's clothing has to be fire retardant also," said Curley. He also said part of his job was to use the University name for profit through licensing.

Curley says that the process has gone smoothly thus far and all sides are working very well together. "Right now there are four or five monitoring units trying to get up and running," said Curley. These groups, when operational, will be able to send people into the field both in the US and abroad to look into factory conditions. Curley added, "Our mutual goal is to make sure nothing is being made in sweatshops."

When asked if the code of conduct will be changed, Curley said, "The code of conduct may be elaborated on." The group will be comprised of student, administrators, and faculty. Curley was happy that things are going in a positive manner between the groups and both sides realize that this is an issue that needs to be addressed. "I have seen nothing but positive attitudes, we all want to the best system possible," Said Curley.

"This became a real issue about five years ago. The United Students against Sweatshops have been working on it for about three years now."

Curley said that universities have a lot of influence and companies are finally beginning to see this issue as an economic issue so they are being more helpful. "Consumers are becoming very aware and the companies realize that, be continued. "Companies are now more willing to disclose where factories are and specific information about them."

He stressed the need to correct problems rather then pulling up and leaving them unsolved. "If it is identified that something is made in a place that would fit the description of a sweatshop, we want to correct the problem, not cause a job to disappear, but correct the problem." Curley stated.

When asked where the majority of the factories that produce UMass goods are located Curley was not totally sure but based on the disclosures he has received thus far he said, "From what I am seeing it looks to be about a 50/50 split between domestic and foreign factories." Curley stated that most of the foreign factories are located in Mexico.

Paul Page was not available for comment at the time of press.

■ SGA

Continued from page 1

body should be well represented and be able to get their area governments rolling," Sears said. "Once we get this done, we can then focus on the Greek and commuter areas."

Tierney, who authored bill V, was pleased that the motion passed, but wished it had gotten more support.

"I understand why it didn't, but this is beneficial to all students," Tierney said. She acknowledged that it had been a semester long process for her to see it passed, but the last time it had been modified was 1984.

The Senate also passed motions giving $3,900 to Orchard Hill Area Government for the Fill the Bowl concert and $1,300 to Sylvan Area Government.

The meeting, which started at 7:45 p.m. witnessed Howe and Avakian thanking everyone that helped them with their presidential campaign. Ettinghan and Navare thanking everyone that helped them with theirs, and a lot of goodbyes.

Howe and Avakian said goodbye to members of their cabinet who were graduating or leaving the country, including emotional goodbyes to Sandra Broodley.

"She's been here since I've been here, and I'll remember what Sandra's done for me," Avakian said, and then promised to speed his goodbyes up so that he would cry and "further ruin my stupid image."

"I want everyone stand up right now, and give her a standing ovation for being the best goddamn Secretary of the Registry we've ever had," Avakian said to the cheers of the Senate. He then gave her flowers.

Howe said that saying goodbye to Broodley would be the hardest for him.

"We've been best friends in terms of stress and in terms of life. She's going to Utah, leaving us for good. It's been a pleasure. She's brought the RSO's more than they could imagine," Howe said. He said that someone on campus could look at RSO's and see her.

"I'll miss her in the office, but I can't tell you how much I'll miss you as a friend." Howe said to Broodley who was sitting in the front row.

■ budget

continued from page 2

Chancellor Scott, when confronted by Seth Avakian, Student Trustee and Graduate Student with a simple question of "what are you willing to cut?"

Scott responded by simply looking at him and not answering. Avakian's response to this reaction from Scott was inevitably, "I think I stumped him. There are a lot of tough questions that are going to have to be answered very soon, and I want to make sure that they are answered by the end of the semester so that students will have a chance to respond to his decision."

Thomas Taffe, a graduate student in Anthropology, commented on how the investments that are being made into the company of PeopleSoft, "still do not yet include things such as upgrading our system to a fleet of Pentium-class computers, training for everyone who will be using these computers, the rewiring of the entire campus, and the upgrade of the entire mainframe as a whole."

He went on to say, "You are abusing the undergrads and dismissing the whole reason why we are here, which is to give them an education."

Anne Varnot and Lisa Lindgren, both AHA painters and graduate students commented on how the University shut down Clarke Hall on March 10 and they now have no place to work. Varnot commented that, "if this is a state funded University, shouldn't every department be treated equally?"

UM students to rally in DC

Matt Foster
Collegian Staff

The Western Mass Global Awareness Network held a rally yesterday in the Campus Center concourse, combining their upcoming protests in Washington D.C. with areas of concern on the UMass campus.

Members of the network and other UMass student organizations spoke about why they would be traveling to Washington D.C. on the weekend of April 16th to protest the meeting of International Monetary Fund (IMF) and the World Bank.

The rally opened with call-and-answer type chants led by Chauncy Young, one of the organizers of the protest in Washington D.C.

"You gotta beat back the corporate attack. You gotta beat, beat back the corporate attack," the crowd chanted, referring to not only the IMF and World Bank, but also the privatization of the campus services.

Frank Borges, a member of the Labor Studies department and a board member of the Workers Rights Consortium spoke first on his reasons for attending the protest.

"The IMF and the World Bank are promoting... corporate values, downsizing, privatization, and forcing public institutions, communities, countries, to adopt the values of the corporate bottom line," Borges said.

He went on to describe the values of the corporate bottom line as "profits over people, profits over the environment, profits over the food you eat the way that it's produced, the way that it's engineered."

He said that these programs should look familiar to UMass students.

"These are exactly the same values that we are facing right here at UMass: privatization and downsizing."

The next speaker, Jeff Ballinger, described as a "long time worker's activist" by Borges, spoke from the book The Last Train Miracle, a book written by world bank economists.

"This is the blueprint for developing countries... This is the outline, this is the framework for developing their economy so that it's run by the technocrats appointed by the World Bank," Ballinger explained, as he read an excerpt from "The East Asian Miracle."

"In Japan, Korea, Singapore, Taiwan, and China governments restructured the labor sector to suppress radical activity in an effort to insure political stability," Ballinger said.

Following Ballinger, students planning on attending the protest in Washington D.C. spoke about their personal reasons for the trip.

"The reason really we have to scream and shout our goals and our objectives is that the U.S. media and the U.S.... model is not going to change unless we can sway public opinion and really bring attention to these problems," one student said.

Another student brought up concerns about people dealing only with their cause.

"I really hope that this leads to more coalition building between groups of radical people so that we can change the world. That's not going to happen if we don't all get together and organize ourselves together as one voice and all support each other on whatever issues we have," Martina Robinson said.

Another student found the idea that "people are going down there for all different reasons" was "really cool and really exciting" to him, and that you really do get a little bit beneath... the surface you see how a lot of these things really have a lot to do with each other."

"I don't see this as a single issue event," he concluded.

Student Government Association senator Phil Zetye spoke about his reasons for attending the protest.

"I feel it's a great opportunity to experience a different side of a lot of issues. I think that we all see the mainstream issues being heard. One of the reasons I'm going is because I really believe that it's going to be something really empowering for every student, every person who goes down there to be surrounded by people who are largely of like mind."

News. We bring the world to you.

■ weekend

continued from page 2

around $1200 dollars was reported stolen from a female student's room on the fourth floor.

"[The owner of the computer] went to the bathroom, left the door unlocked and when she returned the computer was gone. Nobody saw or heard anything," Lyons said.

This is the ninth report police of received this semester of similar incidents.

According to the public safety alert, issued by the UMass PD, except for one stolen from a vehicle parked next to a dormitory, and one from an office, all of the computers have been stolen from student's rooms on campus. In almost all of the incidents, students had left their rooms unlocked and unattended and most were stolen during weekday mornings.

The alert reminds students to "always lock your door and be aware of suspicious activity on your floor. Call 911 if you see anyone who doesn't belong in your living area. The University Police would rather check suspicious activity than take a report of a crime."

According to the report, "This is the time of year when the natural tendency is to open your doors and windows to let spring's balmy breezes waft cold winter away. Remember to protect your (and your roommate's) property and person by securing your room at all times."

Fossil footprint expert to give lecture at Pratt Museum, AC

By Alicia Upano
Collegian Staff

Martin Lockley, one of the world's experts in dinosaur footprints, is a tracker. But tonight, the public can track him down at the Amherst College's Pratt Museum of Natural History.

Lockley is giving a lecture titled "The Eternal Trail: New Perspectives on Evolution, Through the Tracks of Dinosaurs and Other Animals." He is a paleontology professor at the University of Colorado-Denver and has studied the track ways of many animals in various parts of the world, from the first Tyrannosaurus Rex track in New Mexico to the world's longest set of footprints in central Asia.

Lockley is also the author of popular and scholarly works on dinosaur tracks. His new book, The Eternal Trail: A Tracker Looks at Evolution begins with the tracks from the Connecticut Valley and shows the relationship between the dinosaurs and mammals, birds and other vertebrae. Lockley has said that morphology, physiology and behavior can be understood from a footprint of an extinct or living animal.

Linda Thomas, curator of the Pratt Museum of Natural History, said, "In his new book, it sounds to me like it's a synthesis of a lot of years of his studies." Thomas also said that fossil track studies have undergone a renaissance over the past 20 years.

Thomas explained that fossil footprints can capture behavior, as they reveal information about who was present on the fossil-bearing ground.

As for evolution, the topic of Lockley's lecture and newest book, Thomas stated, "We know a little bit about how they moved, how fast they were going... If you follow a track way, you can actually see changes in locomotion and foot anatomy."

Lockley's talk is sponsored by the Pratt Museum of Natural History and the two have a unique connection. Pratt Museum has the oldest and largest collection of dinosaur tracks. Edward Hitchcock (1793-1864), geologist and president of Amherst College founded Ichnology, the science of fossil footprints. He realized that markings in local stones could be the tracks of animals.

The Connecticut Valley is famous for its dinosaur tracks and Hitchcock's collection is considered one of the finest in the world.

The lecture will take place in Room 5 of the Amherst College, Pratt Museum of Natural History at 7:30 p.m. The talk is free, and will be followed by refreshments and a book signing.

Union debates privatization

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

The three part series titled "The People's University: Education Before Profit" concluded yesterday as speakers discussed future action to be taken in regards to privatization, budget cuts and diversity.

University Store Operations Manager Sid Ferrera and Textbook Annex Manager Scott Cashman informed students about the effect privatization would have on the UStore. Cashman could not be reached for interview.

Ferrera stated that he and Cashman belong to the local Union that is opposed to administration's position in favor of privatization. According to him, students should look at both sides of the story.

"What we're trying to do is present both sides of the story," Ferrera said. "The Union side which is definitely state institutional and encouraging students to go out there and look at the administration's position."

The administration has set up a website aimed towards answering students' questions as to why the university would look towards the outside sector in leasing a public store.

"They feel it will get additional money for the operations," Ferrera said. "The union doesn't feel that way and that's why the union has submitted a bid that was included in the whole process."

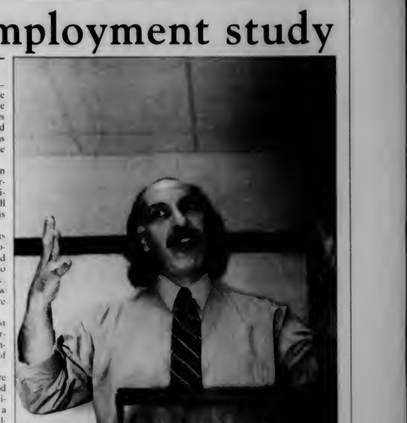
After the bid was submitted, the administration made a decision that it was too unrealistic, Ferrera stated. The Union disagrees with this and Ferrera added that the union feels the bid is realistic and the expectations in the bid can be achieved.

The University announced the decision to lease the University Store and the Textbook Annex to Follett Higher Education Corporation at the beginning of the semester. According to Ferrera, Follett said they would spend approximately $800,000 a year in renovation costs, a figure that was comparatively more than what the union had submitted. Ferrera stated that the stores need renovation and that Follett has the monies to make it brand new.

Also included in the bid were propositions to move parts of the University Store to other parts of the Campus Center, creating different departments and bringing the Textbook Annex into the bookstore, Ferrera stated.

"I know it is a point of contention for a lot of students going through the textbook annex with a warehouse looking place and bringing it in here," Ferrera said. "Obviously it serves well, but bringing it in here would then make it a one stop shopping place."

The final approval to privatize will come from the auditor. The approved contract has been handed in to him, Ferrera said, and will review whether or not Follett would offer a substantial gain to the University.



"The Chancellor gave the go ahead for the place to go private, but being a state institution, the auditor has the final say," Ferrera said. "I know a lot of people are under the impression that it's a done deal. No, it's not a done deal. The auditor still has to give the final go ahead."

He stated that students could do their part by asking themselves whether privatization of the bookstores would be in their best interest.

"Students definitely have to take a look at both sides of this process and then decide what's best for them," Ferrera said. "If they think that privatization is not best for them, they should contact the president's office or talk to the Chancellor and see what they can do. It's about pressure if they don't feel it's the best thing for them."

Teen employment study

Matt Foster
Collegian Staff

Dr M. J. Alhabeeb spoke to students about how the make and spend money.

Dr. M.J. Alhabeeb, an associate professor in Consumer Studies, gave a lecture yesterday about his studies with teens and how they make and spend their money. The lecture was the first in a series sponsored by the UMass Center for the Family.

According to Alhabeeb, a person will set his or her spending plan during their teen years. His report estimates that American teenagers will spend more than $100 billion this year.

The study focused on two aspects of youth and money. First, it categorizes employed and unemployed youth and connects employment to each teen' life outside of work. Second, the study looked at how much each youth earned and where that money was spent.

Alhabeeb's main interest in the study was examining the correlation between the teenagers' earning and spending and the type of family that teen comes from.

"When we know how and where young people get their money, and how they spend it, we can help families, school systems, and society as a whole make better decisions regarding teenage employment," Alhabeeb said.

The study was conducted in the form of a survey last spring among five area high schools including Springfield, Holyoke and Longmeadow High Schools.

The surveys asked students personal information regarding their age, sex, ethnic background and whether or not they were employed. It went on to ask about the student's parent's marital status, employment status, average earning and education level. Finally, the survey asked for information about the teens' lives after having a job, including questions regarding the quality of their schoolwork, their relationships with family and friends and their spending habits.

After working on the results from the surveys, Alhabeeb presented his findings to a consumer studies class.

The average working teen from Western Massachusetts, according to Alhabeeb's findings is an older male, from a large family with a mother who has at least completed high school.

However, it was less likely that a specific teen would be employed if that teen were Caucasian and had two working parents.

According to the studies findings, 78 percent of the teenagers surveyed were employed and of them 59 per cent worked 20 or more hours a week.

Most of the working teens earned between $101 and $150 per week, and saved an average of $33 per week, spending most of their money on clothing and personal care items (clothing, hair products, skin products, etc.)

The majority of the students surveyed thought their school work did not suffer because of their jobs. They also felt that there were no changes in the strength of their family and social lives as a result of their employment.

The students were either content with their hours at work or wanted more.

Of the unemployed students, most felt that if they had a job their schoolwork would suffer. The parents of the unemployed students felt the same.

The students' parents also felt that there were no changes in their child's school performance, grades, or social life due to their job.

Parents also thought their teens became more independent, self-reliant and responsible upon becoming employed.

Alhabeeb's study also found that more American teens work than do in Canada, Western Europe or Japan. Alhabeeb credits this to the intensity of the schoolwork given to teenagers in those areas of the world.

www.dailycollegian.com

OFFcampus ONline

Three students • One semester • NO RULES

PHOTOS!
DIARIES!
GET ON IT!
SPRING BREAK

Count down the days to summer with Jenessa, Stephanie and Jeanette. It's all about college, good times, graduation and the great unknown.

mass LIVE
www.masslive.com

Join the fun at www.masslive.com/offcampus

The University of Massachusetts
Something Every Friday
Presents

Richie Havens in Concert

Featuring vocalist:
Dayna Kurtz

UMass Fine Arts Center
Concert Hall
Friday March 31, 2000
8:00p.m.
Free to UMass Students;
$5.00 General Public

Ruben Blades Concert, Clinic, & Lecture

Featuring "Editus"
UMass Fine Arts Center Concert Hall
Concert: Sunday April 2, 8:00pm
Musical Clinic: Monday April 3, 10am...Free
Lecture: Monday April 3, 1pm...Free

Concert Ticket Information:
Free to UMass Students with valid I.D.;
$5 Five-College Students
$10 General Public

Latin music performer, Ruben Blades is an accomplished singer/songwriter as well as actor and activist. Winner of 3-Grammy's and performed in over 20 movies.

Tickets for both programs on sale at FAC Boxoffice: 545-2511
Co-Sponsored by:
The Student Affairs Cultural Enrichment Fund; The UMass Arts Council; The Student Government Program Board; The Distinguished Visitors Program; The UMass Alumni Association; The UMass Cultural Centers;CASA Dominicana; SGA Finance Committee; the Latin American Studies Program; Umass Auxiliary Services; Campus Activities Cluster; the Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs; and the Commuter Area Government.

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Our Opinion

A good impression

We are all going to leave this University eventually. Some of us will graduate, some of us will not. A certain percentage will wind up in prisons and morgues, and a certain percentage will wind up in grad school. Whatever the specific circumstances, every student must eventually leave the hallowed grounds of Amherst and make their own way in the world.

So who will take our places? Who are the bold young souls who are going to swallow their pride and tell their teachers that they're planning on attending UMass as opposed to, say, BC or something? You already know. You've seen them.

You see the high-schoolers wandering around the campus with their parents and myriad tour guides, in groups large and small, being herded about like so many Gap-wearing sheep. You also see them away from any groups, by themselves or with friends of parents, exploring the campus with a strange, prospective look on their faces. They come early and they come often, especially this time of year, and they come with a purpose.

They want to know if the University of Massachusetts at Amherst is the right choice for them.

How will they decide this? They will look at the scenery. They will listen to the canned spiel from the tour guide. They will attack the DC food, not knowing, of course, that DC food cannot be defeated, but merely contained. They will feel the atmosphere of the campus and attempt to absorb everything that comes their way.

Above all, though, they will look at the students.

They will try to see how the students behave, how they interact, how they appear to the naked eye. If the students are happy, if they seem to be having a good time, then these prospective high school seniors hearts' will begin to warm to the idea that this could be a good place for them to be.

This is the responsibility of all current UMass students. We will soon be gone; we need people to replace us who won't soil our memories. The demeanor of the students seen by these touring young folk is of unimaginable importance in crafting their impression of UMass, and it takes so little.

While the debate continually rages concerning the worst thing about this school, everyone knows that the best thing about UMass is the people. All we basically have to do is refrain from talking about rape in unnaturally loud voices when the group walks by. We can smile at their faces rather than scowling. Make friendly eye contact without ogling the seventeen-year-old girls too much. Give the impression of a nice, friendly place where these people could be just as happy as the people they observe.

Giving the best possible impression of campus doesn't rest solely in the hands of it's students – groundskeeping and things like that are also factors – but we do help a great deal. So please, be kind to the prospective students whom you see on campus, and try to give them the best opinion of UMass that they could possibly come away with. After all, they may be living on your floor next year.

Fun and tourism in the Lone Star State

I will accept the fact that I've been in the foam at the Bahama Beach Club. And I've definitely walked the strip at Hampton Beach more than a couple times. I even remember feeling cool walking around high school football games in my varsity jacket. And I know I'm not alone.

But I bet I'm one of a handful who has ever experienced the famous Wonder World in San Marcos, Texas.

It was a rainy day during our spring break and we wanted to explore beyond beautiful San Antonio to get a more filling taste of the Lone Star State. However, I don't think this "hotspot" is what Texans or Gov. George W. Bush had in mind when they invite visitors to their state. But if you're looking for a cheap, and I mean cheap, gift for your parents or significant other or another way to pass an afternoon, then pay attention.

The four of us were warned not to go to Austin because the roads were a slick composition of oil and gravel that narrowed down to two lanes at some points. After scouring through an assortment of travel guides, the appealing descriptions of Wonder World just wouldn't let us alone so we set off for our own Wally World. This place doesn't just feature underground caves. It's also home to an observation tower, a train ride through a wildlife park and an anti-gravity room. It offers over 10,001 choices of gifts, the largest of its kind in the whole state. We should have known it was too good to be true.

Our first indication was the 15-minute drive through residential neighborhoods we had to take just to get there. How could a place so fun and so big be so far off the highway? But we took our final right and pulled into the parking lot that was no bigger than half of Haigus Mall. The large cutouts of cave people and dinosaurs did not look promising, though we did take pictures of ourselves with our heads sticking out of the holes.

Kathleen Ralls

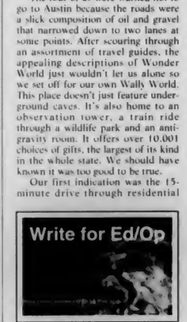
On first sight, I wanted to remain in the car with our just-bought snacks. I was willing to forgo the Wonder World experience and keep an eye on our rental car, but eventually, I gave in. First impressions were obviously not important to the owners as we scanned the actual souvenir shop/entrance to the caves/place to purchase tickets for the train through the wildlife park and anti-gravity room/snack shop, which looked like a beat-up ranch house.

We took one look at the rock candy and birdhouses and we wanted to leave, but since we had no other plans for the day, we decided to take a chance on the caves – for $9 dollars apiece. As we milled about the Cave'n Store, waiting for the tour to start, young male Wonder World workers whirled around trying to swoon us with their fancy assortment of black-lite paraphernalia and wind chimes. This place doesn't just sell pepper-flavored gum, it has a fake razor with blood gag gift and "black-faced soap." I wondered where the skee-ball machines were so I could start cashing in my tickets.

Along the shelves was the usual assortment of shot glasses, mug and "fancy" dishes with the shape of Texas and Wonder World painted on. There was the Bullshit Bag for those who are "full of it" to send to the government once they "fill it up." Remember those paddles the senior guys spanked the incoming freshmen with in Dazed in Confused? They sell those here too, engraved with a sketch of a parent wailing on their child. Ever wanted a miniature plastic Aunt Jemima replica with tiny spoons popping out of her shoulders? Look no further than Wonder World.

Just as I was thinking that I couldn't want for anything more in life, Courtney came by with some homemade fudge for us to snack on. "It's the best fudge I've ever had," said the culinary-talented cook. But there was more. The Mexican World Market, a little inlet in the shop, offers skulls, "all original and preserved to complete your wall treatments," and baseball cards – an understandable combination.

I skipped the tour and ended up learning that the staff was comprised of Southwest Texas St. University students (which explained their youthfully earnest selling skills) who couldn't understand how we had ended up at Wonder World. I had no explanation, except that Courtney was destined to taste the finest of fudge she possibly could.



By the time the tour led by Mike, who enjoyed making sexual innuendos about Texans being large for my friends and their family tour companions ended, we didn't feel like testing out the anti-gravity room or view the wildlife tour that features an assortment of deer and pheasants.

I'm not going to completely let ourselves off the hook, but we should have known better, choosing a place called Wonder World, that appeared to be a crude marketing experiment by SWSTU students. We had similar grand expectations much like the Chevy Chase and his Griswold family trip to Wally World in National Lampoon's Vacation. Staging a race across the miles of hot top just to be the first ones there – we were definitely willing to sweat it out for the glory. In hindsight, I wish the place had been closed like Wally World had been for the Griswolds, and we got to spend more time in our final destination, Austin.

Still, I think we learned our lesson: Never trust a place that boasts more about its souvenir shop than its main attractions.

But for any of you who might want to check out Wonder World, make sure to log on for a $39.95 five-year membership certificate that can save you over 25-percent off all the fake guns and drums you can imagine.

Kathleen Ralls is a Collegian columnist.

Doin' it library-style

In the spirit of the forthcoming April Fool's Day I am going to continue a tradition I started last year. To follow will be two stories. One of them is true the other is false. See if you can figure it out lest ye be fooled. One story is about a raucous night in one of the buildings on campus and the other is about an Immaculate Conception.

I will start with the raucous night of partying. First of all let me say that all names have been changed so as not to incriminate any of the guilty parties. The night was exactly four weeks ago on March 2, 2000. My friends and I kind of dared ourselves to do something we had always wanted to do. On that night Jay Jean, Marco Millbier, Mike Bucuvalas, John Markloff, John Pierz and I filled our backpacks with beer and liquor and headed to the library at about 10 P.M. We met a few girls that Jay knew and then we were off to "study." One of the girls brought her boyfriend (this will be important later). The nine of us walked into the library then quickly scattered throughout its 26 floors. At this point we had about an hour and a half until the library closed and the fun began.

Dan Viens

At midnight when the library closed someone came around to warn all the students that it was time to leave. Each of us was hiding behind a rack or in a bathroom stall. If you check the surveillance tape for that day it will show that nine students who entered the library never left. At 12:30 when the coast was clear we met on the twelfth floor with all of our booze. However, only seven of us were there. Rosie Von Hollander, the girl that brought her boyfriend, and said boyfriend decided that they were going to have sex on every floor from the top down before the night was out.

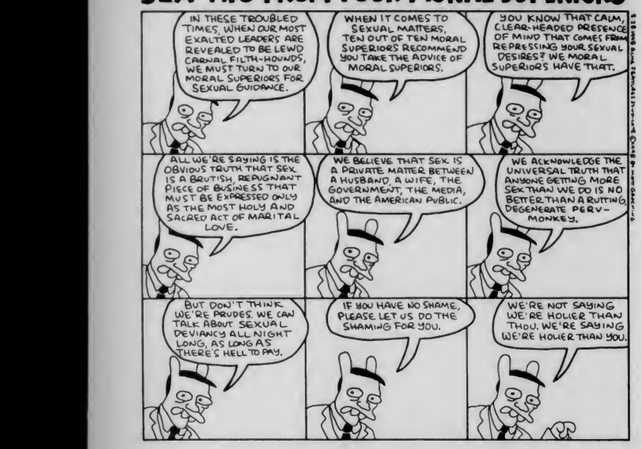
The rest of us just spent the night getting wasted. We took shots on every floor. We only used the women's rest rooms. We had book throwing contests and elevator races. Throughout the night we brought up fake pornographic pictures of Hillary Clinton on every computer in the joint. In the back of the bottom floor we cleared out all the furniture and stacked chairs ten-high at one end. Then we would bowl library book carts at them. For the most part it was just good, clean, drunken fun. However, things did get a little out of hand. Marco urinated all over the Info-trac and both Johns lit some of the second floor newspapers on fire. Jay and Buca tried hacking into the computer system, but neither of them can type nor can they reroute encryptions. The only problem I caused was leaving the seat up in all of the women's restrooms.

As for the two members of the library sex marathon things didn't go too well. They started on the 26th floor and made it down to the eleventh without any problem. After they were done on each floor they would leave their initials where they got it on. Once they had finished on the 11th floor Rosie started carving their initials on the table they had just soiled. All of a sudden she noticed her boyfriend's initials with another girl's. Rosie freaked. It turned out her boyfriend had already completed the lofty feat of copulating on every floor of the library. He explained to her that he had done it, but never all in one night. She flipped out and tied him naked to a bookshelf with her nylons. Lucky for him we found and untied him right as we were leaving. It must have been very cold on that floor. In the morning we hid for a while then walked out of the building like nothing happened. Even though it was just the six of us guys partying with two girls it really seemed like there were nine of us. I truly believe that the strong African American spirit of W.E.B. DuBois was partying right along with us.

The next story is about one of the most improbable and unexpected events of my entire life. As I write this and as you read this I am pregnant. I have no idea how it happened. First of all I'm a virgin so I couldn't have gotten pregnant from sex and I don't use intravenous drugs so you can count that out. Besides all that I don't have a womb or vagina, nor do I produce eggs. However, the tests have been run and the results are back. I am a pregnant man. The second Immaculate Conception in history is taking place inside my body. The first one was of course was Jesus. The doctors don't know if my baby is the Second Coming of Christ or just a brand new savior. They really won't be sure until the third trimester.

At first I was nervous and a trifle confused. However, I now realize that it is my duty to bring this extraordinary being to term in my belly. I bought the book What To Expect When You're Expecting the other day. I was pissed off when I found out that there wasn't a section for pregnant men. I figured that I had bought the wrong edition so I went back to the bookstore looking for the men's version; however, that edition won't be on the shelves for another year.

As I write this and as you read this I am pregnant. I have no idea how it happened. First of all I'm a virgin, and besides all that I don't have a womb or vagina, nor do I produce eggs.



My nervousness has returned. I'm worried about where my miracle baby is going to come out of me. I don't want to have a scar from a C-section. Sometimes I can't handle all of the hormones surging through my body. One day I'll be giddy as a schoolgirl then the next day I'll see a commercial and it will have me in tears all day.

Another problem I've been having is with the wacky cravings I've been getting. The other night I woke my roommate up to go buy me pickles, peanut butter and pet food. I made a foot long sub out of them and went to bed happy. Then I woke up with the worst taste in my mouth. The worst thing of all is that I can't really go out to parties. All of the smoke would be bad for my unborn child. Also the temptation to do a keg stand would be too overwhelming.

I don't know what is going to happen. I am definitely nervous, but I am also confident. I am confident in my ability to be a father, I am confident in my strength to make it through this pregnancy and I am confident in my baby's ability and shrewdness to find the least painful exodus from my body. I'm also pretty sure that I'll be on Maury Povich's talk show.

There are the stories. One of them is true. Think it over for a while and send in your guesses. Good Luck!

Dan Viens is a Collegian Columnist.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Sam Wilkinson Acting Editor-in-Chief Sam Wilkinson Managing Editor Shawn Ilinitch Business Manager
Ben Alamed Web Developer Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager
Sage Brousseau Co-Advertising Production Manager Jake Ellen Senior Diversity Editor

Ryan Benharris Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pushkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jake Ellen Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jeanie Gorlovsky Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sasha Senderovich Jewish Affairs Editor
Mariele Scherzinger Multicultural Affairs Editor
Adam Martignetti Co-News Editor
Melissa Hammel Co-News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Adam White Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor

Joslyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Christine Connare Women's Issues Editor
Marc Menchel Finance Manager
Joshua Szymanski Distribution Manager
Katie Beith Promotions Manager
Catherine Turner International Affairs Editor
Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Chris Brennan Assistant Finance Manager
Eric Faber Assistant Advertising Manager
Amy Gargania Assistant Business Manager

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Ed/Op is your student voice.

Utilize it and make yourself heard!

Arts and Living

For a good time, call...

Campus Bathrooms: The Definitive Guide

Be sure to wipe today

By Kristi Ceccarossi
Collegian Staff

CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT

Who doesn't dread the exposure of a public bathroom? W[illegible] hasn't painfully suppressed the urge to make dramatic use of a t[illegible] let simply because other people will see and hear your perf[illegible] mance? Perhaps these experiences are the only ubiquities in [illegible] what really unites us. And for that reason, privacy, in my opinio[illegible] the most important trait one can hope to find in a public bathroom.

The basement of the campus center provides the most fantastic, luxurious restrooms with this factor in mind. Stretching deeply into the corners of the basement, beyond the ATM's and check cashing window, this women's bathroom in this location houses at least 20 stalls. All dark, all as devoted to secrecy as a confessional booth. Personally, I go out of my was on campus when the urge strikes just to use this facility. Anonymity is paramount here.

Final rating: five flushes

Turn to WIPE, page 7

Arts and Living staff leaps head first into campus restrooms...

emerging smelly but informed

Public Enemy: Number 2

By Ryan Benharris
Collegian Staff

As I wandered around campus, I realized how ridiculous I looked. Have you ever seen a dog wander around the back yard, before he decides to find a place to leave a gift for the earth? It's kind of funny to watch. As I walked around my designated area, I realized that I am no different from the four dogs I have at home. I spent a while walking through buildings, searching and sniffing, and testing sinks and toilets. The sniffing is what really got to me. I definitely don't enjoy smelling the surprises left by others. It was truly the smelling that made me come to the dog realization though. I really looked like a dog. I walked around sniffing things. I was very aware of my surrounding. And, when I found the perfect place, I dropped my pants and took a dump on the floor. Okay, well maybe that's stretching it a bit, but none-the-less it was still a very in depth search.

The study began at the Dickinson Police building where the Air Force is held. Now, before I even walked into the bathroom, I figured I knew what it would be like. The air force men are well trained, and thus they would probably keep the place nice and clean. There were no surprises (in any way you can think of) in the bathroom. It smelled pleasant. The urinals were not covered in yellow residue, and the toilets were spotless. Now, that either means that my assumption about Air Force men was true, or someone pissed off their superior officer, and was forced to scrub brown scum out of the can with a toothbrush the night before. As anyone will tell you, of the two varieties of soap that this campus offers, the almond soap is far superior to the pink soap. The reasons include the fresh smell that it leaves your hands with, and the fact that it cleans your hands much more efficiently than that pink soap does. When it comes to soap, it's only the best for the Air Force. All together, the bathrooms in the Dickinson Police building are quite impressive. I highly recommend you use your time wisely, and check them out.

The next stop on the Ryan Benharris bathroom tour was

Turn to ENEMY, page 7

Local student uses Collegian as toilet paper

By David Troupes
Collegian Staff

LGRC Lowrise, main floor

Weighing in at only two sinks, two urinals and one spacious stall, this restroom struck me as inappropriately small for the number of people that pass through Lederle every day. It does sport almond soap and mirrors above each sink, as well as the surprising luxury of a full-length mirror, in which computer science students can straiten their faded Pink Floyd t-shirts, so any shortcomings in the area of volume are partially made up for with added amenities. It remains, however, a decidedly old-school restroom.

Final Rating: 3 flushes

LGRC Tower, main floor

Lederle continues to suffer from inadequate bathroom capacity, this ground-floor restroom of a massive building contains only 3 urinals, 2 sinks and one stall (if unprecedented proximity tortiously, you could hold a small caucus in there). Almond soap and dual paper towel dispensers provide top-notch hand washing service, however, and it contains an enigmatic

Turn to PAPER, page 7

Layout and design by Alan Basque

Photos by Jaret Bar[illegible]

Steel proves strongest metal

PANTERA
Reinventing the Steel
Elektra

By Michael Delano
Collegian Staff

When first single "Revolution is my Name" blasted through the radio late last month, I realized how great it is to have Pantera back. Arguably the finest metal band of the 90s, Reinventing the Steel is their first studio release since 1996's insanely heavy The Great Southern Trendkill. The new album follows in the footsteps of that scorcher, but incorporates the power groove elements of their first two releases; 1990's Cowboys from Hell and the 1992's masterpiece Vulgar Display of Power. The album definitely has the feel of a comeback, throwing any experimentation or slower songs right out the window to leave us with a comparatively lean ten-track, slab of brutality. Fans hoping for the experimental "Good Friends and a Bottle of Pills" or the eerie "Floods" will be disappointed and have to settle for mind-numbingly heavy metal that is a very welcome middle finger to the majority of these nu-metal bands that think they can compete with the lords of the south. This album proves, again, that no one can.

In case you haven't heard of Pantera before, they are the rare metal band that has actually stayed together for over ten years through constant touring and successful side projects. They are the amazing alliance of Nawlins native Phil Anselmo, whose deep voice and primal screams are complimented nicely by the punishing and unendingly creative sounds of Texans Dimebag Darrell, his brother, drummer Vinnie Paul, and bassist Rex Brown. The band is known for their distinct Southern-style heavy metal, as well as being one of the coolest bands on the planet. If you need proof of this, check out any of their home videos, my personal favorite being the wryly-titled 3, for an extremely entertaining and detailed look into their wild life on the road. Their live release Official Live: 101 Proof is also essential, complete with two awesome new studio tracks and Anselmo's priceless commentary like "Smoke Pickin' dope" and his reference to the chaotic "Suicide Note Pt. II" as "their hit."

Its truly amazing that Pantera has managed to stay this good for so long. Reinventing easily ranks among their other albums and, being the shortest, is the easiest to throw in when you need some quick mayhem. But this is calculated mayhem, there's nothing thrown-together about it.

However, it gives off that great sound of four guys just going crazy when in fact Vinnie Paul is one of metal's most creative drummers and Dimebag manages to squeeze some wickedly unique riffs to add to his already amazing soloing. Just check out the high-pitched trickle on "You've Got to Belong to It" or the Morello-esque waver at the beginning of "It Makes Them Disappear." It takes a special vocalist to match this level of excellence, and Anselmo is more than up to the task. He can go from piercing screams to his normal deep singing voice effortlessly, and he never holds anything back; you can practically see him turning red half the time.

"Revolution is my Name" is definitely the centerpiece of the album, and has more talent in its five minutes than many new metal albums have in their entirety. When was the last time you heard this many riffs, time, or speed changes in one song? Anselmo asks "What is My Name?" the same way DMX does; as a challenge, a statement, one that gives the song even more attitude. Dimebag plays guitar solos to his heart's content, a skill that may shock and confuse some nu-metal fans, and the back-to-back solos recall the insane talent showcase at the end of "Hangar 18" from Megadeth's seminal Rust In Peace.

The band hasn't lost any of its trademark humor, and the cover, featuring a friend of the band's jumping through flames in his boxers with a whiskey bottle, should be your first indication. You can't ask for a better song title than "Yesterday Don't Mean Shit," and there's nothing but pride to be felt from the line "your trust is in whiskey, weed, and Black Sabbath-it's Goddamn Electric." It's classic Phil when he yells "kiss my ass, Dracula" for no apparent reason at the end of the album, and if you have a problem with it, you can contact the band's legal team, although the group warns in the liner notes "don't f*ck with our lawyers because you're gonna get f*cked."

When Phil screams "Yesterday don't mean shit/Because tomorrow's the day you'll have to face," he speaks for the whole band. Even if you erased Pantera's incredible past and were simply left with this album, it would still be amazing and have most new bands walking on home. But as a progression, Reinventing is simply another notch carved into the crown that Pantera wears as the undisputed kings of heavy metal. Grade: A

Pantera hangs out back home while anticipating the release of their new album

COURTESY JOE GIRON

Red Hot Chili Peppers and Foo Fighters invade Mullins Center

By Adam Martignetti
Collegian Staff

As the Red Hot Chili Peppers and Foo Fighters prepare to rock the Mullins Center this coming Sunday, the two time-tested bands find themselves in similar places.

Reared during the 90s, the Chili Peppers during the earlier half and Foo Fighters during the latter, both bands took pains to reflect on where they've been and where they're going on their latest albums.

With the return of guitarist John Frusciante, after a two-album absence, RHCP released Californication, their most mature album to date. The album is a fuming fusion of disillusionment and journey with a classic Chili Pepper flair. The sliding, liquid guitar riffs, the mellow brooding choruses and the punctuated bass lines accentuate the band's new lyrical maturity. Mix in a couple of raucous, but expected sexcrazed tracks like "Get on Top" and "I like Dirt" and the album is an instant classic.

Californication's title track is a harsh condemnation of popular culture and the Hollywood mystique that glorifies it. And throughout the album, the Chili Peppers seem concerned with the dark shadings of the California sub culture, in which they were bred. "Parallel Universe" and "Easily" further penetrate cultural consciousness. The album is appropriately begun with "Around the World" (a reference to experience) and ended with "Road Trippin'" (the promise of things to come) furthering the album's (and the band's) sense of journey.

The first two singles, the irresistible "Scar Tissue" and the "Higher Ground"-reprise "Other Side," reinforce these themes. "Scar Tissue," a tribute to battle-earned scars and "Other Side," a uctaphor for achieving redemption. And in the middle of it all is the album's most uncharacteristic song, the beautifully wispy, "Porcelain," which is an ode to life's fragility.

Thus far, fans have responded well to Californication, as Billboard recently announced that the album has gone triple platinum with a few more tailor-made singles ready for the radio waves.

Likewise, Foo Fighters seems to have gone through a similar type of retrospection, perhaps a more galactic one, wandering but a journey nonetheless, on their latest release. With the emergence of rap-metal and the shift in the band's personnel, Dave Grohl turns inward for an almost spiritual experience. The album is a throwback to grunge, only with a refined and more melodic twist. "Learn to Fly," "Aurora," and "Next Year." They all suggest the band's reflection and searching. Indeed, the album's title, Nothing Left to Lose is an apt reflection for both bands heading into Sunday's show.

And the fans are ready as the MTV tour arrives at a rarely sold-out Mullins Center for the most eagerly anticipated show of the semester. The Foos will hit the stage at 7:40 p.m., before the Chili Peppers come on to frenzy what promises to be an already excited crowd. So, arrive early, bring your earplugs, and enjoy a great show with two of today's best rock bands.

Foo Fighters are only one half of the tremendous show breaking into the Mullins Center on Sunday night along with Red Hot Chili Peppers.

COURTESY DAVID GLICK

THE ARTS STAFF REGRETS TO INFORM YOU THAT RYAN BENHARRIS' TELEVISION HAS DIED. IT EXPLODED AFTER SOMEONE ACCIDENTALLY USED IT TO WATCH PROFESSIONAL WRESTLING. THEREFORE HE WILL NO LONGER BE WRITING TUBE NOTES. CHECK BACK NEXT WEEK FOR "TUBE NOTES WITH NICHOLAS PIZZOLATO"

FEATURED ITEM THIS WEEK

Take an additional $5 off
ALL MESH SHORTS
Regular Prices from $29.99-$19.99
Champion, Dodger, Cotton Exchange, Atlantic Sportswear

COLLEGIATE Casuals
UMass Clothing for Everyone™
M-Th 8:30-6 Fri. 8:30-5
Sat. 11 to 4
(413) 545 - 2619

THE University Store
Not like a mall... Better.™

April '00
ARTS ON CAMPUS...
A monthly calendar brought to you by the UMass Arts Council.

Events

Saturday, April 1
XCINEATER Homeschmachine 8p.m. in Curtain Theater through 4/8 with 2p.m. matinee 4/2nd & 4/9th. $ 545-2511
THEATER MISSION IMPROVable 8p.m. in Campus Center Room 163. 546-2631. Also on 4/8 in Campus Center 101, 4/22 in Campus Center 163 and 4/29 in Campus Center 101.
XTHEATER Simultaneous Histories-Looking In/To The Future 8p.m. in Bowker Auditorium $ 545-2511.
Sunday, April 2
XMUSIC Assad Duo Brazilian guitar duo. 7:30 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium $ 545-2511.
XMUSIC Ruben Blades 8 p.m. in Concert Hall. Free to UMass students, others $ 545-2511. Also on 4/3 Music Clinic at 10 a.m. and Conversation at 1 p.m. in the Concert Hall (call 545-3600 for info on 4/3 events).
Monday, April 3
MUSIC Visiting Pianist: Maria Straliber Visiting Pianist, 8p.m. in Bezanson Recital Hall $ 545-2511. Also on 4/4 Lecture at 2:30 p.m. in fine Arts Center Room 44 and on 4/5 Master Class with Visiting Pianist Maria Straliber 3:300p.m. in Bezanson Recital Hall (call 545-2227 for info on events on 4/4, 4/5)
MUSIC Ultimate Fakebook, Hospital and the Magnets 8p.m. in the Skybox $ 577-4759
Tuesday, April 4
MUSIC Faculty Recital Jon Humphrey, Laura Kock, Nadine Shank and Dorothy Ornest 8p.m. in Bezanson Recital Hall $ 545-2511
MUSIC Jiggle The Handle, Doctor Awkward and MOR! STYLE! 8p.m. in the Skybox $ 577-4759
Wednesday, April 5
XFILM: Nosthatme 1999 International festival of award winning student film and video 8p.m. in Herter Auditorium 227 $ 545-6348
MUSIC
THEATER: No! Ready For Bedtime Players 8 p.m. in Fred Lounge in Orchard Hill $ 577-5181 Also on 4/19 in VanMeter Basement Lounge and 4/26 in Mary Lyon basement lounge.
Thursday, April 6
GRANT DEADLINE! Final UMass Arts Council grant deadline! Call 545-0202 or visit www.umass.edu/tac/artscouncil for more info and an application form.
MUSIC Vibewise 8 p.m. in the Skybox. $ 577-4759
XTHEATER: Noises Off by UMass Theater Guild @ 8p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom $ 545-0415. Through 4/8 with 2 p.m. matinee on 4/8.
Friday, April 7
XMUSIC Singer/Songwriter Joyce Tyrneck 7p.m. in Graduate Student Lounge 545-4824.
Saturday, April 8
dXDANCE: Sha Sha Higby: The Spider and the Buddha 8p.m. in Bowker Auditorium $ 545-2511
MUSIC Ellen Jahn in concert. 8p.m. in the Mullins Center. $ 545-0505.
MUSIC Battle of the Bands Finals 8p.m. in The Skybox $ 577-4759
Sunday, April 9
XMUSIC A Sense of Home UMass Chamber Choir, directed by E. Wayne Abercrombie. 4p.m. in Concert Hall. $ 545-2511
Monday, April 10
XFILM: Peacemaking after the Balkan War Discussion with Director Srdjan Karanovic. 4p.m. in Herter Auditorium 227. 545-6348.
LECTURE Visiting Scholar: Richard Sheedy speaks on "The Piano Master Classes of Franz Liszt and Hans Von Bulow" 4:30p.m. in Fine Arts Center Room 155. 545-2221.
dMUSIC Kennedy & the Philharmonic Folksong Essen 7:30p.m. in Concert Hall $ 545-2511
Thursday, April 13
XMUSIC Mississippi Peace improvisational string trio featuring Michelle Kinney, Jason Hwang, Greg Stormy Takeishi 7p.m. in Augusta Savage Gallery. 545-5177.
Friday, April 14
XpTHEATER Mary Sivert One-woman show by Brazilian performer Denise Stoklos 8p.m. in Bowker Auditorium $ 545-2511
MUSIC Uncle Sammy, Arthur Dent Foundation and Psychedelic Breakfast 8:30 in The Skybox $ 577-4759
Saturday, April 15
MUSIC Creed featuring Sevendust in concert 7:30p.m. at the Mullins Center $ 545-0505.
MUSIC From VI A spring showcase of some of UMass's finest ensembles. 8p.m. in Concert Hall $ 545-2511
Sunday, April 16
MUSIC Bassen & Friends Faculty Recital featuring Stephen Wait, Fredric Cohen, Laura Klock, Michael Sussman and Daniel Epstein 2p.m. in Bezanson Recital Hall $ 545-2511
Tuesday, April 18
dXDANCE The Sean Curran Dance Company 7:30p.m. in Concert Hall $ 545-2511
XPOETRY Agha Shahid Ali 7p.m. in Augusta Savage Gallery. 545-5177
MUSIC Jazz Lab Ensemble with Director Adam Fairer 7:30p.m. in Bezanson Recital Hall $ 545-2511.
Thursday, April 20
dXTHEATER Fitzgerald Stories 8 p.m. in Rand Theater $ 545-3490. Through 4/29 with 2p.m. matinee on 4/29.
Monday, April 24
MUSIC Change of Time Ensemble Faculty Recital featuring Adam Fairer, Russ Lossing and John Herbert 8p.m. in Bezanson Recital Hall $ 545-2511
Tuesday, April 25
MUSIC Percussion & Movement Percussion Ensemble with Director Eduardo Leandro and Dance Ensemble with Choreographer Billbob Brown. 8p.m. in Bowker Auditorium $ 545-2511
Thursday, April 27
THEATER Festival of "One Act Plays" UMass Theater Guild 6p.m. in the Durfee Gardens. Through 4/29, with 2 p.m. matinee on 4/30 $ 545-0415.
dXMUSIC Bakida Carroll Quintet 8p.m. in Bezanson Recital Hall $ 545-2511
LECTURE "The End of Fashion: How Marketing Changed the Clothing Business forever" by Teri Agins. 4:00p.m. in Mahar Auditorium 545-3008.
Saturday, April 29
MUSIC 18th Annual New England Saxophone Symposium Lynn Klock, coordinator and recitalist, Nick Brignola, jazz artist, saxophone quartet, from various universities 9:30a.m.-7 p.m. location TBA $ 545-2511
Sunday, April 30
MUSIC Band Concert Concert band with Director Jeffrey Holmes 2p.m. in Concert Hall $ 545-2511
MUSIC Candide by Leonard Bernstein Opera Workshop with Elizabeth Parker and Steven Coombs. 4p.m. in Bezanson Recital Hall $ 545-2511.
MUSIC Voices of the Fox Symphony Band & Youth Wind Ensemble with Directors Malcolm W. Rowell, Jr. and Steven Bodner. 7p.m. in Concert Hall. $ 545-2511

Exhibits

XAUGUSIA SAVAGE GALLERY
101 New Africa House 545-5177
M-Th 1-7 pm W-F 1-5 pm
Ancestral Memories Enduring Patterns in Contemporary Native American Art through Apr. 25
XCHAMPDEN GALLERY & SCULPTURE GARDEN
Southwest Residential Area 545-0480
M-TH 12-6, SU 1-5 pm
Silver Linings/Memory through Apr. 14
BFA Thesis Exhibition
Apr. 16-20: James Stanley
Apr. 23-27: Leah Mullens & Heidrun Brisham
Apr. 30-May 4: Mark Bennato & Steve Budington
XHERTER ART GALLERY
125A Herter Hall 545-0976
M-F 11-4 pm SA-SU 1-4 pm
MFA Thesis Exhibitions
Apr. 23-28: Larry Bamberg & Teri Rosen
Apr. 30-May 5: Francis Merrigan
XSTUDENT UNION GALLERY
Student Union Building 545-0792
M-TH 10-5 pm F 10-3 pm SA-SU 1-4 pm
Enchainment: New Works by Deborah Muirhead & Kitty Sweet Winslow Through Apr. 14
BFA Thesis Shows
by UMass Undergraduates in painting, printmaking, ceramics & camputer design program
Apr. 17-28
Reception: Apr. 17, 4-6p.m.
XUNIVERSITY GALLERY
Fine Arts Center 545-3670
10-3 11-4:30 pm SA-SU 2-5 pm
Soft White Lighting Designs By Artists Vita Acconci, Nayland Blake, Greg Colson, R.M. Fischer, Tom Otterness, Robert Rauschenberg, Jason Rhoades, Richard Tuttle, Franz West, Robert Wilson
Dec. 8-May 19
Reception: Apr. 7, 5-7p.m.
Moodrivers: Photographs from the Permanent Collection
Dec. 8-May 19
Reception: Apr. 7, 5-7p.m.
XWHEELER GALLERY
Central Residential Area 545-0680
M-TH 10-6 pm, SU 2-5 pm
Evidence of Feminism: Exhibit C by Rhoda Juers, Judith Shatter, Oriole Feshbach, Helena Dooley Mehta, Rita Edelman, Jean Unger
Through Apr. 28
BFA Thesis Exhibition
Apr. 30-May 4: Christin Carr

Give College students are offered a discounted admission at Fine Arts Center events
Sponsored, in part, by a grant from the UMass Arts Council

4/00

UMass Arts Council·101 Hasbrouck Lab·545-0202

wipe

continued from page 5

CAMPUS CENTER MAIN FLOOR

But not every restroom has the space and lighting necessary to obscure the identities of its visitors like the campus center basement can. For these spots, other redeeming qualities have to make it special and distinct. Like the bathrooms located on the main floor of the campus center, a few steps away from the Blue Wall and almost parallel to the always elusive visitor's desk. Here cleanliness is prime, perhaps because it is of the most convenient, popular lavs on campus. A large mirror is available just outside the ladies' room for full-length inspection on days with inclement weather. Also, you are royally treated to the option of drying your hands with paper towels or the hot air blowers.
Final rating: three flushes

MACHMER HALL

Finding your class in Machmer Hall can be a very dubious endeavor, with its elusive east and west wing separation. Finding a bathroom is not quite as difficult and should nature call while you're wandering through that part of campus, I suggest you check out the facilities Machmer has to offer.

The ladies room in the foyer of Machmer East is the first on campus that I'd call, without hesitation, quaint. It has the charm of elementary school restrooms, where everything seems slightly smaller than average size. The building's maintenance team does a fantastic job keeping it clean. Toilet paper is easily accessed and paper towels are in consistent abundance.

But what really makes Machmer's bathroom outstanding is its unique architectural design. When entering you pass through not one but two doors, which requires you to spend a few seconds in a small, vacant space, giving one the illusion that they are about to enter a new world, like Alice's descent into Wonderland.
Final rating: three and a half flushes

HASBROUCK LAB

Do not go here. Like everything else in this building, the restrooms in Hasbrouck Lab seem to revisit the earliest grounds for genetic experiments in the 50's, with dingy hallways and uncomfortably industrial images. The toilet paper, soap and paper towel dispensers are nearly defunct. The cell-like restroom and the individual stalls are tight and the color of aged basements that have suffered flood damage. The toilets are rather low to the ground and can startle any user over 5'5" when they first sit down. Subdue your bladder and walk a few feet to the campus center.
Final rating: one flush

The arts staff stands around in amazement at what may be the absolute worst bathroom on campus.

COURTESY MARIONE CINEMA paper

continued from page 5

downward-tilted mirror, providing patrons with an excellent view of the top of the waste paper basket and their own shoes. Just in case.
Final Rating: 3 flushes

Marcus Hall, main floor

Cramped conditions and a monochromatic paint job bring back painful memories of grammar school insecurities, and the number of urinals they managed to cram into the available wall space ought to be criminal. Functional door locks, paper towel dispensers and almond soap help to offset the structural hostility of the place, but still... man, you can smell the breath of the guy standing next to you. And the room's only mirror is off to one side, making checking yourself out as you wash your hands impossible without serious neck turning.
Final Rating: 2 flushes

Flint Laboratory, basement

I have to thank my friend Joel for pointing out this little piece of heaven on earth to me. Tiled in a charming aqua and dull cranberry scheme, this is by far the most aesthetically pleasing restroom facility I've ever experienced - ever. Vertical dividers separate the urinals, and the middle urinal (of three) has been set at a lower height, allowing little people to luxuriate in the act of relieving oneself in a way never before possible. One soap dispenser (almond, of course) for three sinks might be pushing it, but the wall-sized mirror directly behind the sinks, in which three people might easily bask in narcissistic glory, more than compensates for any crowding around the soap. Using this bathroom feels like a privilege, certainly, it is a treat not to be missed during your stay at UMass.
Final Rating: 5 flushes

Holdsworth Natural Resource Center, main floor

I always cringe when I walk into a bathroom and see bucket-style urinals. The designers tried to counteract the "howdy, neighbor!" factor with vertical dividers, but the psychological damage had already been done. As a means of washing the sense of violation off yourself, they provide some of the highest-pressure sink faucets I've encountered. Below the sinks is another faucet presumably for filling buckets and, with the door closed and the floor drain blocked, tormenting aquatic habitats for schthy-floor drain blocked, tormenting aquatic habitats for schthy-floor courses. Not bad, Holdsworth, but I've seen better.
Final Rating: 2 flushes

enemy

continued from page 5

Goodell. As I walked into Goodell, it struck me that I had never been in there before. I guess it's kind of sad that the only reason I've been in a building that has so much history on this campus is to check out the quality of their restroom. However, I found some remarkable things about Goodell. First of all, I was the only person in the place that was not wearing a suit. It looked really professional. The hallways are like a hospital and the bathrooms are very clean. The most remarkable thing about the bathroom is the mirrors. They are pointed diagonally down towards the floor. I began to wonder if this was where the final scene in Boogie Nights was shot, because it certainly gave you an optimum, hold your penis in front of the mirror feeling (not that I tried). The graffiti in the bathroom was worth noting as well. There was a sign above the urinals that had all the letters carved off except, "Liars." The only I knew is the drummer from Metallica. Has the all-mighty Lars peed right here on campus? I think so! Like Dickinson, the bathrooms in Goodell are also worth a visit. Remember though, if you choose to go there, don't forget to wear a suit and tie.

The Morrill Science Center is one big wasteland of bathroom madness. The only bathroom I dared to enter was in Morrill II (at least I think it was Morrill II – I got there by walking around the back of Morrill I, down the hallway of Morrill III, off of the back of Rocky IV, and took a short-cut through the gates of hell. If you've ever been to Morrill, you know what I'm talking about). The bathroom was fully equipped with vicious odors, paper towels thrown about, and some guy making grunting noises in one of the stalls. Morrill, you lose points my friend. The Air Force building told you to shape up or ship out.

French Hall and South College had bathrooms almost as bad as Morrill. They are two building that look like they're ready to fall down, and I don't think the safest place to be is sitting on a toilet when they do. I especially wouldn't want to be chilling on those toilets. For some reason the toilets in French are "L" shaped with seats too big for an elephant. I'm not expecting any elephants French Hall. You shouldn't be either.

The last stop on my dog-like search through the campus for somewhere to go was the place we all dread the most: the library. Now, the library and I have had some shaky relations in the past. We ended up in a little fight when it pushed me a while back, but I think we've put that behind us. The library has bathrooms on practically every other floor. If you're going for privacy, then it's the place to be. Most of the bathrooms only have one toilet and one urinal, and the soap is quite nice. However, there's a smell that comes from all of the restrooms that is very easy to pinpoint. Need I say more? Avoid the library at all costs (that means for studying as well).

call

continued from page 5

short work of anything or anyone within a five-foot radius.
Final rating: three flushes

Tobin

The men's room in Tobin is nice and small, with the more traditional tall urinals with small dividers in between them. Paper towels are abounding, and the almighty almond soap, far superior to the crappy pink stuff, makes a welcome appearance.
Final rating: four flushes

Memorial Hall

The convenient water fountain between the men and women's bathrooms in Memorial Hall makes an ideal pre- or post-bathroom stop, and the bathroom itself is small and well heated. Paper towels assure you maximum dryness, and the coat hanger on the inside of the stall makes sure your coat doesn't have to suffer the same fate as the bottom of your shoe and come in contact with the bathroom floor.
Final rating: five flushes

Herter

Unlike the divine water fountain outside of Memorial Hall, the fountain before the lavatories in Herter is a warm and dirty descent into the depths of water fountain hell. The bathroom is spacious but filthy, and even the tag-team effort of almond soap and paper towels can't save this room from being below average.
Final rating: two flushes

Fine Arts Center

The bathroom in the FAC is top of the line, and the only thing it's missing is that old guy who gives you cologne and towels. It is for one person only, so feel free to lock the door and enjoy the spacious atmosphere. A massive paper towel dispenser and a first-rater water fountain on the outside are just the icing on the cake.
Final rating: Five Flushes

Fernald

The men's room in Fernald Hall is in the bowels of the building, you have to head downstairs into no man's land to find it. Once there, the massive interior looks strangely like a boiler room, therefore I was awaiting either my quick death at the ends of Freddy Krueger or being challenged to a match by Mick Foley. Other than the odd atmosphere, the bathroom is fine, with plenty of stalls (all urinals sectioned by dividers, and the heavenly duo of paper towels and almond soap.
Final rating: three flushes

Clark

If you ever wanted to experience what a bathroom is like in London, try heading over to the Clark building. The bathroom I found was very small and was entered through a wooden door with a knob. The sink is small and ancient looking, but the bathroom on a whole has a nice original and quaint feeling to it that more than makes up for the lack of spaciousness. For a taste of the UK, head on over.
Final rating: three flushes

Franklin Dining Commons

Whenever dealing with DC food, it is known that an open receptacle nearby all patrons is necessary for the common and inevitable puke-fest. The appearance of two bathrooms in the commons fulfills that requirement, and the walls are conveniently colored a pea green that boast much in common with the free-flowing vak. Both campus sides and dorm sides are identical, except that while the campus side is just your average ugly bathroom, the dorm side is filthy and disgusting.
Campus side: two flushes Dorm Side: God help us

THE MONKEY BAR & GRILLE
This Week's Drink Specials
Sex on the Beach $2.00
Magic Hat 16 oz Draft $2.75
WE BROUGHT YOU MTV, WE GAVE AWAY A TRIP TO CANCUN, NOW WE ARE BRINGING YOU THE ULTIMATE CLUB NIGHT
TONIGHT IS IBIZA NIGHT
WEDNESDAY - Ladies Night with DJ Fooz, feat. Free Prizes
THURSDAY - DJ FOOZ spins house music all night long
FRIDAY - House, Hip-hop and Top 40 music spun by SATURDAY-$4B Productions DJ's Fooz, Cromo, and Uncol
63 N. Pleasant Street 259-1600

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Featuring "Lite" $16.99 30/PK
Harpoon I.P.A. $9.99 12/pk
Guinness Pub cans $4.99 4/pk
Beck's Octoberfest $10.99 case bots
Foxhorn White Zinfandel $3.99 1.5 liter
"Genny" your choice... $ 9.99 30 pk.
Absolut 80° vodka $11.99 750ml
Bacardi 80° Rum $10.99 Liter
Gilbeys 80° gin $9.99 Liter
Popov 80° vodka $7.99 Liter
Concha Y Toro wines $6.99 1.5 liter
Glenlivet 12 yr. malt $23.99 750ml
Vodka 80° EVERYDAY PRICE! $8.99 1.75 lt
Check Out Russell's Indoor Wine Specials!
• Delivery Available • OPEN 9:00AM to 12:00PM • Visa/Mastercard • All Beers Plus Deposit •

UMASS The Index Yearbook
ATTENTION!!!
CLASS OF 2000
ABSOLUTE LAST CHANCE FOR SENIOR PORTRAITS
MARCH 27TH-31ST
Make your appointment now by calling 1-800-OUR-YEAR or log on to www.ouryear.com
School Access #147
(You need to know the access number when you make the appointment)
Order Your 2000 Yearbook ONLY $50.00
Log on to www.walsworth.com or Call 1-800-929-1503
(Service Charge of $2.95 for orders placed by phone)
DAVOR PHOTOGRAPHY
Walsworth Publishing Company

Magic Triangle

COURTESY KRISTI LEEA AMOSSO

Jemeel Moondoc looks happy to be headed to UMass for the WMUA Magic Triangle Series.

WMUA-FM's Magic Triangle Jazz Series strikes again tonight with Jemeel Moondoc and the "Jus' Grew" Orchestra. Continuing its 11th season the series presents this performance at 8 p.m. in the Bezanson Recital Hall.

Moondoc was born in Chicago and studied piano and clarinet before picking up the alto saxophone at 16. He came to Boston to study at the New England Conservatory of Music and played there with the James Tatum Blues Band. By 1976 Moondoc had found himself in New York City, where he founded one of the greatest bands of the "loft era." Munu. From this ensemble the "Jus' Grew" Orchestra was a gradual development.

Tickets are still available by calling the Fine Arts Center Box Office at 545-2511.

Collegian Staff

Explosion rocks Pioneer Valley; the Groove is in the Mass Heartland

By David Siegel
Collegian Staff

This weekend is turning out to be a groove explosion in the Pioneer Valley. Things start off with a blast as Soulive makes its way to the Pearl Street Nightclub in Northampton. Soulive is a jazzy three-piece ensemble that is sure to get your head bobbin' and your feet movin'. Their energetic, exciting shows are mostly instrumental with a few funky lyrics mixed in. After playing at the Iron Horse for the last few gigs, the band has to leave the comfortable surroundings and move to the bigger ballroom at the Pearl to make room for their progressively growing fan base.

The band is made up of extremely talented musicians with brothers Alan on the drum kit and Neil Evans on the Hammond B3 organ, along with stunning jazz guitarist Eric Krasno hailing from cross-town Hampshire College. The band blends together a unique sound showing similarities to their primary influences: Herbie Hancock, Jimmy Smith, Stevie Wonder and Bugaloo Joe Jones. They are sure to put on a groovy show that will make you understand and realize the growing movement sweeping the jam band scene known as "acid jazz". It is a blend of many different types of music that is sure to be liked by many.

Opening up for Soulive is jazz veteran Ron Levy with his Wild Kingdom. Ron Levy, who is billed as "the ultimate blues keyboard player" by the Boston Globe, is sure to put on an exciting keyboard-laden performance. Levy has certainly been around the music scene all his life, touring fulltime with jazz greats like Albert King and BB King. For the first time however, Levy has put together his own band to showcase around the country. Be sure to arrive early before Soulive, as not to miss this call from the wild.

On Friday night, newcomers Soulwork make an appearance at the Iron Horse starting at 10 p.m. Soulwork is a Boston-based band that blends together Motown-like soul melodies, tight funk grooves and superb songwriting abilities. They are making a repeat performance at the Horse after playing there last year as well as at Pearl Street and last year's Extravaganja on the Amherst Commons. Look for another performance this year on the Commons on April 29th. Opening up for Soulwork is locally based Cousin Fungus who also sport a groovy sound.

On Saturday Night, an April Fool's Day Bash is in store for the audience up on the hill at Butterfield Dorm as Psychedelic Breakfast will be starting their two set performance at 9 p.m. Unlike the bands laying down the groove the two previous nights, Psychedelic Breakfast is a much more traditional jam band, encompassing long jams, killer solos, and mind expanding segways into a performance. After recently releasing their self-titled album, this band is most certainly on the rise. They have the skill and drive it takes to hit this scene at full speed and they put on a damn good show – don't miss them!

ARTS

Time out!

Save up to 20%!

It's time to take a break. Finally, you can put your books away and start planning that well-deserved trip. So, grab your mouse and log on to Alamo's Web page, created with students like you in mind. You'll save up to 20% off our great retail rates around the globe. Go ahead, the savings are worth the click. Plus, a credit card number is not required to make a reservation! Just log on to Alamo's limited time offer at www.alamo.com/students and drive away with a smile.

Drive Happy℠

Alamo®

alamo.com

®Alamo® Rent-A-Car, L.L.C.

4875C-CD-100

Discount applies to base rate only. Taxes (including VLF taxes up to US$1.89 per day in California and GST/VAT), other governmentally-authorized or imposed surcharges, license and concession recoupment fees, airport fees and optional items are extra. Renter must meet standard age, driver and credit requirements. 24-Hour advance reservation required (48-hour for licensee locations). May not be combined with other discounts. Availability is limited. Blackout dates may apply. All vehicles must be returned to the country of origin. There will be a US$20 per day surcharge added to base rate for renters ages 21 through 24. Valid 2/20 through 6/30/00.

Arts & Living is a world of good

安城中國餐店
AMHERST CHINESE FOOD
we do not use "MSG"
253-7835 • 253-2813
62 Main Street, Amherst
VISA

Collegiate Entrepreneurs, Inc. is looking for college students who are interested in running their own business for the summer. Those interested in building their resume are encouraged to apply. Candidate must be dedicated, motivated, and have a positive attitude.

Information sessions will be held at your school next week. call the number below if you are interested in learning about this financially rewarding program.

Call us for more information:

Toll Free: 877-626-9904
Ext. 106 Ask for Bethany

Council Travel

The journey is the reward...

Give your family & friends the gift of travel

Gift certificates, passport photos, airport transfers, tours, language programs, work exchanges, ISIC backpacks, rolling duffels, & all sorts of gear, guidebooks, railpasses, tickets, accommodations and more.

44 Main Street
Amherst MA
413-256-1261

M2Ms Shades of Purple and People you Haven't Met today in Trax

M2M
Shades of Purple
Atlantic Records

With the female pop vocalist kingdom currently ruled by the tag-team duo of musical variability, Britney Spears and Christina Aguilera, the chances of another syrupy girl-pop outfit rising to fame might seem slim. If there's any group up to the challenge, however, I promise you, it's M2M. The comely Dutch singing and songwriting team of Marion Raven and Marit Larson are trying to sell themselves as true artists, not singers who record other people's songs at the direction of record executives. And, true to their word, Marion and Marit write all their own lyrics, and even profess to write some of the music. Here's a telling lyrical excerpt from the opening track, "Don't Say You Love Me:" "The next thing I know we're down at the cinema/We're sitting there, you start kissing me/What's that all about?" This is the real deal, folks – Faulkner has nothing on these girls.

As for their musical involvement, well, I couldn't find them listed as playing any instruments on any of the 13 tracks, but there are some great photographs in the booklet of one of them holding a guitar. That's good enough for me.

The music, when compared to their contemporaries, isn't half bad. It's heavily produced and as commercial as you would expect, but honestly, I'd rather listen to this than Aguilera any day of the week. M2M's vocals get a bit too mousy at times, but it's all in the name of sincerity. For fans of the genre, this album is definitely worth a listen. For the rest of us, well, buy your younger sister a copy, and then secretly borrow it from time to time. B- (David Troupes)

Tara MacLean
Passenger
Capitol Records

Tara MacLean was apparently first runner-up in the contest to be Sarah McLachlan. Her vocals are a little more nasal, a little less inviting, and her songwriting lacks the melodic flow of much of Sarah's work. The opening track, "Ericho," sounds way too similar to that Paula Cole song they use for Dawson's Creek for me to take it seriously, and "Settling," sounds like an adaptation of Tori Amos's far superior "Jackie's Strength." There are few gems to be found, such as "Jordan," a soothing, fluid song which escalates with layers of spacey guitars and other interesting background sound, and the album's title track, a twisting, percussion-heavy song with a softly soaring chorus. Most of the songs, however, are only enjoyable in a generic Lilith Fair way. C+ (David Troupes)

ANGIE APARO
The American
Arista

My love for Angie Aparo's single "Spaceship" has been well documented, but can the singer/songwriter/guitarist sustain that kind of infectious energy for an entire album? Yes and no, but there is no question that Aparo gives his all on his debut album The American.

Aparo is an Atlanta-based artist who previous to this release was content simply as a local folk rocker. With the singer's new look and backup band, Atlanta paper Creative Loafing warns that fans comfortable with seeing the singer alone on stage with just a plain brown acoustic guitar" may be in for a surprise. The massive production on this album will leave behind any thoughts of hearing simply Aparo and his guitar, although producer Matt Serletic makes sure the vocals are the dominant force in every track. In addition to the host of musicians on the album, Serletic contributes keyboards, piano, as well as orchestral compositions although we can hope he didn't have a hand in crafting Aparo's image, which appears much too close for comfort to Billy Corgan's bald head/long black coat stylings.

"Green Into Gold" is the often-used cautionary environmental song, and the perfect anti-climactic opener to precede the soaring "Spaceship." "Hush" is a solid follow-up, and eases you down off of the high into what the next few songs will be, namely mediocrity. "Cry" pushes the limits of my patience for sappy love ballads, and by the time "Free Man" rolls around you begin to see the basic blueprint of the album: munch one slow build-up to mega-chorus after another. Things get back on track with "Beautiful" a jazzy piano-driven track whose tempo brings some hope to the somber subject matter. "Memphis City Rain" feels a little more personal and is a welcome change of pace.

Aparo's plaintul lyrics keep things interesting throughout, and if you didn't get his style from "Spaceship," the couplet "Sister on the corner like a boy's wet dream/A little bit of hell in a bucket of velveteen" from "It's Alright" should give you a clue as of what to expect. This album definitely should be of interest to soft-rock fans, and contains more than a few singles that would lend themselves nicely to pop radio. While certainly not for everyone, Aparo's distinct style and clear purpose command a degree of respect. Grade B (Mike Delanol

Bobby Gaylor
fuzzatonic scream
Atlantic Records

I am very, very, very, very scared of Bobby Gaylor. I'm not even sure what fuzzatonic scream means, let alone what it's trying to be. Allow me to explain.

When you look at the front cover of fuzzatonic scream you'll see Bobby Gaylor all dressed up like Elvis Costello. You may think to yourself, "Okay, so it's a guy who wants to be like Elvis Costello." You're wrong. When you turn the disc over, you'll notice ten tracks. In no particular order, the tracks include, "Suicide," "Suicide (non-explicit version)," "Masturbation," "Tommy the Frog Killer," and "Hit a Guy with My Car." Yes, you now too are very very very, very scared of Gaylor. I'm sorry to say that it gets much more disturbing and much worse.

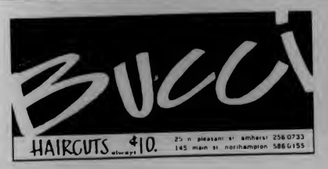
The entire disc is spoken word. Gaylor tells some extremely graphic stories, like the time he was held up at a Bar in "Business end of a Gun," with his extremely heavy Boston accent. What's playing in the background, you ask? What else would you expect besides porno music. Many of the stories are apparently supposed to be based on personal experience, but I sincerely doubt that "Hit a Guy With my Car" is true – simply because he kills a pedestrian and the cop tells him, "The guy you hit was probably and A-hole. Just tell me what happened and I'll go with that." Atlantic Records seems to claim that the first single off of the album, "Suicide" was a nation wide radio hit. I honestly don't know what radio station would play something that promotes, "If you don't like your place in the world, you can get off anytime you like, Suicide."

The stories are actually a bit interesting, but was too scary for me. "Tommy the Frog Killer" is simply a personal account of some screwed up kid that Gaylor knew when he was young, who used to crucify frogs on trees. I swear I'm not making any of this up! I guess all we can hope for is that Gaylor is never allowed to bless a group of sick children with his words of wisdom. However, I can't give this disc an F because I'm afraid of what Bobby Gaylor will do to me if he ever finds out. D (Kristi Benhartis)

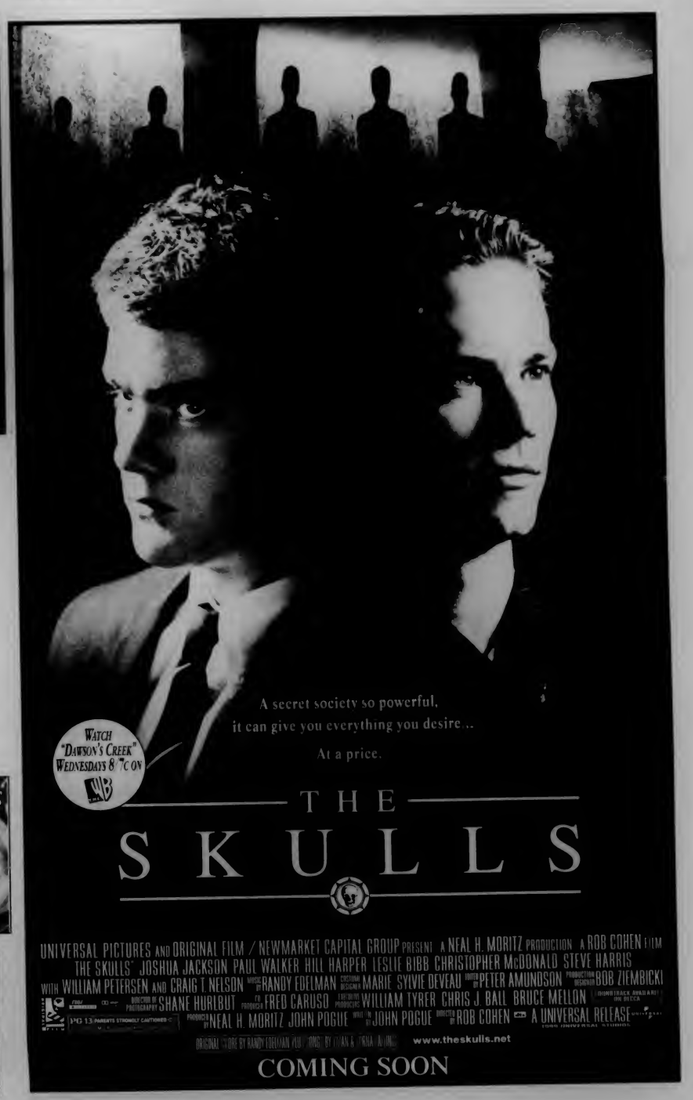
Matthew Maggiacomo
People You Haven't Met
Eremite Productions

Who can resist the charming sounds of a sweet voiced guy and his acoustic guitar? I certainly can't. So I'm in the right mood. Fortunately for UMass junior Matt Maggiacomo, I was in the right mood when I popped his cd into my player for review.

People You Haven't Met, Maggiacomo's first release contains 11 very innovative tracks that address a wide range of issues including love, Greek myths and legends, and Anglo-Saxon epics. Although his instrumental work isn't extraordinary, it's consistently pleasant and has the irresistible draw of poppy tunes from bands like Weezer and solo artist Matthew Sweet. His lyrics are equally unimposing and suggest either a mocking self-awareness or an interesting level of thoughtless confidence. At any rate, they're cute, catchy, clever and fun to sing along with.



Maggiacomo might have done better to pick up the rhythm in more of his songs, as the upbeat tracks are without question the best on the cd. His slower songs straddle that delicate line between goofiness and whiny laches of loves lost. However, bearing in mind that Maggiacomo wrote, produced and recorded his release entirely by himself doubles the value of the product. Considering his limited equipment, the quality of sound is surprising, but to be responsible for the sometimes unsound tortable imbalance of vocals and instrument.



For those of you who cannot afford the $5 that I'm requesting for a copy of his cd, many of the songs featured on it are available for free download at Emusic.com (Matthew Maggiacomo). If this idea of a one man effort to reveal the Japanese conspiracy to isolate with video games while advancing their own educational system and capitalizing on our economic growth appeals to you, check out People You Haven't Met. AB (Kristi Cameron)

Hoops all about the Benjamins

By David Katzoff
Collegian Staff

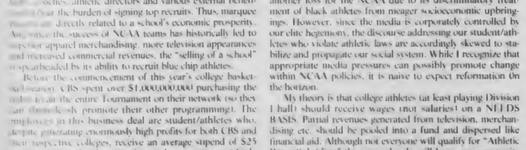
As the season's change, the stratosphere of college athletics resounds at the forefront of societies early spring buzz. More than any other sporting event with championship implications, the Tourney is particularly fascinating in that it encompasses the idealistic principles of underdog optimism and unexpected heroism. As a decidedly American phenomenon, March Madness captivates its audience with Hollywood-epic intensity, resembling an unscripted embodiment of thrilling victory, agonizing defeat and award winning performances.

However despite the beauty and ingenuity of each contest the young men and women who participate in this national event have increasingly become pawns in the sport of elitist chess. According to ESPN, the majority of basketball players playing in Division I would not be able to attend college without a full, or at least partial, scholarship. Still, collegiate athletic wars over adolescent athletes begins as early as eighth grade in AAU leagues, and universities, who begin their recruiting box primarily at inner cities high schools and playgrounds, unsurreptitiously engage in these heated recruiting competitions. Documented by such films as Hoop Dreams (1994), Big Chips (1994) and He Got Game (1998), this lobbying for future stars is a process that reeks of racism, classism, and old boy network" theatre and education is the farce at stake.

Although "free ride" tuition potentially guarantees athletes a college degree, this search equalizes the exchange between the player and the academic institution. Since the athlete is the commodity in this equation, alumni associations, athletic directors and various external benefactors bear the burden of signing top recruits. Thus, marquee players are directly related to a school's economic prosperity. Not only has the success of NCAA teams has historically led to superior apparel merchandising, more television appearances and increased commercial revenues, the "selling of a school" is spearheaded by its ability to recruit blue chip athletes.

Before the commencement of this year's college basketball season, CBS spent over $1,000,000,000 purchasing the rights to air the entire Tournament on their network (so they can theoretically promote their other programming). The employees in this business deal are student/athletes who, during the ensuing month high profits for both CBS and their respective colleges, receive an average stipend of $25 per day. Critical columnist for soulpurpose.com, "Andy Sans" claimed in his March 22nd article that the NCAA is a "communistic, oligopolistic business." Additionally, he could argue that is it our most obvious, nationally televised sweatshop.

Dealing with potential professional competitors, the NCAA imposes strict regulations upon its players, criminalizing and punishing the receipt of financial/material compensation for services rendered. For instance, players are adamantly prohibited from speaking with agents, accepting any "gifts" from undisclosed parties and playing in "unofficial" tournaments where prizes are accessible. While these laws are intended to instill respectability and amateur-level honesty throughout collegiate athletics, the backlash has resulted in a lucrative underworld of corruption, as well as early departures for the NBA, countless school sanctioning and individual probations.



Erick Barkley, a sophomore point guard for the St. John's Red Storm, has been the target of investigation all year long. During the regular season, he was suspended twice; For trading game tickets for the use of a Range Rover and for allegedly receiving "a need-based scholarship from Riverside Church to attend Maine Central Institute," a post-high school prep haven for future Division I athletes. As reported by the press on several occasions, Barkley has been the target of speculation since his arrival on campus in the fall of 1998. Recently, his decision to "bolt SJU" and enter the NBA Draft made the back page headlines of Sunday's New York Post with the caption above his face reading: TAKE THE MONEY & RUN. Implicitly this communicates that Barkley is cowardly evading further investigation and "running" to reap the benefits and legalities of an NBA salary.

Because the social system of America is designed to keep the underclass underprivileged and silent, NCAA regulations only perpetuate this structural policy. Through the depictions from visual and written media, the public is educated to view men like Barkley, Chris Porter (Auburn) and Iaron Rush (UCLA) as veritable criminals, materialistic, undisciplined rebels and even thugs. Wherein, the press could more accurately represent Barkley's decision to leave college early as another loss for the NCAA due to its discriminatory treatment of black athletes from meager socioeconomic upbringings. However, since the media is corporately controlled by our elite hegemony, the discourse addressing our student/athletes who violate athletic laws are accordingly skewed to stabilize and propagate our social system. While I recognize that appropriate media pressures can possibly promote change within the NCAA policies, it is naive to expect reformation On the horizon.

My theory is that college athletes (at least playing Division I ball) should receive wages (not salaries) on a NEEDS BASIS. Partial revenues generated from television, merchandising etc. should be pooled into a fund and dispersed like financial aid. Although not everyone will qualify for "Athletic Wage Subsidies," the ones who do will have an opportunity to rise a step above the economically depressed climate they were born into- even if their skills do not carry them to professional glory.

Go on and marinate on that for a minute as I continue to contemplate the problem and concurrently relish in March Madness.

David Katzoff is a Collegian Columnist

College basketball has changed from a simple game, to a haven for a money hungry population with a disproportionate payout

Despite success, Japanese baseball still a world away

By Shaun Powell
Newsday

TOKYO – They had their first genuine taste of major-league action Wednesday when the Mets and Cubs finally played a game that counted, but the Japanese won't soon forget the ones that didn't.

They will boast about how the Yomiuri Giants, the best team yen can buy, defended the country's pride when confronted by a pair of threats from abroad. They will beam when reminded of the decisive victories: 6-0 over the Cubs, 9-5 over the Mets. They will cite how Sammy Sosa and Mike Piazza had nothing on Hideki Matsui and Yoshinobu Takahashi.

Then, armed with ammunition, they'll explain why the Yankees aren't the real World Series champs.

A true Series should involve the world, not just the States and only one Canadian team worth mentioning. This was the theme the Japanese wanted to prove this week, a theme long embraced by Bobby Valentine and various baseball dignitaries on the other side of the Pacific.

"I don't think it'll happen in my lifetime," said Tom Lasorda, who flew over for this. "even if I live until I'm 100 years old, but it will happen someday. There will be a true World Series, and it will be played here, because baseball will eventually demand it."

There never really was a debate between the Japanese and North Americans when it came to baseball. We just took the obvious and stayed with it. Sure, once in a while, their I little Leaguers will beat ours. But there's a reason why Sadaharu Oh hit more homers than Hank Aaron: He never saw big-league pitching.

The Japanese didn't see much against the Cubs or Mets, either. The Giants smacked three homers in two games, proof that they spent their yen wisely in an offseason search for power. They pounded Bill Pulsipher early and saw fat fastballs all night. The score was 9-2 after the seventh inning, when the Japanese fans decided to get a jump on traffic. The Giants were so efficient, and the game was so lacking in suspense, that the Tokyo Dome was strangely silent inside.

Valentine had respect for the Japanese brand of baseball long before the Giants clinched their American sweep. He played and managed here, and what transpired this week didn't surprise him.

In the National League East, where the Mets play, perhaps Yomiuri wouldn't finish last, since there's always the Expos and Marlins. The Giants have long been recognized as the national team of Japan, the Yankees of the Far East, with Oh as the Japanese Ruth and Shigeo Nagashima as DiMaggio. Nagashima is arguably more revered than Oh, who isn't of 100 percent pure Japanese descent. His 1964 wedding to an Olympic hostess drew media coverage before its time, rivaled decades later by Charles and Diana's. And Nagashima now manages the Giants, which only helps his popularity.

They drew 3.6 million fans last year, more than any Japanese team, and their home in the Tokyo Dome is the Yankee Stadium of Japan and more fondly known as the Big Egg. Valentine tried to place the Giants' popularity in perspective.

"I would think it's like Notre Dame, along with the New York Yankees, along with the Chicago Bulls, all aligned into one," he said.

They work for hours on fielding, with infielders routinely taking hundreds of groundballs each day. Valentine insists the Japanese don't have superior talent, just superior teams. Their discipline shows: Yomiuri didn't commit a single error against the major leaguers.

"They just do the little things," Mets pitcher Rick Reed said. "They don't make many mistakes, if any at all. Everything's perfect. It has to be for them."

But are they, or any Japanese team, World Series-ready? The answer probably lies in the roster. Only three foreign-born players are allowed on each team, and none are exactly Ken Griffey, Jr.

The rest are pulled from a talent base confined to an island and about 20 million athletically-inclined men. Meanwhile, teams in the majors scour the globe, even Japan, for choice players. They get the best from the Dominican Republic, from Venezuela, from Cuba and from America. Just judging from the sheer numbers game and the depth of the major-league pool, it's hard to imagine Yomiuri or any other Japan pro baseball team coming over and claiming October.

At least they can lean on the last few days, when Sosa couldn't manage a hit, Piazza barely made a ripple, and Yomiuri went 2-for-2. Somehow, you suspect, George Steinbrenner and the Yankees aren't sweating it.

■ baseball

continued from page 14

to second on a Ion Robinson groundout. Caudill worked Skirkanich to a full count before sending a single past Senez at short to send Kagerer home and tie the game at five-all.

With the game knotted and momentum now shifted to the UConn dugout, the Minutemen saw another one slip away in heartbreaking fashion. Junior Kevin Wissner sent a sacrifice fly to left field, scoring sophomore Mike Scott and putting the Huskies ahead for good.

The three run push in the final frame was the culmination of a comeback that was brewing for most of the middle innings and was finally realized in the ninth. After giving up the three runs in the first, and single runs in the fifth and seventh innings respectively, the Huskies scored two in the bottom of the fourth and once in the seventh to pull themselves within striking distance.

Sophomore Robert Barton earned the win in relief for the Huskies, pitching three innings and surrendering one run on two hits. Barton, who improved to 2-0 on the season, replaced freshman Daniel Trubia in the seventh inning. Freshman lefty Peter Sotiropoulos went four innings and gave up three runs, while striking out five in the start. Sophomore Brian Hourigan started on the mound for UMass and went six innings, allowing six hits and three runs. Skirkanich, who allowed six hits and three runs in just over two innings of work, was charged with the loss.

GIFTS from GLASS to GOLD
starting under $20.00

silverscape designs
GOLDSMITHS GEM GALLERY
One King St., Northampton 584-3324 • M-Wed 10-6, Th-Sat 10-9, Sun 12-5
264 N. Pleasant St., Amherst 253-3324 • M-Sat 10-6, Thurs 'til 8, Sun 12-5

There is a MANDATORY ALL-STAFF meeting Monday, April 3rd at 4pm
Also, there will be a photography department meeting Sunday, April 2nd at 7pm

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
WEEKEND FILMS-DOWNTOWN NORTHAMPTON
The Master of SUSPENSE
Daily 5:00 except Sunday
JAMES STEWART GRACE KELLY
NEWLY RESTORED. BACK IN THEATRES AFTER 15 YEARS.
IT ONLY TAKES ONE WITNESS TO SPOIL THE PERFECT CRIME
ALFRED HITCHCOCK'S REAR WINDOW
This Film RULES!
DAILY 7:15
...look again at the year's most honored film.
5 OSCARS
KEVIN SPACEY ANNETTE BENING
AMERICAN BEAUTY
DAILY 9:30 –Last Chance
3 ACADEMY AWARD NOMINATIONS
BEING JOHN MALKOVICH
ACADEMY of MUSIC Opera House NORTHAMPTON 584-8435

Apply Now for Best Locations
Apartment Rentals
Location Location Location
in Amherst
Check them out: www.amherstlincolnreality.com or call
Lincoln Real Estate
253 - 7879

DO YOU NEED YOUR WISDOM TEETH REMOVED?
If so, patients are being enrolled for a wisdom tooth research study. Your wisdom teeth can be extracted by a Board Certified Oral Surgeon. Financial compensation will be provided for your opinion on a research pain medication.
For more information call:
SCIREX Corporation at (860) 285-0569
Outside Windsor call toll free 1-888-285-0569
SCIREX

"Persuade your neighbors to compromise wherever you can. Point out to them how the nominal winner is often a real loser – in fees, expenses, and waste of time. As a peacemaker, the lawyer has a superior opportunity of being a good person."
– Abraham Lincoln
New School of Law
At Andover
Next Class Begins
AUGUST 2000
• LSAT NOT REQUIRED
• DAY AND EVENING PROGRAMS
• AFFORDABLE TUITION PLANS AND FINANCIAL AID AVAILABLE
Effectively analyze business problems. Write and speak persuasively. Negotiate successfully. In business and in life, these are skills that can give you an important competitive edge. MSLs juris doctor program gives you the theoretical knowledge and practical skills training that prepare you not only to practice law, but to find success in other walks of life.
Visit our website at: www.mslaw.edu
Watch MSL's television show on the Media One channel, Sundays at 11:00 am.
Call or email us now for a school catalog.
email: mslaw@mslaw.edu
500 Federal Street, Andover, MA 01810 • (978) 681-0800

Don't go topless...

We've got you covered at Zanna.
ZANNA
downtown Amherst
www.zanna.com

Women's crew rows its way to split

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

There's only so much you can do.

By losing sophomore Sarah Pollmann to the German National Team and a fair chunk out of last year's first boat, Jim Dietz and the No. 22 women's crew team were left with a gaping hole. With just one senior to boast of in the 2000 campaign, the Minutewomen forged on, taking on Boston University and New Hampshire last weekend in Boston.

Unfortunately, UMass was fully outmatched and outmanned by the eighth-ranked Terriers, but was able to notch its first victory of the season in knocking off UNH.

"I felt we were closer than I thought we'd be before the race," Dietz said. "We have a very young boat, BU has incredible depth and experience."

The Terriers were the chief adversary and that was quite evident as BU took it to the Maroon and White in coming out on top in the mid-week tri-meet. The tenth-ranked Terriers' women's eight boat beat the Minutewomen to the punch, completing the race in 6:32.5, over nine seconds ahead of head coach Jim Dietz's top squadron. Both teams were neck and neck for a good chunk in chugging down the Charles River, but BU pulled away late to claim the victory.

"It was an extremely close race for the first half mile," Dietz said. "but then they just outmuscled us and pulled away."

UMass' second varsity eight lineup would have moderately better success against BU, trailing the Beantowners by about six seconds, but nonetheless, coming up short.

The overall depth of BU was most evident in the varsity four race, where both Terrier squads finished ahead of the Minutewomen (1-1). Boston University's head line finished in 7:28.1, over a half minute in front of UMass. BU's second team completed the race in 7:49.8. The Maroon and White did, however, clean up UNH, finishing with a healthy length of water between the two boats.

In addition, the first novice eight team had their troubles, finishing in third while novice boats two and three came in second behind the Terriers, the former garnering a victory over the Wildcats.

UMass returns to the water this weekend when it takes on Connecticut, Fairfield and Coast Guard down in Storrs.

"I think we're going to be good [this weekend]," Dietz said. "They're schools that are more like us. We're even across the board."

■ football

continued from page 14

ting in."

Depending on how he fits into the puzzle, Ferrer could boost an already tremendous left side of the line. With Dan Schneider and Paul Bolden returning for their senior seasons, Ferrer, Potter and Compton Webster will work for two spots in the spring before UMass gets set for its opener against William & Mary on Aug. 31, a night game that was moved from the original weekend matinee position.

"Hearing about his speed, he's a pretty quick guy," Ayi said, "so it would probably be better to keep him at linebacker, and give him some room to roam around a little."

Ferrer first hit the national scene in making his first collegiate start in the 1997 Independence Bowl against LSU, filling in for the injured Lamont Bryant, registering two tackles and a pass breakup in the Irish's 27-9 loss.

The 22-year old sociology major will likely graduate this spring, after heading into his final year with a 3.36 grade-point average.

Minuteman Notes:

The 2000 schedule has been finalized, leaving the Minutemen without a Division I-A opponent like originally thought.

UMass' schedule will include some very familiar faces and some not so familiar ones, as will the spot left for Kansas State on Sept. 23 was swallowed up by New Haven, where Whipple began his legacy as a head coach. The Minutemen have just four road games next year, playing seven in front of the Maroon and White faithful.

2000 UMass Football Schedule

Aug.	31	WILLIAM & MARY*
Sept.	16	at Richmond*
Sept.	23	NEW HAVEN
Sept.	30	HOFSTRA
Oct.	7	at Northeastern*
Oct.	14	MAINE*
Oct.	21	AMERICAN INTERNATIONAL
Oct.	28	at New Hampshire*
Nov.	4	VILLANOVA*
Nov.	11	DELAWARE*
Nov.	18	at Rhode Island*
Nov.	25	NCAA First Round
Dec.	2	NCAA Quarterfinals
Dec.	9	NCAA Semifinals
Dec.	16	NCAA Championship Game

Don't believe the hype: count to reach 83 for hopeless Sox

Ah, yes, baseball...

The smell of roasted peanuts and stale beer, annoying children with gloves screaming "Let's go Numahhh!!," the optimism that comes annually in Beantown, only to see it dwindle to nothing by season's end for 82 consecutive years. It's baseball in the northeast.

Sports Illustrated has already delivered its version of the Curse, so maybe two wrongs can make a right. Maybe Babe has reconciled with Sox management and the 1918 World Champs have finally accepted their rings with gratitude.

But that's Red Sox sanguinity, and I don't buy it.

Not yet, at least.

Now, every year I'm the pessimist. Not enough speed, a weak rotation, poor management (Ivan Calderon is that you?). But everything seems to be working in the Red Sox direction this season. The Yankees pitching staff throws another year on its shoulders. Chuck Knoblauch, Tino Martinez, Paul O'Neill, all in their mid- to late-thirties. Meanwhile, the Sox are brewing up a storm, not in the spring, but in dragging critic after critic with them to Seattle for their season opener. There's the Pedro hype, the much improved outfield and a bullpen that should challenge for the best in the bigs.

Blah blah blah, heard it before.

I'll be the first to jeer at the Yanks, the first to yell at Jimy Williams for yanking Derek Lowe in favor of John Wasdin and the first to dish out serious high-fiveage upon seeing yet another Troy O'Leary swat land safely in the right field bleachers at the Park.

However, I'm the first to be realistic.

Pedro can win the Olde Towne Team thirty if he wants to, or if Williams decides to let 'er rip with his stud pitcher. The Red Sox will likely need 35 wins out of the remaining 132 games. Sounds easy, right?

With Bret Saberhagen touching fossil status, Pedro's brother Ramon only two years away from rotator cuff surgery, Juan Pena still getting touched up in the factory and Tim Wakefield's knuckleball fluttering in the air asking to get hammered, it just doesn't seem likely. But that's been the case the past few seasons, hasn't it?

Last season, the Sox staff led by the god-like pitching coach Joe Kerrigan gave up the least runs in the American League. With no names like Rich Garces and Jin Ho Cho chucking the ball plateward, Kerrigan authored quite the tale, one that no one would believe heading into the season, but a story that old-timers will tell their grandchildren when the Martinezes have long since retired.

The acquisition of Carl Everett gives the Sox three switch-hitters and hopefully the loiner Astro will bat behind Nomar in the lineup. Set Nomar up with Jose Offerman and John Valentin, forcing opposing management to either pitch to Nomey with a southpaw or go righty against him and play into Everett's hands. With O'Leary's left-handed bat waiting, Boston then sports switch-hitting Jason Varitek, Mike Stanley and laser improved Trot Nixon.

Do that, and maybe, just maybe, you get a champion...or not.

Sounds like an offense that will make some noise that will improve on its output last season that placed it ahead of only the White Sox, the Devil Rays, the Tigers, the Angels and the Twins, teams with a combined .427 winning percentage. They will indeed.

The bottom line is that the Red Sox have been dodging too many bullets. While Pedro will in all likelihood return to his pedestal, there is simply too much thin ice on that mound. Jeff Fassero and his seven-plus ERA as your big off-season pitching move doesn't say much. How is that an improvement anyway? Pedro, Lowe and Garces, your three guarantees. Okay, I'll even throw out Rheal Cormier as an easy out for lefties. But that's it. Four pitchers. Four. Ramon oughta make a move, especially after his cool 1.50 ERA in the spring.

What people seem to have lost focus of is that there's a lot more to the American League than the dreaded Yankees. There certainly should be considered the No. 1 contender to play in the Fall Classic, if not now, then later when George Steinbrenner turns mediocrity into supremacy by landing some disgusting pitcher or heavy hitter.

If it's not the Bombers, then Cleveland could certainly fill in. The Indians brought in Chuck Finley as a much-needed left-handed starter, the first since Greg Swindell. He improves on a very average rotation. Bartolo Colon's your Game One starter, with Dave Burba and Charles Nagy providing steadiness in the middle. And Steve Karsay ought to be their eventual closer. If not a setup man for Paul Shuey to shut 'em down, Karsay's nasty stuff and blazing fastball are far more enticing to Indians fans than the aging Mike Jackson, who's since departed for the Senior Circuit.

Heh...and then the offense. It's kinda good, too, I hear.

The National League could easily put on its first ring since the Florida Marlins fetched the pail of water, only to come tumbling down minutes after reaching the top. The acquisition of Mike Hampton and the rejuvenated Al Leiter should provide the Mets with a great rotation to go along with a feisty lineup card. And the Braves are always roaming the premises, with Quilvio Veras and Reggie Sanders adding speed to the slow-footed Braves with Andres Galarraga taking his first cuts in a year. Heck, Andruw Jones and his 28 dingers are batting seventh. And the Braves can certainly pitch, that's a given.

It'll be the Braves over the Yankees this time around, even with John Smoltz out for the year. The Red Sox will claim their third wildcard berth in a row, but will bow out. Maybe David Cone, Roger Clemens and Orlando Hernandez will show their age, but one way or the other, the Yanks will hit the tape first.

Hey, I hope I'm wrong, but until proven otherwise, the Yankees stand strong on top in the AL. Two years in a row, three's a charm. As hurtful as those words are leaving my lips, it's the truth. They've got the money and they've got the Curse. And they're pretty nasty, too. Sounds like enough for me.

But I'll still take the Braves. I love Veras in that lineup another switch-hitting infielder, this time with speed, an asset Bret Boone certainly couldn't bring to the table. And that lineup, good Lord. They'll find a fourth and fifth starter, eventually – just give Leo Mazzone time to work his magic out there.

Sorry, Red Sox fans. I'm with you all the way. All the way 'til the end. Unfortunately, though, that end will come early...as usual.

Brett Mauser is a Collegian columnist.

YOU'RE LOOKIN AT THE RIGHT PLACE FOR PLENTY OF GREAT DEALS!!!
LIQUORS 44 Don't Drink & Drive
EVERYDAY PRICING
1/2 KEGS BUD, BUD LIGHT, BUD ICE, MICHELOB, MICHELOB LIGHT, AMBER BOCK, COORS COORS LIGHT $39.99 + DEP.
1/2 KEGS NATURAL, NATURAL ICE $34.99 + DEP.
1/2 KEGS BERKSHIRE BREWING, STEEL RAIL, PORTER, TRADITIONAL, I.P.A. $82.99 + DEP.
LITE & LITE ICE 30 PACK $16.49 + DEP.
BUSCH & BUSCH LIGHT 30 PACK $12.99 + DEP.
HARPOON 12 PACK $9.99 + DEP.
LABATTS 12 PACK $7.99 + DEP.
MAGIC HAT 6 PACK $5.99 + DEP.
GENUINE DRAFT LIGHT & GENUINE DRAFT $10.49 + DEP.
WINES OF THE MONTH
BERINGER FOUNDERS' ESTATES $7.99
NATHANSON CREEK $6.99
LIVINGSTON CELLARS WINES $6.99
CITRA WINES $5.99
BLACKSTONE MERLOT $8.99
GALLO WINE CELLARS WHITE ZINFANDEL $4.99
BACARDI RUM SILVER & GOLD $15.49
ABSOLUT VODKA $11.99
POLAND SPRINGS VODKA $8.99
FLEISCHMANN'S PREFERRED WHISKEY $11.99
SOUTHERN COMFORT $16.49
BURNETT'S GIN $11.99
Discounts Available On Cases Of Wine & Liquor Ask For Details
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344 NORTHAMPTON 586-3007 HOLYOKE 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 3/30/00 THRU WEDS. 4/5/00

Rental Office
1040 N. Pleasant St. #410
Amherst, MA 01002
Phone #: (413) 549-0145
Best! 1999 UMASS Massachusetts Daily Collegian
NEW PUFFTON VILLAGE
Serving all Your Rental Needs
Now Accepting applications for summer/fall 2000

$1 Sushi
Rock & Roll 10:30-1:00
Fri Sat Nights
KARAOKE
Sun-Thu: 11:30-1:00
Fri-Sat: 11:30-1:30
ICHIBAN いちばん
AUTHENIC JAPANESE AND KOREAN RESTAURANT
1 Roundhouse Plaza, Northampton, MA
(413) 585-1185
(Behind City Hall, off Main St.)
10% Student Discount with valid student ID

IT'S YOUR BODY
If your car has an accident, don't let the tow truck drag it wherever. Demand Dana! We offer a lifetime warranty on all our body shop work.
DANA BODY SHOP
968 Bridge Road, Northampton, Mass. 586-7250

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENT

Moving off campus? Come to the Apartment Complex Fair on Wed. April 5, from 10-3 on the Campus Center Concourse. One-stop-shopping! Sponsored by Commuter Services, 428 Student Union

Klub Kai is booking formals and Graduation Parties for May 2000. Call Cheng @ 586-2774 after 4:30 pm. Buffet Packages available.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Puffton Village Take over our lease. Renovated 3 bedroom apartment. Call 549-0822

3 bedroom apartment. Great location. Close to town and campus. $900/mo. On bus route. Take over our lease starting June 1st. Call 256-0145.

Take over our lease! Very nice 3br in Puffton. Call today, this great apartment won't last! Avail. end of May. 549-7235.

Brandywine Apts. Now accepting apps for June, July, Aug or Sept 1 yr. leases. Call 549-0600 or stop by the rental office.

Puffton Village 3 bedroom Available ASAP. Call 549-6247.

Two bedrooms, one bath. 1.5 miles from campus. On bus route. Pond view, huge back yard. Heat and hot water included. Michelle 548-3915.

Puffton Village 3 bedroom apartment for rent. Take over our lease and skip BUREAUCRATIC BS. Phone 549-4640.

Large 2 bedroom apartment. On Main St. 1 mile from town. $950/month. Available 6/1. Call 253-2738.

Summer Sublet w/lease option. Starts 6/1. On bus route. 10 minutes from campus. 2 bedroom, 2 bath. hit/htwtr included. Furniture available, no extra charge. Call 253-6577.

2 bedroom apartment on bus route. $775/mo. Everything included. Available 6/1. 397-9798.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Summer Sublet w/lease option starting 6/1. Puffton Village 1 bedroom. $595.00 a month. Call 549-2060.

Large four bedroom apartment in Hadley, 2 bathroom. Right on bus route, bikepath in backyard. June 1st. Call 582-9679.

Apply now for best locations. Amherst Center 1,2 and 3 bedroom apartments. Gas heat, hardwood floor. April showings for June and September. Lincoln Real Estate. No fees charged. 253-7879.

Apply now for best locations. 3 bedroom condos. Gas heat, hardwood floors, bright heated basement with study and laundry area. 1/2 mile to campus, on bus route. April showings for June and September. Lincoln Real Estate. No fees charged. 253-7879.

AUTO FOR SALE

'89 Ford Mustang 5 speed, all power, black, runs great $2000/obo. 549-0664.

1994 Jeep Wrangler Sahara. 50k miles. Excellent condition. Forest Green with Sahara interior. $11,000 or B.O. Call Bob 549-4204.

EMPLOYMENT

Busy auction gallery seeking office manager with good typing, computer and telephone skills. May-Dec. (but would consider May-Sept 2) on Nantucket Island, Ma. Salary plus housing. 508-228-3942. P.O. Box 2607 Nantucket, Ma 02584.

Painters needed.
Hardworking, dependent students wanted. No experience needed. $8 starting + bonuses. Contact Alex at 413-247-9299 877 626-9904.

Leaders needed. Summer teenage bicycling trips. US, Canada, Europe. Minimum 4-week time commitment. Salary plus expenses paid. Student Hosteling Program, Ashfield Rd., Conway, MA 01341 (800)343-6132 www.bikatrips.com

EMPLOYMENT

Seeking experienced waitstaff and kitchen help for new resturant and bar opening downtown Amherst in April. Call Carl at (413)330-4546 or 253-4438 evenings.

Bank on getting a tan this summer working outside with other students! Earn up to $9.00- $13.00/hr. Various positions available. For information or to apply on-line see our website at http://www.university-painters.com

Camp Canadensis, Pocono Mountains, PA. Premier residential coed summer camp. We are looking for energetic, qualified and caring staff to teach all general athletics, gymnastics, hockey, tennis, mountain bikes, golf, motorcycles, outdoor adventure, ropes, archery, drama, video, photography, fishing, WSI, waterfront activities, arts and crafts, cooking and much more! Excellent facilities and great salary! 6/21/00-8/18/00 Call (800)832-8228 or apply on-line. www.canadensis.com

Seeking experienced waitstaff and kitchen help for new restaurant and bar opening downtown Amherst. In April. Call Carl at (413)330-4546.

Attention UMass Students!
Do you want to earn extra money with a job you can be proud of? The U.S. Census Bureau is hiring for Census 2000! Application process done on campus, flexible hours, work on campus. Make at least $11.50/hr. U.S. Department of Commerce, Bureau of the Census. Contact Charles Yi at (413)732-2102.

Are you connected? Internet users needed! $350-850/wk. www.AMScommerce.com

Summer Help Wanted Local corrugated Manufacturer Looking for summer help for 2nd and 3rd shift. Good Pay $11.25 an hour. Call Scott Parsons 413-582-3844.

Delivery persons wanted. Apply at O.P. Dough, downtown Amherst.

EMPLOYMENT

Summer on Cape Cod. Non-smokers only. General restaurant work, including cashiering and service. We seek students who already have housing nearby or who are familiar with the area and can make housing arrangements. This is a great job for the right people. $8/hr and meals plus a bonus of $100/wk for each week you work through August 31, 2000. For more information, check www.rare.com/clamshack.htm or call Bill Millett at 1-800-887-2951. Or mail resume to South Wellfleet Clam Shack, P.O. Box 321, South Wellfleet, MA 02663.

Copywriter: Part-time, student preferred. (413)536-5086 12-7pm.

Help Wanted: Part-time bar/floor manager. The Amherst Brewing Company is looking for an experienced, team oriented, assistant manager for our busy weekends. Excellent opportunity for an enthusiastic, professional. Apply in person at 24 No. Pleasant St, Amherst.

Flexible part-time. Evening and weekend shifts available. 20hrs/wk required. PVTA accessible. For more information call Abt Associates, Inc. Paul Bebo, Recruiting Coordinator. 1-800-792-4514. E.O.E. M/F.

Cruise Line entry level on board positions available, great benefits, seasonal or year-round. (941)329-6434 www.cruisecareers.com

Fall 200 internships with the Student Legal Service Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field; work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary-training provided. Contact the Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

Full and part-time ice cream and sandwich shop on bike trail in Hadley. Ice Cream Pedaler 586-9580.

EMPLOYMENT

Have an amazing summer! Prestigious coed camp in beautiful Mass seeks caring, motivated college students & grads who love kids. GENERAL & SPECIALTY COUNSELORS needed. Join a dedicated, fun team. Competitive salaries+travel+room+board. Call Camp Taconic: 1-800-762-2820.

UAHC Crane Lake and Eisner Camps, Reform Jewish co-educational Camps located in the Berkshires of Massachusetts, seek qualified, dedicated counselors and specialists, including Waterfront; Athletics, Arts. Good salary, r&b included, travel assistance. Crane Lake Camp. Contact Brad Gerstle, 800-227-2660 ILUVCAMP@aol.com; www.cranelakecamp.com Eisner Camp. Contact Louis Bordman, 212-650-4130 EISNERGUY@aol.com; www.eisnercamp.org

ENTERTAINMENT

18+ Dance party. The Pub, Amherst 10pm-1am this Friday 3/31.

FOR RENT

Need to sublet your apartment for the summer? Don't pay for rental ads. Use our website for free! http://home.olt.umass.edu/~cshrc Sponsored by Commuter Services, 428 Student Union.

Take over our lease starting 6/1. 3 bedroom, 2 bath. Call 549-3895.

FOR SALE

Used bicycles.
Buy/sell/cosign. Hampshire bicycle exchange, 65 University Dr., Amherst. 549-6575.

HOUSE FOR RENT

5 bedroom for rent June 1. Fits 6-8 people comfortably. On bus route. Call 256-8505.

MARTHA'S VINEYARD house for rent. Sleeps 8. Responsible, non-smokers only. 5/20-9/8. $1000/wk. Call (781)593-9324.

4 bedrooms, 2 baths, heated basement. 1 1/2 miles to UMass, $2000. Call Lincoln Real Estate 253-7879.

5/6 bedroom newer home with large backyard, 4 min. from UMass Hadley, Stockbridge Rd. $2000/mo 549-4270.

4 Bedroom 2 bath 2 car garage full kitchen. 4 min from school. Hadley 549-6465 or 549-9382.

LOST & FOUND

$300 Reward: Lost watch on 5th floor of library. Deceadsed grandfather's 1975 silver Rolex. Black and silver band with inscription on the back. Please call Matt @ 665-9870.

MISCELLANEOUS

Modeling & Acting Have you always dreamed of being a modal or actor but don't know where or how to get started? New faces MIETOUR is coming to your area soon. For more info call 1-877-MIE-LOOK.

Get paid to lose weight and inches. All natural, doctor recommended. 1-800-397-7715.

WANTED

Looking for musician(s) to play instrumental at dinner. Great exposure and advertising. Call Sharn 256-1115.

ROOM FOR RENT

Cheap rant! $300 a month; includes utilities. 3 rooms available in house on bus route. June 1st. Great location in Amherst. Call Vito 549-0774.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Looking for someone to split lease on one bedroom apt. Could be yours from Jan-June. 253-6783.

2 bedroom newly renovated apt. 1 bedroom available ASAP. $400/mo. 256-5969.

2 bedroom in 3 bedroom Duplex in Belchertown. On bus route. Washer/dryer. Big yard. Non-smokers. $350 incl. Available 6/1. Call Denise 323-0120.

SERVICES

Have you been ripped off by a retailer? Contact the Student Legal services Office regarding your rights as a consumer. 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

SUMMER SUBLET

Large room in spacious apartment, close to town. Call 253-0218.

Cute 4 bedroom apt in Amherst 1/4 mi. from campus-bus route 6/1-8/31. Call 549-9621! Sunny front porch.

Looking for Summer Sublet? 6/1-8/31. Sunset Townhouses across from Southwest. 3 Bedroom, 2 bath $1000.00/month. Negotiable. Call 549-0236.

3 bedroom, 2 bath free cable/hot water. AC available, refurbished. $neg. Start 6/1 to 8/31. Puffton 549-0268.

1 bedroom w/spacious living room and central air. On bus route. Available after finals. $625.00. Includes ht/htwtr. Parking, pool and laundry next door. 549-5581.

2 bedroom in 3 bedroom Townhouse. $350 utilities included. 253-6488.

SUMMER SUBLET

3 Bedroom 2 bath in Puffton from June to August. If interested call Lauren 546-1568.

Looking for a place to live this summer/fall? Great house in Amherst with two available rooms. $305/month. Please call Erin 413-549-1543.

TICKETS

Creed Floor tickets for 4/15. Call Mike at 546-1872.

Elton John Seats Section 1 Floor 6. Available 888-441-5634.

TRAVEL

Ba flexible. Save $$$. Europe $159(o/w + taxes). CHEAP FARES WORLDWIDE!! Mexico/Caribbean $199 (r/t + taxes). Call 800-326-2009 www.4cheapair.com

Mexico/Caribbean or Central America $229 rt. Europe $169 ow. Other worldwide destinations cheap. ONLY TERROR-ISTS GET YOU THERE CHEAPER! Book tickets on-line www.airtech.com or 212-219-7000.

WORLD WIDE WEB

Get paid just for being online! Did you know that there are over thirty companies which will pay you to have a small adbar on your computer screen while you're on line? It's true! Plus you can sign up for free! If interested, please go to http://paidsurfing1.netfirms.com

Five College Community Calendar

THURSDAY, MARCH 30

Lecture– Richard Pleak will present a lecture entitled "Working with Gender Atypical Youth: Issues of Diagnosis, Treatment, and Ethics" at 12:30 p.m. in room 903 of the Campus Center.

Workshop – There will be a workshop on contraception and safer sex at 5 p.m. in room 502 of University Health Services. Men and women are welcome.

FRIDAY, MARCH 31

Conference – An international conference entitled "Berlioz: Past, Present, Future" will be held at 7 p.m. in Sweeney Concert Hall, Sage Hall, at Smith College. The keynote address will be given by Peter Gay from Yale University.

Prayer – The Muslim Student Association will hold Jummaa Prayer from noon-2 p.m. in the Campus Center. Check the listing in the elevators for the room number.

NOTICES

Help – From Feb. 15-April 15 on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays from 5-8 p.m. student volunteers from the School of Management will assist non-resident aliens with the preparation of their Federal and State income tax returns. Call 545-3660 for more information.

Scholarships – The STEMTEC-NSF Teaching scholars program is offering scholarships to students who are interested in exploring a career in K-12 math or science teaching. Students do not need to be enrolled in a certificate program to apply. Applications are due by April 1. Contact Johanna at 545-0626 for more information.

Support – A grief support group is available to all students who have experienced the death of someone they love. The groups are free, small and confidential, and meet on Wednesdays and Thursday evenings. Telephone pre-screening is required for enrollment. Call 577-5516 if interested.

Support – AL-ANON and ALA-TEEN are offering local meetings for those affected by someone else's drinking problem. Call 253-5264 for meeting times and locations.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

BOOKBUCKS™ From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks,* you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

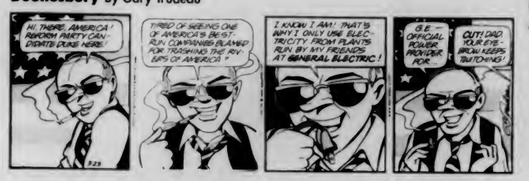
Ustore CAMPUS CENTER

Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

THURSDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MARCH 30, 2000

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH (E)	12	Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (R)		Adventure Divas – Cuba		Mystery!: Hetty Wainthropp		Being Served	Keeping Up	Wait for God	This Old Hse.
WFSB (C)	3	News /E	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		Chicago Hope "Cold Hearts" /E		48 Hours (In Stereo) /E		News /E	Late Show /E
WBZ (C)	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		Chicago Hope "Cold Hearts" /E		48 Hours (In Stereo) /E		News /E	Late Show /E
WCVB (A)	5	News /E	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle /E	Whose Line?	Whose Line?	Who Wants to Be a Millionaire		Wonderland "Pilot" /E		News /E	Nightline /E
WLVI (W)	56	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends /E	Nanny /E	Popular (R) (In Stereo) /E		Charmed "Murphy's Luck" /E		News		Friends /E	Nanny /E
WHDH (N)	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! /E	Friends (R) /E	Dweebs /E	Frasier (R) /E	Battery Park	ER "The Peace of Wild Things"		News	Tonight Show
WTXX (F)	8	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Blind Date	Real TV /E	WWF Smackdown! (In Stereo) /E				News	Real TV (R) /E	Blind Date	Change-Heart
WVIT (NBC)	10	News	NBC News	Extra /E	Ent. Tonight	Friends (R) /E	Dweebs /E	Frasier (R) /E	Battery Park	ER "The Peace of Wild Things"		News	Tonight Show
WTIC (F)	11	Simpsons /E	Frasier /E	Seinfeld /E	Friends /E	★★½ "The Cable Guy" (1996, Comedy) Jim Carrey. (In Stereo) /E				News		Friends /E	Fraser /E
WWLP (N)	22	News /E	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! /E	Friends (R) /E	Dweebs /E	Frasier (R) /E	Battery Park	ER "The Peace of Wild Things"		News /E	Tonight Show
WGBY (P)	6	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer /E		This Old Hse.	Drs. on Call	Mystery!: Hetty Wainthropp		Grafters (In Stereo) /E		Charlie Rose (In Stereo) /E
WGGB (A)	20	News /E	ABC News	Seinfeld /E	Frasier /E	Whose Line?	Whose Line?	Who Wants to Be a Millionaire		Wonderland "Pilot" /E		Nightline /E
WSBK (U)		Judge Judy /E	Judge Judy /E	Seinfeld /E	Frasier /E	WWF Smackdown! (In Stereo) /E				Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		Mad Abt. You	Judge Mathis
WTBS (S)		Roseanne /E	Roseanne /E	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	★★ "Predator 2" (1990, Science Fiction) Danny Glover, Gary Busey				★★ "Universal Soldier" (1992, Adventure)
A&E		L.A. Law		Law & Order /E		Biography: Ted Kennedy		Investigative Reports (R)		Love Chronicles /E		Law & Order "Rebels" /E
CNN (N)	23	Worldview /E	Moneyline News	hour /E	Crossfire /E	World Today /E		Larry King Live /E		Newsstand /E		Sports	Moneyline (R)
COM (C)	38	Sat. Night Live-Commercial		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	★★ "Deal of the Century" (1983, Comedy) Chevy Chase				Kaufman: Hollywood		Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC (D)		Your New House /E		Wild Discovery "Scorpions" (R)		On the Inside: Submarine		Science Mysteries		Into the Unknown (R)		On the Inside: Submarine
ESPN (E)		Sportscenter /E		College Basketball: NIT Championship – Teams TBA				College Basketball: Sam Dunk & 3-Point Championships				Sportscenter /E
LIFE (L)		Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait: Ally Sheedy		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"The Lottery" (1996, Suspense) Dan Cortese, Ken Russell /E				Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV (M)		Ultra Sound "Video Music Awards Uncensored" (R) (In Stereo)				MTV Video Music Awards (R) (In Stereo) /E						Undressed	Loveline
NICK (K)		Ali That	Catdog	Hey Arnold! /E	Rugrats /E	Catdog	Catdog	Brady Bunch	Bev. Hillbillies	All in Family	Jeffersons /E	I Love Lucy	Rewitched
SCIFI (I)		Sliders "Please Press One" /E		★½ "Eye of Destruction" (1990, Science Fiction) Gregory Hines				★★★ "The Terminator" (1984) Arnold Schwarzenegger /E					"Eye of Destruction" (1990) /E
TLC (T)	28	Home Again	Home Again	Los Angeles Earthquake (R)		Storm Force (R)		Secrets of the CIA		Mind Control		Storm Force (R)
TNT (T)		In the Heat of the Night /E		ER "Into That Good Night" /E		★½ "The Quick and the Dead" (1995, Western) Sharon Stone, Gene Hackman. /E				★★½ "The Quick and the Dead" (1995, Western)
USA (U)		Crush /E		Friends	JAG "Shadow" (In Stereo) /E	Walker, Texas Ranger /E		★★★ "Back to the Future Part II" (1989, Fantasy) Michael J. Fox. (In Stereo) /E				Crush /E
HBO (H)		★★½ "American Flyers" (1985, Drama) Kevin Costner. "PG-13" /E				Cancer: Evolution to Revolution (In Stereo) /E				1 Night Stand	Real Sex 22 (R) (In Stereo) /E
MAX (M)		(4:40)		★★ "Best Men" (1998) Dean Cain. "R" /E		★½ "You've Got Mail" (1998, Comedy) Tom Hanks. "PG" /E				★½ "Idle Hands" (1999) Devon Sawa. "R" /E		★½ "I Like to Play"
SHOW (S)		★★ "The Cowboy Way" (1994) Woody Harrelson. "PG-13" /E				★★★ "A Soldier's Sweetheart" (1998, Thriller) Kiefer Sutherland. "R" /E				★★ "At First Sight" (1999, Drama) Val Kilmer. "PG-13" /E



HSCN Hampshire Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	21	Govt to Govt
3	CBS/3 Hartford	22	NBC/22 Springfield
4	CBS/4 Boston	23	CNN Headline News
5	ABC/5 Boston	24	CNN
6	PBS/57 Springfield	25	CNN Fn
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	26	CNN Si
8	UPN/20 Hartford	27	TBS
9	Weather Channel	28	BET
10	NBC/30 New Britain	29	College TV Network
11	Fox/61 Hartford	30	Univision
12	PBS/24 Hartford	31	Comedy Central
13	WOCH & HSCN	32	Cartoon Network
14	International	33	TV Land
15	UMass Academic TV	34	C-Span
16	WB/New Haven	35	ZDTV (Tentative)
17	Sundance	36	Bloomberg Financial Network
18	The Learning Channel	37	History Channel
19	UMC-TV19	38	HSCN Programming
20	ABC/40 Springfield

Fresh By Megan Orosz

Doonesbury By Gary Trudeau

Kampus Kids By Adam Soutiere

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Over the Hedge By Fry Lewis

Over the Hedge By Fry Lewis

Horoscopes

What you see and what you know may clash today; it's a good time to increase your own mental flexibility. Some things will surprise you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – You must be willing to tell others exactly what you want today if you expect to get it by day's end. There is no room for mystery at this time.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – You're in no mood to let others dominate you today, but you're not about to make all the decisions either. It's time for a healthy compromise.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – You're likely to enjoy a fleeting moment or two today which will serve to clarify just what you are after and how you can get it.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – You're not likely to be in the mood for anything that requires sacrifice on your part today. You want it all and you want it now!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Excitement today comes from taking the initiative, and if you refuse to take the lead today you're going to ultimately be disappointed.

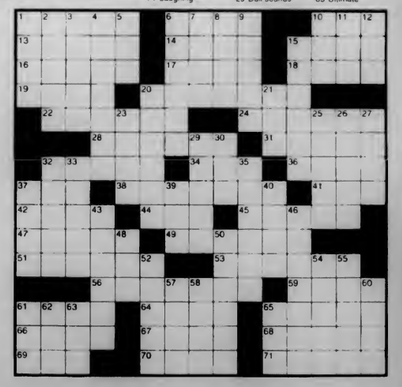
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Someone you know quite well can offer you a little more in the way of stability today. Indeed you could use a little emotional caretaking.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – Take care that you're not so straightforward and blunt that you start hurting other people's feelings. Honesty is not always the best policy!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – What happens behind closed doors today is none of your concern – unless, of course, you are holding the reins. If that is so, try to be charitable.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – You may have to break one of your own hard-and-fast rules today in order to avoid a situation which can prove quite hazardous in the long run.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – You may have to break one of your own hard-and-fast rules today in order to avoid a situation which can prove quite hazardous in the long run.

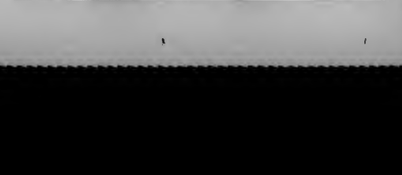


PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – A promise comes your way which may make you somewhat suspicious. Someone you know may have an alterior motive, and you'd better use caution.

Quote of the Day

"Never salsa with the homeless."

–Old proverb



ACROSS
1 Shadow
6 "Get outta here!"
10 Actress Wray
13 Heavyweight champ Joe
14 Kind of cow
15 Lamb's pen name
16 V-shaped cut
17 Popular cookie
18 Hockey's Ullman
19 Singing voice
20 Golfers' tasks
22 Behind: in a boat
24 Argentine cowboy
28 Browns
31 Summer fruit
32 Casual attire
34 Kept secret
36 In the proper manner
37 Moving truck
38 Locked up
41 N.A. nation
42 Iowa town
44 Fishing —
45 Not smooth
47 Office notes
48 Fish hawk
51 The mind
53 Expressed disapproval
56 Storm refuges
59 Abound
61 Made cloth
64 "Mona —"
65 Boldness
66 Salon's concern
67 Time periods
68 Musical groups
69 Is that a yes — no?
70 Scruff of the neck
71 Laughing —

DOWN
1 Arm bone
2 Dinero
3 Cigarette stubs
4 Lasagna cheese
5 Volcanic dust
6 Rebuffs
7 Singer Vikki
8 On the ocean
9 Beach sandal
10 Andy Capp's wife
11 Atmosphere
12 Sweet potato
15 Followed
20 Pencil end
21 Barrier
23 Ages and ages
25 Patch of trees
26 Like an old sock
27 Cameo stone
29 Dull sounds
30 McCartney's title
32 — Bond 007
33 Adversary
35 Rubble
37 Siren
39 Dove's sound
40 Membership lees
43 Popular sport
46 Enigma
48 Seashell setter
50 Expression
52 Ms. Burstyn
54 Creepy
55 Breed of cattle
57 Italian dollar
58 Relative of PDQ
60 Plateau
61 Owl's question
62 Put one's — in meddle
63 By means of
65 Ultimate

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

F	L	O	O	D		O	P	A	M		B	O	B	S
R	E	V	U	E		A	U	D	I		E	L	L	E
E	V	E	R	S		S	N	O	B		E	L	O	E
T	I	N	S	E	L		T	R	A	C	T	I	O	N
			C	A	T		C	H	O	E	D
J	U	J	I	T	S	U		S	H	O	W
I	R	O	N	S		T	U	L	I	P		A	I	T
V	A	T	S		L	U	G	E	S		W	A	R	D
E	L	S		P	A	S	H	A		F	O	R	C	E
		S	M	O	O	T	H	E	S	T		O	T	S
	S	A	H	A	R	A		H	A	L
M	U	C	I	L	A	G	E		J	I	G	G	L	E
I	D	O	L		D	I	G	S		R	A	L	L	O	W
D	A	R	E		O	L	G	A		G	U	I	D	E
I	N	N	S		R	E	S	T		E	M	B	E	R

4-4-00 © 2000 United Feature Syndicate

Sorry no menu today!

But don't worry, you can always catch something tasty in the D- "Sea"

Today's Staff

Night Editor: Bryan Smith
Photo Technician: Jaret Barr
Copy Editor: David Troupes
Production Supervisor: Lisa Metcalf
Production Staff: Dan McGuinness-Rossi, Lovee Garg

COURTESY OF GARY OWEN

